A CLOSE, HARD MAN.

A hard, close man was Solomon Ray,
Nothing of value he gave away;
He hoarded and saved,
He pinched and shaved,
And the more he had the more he craved.

The hard-earned dollar he tried to gain,
Brought him little but care and pain;
For little he spent,
And all he lent,
He made it bring him twenty per cent.

Such was the life of Solomon Ray,
The years went by and his hair grew gray;
His cheeks grew thin,
And his soul within
Grew hard as the dollar he worked to win.

But he died one day, as all men must,
For life is fleeting and men but dust;
The heirs were gay
That laid him away,
And that was the end of Solomon Ray.

They quarreled now who had little cared
For Solomon Ray while his life was spared,
His lands were sold,
And his hard-earned gold
All went to the lawyers, I am told.

Yet men will cheat and pinch and save,
Nor carry their treasures beyond the grave.
All their gold some day
Will melt away,
Like the selfish savings of Solomon Ray.

TRUE REPENTANCE.

BY D. B. BOOZ.

ALL men are sinful by nature, and that we have inherited a sinful body through Adam, we can learn in Rom. 3: 23, "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."

It is sad indeed that a true, genuine repentance is so little esteemed in this our day and age of the world. There are but few that have felt and experienced a godly sorrow for their sins, which worketh repentance. The trouble is, there are but few that are willing to examine their sinful condition and make an effort to obtain forgiveness by acknowledging that they are sinners. Yet this is the first step, for how can we be troubled about our sins unless we have come to a knowledge of them? Now what is sin? The Scriptures tell us, "that sin is the transgression of the law." The tree of the knowledge of good and evil, is yet in us, spiritually, and thus we have inherited through Adam, a tendency to sin.

Much is preached in this our day about man being a sinner, but not so much about his redemption from such a sinful state. It is clear to me, according to the words of our Savior, that unless a man is born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God, that is we must be regenerated by a spiritual birth before we can enter that kingdom prepared for the children of God. The Scriptures admonish us to repent and believe the Gospel. Here repentance is placed first, not because we can repent without believing, but rather because repentance is the first step to a true faith in God. Such a true faith works wonders. Old things have passed away, and new things have appeared, tending to the glory of God. We deligirt in the law of the Lord and find great pleasure in the house of God.

If we would only consider how awful it is to trifle with the least of God's commands, I know we would lead better lives. If a man obtains a true knowledge of God, and comes to a true repentance, he is sorry for his sins and his heart is converted and full of godly sorrow. Such a heart is a sacrifice well pleasing in the sight of God. A new spirit pervades the whole being.

Repentance and conversion do not only consist in outward motions of the body, but also in the power of the Spirit that is in us and urges us to the sacrificing of the flesh to the glory of God, and to open a door to Christ. The prophet says in one place, that some are converted, but not in truth, "they are like a deceitful bow."

Many boast of having repented, but their works do not show it. James says that faith must have works, in order to save. With deep regret we see that the contrary is too often the case, in this our day, for we don't hear or see much else, but avarice and rascality,—lying and cheating, jealousy, hatred, anger, quarreling, enmity and vain talking,—of such like the world is full. Some live as though there was no God in heaven, and no Christ had died for us.

Now it becomes us to ask, Are we as brethren and sisters, free from all these evil deeds? If not, we are not justified before God. We must have other virtues, such as charity, peace, knowledge of the truth, justice, meekness, humility, kindness, holiness, modesty, temperance, godliness and all other good virtues,—whosoever has such virtues, is converted by repentance and faith in God. In such a one the image of God is found, and he is a partaker of the divine nature. It seems according to the Scriptures that if we have experienced all this, we may fall back into the sleep of sin. Paul tells all such, to "arise that Christ may give them light."

We hope that all the readers have come to a true repentance and hold out faithful to the end.

SUPPLYING THE ELLIPSIS.

WHEN I was out West I heard an English Baptist preach, who took for his text the language of the apostle Paul to the Corinthians, "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all."

He said, "Brethren and sisters, that which is clearly stated in this Scripture, is impressed upon our minds and we know it and now I will read it as we we know it: 'And now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, and now may the love of God be with you all, and now may the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all.' Now we have this Scripture to the Corinthians is really intended, and I propose to talk to you awhile from these propositions."

He went on and said, "Now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." After talking awhile upon that, he stated the next proposition with the ellipsis supplied, and then the last; then said, "I have now talked to you upon this Scripture with the ellipsis supplied." After meeting I went to him and said, "Sir, I like that way of supplying the ellipsis." Are there not other Scriptures that will admit of that? He remarked, "I suppose there are." I asked him to supply the ellipsis in the formula of Christian baptism given in the commission. He says, "are you not a Dunkard minister?" I answered, I am what they call a Dunkard, and preach sometimes for them. "We do not supply the ellipsis where Dunkard preachers are present, if we know it," says he.

ANOTHER CASE.

This brings to mind what occurred about two years ago. I heard a Campbellite minister reasoning upon the text, "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

He said, "It is clearly demonstrated in this Scripture what the apostle meant, and I will read it as he means it. "And he hath not given us the spirit of fear; but he hath given us the spirit of love; and he hath given us the spirit of power; and he hath given us the spirit of a sound mind." "Now," he says, "I have only supplied the ellipsis with words which already existed in both the minds of the apostle and every other reader of this text." I asked him, at the close of the meeting, to supply the ellipsis in the formula for Christian baptism. All the answer he gave me is, "you are a Dunkard preacher and I know it." LEMUEL HILLERY.

RAMDOM SHOTS THAT HIT.

BY H. W. LANDES.

PAUL said to the Galatians, 5: 26, "Let us not be desirous of vain glory," that which the apostle wanted the brethren not to do, is just what the Brethren now at times want to do—just the reverse. We hear of things done not many hundred miles from here, which is no more nor less vain glory, a glorying in self, what self can do—all empty indeed.

I once heard something like this from a minister, "I will go there and it won't take me long to convert him or her as the case may be." This me in the conversation, is the vain glory, part of it just as if the Lord did not now do his work as he did 1800 years ago. The Lord added daily such as should be saved. Acts 2: 47. I was reminded of a circumstance that did happen a year ago, in the time of Bishop Siebert, an Evangelical Bishop, when he had a revival meeting in the City of Philadelphia, and their religion was the mourner's bench kind; but then they as a church were plain, very plain, (my father and mother belonged to them, and in their plainness they would to-day be condemning many brethren and sisters.) The bishop had some converts that professed the experience of forgiveness of sins. A year after the bishop came to the city again, and one of the former converts, a lady came to him and shook hands, and was much astonished at the bishop, he not knowing her. She was in style. She answered him this way, "Why, you converted me a year ago." He looked at her from head to foot and said, "Yes, that looks like some of my work."

So say I, if the vain-glory part can convert them, the big "I" and the big "me," then I am assured it looks exactly like their work, and not like the Lord's. That is one feature of this vain glory. Another manifests itself in this. At the end of a discourse, a ministering brother would request the congregation that all those who were for Christ should show it by raising their right hand; if none would raise, why, none for Christ? To all those who practice that as an evidence, I would ask where is it recorded? Where is it demanded from us? Just give the chapter and verse. If that is right, to demand it and practice it. There is a chapter where some say, that such things are written but I have not found it. It is said in that chapter, (called supposition), little children were baptized. The jailer's daughter's name was Rhoda, and she married a shoemaker. If all those things are in that chapter, it may do for some to believe them and obey them; but for me it is vain glory.

Brother Jesse Crosswhite explained his conduct once, a year or more ago, when in meeting and the same request was made, but he did not get up. He explained himself after meeting to the preacher, and said that he had long learned not to do the bidding of a man, unless he was convinced that he was a better man than himself, of which he had his doubts. One more shot and then I will put up for this time. I will shoot like the Irishman did. When he was not sure, if it was a calf or a deer, he shot this way, if a deer, he would hit it, if a calf he would miss it. This missionary movement is a movement where vain glory can manifest itself. In this work we need brethren that are sound to the core—that are stripped of vain glory and exemplary brethren. Now brethren that are not thus, why should they seek to be put to a work which they are not qualified for, and in which they can give no example. "Oh," says one. "If the heart is right, all is right," the outside makes not so much difference." Yes, the Master says, make first the tree good, and then will the fruit be good. "A good tree cannot bring forth corrupt fruit, and a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit."

Now when brethren are that, and seeking for a position and trying to get it in various ways, then I think they are seeking their own glory, and not his who they claim has sent them. If he had sent them, they would speak his words, and would heed the apostles words, "Let us not be desirous of vain glory. If we have a large stock of vain glory, we cannot dispense of it to the Almighty for anything of value.

THE BROAD AND NARROW WAY.

BY N. C. DALE.

CHRIST points out two ways. The one is broad and the other is narrow: the one is filled with many travelers; the other has but few. Christ came to save us from our sins. He taught us the way of salvation—showed us the narrow way. He warned us of the dangers and trials which beset life's pathway.

Our life is very fitly represented as a journey. And it is a very short one, too. To some it is only a few weeks or a few months, and the longest, just a few years. But a happy thought is, that those whose pilgrimage is short, whose journey is ended in youth, that Jesus has purchased a home to which he takes them, and in which they can dwell happily throughout all the ceaseless ages of eternity.

Obedience to parents is the first commandment with promise. This is where the first step on the broad road is taken. Children disobey their parents. Children, if you have Christian parents, thank God for it. Disobedience, through unbelief, was the sin of our first parents, the cause of their being cast out of that beautiful garden, the Garden of Eden. When we know our duty and do not do it, we are on the broad road, and unless we repent and return, like the prodigal son, it will lead us to certain destruction.

We need not be in doubt as to whether we are on the right way—the narrow way. No, we need not be in darkness. We have the Word by which we may know whether we are right or wrong, on the broad or narrow way.

Each day brings us nearer our long, our eternal abode. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many I say unto you, will seek to enter in and shall not be able." Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth and the life, and no man cometh to the Father but by me." If any man enter in he shall be saved. Out of Christ and his doctrines, we are all on the broad way. "There is no other name given under heaven among men by which we may be saved, but the name of Christ." Then, "If ye love me keep my commandments." "Why call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say unto you?" "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed.

May we be enabled by divine grace to strive lawfully to become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ, where we can ever praise Father, Son, and holy Ghost, without end, is my prayer.

True charity is not the charity of giving alms, of clothing the naked and feeding the hungry; but the greater, the more difficult and more elevated charity of judging favorably, the imputed or proved errors of others—a charity so seldom practiced.

COME TO JESUS.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

COME to Jesus, take His yoke,
It is easy, thus He spoke;
Come and seek His glorious love,
And a home with Him above.

Come and ask Him to forgive
All your sins and let you live,
Come and offer Him your all,
And obey His heavenly call.

Come and bring to Him your sin,
Knock and He will let you in,
Seek and you will surely find
Love that is both true and kind.

Come without a wavering doubt,
And begin the heavenly route;
Come and don't neglect to pray
Unto God both night and day.

Come and do not turn aside
In the ways of sin and pride;
Come and tread the narrow way
Leading on to endless day.

Come to Him and be content—
Let your life for Him be spent;
Then when all your days are passed,
You with Him may dwell at last.

Come to Jesus, sinner do,
And in Him your minds renew:
Receive Jesus, oh how kind!—
Sinner, seek and you shall find.

Hear Him knocking at your heart;
Will you not now make the start
To procure and win the prize
Of a home beyond the skies?

Come, why do you longer wait?
Soon for you 'twill be too late;
Oh, then come for life's the time
To refrain from sin and crime.

Come, prepare to reign on high
Where there's neither pain nor sigh,
Then when earthly days are o'er,
You'll be blest forevermore.

A WEEK'S COMPANIONSHIP WITH THE ROCKIES.

BY J. C. FLUCKIGER.

IT was on the morning of the 19th of September, and although the weather was very inclement, chilly and rainy, nothing daunted our little party of six: brethren, J. R. Mason, H. H. Folck, W. A. Moor and friends, H. Searey, and Charley Crawford, from consummating their previously arranged plan of a short respite from the busy cares and labors of life for a whirl up into the mountains for a general recreation, hunting, fronting, botanizing and geologizing.

Not until high noon, however, did the modern John (Searcy), to whose equestrianship, was entrusted the lines that controlled the spirited four in hand, signalled the waiting passengers to take seats in the chariot.

A minute more and the sharp crack of the "Othello's Coil" sent us merrily along over the fertile soil towards the perpetual snow-capped peaks only forty or fifty miles westward. Not over a barren, desolate prairie of twenty year ago when vast herds of wild game, buffalo, elk, deer and antelope, swarmed over the country undisturbed in their morning's meal of waving grass, and the (noble) red man roamed at will, forsooth to waken the echoes by the wonderful cries of helpless women and children of the poor frontiermen; mingled with their own fiercer shrieks and fiendishly, murderously howls, while bathing their glittering blades and merciless tomahawks in the warm flow of innocent blood. Since then how changed! being now as beautiful and thrifty a country as ever the sunlight of heaven kissed into fruitfulness.

This, once mythical, land of the "Far West" is to-day thickly dotted with beautiful homes, as attractive with surrounding orchards, gardens and flocks, as are many of those in the "Far East." Passing along, we cannot but notice the broad acreage of golden grain in full ripened shocks, and the already countless stacks of the same luxuriant returns, together with the green ricks of newly mown hay, all pointing upwards, high, as though to direct the thoughts of the people to the abode of him who hath in a temporal manner, so richly blessed.

The "dugout" and sod house has given place for the new and more comfortable frame, brick, or stone dwelling. Two miles from Longmont, we, round the corner of brother T. A. Turner's field of Fall wheat, Southward less than a hundred yards, we pass on the left, his newly erected house, a well-planned, spacious frame with wall fillings of brick, making it substantial and warm. Close by we ford the rushing St. Vrain, to the head-waters of which, far up in the mountains, our imaginations are carried in anxious expectation of the good time we will have trouting.

Forty rods further, and we pass the upper farm and snug, little, white, frame cottage, of brother J. R. Mason. Though now occupied by a tenant, it was his old residence before the completion of his newly constructed grout in the flourishing village of Longmont. But space prohibits a notice of the beautiful farms and homes by the way, and so we skip along; again heading Westward-making a few minutes halt at the boyhood's home of brother J. R., to procure the loan of that all-important and indispensable acquisition to the culinary department, on a trip of this kind the "Dutch Oven" which mother Mason (now Hager) so freely grants.

The next point is, Pella post office, — turning to the North, we re-cross the St. Vrain which is here spanned by a good formidable modern bridge. Immediately on the left is the widely known and hospitable home of brother Isaac Runyan, a well-to-do farmer and stock grower, now living in a somewhat semi-retired life. This is one of the oldest locations in the valley, brother and sister Runyan having resided here for almost a score of years, have experienced the bitter with the sweet, the former quality, principally, during the "wo-a-haw" times, when the old California road, along which so many tragical scenes were enacted, passed in close proximity to their door. Onward we go, passing alternately on the right and on the left equally pleasant homes until the eye catches, beyond, a glimpse of the green, dense foliage of a grove on the right. O, yes, it is the arboreta around the villa of the editor of the Home Mirror, (brother J. S. Flory).

We now dip our pen to chronicle the notice of what is conceded to be the most inviting spot for a country seat in Central or Northern Colorado. But what less would be expected to satisfy the artistic taste of the proprietor and his ardent admiration for the beautiful in nature. On a nearer approach and upon a closer discrimination, we find to be, not what is strictly an arboreta, but a profusion of botanical growth in a multiplicity of variety; from the tall, slender cottonwood, some hundreds or more, arranged in rows on the West and North as a protection for the more tender varieties against the severe cold and storm in the Winter to the delicate flowers of a thousand different hues, in various clusters and groups of which the more rare and fragrant are cherished in swinging and stationary vases as house plants; the foliage of which is due to the fostering care of Sarah and Lizzie; while the representations of some of the coarser species chiefly from the cactaceae order, especially the prickly pear varities, are principally due the industry of Charles and David, all younger members of the family.

Adjacent on the North, is the main orchard of not a few thrifty, bearing trees of apples, peaches, pears and siberian crab, together with the luxurious grape in clusters here, there, and everywhere, perfect little vineyards in themselves. We cannot tarry to further itemize on the sorroundings, the buildings so cozily embowered, and the fresh stream of rippling water just from the snow-caps down the deep, blue canyon and flowing squarely through the premises.

We are now about four miles from Longmont by the best road, but have driven about six, having purposely taken the longest route.

An Aged Father Gone to Rest — Kindness to Parents — Sunday Work — Reunion — The Home Altar — Saturday night — Lord's Day The Advents.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

NUMBER VI.

WHILE officiating in our business interest, we received a message to attend the solemn scenes of another funeral occasion. To assist in the service and witness an aged father lowered in the tomb. On the morrow we wended our way to the scene of death, some fourteen miles distant. Soon after our arrival we met brother E. Beagle whom we assisted in the service. While beholding the corpse of this aged father, being ninety-nine years and ten months old, we thought of the many trials he had undergone, of the sufferings and privations that are incidental to life. He outlived the time allotted to man; "The days of our years are three-score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be four-score years, yet is their strength, labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." Psa. 90: 10. So with father Ransbottom, his days were many, yet in looking back, oh how short his time compared with eternity! It was soon cut off. His trials were many. In later years he possessed none of this world's goods, and he lived with his children; some of whom treated him not with that respect that is due from children to parents, which greatly increased his trials. How many aged parents are shunned by their children. The life of man, the true adage says, "is twice a child, and once a man," and this latter, helpless period, is what many aged dread. Many are not cared for as they should be, and hence life is a burden.

Son or daughter, wherever you be, remember that aged father or mother; comfort them in their declining years.

"Be kind to thy parents, for when thou wert young,
Who loved thee so fondly as they?
They caught the first accents that fell from thy tongue,
And joined in thy innocent glee.
Be kind to thy parents, for now they are old,
Their locks intermingled with gray;
Their footsteps are feeble, once fearless and and bold,
Thy parents are passing away."

Father Ransbottom died at the residence of his son, where he was kindly treated until his body was placed in its last resting-place to await the summons at that great day. Thus we pass through the great panorama of life. Our generation leaving the stage of action to another, and by and by we, who are yet young will be numbered with the dead. Great God help us to prepare for the final hour.

To-day we met at the Gardner schoolhouse for divine service, at 10:30, A. M. The service was introduced after the usual manner by singing and prayer. Brother W. C. Teeter then deliberated to us on the great love of God. "But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us." Eph. 2: 4. The following thoughts were elicited from the text:

1. The love of God, which is great from its antiquity, and amazing from the essential dignity and glory of Christ.

2. The glorious results of the sacrifice of Christ, being the gift of God for the redemption of the world, and he was prompted to offer this sacrifice by his great love that he had for a lost and ruined world; "for God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. Another minister made a few remarks and selected as a closing song of praise, the 13th hymn. Then went to prayer, dismissed and took the parting hand.

On the 20th inst., we held a reunion at mother Bosserman's, guests, consisting of children and grandchildren. Having previously provided ourselves with provision, each family started for the paternal roof, in honor to our aged mother. The occasion was one of pleasantness and much enjoyed by all. After partaking of our meal, we made a bestowal of gifts to our dear mother, to further show our love and esteem for the one who has stood over us as a watchful sentinel and as an angel of love and mercy. We then began to think of the parting hour, and it was then proposed that we have a season of devotion around the home altar which was seconded by many, and desired by all. The 724th hymn

"Happy the home, when God is there, was selected and read and some remarks, appropriate to the occasion, were made by the one officiating, and this company of parents and children joined in this song of praise and devoutly knelt in prayer. This was a meeting long to be remembered by all. While there, we thought of the sainted dead of the household, who could not be with us in person, the memory of whom we hold sacred. And also of the possibility of never meeting on this earth again, as one of our dear brothers and his companion will soon leave for the far West. But then this thought consoled us, and a happy thought indeed, that this large family of father's, thirteen in all, (parents and eleven children) together with their wives and husbands, all are members of the church—the pillar and ground of truth. Then what if some are dead, and more may soon follow, or if we are separated here on earth, if we are faithful to Christ, our Great Head? Oh, glorious thought! a grand reunion will be ours with all the redeemed in the eternal world, where the parting hour never more will come. Then the great necessity of being prepared. How many households make no profession of Jesus. How many members of families are yet out of Christ! Can they expect a reunion in the heavenly world? They who live and die in Christ shall be resurrected in Christ and ever be with him. How necessary then to get into Christ. He is the door, and by him all may obtain salvation. They shall be able to put on Christ. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 27. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death?
And love fills every breast,"

Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Rom. 6: 3, 4. Then have we great consolation, that after death we will be raised and be reunited in glory.

Saturday evening we went to the Old church for divine service. Had a fair hearing. Brother W. C. Teeter addressed us on the goodness of God, based upon Rom. 2: 4, and elicited from the text as follows:

1. The goodness of God.
(a) In the creation of man.
(b) In the plan of redemption.
2. That the goodness of God should lead us to repentance. That the sinner should not spurn with contempt that goodness, but because of the goodness manifested, he should love and honor God in all his appointments. On Lord's day we re-assembled at the same place for worship, and found our large church filled to its capacity. The funeral of the late brother Daniel King which had been deferred, was attended to to-day. The speaker arose amidst that solemn assembly and read the 30th Psalm, and based his remarks upon the 4th paragraph, "Lord make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am," and deliberated upon it from the following deductions.

1. The end of human existence.
2. The brevity of life.
3. The frailty of man.

Death is not the total extinction of being. It is a change of state, from time to eternity. The future existence and immortality of the soul is taught, both by reason and from the Scriptures. And that he shall live forever, is a cheering thought to the Christian. The word preached was attentively listened to by the auditors, and we believe good impressions were made. Brother W. C. Teeter made a few aditional remarks, and closed the exercise, and this solemn assembly dispersed to their homes.

In the eve we attended the meeting in the town hall to listen to a sermon on the Sabbath question by elder Canright, a Seventh Day-Adventist. They are creating some stir among our citizens, and seem to base salvation on the seventh day. S. T. B.

A VISIT TO NEW YORK—WHAT I SAW AND HEARD.

IN the month of October, my mother and I had occasion to "go down to the sea in a ship." The weather was boisterous as is usual at that season of the year, in consequence of which our was not as charming as we would have desired. The ceaseless rolling and heaving of the ship caused corresponding evolutions in our sympathizing stomachs, and we underwent the usual affliction incident to all voyages on the high (literally so in our case) seas. Sea sickness is the bane of sea voyages. Some have supposed that it was foreordained by the Lord of the sea to prepare one's system for those climatic and dietetic changes incident to traveling to distant countries. In our case we felt much improved after the effects wore away.

We sailed from Norfolk on the 16th of October, and landed in New York,

THE GREAT METROPOLIS OF THE WEST, on the night of the 17th. We remained aboard the ship till morning. The noise and bustle of business awoke us a "great while before day." Emphatically they have no night in New York. The rage for gold absorbs every other emotion. Its vast opportunities for the accumulation of wealth, its rapid communication with all parts of the globe, gives it a position equal to that of any other city in the world.

ITS ILLIMITABLE COMMERCE,

It has twenty nine miles of wharfage and one of the finest bays known to the navigators Its climate is as mild as the climate of Virginia. Its length is thirteen miles, and its population numbers over 1,000,000 souls. It is growing rapidly, and, without some special adverse providence, is destined to become the greatest city that ever existed. As the great West is developed, so will our great metropolis continue to unfold its marvelous and exhaustless capacity.

As the measureless posibilities of this vast continent of agricultural, manufacturing and mineral wealth exceeds by many fold that of any other country that is tributary to one city, so will New York, in the same proportion, exceed, in population and wealth, any other city that exists or ever existed.

To one who has never wandered beyond the suburbs of our interior towns and cities, the present a thrilling spectacle. Night is the time for recreation and gayety. They seem to love darkness, or the hour of darkness, rather than the hour of light. Its numerous theatres where tens of thousand human beings murder the precious moments in laughter and in humorous and light-minded frivolities, its gambling, and a thousand and one other hells, bring the fashion and gayety of the city on the streets going to and fro. In eccentricities, the abomination, the absurdities etc., of fashion is exhibited nightly on the thoroughfares and promenades.

The thousands of street cars, the tens of thousands of omnibuses, carriages &c. and the elevated rail ways ply their massive work till the "wee small hours." The sounds of its cars, its engines and factories, its drays and omnibuses, its carriages and buggies, its steamships and tugs, its shouting and its running, mingled with the hum of a million of human voices, makes a continuous noise as of a great waterfall, or of an approaching thunder-storm. Everything is on a vast scale. Business, amusements, fashion, gross wickedness, etc., are developed to great magnitude and exhibited the same peculiarity. Not withstanding vast wealth has been used in the construction of religious temples, and millions of dollars are annually contributed to the support of the ministry, yet only one in ten of its population habitually attend public worship. The poor of this modern Sodom are without the blessed religion of Jesus, except the few poor slaves that bow to the shrine of the Scarlet Whore, and they know no more of it than is doled out to them by a tyrannical priesthood. Other denominations are drifting into the same slime pits of Satan. The idea among religious rulers, of official supremacy and infallibility is extending more rapidly and dangerously than many of us are aware.

We visited Greenwood,

THE CITY OF THE DEAD.

It is one of the grandest cemeteries in the world. The vast, fabulous sums of money that are expended in adornment, gorgeous masonry, carriage and foot ways, ornamental shrubbery, monuments, sepulchres, &c., is incredible. They literally garnish the homes of the dead. Several burials occurred while we were there. It seems that that inexorable tyrant fashion, has intruded her loathsome presence into the sacred precincts of mourning, for no sympathetic tear or affectionate sigh was allowed to escape the heart of the bereaved ones who looked with stoical unconcern on the business operation of burying the beloved dead out of sight. The fumes of the cigar, mingled with the suppressed laugh and irreverent conversation of the attendants. The consolations of religion, the voice of lamentation, the irrepressible ejaculations of bereaved love, must not be heard, lest its echoes disturb the sleeping consciences of those who would forget that "it is appointed unto man once to die." One of the chief attractions of the metropolis is

THE PLYMOTH ORATOR,

Henry Ward Beecher. We went to hear him on Sunday morning as every other visitor does. The house was crowded to overflowing when we arrived a few minutes after 11 A. M., and we thought ourselves fortunate to get good standing room.

The great preacher in due time and order, took his text and preached in his characteristic style. He uses no note or manuscript, but talks in a plain way about the business of Christianity. He is intensely practical in his remarks and excoriates sin with an unfeeling hand. The great fault with which he is afflicted, is his love of popularity. The therefore and wherefore has adopted the theatrical style of speaking, half humorous, half in earnest style. When he "comes down" on sin, the house usually "comes down" (in modern parlance) too. A "point" (rhetorical) with him is to say, something humorous, and a responsive laugh is his reward. I took notes of his sermon, intending to send them to you for publication, but as there was nothing in it of special interest to your readers, I will let this notice suffice. However, in his discourse, he referred to certain Christians, who thought it was necessary to deny themselves of worldly enjoyments, as ascetics. He denounced the idea as false, and maintained that our tastes were given to us by the Lord and, consequently it could be no sin to gratify them. I thought, "poor soul," he knew little, either of the letter or spirit of Christianity. In the evening we interviewed

THE WONDERS OF THE TABERNACLE,

Where the famous Dr. Talmage holds forth the Word of Life. This great temple is built in the form of an amphitheatre, and will seat about 7,000 persons. It is illuminated by nearly 500 gas jets, and the architecture is very imposing. The service was similar to that in any other city congregation, with the exception that a trumpeter, elevated on a platform, with a silver trumpet, aided the great congregation in praising the Lord in sacred song.

A WORD TO YOUNG CONVERTS.

BY P. HEYDER.

BELOVED brethren and sisters, you have set out on a journey to a better country, which if continued on, will lead you to a haven of rest, where the turmoils of earth are unknown. Your way there may at times be rough, but as in all undertakings no excellence can be enjoyed without labor; so in this, the road is narrow, sometimes leading over rugged mountains, apparently over dangerous cliffs, then again down into marshy valleys, sometimes across sandy deserts where everything is parched. Alone you must wander, making the soul weary, for which cause many travelers have turned back, which was to them an eternal loss. Then press onward, for by and by you will come to an oasis—a fertile spot, where vegetation is seen all around; where the birds are chanting their sweetest music in praise to their Creator in all things; where you can sit by the shaded brooks and drink of the waters of life from the everlasting springs as clear as crystal, giving the weary saint a slight foretaste of that beautiful country he is traveling to.

But these delightful spots are ony resting places; your journey must be renewed; the blessings will only be realized fully at the journey's end. You will often get into places that will be beset with thieves and robbers, who are continually infesting this highway of holiness, have ever tried to persuade travelers back, or if unsuccessful in this, to make war upon them. Their weapons, though deadly, can be overcome by those given in the holy Scriptures, viz., the graces of God, who are given to all that are willing to move forward.

In those sacred truths, you will also learn that distinguished personages have traveled this great thoroughfare, though narrow it may seem to be. The great King of glory, his prophets, apostles, evangelists and others have gone over it, marked it out and hallowed it by their blood; the difficulties you have to overcome, they overcame. So the road is passable, for those who are weak will be borne up as upon angels wings, and the fiery darts of the wicked will fall harmless at their feet. What a good High Priest the Christian warrior has, he asks him not to do all the fighting, but aids him, and does the hardest himself. Just as the farmer with his crops, he may labor hard in preparing the soil, but what is that to be compared to what the Lord does toward bringing forth a crop? He asks man to do a small part towards it: the balance he will do. So in your journey towards the heavenly Canaan, it may seem hard, but the hardest work is not yours to do. Think of the great army of saints who have preceded you—all of whom landed safely at their journey's end, passed through the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem, joined the innumerable company of angels, "and just men made perfect," where they are before the throne of the great Jehovah, singing praises to him forever, and as their courage is a stimulant for you to press forward, so try and help others by yours, strengthening the armies of the Lord and weakening those of the prince of darkness.

Let us help each other to that best of places, that beautiful land, the glory of which, "eye hath not seen, ear heard, neither entered into the heart of man, the joys prepared for the people of God."

PRAYER.

PRAYER is one of the very highest privileges that lie within the reach of fallen creatures on the earth. This privilege of prayer is something divinely required of us all. Prayer may be defined as the lifting up of the desires of the heart unto God for things agreeable to his will, in the name of Christ. In other words, it is the soul entreating God, to bestow blessings on account of the great sacrifice offered for sinners on the cross of Calvary. Such is true prayer. It is simply man drawing nigh through Jesus and speaking to God.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive one additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 20 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under $1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 2, 1879

BROTHER R. H. Miller expects to be at Lanark sometime during this month.

BRO. J. C. Lahmon is spending some weeks preaching in the Central Mission field.

THE address of Noah Henricks, until further notice, will be Lawrence, Douglas Co., Kansas.

BRO. S. J. Peck of this place, is on a visit and preaching tour among friends and relatives in Ohio.

BROTHER Lehr and elder Henry Kurtz, many years ago, used to work together in the same printing office.

THE Mormons are rapidly pushing their settlements into Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico and other points. They are doing their utmost to spread their heresy.

DO not conclude that you can handle the sword of the Spirit skillfully without constant training. It requires study to understand the word in all its parts.

BRETHREN Daniel Miller of Milledgeville, and D. F. Eby, of Lanark, left here last week for the mission field in Wisconsin, expecting to spend a few weeks holding meetings.

A BILL was recently introduced in the Vermont legislature prohibiting gambling of all kinds, even the grab-bag at church fairs. Good for Vermont, but a disgrace to the churches.

IT is said of Stephen that, "he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost." Would to God that we had more of such Holy Ghost men, to preach and defend the doctrine as Stephen did.

THE Brethren at Hickory Grove, Ill., lately elected Bro. Harrison Crouse to the ministry, Bro. Andrew Baker to the deacon's office, and had Bro. Geo. D. Zollars ordained to the eldership.

WE are in receipt of several articles from sister Mattie A. Lear in answer to queries published in the "Bible Class" department. These, along with many other articles from her, will appear soon.

BROTHER Gibson, who has just closed a meeting at Falls City, Neb., says that he is improving in health, and standing the work well. He thinks of visiting Macoupin Co., Ill. before coming to this part of the State.

CHRISTMAS trees and merriment generally took the place of Christ in many churches last Christmas eve. We thank God that the Brethren churches have not yet resorted to such worldly customs to entertain the people.

THERE are thousands of people in the world handling property belonging to the Lord, and will pay neither principal nor interest, to help advance the Master's cause. They will have a big account to settle in the coming judgment.

THERE is no question in my mind about the Brethren's doctrine; that is all right; but may not some of us be a little wrong sometimes? Were we all as good as our doctrine, the Gospel light would certainly shine with greater brilliancy.

BRO. David Brower, while preaching in Washington Territory, concluded to raise a club of subscribers for the BRETHREN AT WORK, and succeeded in doing so. That is right.—Plant the seed, let the paper water it, and God will give the increase.

THE Board of Managers, of the Tract Association, have ordered that $20.00 be used in distributing tracts free in localities where there is no preaching, and where they will likely do good. Read the secretary's report in this issue.

GENTLE reader, how much progress have you made in the divine life during the last year? Do you feel that you have done what you could, or can we not all make some improvements during the year, and thus be better prepared for the future kingdom.

BROTHER Lehr held a few meetings in Shannon week before last, and from there went to Dutchtown to assist in a series of meetings. He stands preaching quite well for an old man. Nothing but zeal for the cause keeps him alive.

IF it is the duty of sisters to have their heads covered on entering the house of worship, it is also the duty of brethren to remove their covering on the same occasion. Always show becoming respect when you enter the house of God.

LIVING a pious life, is an up-hill business; it requires a constant effort upon the part of the Christian. He who will not strive cannot expect to enter the kingdom. To the humble follower of the Master, however, this striving is delightful—there is a crown of life just beyond.

A SISTER wishes to know where people get the authority for saying "we" or "us," in preaching and writing, when only "I" is meant. Likely most of us can take the hint, though we know that it is common usage for public speakers and writers to use the plural form.

THIS week we commence the publishing of a series of articles, entitled, "A Week's Companionship with the Rockies." Its publication has been delayed till the dead of the Winter, and the reading of it will now be refreshing to many minds somewhat wearied of the monotony of the season.

IT is astonishing how churches are encouraging feasting and levity by endorsing suppers, fairs, dancing and festivals gotten up for the purpose of making money to defray church expenses. In some places they have adopted a species of gambling. May heaven hasten the day when churches will rise above such corruption.

THE Brethren at Shoals, Martin Co., Ind., have lately elected Bro. David N. Noreross to the ministry. He was formerly a member of the Campbellite church, but some of the Brethren's pamphlets having fallen into his hands, shook his faith in that doctrine so severely, that he came over to the Brethren. Hope he may prove a useful minister of the Gospel.

A NUMBER of brethren and sisters, having availed themselves of the benefits of the late excursion rates from this part of the State, are now on a visit among friends and relatives in the East; no doubt having a good time visiting the land of their childhood, and spending many pleasant hours with kind relatives and acquaintances.

THE devil is getting things a little mixed just now. He has one man traveling over the country, lecturing, and charging the people 75 cents a night for telling them that he does not know where they came from, and then along comes Bob Ingersoll and charges 50 cents a night for telling that he does not know where the people are going to. Men who pay $1.25 for learning nothing, ought not to complain about hard times.

THERE is coming to this office an exchange, having a circulation of about 75,000. The reading matter is generally good, but the last number contains a large picture of Santa Claus with a pipe in his mouth. What kind of work is this for a religious paper? When will Protestants learn to quit advertising the traditions of Romanism? And then how do such papers expect to honor Christ by publishing such pictures?

MANY of the American people are like a "rolling stone." They move too much for their own good. It makes their children restless, and in too many instances weakens the love of home. Learn to let well enough alone, and make the best of your surroundings. To move children from place to place, when it can be avoided, is too much like cutting in two the thread of life. The place of one's childhood and familiar surroundings are endearments that are hard to give up and forget. We admire enterprise, but the thing may sometimes be overdone. Our advice is, if you have a good, comfortable home, keep it; make home happy, and do all in your power to build up the morals of your neighborhood.

BROTHER J. W. Metzger, under date of Dec. 12th, writes: "Left home on the morning of Nov. 20th; went to Cerro Gordo, Ill., met Bro R. H. Miller, had meeting day and night until Dec. 7th, then went to West Lebanon, Warren Co., Ind. Commenced meeting the same evening, stayed there till the 10th; during that time baptized one young sister, so one more is added to the fold of Christ. May she ever prove faithful is our prayer."

A NEW subscriber says: "I wish to subscribe for the BRETHREN AT WORK the coming year. We have been reading borrowed ones for some time, and think it an excellent paper. We are Baptists, but are almost persuaded to become Tunkers through the reading of your paper." By this our readers can see whether it pays to send the paper to outsiders. Send along your donations for the "Outsiders' Fund," so that we can send to thousands who do not belong to the church, yet may, by the reading of our paper, be persuaded to embrace the whole truth.

RECENTLY at the close of services in the Methodist church, the minister urged upon every member to renew his subscription for their church periodicals, and if they had never taken any, they should subscribe at once. He said, every member should keep himself well posted on all church questions, and that the paper would give them a fund of knowledge which would be not only a satisfaction, but a benefit to them all through life. This is a common occurrence among other people. It is one way they have of defending their doctrine, and keeping up an interest among their people. It would be far better for the Brethren church, if our ministers would urge upon the members the importance of keeping one of the Brethren's papers in their families, they would greatly aid in advancing the cause, and add to the life and zeal of the church.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

TO ALL OUR READERS.

May God bless you, and enable all to be more faithful during the present Year than in the Past.

"Brethren, Pray for Us."

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him all creatures here below,
Praise Him above ye Heavenly Host,
Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

PAMPHLETS FREE.

AT a recent meeting of the Board of Managers of the Tract Association, forty dollars were appropriated for the free distribution of tracts and pamphlets in places where the doctrine of Christ, as advocated and maintained by the Brethren, is not known, or where the people have but little knowledge of our faith and practice. We therefore request calls for pamphlets, and urge brethren and sisters to send for some and put them to work where they think good can be accomplished. These pamphlets are not to distribute among members of the church, but in the waste places, and wherever they will be read by those who are seeking the Truth.

THE PYRAMIDS.

THE large pyramids of Egypt are regarded as the most wonderful piece of workmanship in the world. Some of them were likely built in the days of Abraham, and some, in all probability, date beyond that period. Many of them are in a good state of preservation, though over 4,000 years old.

The largest one covers about thirteen acres of ground, and is 484 feet high. The base is composed of a layer of stones, each of which is about thirty feet square. On the top of this is another, yet smaller layer, and so on till it is topped out with one stone.

It is said that the immense stones, used in the erection of these pyramids were "obtained from the quarries in the Arabian hills, and were carried over the river by a bridge of boats. They were then brought by means of a causeway, which of itself took ten years to construct, and which is said to have been a fine work, with its polished stones and figures of animals engraved on them. One hundred thousand men were employed at a time, and these were relieved by the same number at the end of three months. A long time was spent in leveling off the rock on which the edifice stands, and twenty years for the erection of the edifice itself. The stones were raised, step by step, by means of a machine made of short pieces of wood; and, last of all, commencing from the top, the stones were cemented together by layers of cement not thicker than a strip of paper, the strength of which is proved by the age of these enormous materials."

SECRETARY'S REPORT OF THE GOSPEL TRACT ASSOCIATION.

IT is now a little more than two years since the organization of the Gospel Tract Association, which fills an important position in "sounding out" the Gospel to those unacquainted with the faith and practice of the Brethren. The press is a powerful means, either for good or evil. That the enemy knows how to utilize the press to disseminate error, is apparent to all. The friends and advocates of Truth, feeling that the enemy should not monopolize this noble art of printing, and use it wholly for base purposes, have, in many instances, made it subserve the interests of the Gospel of liberty. Good books and pamphlets have been published by the millions and placed in the hands of the reading public. The results, God alone knows. The Gospel Tract Association aims to fill a useful position in the missionary field. Men who will read and compare with the Bible, may often be reached by tracts and pamphlets.

The amount contributed to the work, though small, has been judiciously applied, and we have cause to believe that much good has been done. We hope that this well-begun work will be continued, and that those who have been highly blessed with an abundance of the earth's goods, will seek a blessing by giving to the work. The Board of Directors will look after the interests of the Association, and see that all donations are properly applied. Following is a statement of the financial condition of the Association:

Printing Fund,	$301.30
Distributing Fund,	134.20
Amount Distributed in Pamphlets,	48.17
Amount now Appropriated,	40.00
Balance of Dist. Fund on hand,	46.03

The amount donated for printing pamphlets has been used as designed, and there is on hand pamphlets to the amount donated. This fund cannot be diminished, since the money in Distributing Fund is used to purchase from Printing Fund to send out pamphlets free. Donations for either Fund are solicited. All sums of $5.00 and over go into Printing Fund. All sums under $5.00 are placed in the Distributing Fund.

The field of usefulness, and to labor in, is very large. We have had abundant evidence that the work of spreading the Gospel can be successfully carried on by means of books and tracts. Will those who can, come and help in the good work? A few thousand dollars thus spent may bring many souls to the knowledge of the truth as we now enjoy it. Come then and place your gifts in the hands of the Association, and thus help to teach others. The pamphlets can be sent out much cheaper in this way than if left to individuals.

In addition to the thousands of pages already sent out by the Association, a large number of pamphlets have been sent out by private donations. Let the good work go on. Let there be united efforts in the labor of free tracts. Send donations to this office.

M. M. ESHELMAN, Secretary.

THEY are having hard times in England.—Several large banks and manufacturing establishments have gone into bankruptcy.

THE money raised at our late District Meeting has been received by the family to whom it was sent. It caused much rejoicing in the family. The brother and sister write thus:

Dear Brethren:—

"Accept our heart-felt thanks for the generous gift lately received from your hands. To Bro. Eby, who so kindly remembered us, and the dear brethren who so liberally contributed to the wants of strangers, we feel under special obligation to return our thanks. Our afflictions have been great, but we are assured that "those whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth." May He bless and prosper you all, is our earnest prayer. Yours in the cause of Christ."

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER I.

One Religion—Lay the Axe to the Root—No Shifting—"Whatever a Man Thinks is Right, that is Right to Him" — Joining Churches that are Nearest Right—No Pictures, but the Reality — The Uproar and Alarm Among the Isms.

THERE is but one divinely inspired book of God. It testifies of God's being and character. Its voice is the voice of the only true and living Sovereign of heaven and earth, the Almighty God—the everlasting Father. His Son when he sent into the world as the one Mediator, He named Jesus—one sent to save. By and through this One Sent, the Mediator, God reconciled the world unto himself. It was the world that needed reconciling, not the eternal God.

THIS Savior and Redeemer set up, fixed and established but one religion. This one religion is set forth in the one book of God as the only infallible system, rule and law for the government of one body, the ground and pillar of the truth. "Yes, that is all right," says some one, "but here is a system of religion as good as the one you claim from heaven, and there is no Christ in it, no New Testament rules governing it, no doctrine of humility, no cross to bear." How true! No cross in it, no crown to win; no Jesus in it, no one to do the saving; no divine-inspired rules to govern, and there is no government. Truly there is nothing in such a system. You say it is as good as our system. If our system is not good, how do you know it? If it is not good, then your system is not good; for you compared yours with ours, and found it only as good, not better. If yours is not better, and ours has a Savior in it, the promise of eternal life, honor, glory, mansions above, sitting with the heavenly hosts, singing the songs of redeeming love, why not come and take it? If your system has no Christ in it, no cross, no New Testament rules of faith and practice, it was not born of God. Christ's system has in it, its work, its results, the promises of better things to come, and the marks of the Lord Jesus. This is the old order, the ancient way. This is the order that has triumphantly marched on and on, overcoming opposition and now stands firmly fixed as the only infallible system, the only divinely appointed way of Life. The system we advocate and defend, leaves a flood of light wherever it passes. This cannot be said of other systems of religion; they leave nothing but mist and darkness behind. The men who are caught in these systems, are groping about in the dark, having no compass, no chart to help them out. To all such, the Lord offers his compass, his chart. Will you accept them, and come out? Some have said they want to come. They are beginning to see that there is more power in the sword of the Spirit and the lance of common sense, than in their uninspired creeds and confessions of faith. They are moving; and we stand ready to welcome them on the one platform, the Word of God.

By the beauty and power of the one Gospel, the camp fires of true, vital piety have been kept burning brightly through all ages since its introduction. By its vitalizing power, men's hearts have been warmed, nourished and kept pure and faithful for the coming kingdom. Like the Galilean fisherman of old, there are men who shun not to lay the axe to the root, trimming and pruning by the power of the Gospel, to the glory of God and the edification of all saints. There are all along the line a great cloud of witnesses for the Truth.

We are for the old order, the original platform, the one true foundation, authorized by Christ our King, and perpetuated by the one body, called out from the world. We are for it, not because it is old, but because Christ is in it, was the Author of it, and will fulfill all of its promises when He comes in His glorified manner. In seeking knowledge concerning that order, the original foundation, and how to get on it, and stay on it, there must be no doubts—no shifting. As God may give ability the plowshare of truth shall be run straight. The supreme Ruler holds out no inducement to work around the great heaps of rubbish that have come up on the way of life. We have not been set to defend, live and practice the uninspired declarations of men, but in defense of the Gospel. And while in search for the ancient principles and landmarks, some will be ready to judge us, "for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers." But many will rejoice; many will thank God and take courage, going forward to the battle with new courage, new zeal in the strength of the Lord: hence whatever may befall us, shall be counted all joy and not grief.

Says one, "Whatever a man thinks is right, that is right to him." Then if a man thinks Infidelity is right, it is right to him. "O, no;" you reply, "that cannot be; Infidelity is wrong." Yes, but you said, "Whatever a man thinks is right, that is right to him;" now if a man thinks Infidelity is right, then it is right according to your uninspired declaration. Suppose a man should think that Mohammedanism is right, would that make the doctrine of Mohammed right? Is the religion of Christ right, because a man thinks it is right? It is right whether a man thinks so or not. It is right because God is in it, because it came out from Him; He is the Author of it.

Another says, I joined the Universalist church because I consider its doctrine the nearest the Truth." Before you could compare Universalist doctrine with the Truth, you had to know what the Truth was, and if you knew what the Truth was, why did you not accept it? The nearly-like-it can never be as good as the thing itself.

Here comes another who says, "I joined the Dunkard church because I believe its doctrine the nearest right." How could you tell it is "nearest" right, unless you know what is precisely right? If you know what is precisely right, why not accept it, and not something nearly right? A man will be blessed for joining the church of Jesus Christ, the one body, which obeys the Truth, walks in the one way, but the man who joins a church because he believes its doctrine the "nearest right," has no promise of eternal salvation, no well-grounded hope of reigning with Christ.

Here comes a third person who declares he joined the Methodist church because he thinks it is nearer the right than any other. If you do not know the right way, how do you know the Methodist doctrine is nearer than any other? If you do know the right way, why not accept it, and walk in it, and be safe beyond all doubts? It is no credit to a man to be walking in a way that is nearly right, not quite right, when he confesses that he knows what is precisely right. If he knows the right way, he ought to have the honesty and manliness to step on it and walk in it. A shrewd, wise man will not take a dollar that is nearly genuine. O no; he knows better than that; he will only take the genuine dollar. Then accept the Bible, the one Book and the only one, made and given for all nations, people and tongues.

A fourth man declares, "I joined the Lutheran church because I think it is nearer the Bible doctrine that any other." Well, yes; how do you know it is nearer the Bible doctrine, unless you know what the Bible doctrine is? If you know what the Bible doctrine is, why not accept it, and not something nearly like it, or like it? If the Lutheran doctrine is like the Bible doctrine, why not accept the Bible doctrine instead of an imitation? The imitation, the likeness of a horse is not the horse. The man who would try to pass the likeness, the picture of the horse, for the real horse, would be denounced as a cheat.

"You are too particular, too narrow-minded," is the voice of the popular multitude. Just as we expected! A man may preach Shakerism, Methodism, Quakerism, Universalism, Lutherism, Campbellism, Spiritualism, Beecherism, and even Ingersollism, and the multitudes are not at all alarmed; but let a man come out with Gospelism, a plea to unite on the Bible, the Bible only, the one Book of Inspiration, and forthwith all the isms run together and unite against the plea, the one common, only true doctrine. Why this opposition to the Bible—the whole of it? Why this alarm and uproar when a man urges others to do precisely what the apostles and all early Christians did? Where is the danger of uniting on the one, common platform—the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth? Come let us reason together.

THE last census shows that there are about 15,300 Jews living in Palestine; of these 8,000 live in the city of Jerusalem.

THE NEGROES' MISSIONARY MEETING.

THERE are those who often speak disrespectfully of the negroes, and ridicule their religious zeal; but, with a little application, the whites might learn something from them. The one below is a lesson to the point:

At a missionary meeting among the negroes in West India, it is related the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we will all give something.

Resolved, That we will all give according to our ability.

Resolved, That we will all give willingly.

At the close of the meeting, a leading negro took his seat at the table with pen and ink to put down what each came to contribute. Many advanced to the table and handed in their contributions, some more, some less. Among the contributors was an old negro who was very rich, almost as rich as the rest combined. He threw down a small silver coin. "Take dat back again," said the chairman of the meeting; "dat may be 'cording to de first resolution, but not according to de second." The old man accordingly took it up, much enraged. One after another came forward, and all giving more than himself, he was ashamed and again threw in a piece of money on the table, saying, "Dar, take dat." It was a valuable piece of gold, but it was given so ill-temperedly that the chairman answered, "No, sir; that won't do. Dat may be 'cording to de first and second resolutions, but not 'cording to de third." The old man was obliged to take it up again. Still angry with himself, he sat a long time, and nearly all were gone, and then he advanced to the table, with a smile on his countenance, and laid a large sum on the table. "Dar, now, berry well," said the presiding officer, "dat will do; dat am 'cording to all de rizolutions."

This narrative contains in a nut-shell the whole formula of benevolence. The first duty is to give; the second is to give according to your ability; the third, which is equal to that, is to give willingly.

FROM R. H. MILLER.

I HAVE just returned from Cerro Gordo, Ill., where I went on the first of Dec., to dedicate the new church built in Cerro Gordo. Bro. John Metzger built it with his own means, except a part of the basement, and a little work. This is a noble example of liberality and love for the church.

Some of your readers will wonder how a church is dedicated. Well, I cannot tell what others say or do, but I will tell them how we did. One of the brethren opened the meeting, as is common with us; I then tried to preach on the following:

1. God has built a church on earth, embracing all the truth and righteousness there is for man's sanctification and happiness. To that church the Christian should look in all his work for the good of man. In the cause of temperance the Christian should carry his work into the church; in his charities, go to the church; in his life-work take all into the church; turn it over to God, in his name and by his authority govern all your life. You need no other organization, secret society or human system to divide your time, strength, talent, means, robbing God of his rightful service.

2. How the Christian should conduct himself in the Lord's house. That it is a place of worship, not to meet for conversation on worldly matters, to talk of farming, &c., but a solemn, sacred place for singing praise; worship in spirit and truth; you should feel the house of God so sacred that as soon as you enter the door, you take off your hat in honor to Christ, your head, for thus you should pray or prophesy, says the apostle.

3. The house should not be desecrated by worldly amusements; never allow church festivals, Christmas trees, and like amusements to be held here to gratify vanities of fashion. Let everything said and done in this church, be to the glory of God. This church was built for the Brethren, as all of our churches, where the plain teaching of God's Word is to be carried out in its primitive purity.

4. This is a plain church, suited to the wants of man, and the condition of society; in it we hope a plain people may always meet to worship God. That plainness of dress, taught in the Word of God, will make this church a suitable place for the rich and the poor to meet in one common brotherhood, where pride, fashion and wealth do not destroy the peace and prosperity of God's people.

5. Let this church be the home of your affections, around this altar with God's children come, and bow in prayer; come and sing, come and hear the Word of Life; come with your influence and council to help build the cause and save souls.

6. To those outside as well as in the church, this was built for God and should be kept clean. We hope you will remember this point and not come in to chew and spit tobacco, making the floor, if possible, worse than a pig pen; we talk plain on this point, because we don't want it forgotten.

About in this way, probably not just in this order, we preached, then closed by prayer, thanking God for the pleasant place we had to meet in worship, asking him to bless the labors of the Brethren to keep the church pure and holy. That the primitive faith and practice of the Gospel may ever be the established order of this church, that the Holy Ghost may reign in their hearts, rule over their lives, and be their Comforter when the powers of earth have failed.

So this meeting ended, and they call it, dedicating a church, and I do not know that there will be any fault found, unless it be to the name dedication, and before that is done, we hope the subject will be looked at from a Scriptural stand-point.

The house being in Cerro Gordo, so near the railroad, the Brethren give an invitation to our ministers to stop and preach for them when they can do so, as there are about sixty members living in and near town, a congregation may be raised easily.

THE DREADED JEWS.

THE London Spectator, in substance says, that "the dread which the Jews are awakening in Eastern Europe almost equals the dread felt for them in Western Europe six hundred years ago, and is based on the same grounds. They display a wonderful talent for accumulation with which Christians cannot compete, and which tends to make of them an ascendant caste. It is gravely asserted in the Roumanian Parliament that the true difficulty in the way of allowing them the equal rights which were secured by the Treaty of Berlin, is the certainty entertained by Roumanians and Servians that they would gradually oust the peasantry till they possessed the whole land. In Hungary it is asserted, even in Reuter's telegrams, that they have purchased so many estates as to make an alteration in the Constitution needful and in Germany, literature is full of the success of the Jews in ousting the ancient families.

Their remarkable success in politics, and their instinct for acquiring pecuniary control of the Press, are observed in all free countries, and have recently called forth pamphlets, and even books, penetrated with a most energetic hate. Considering that a hundred years ago the Jews were a despised caste, their rise into a dreaded order has been singularly rapid — too rapid, some imagine, for them to be perfectly safe in their new position.

The explanation of their success is, we presume, that their peculiar capacity exactly suits the conditions of modern life, and their best defense would be this—that in the country where they are most perfectly free, France, they are least hated or distrusted."

Likely other people could be equally successful were they to apply themselves with as much diligence. A true Jew is not ashamed to be a Jew. Let Christians also learn to be Christians, and not like Christians, and many of them will get along much better. It is acting like the world, that causes so many professing Christians to degenerate. All this might be explained were it necessary.

IN Northern Illinois, there are fourteen churches and not less than fifty-six ministers.

THE GOSPEL PREACHER.

IN answer to many inquiries in regard to Benj. Franklin's "Gospel Preacher," we will here state that the book is now kept at this office for sale. It is the best collection of sermons we know of. Ministers will find it a valuable work. The book is neatly printed, well bound in cloth, and will be sent post-paid for $2.00.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

What is the meaning of the last two words of 1 Cor. 16: 22? "Anathema Maran atha," and what language is it? W. H. MILLER.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DIETRICK.

We read in Gen. 1: 26: "Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness." Did God make man in the form of himself, or was the image spiritual? A. HOLLINGER.

Please give an explanation on 1 Cor. 5: 5: "To deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." M. W. KERN.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK give an explanation of the latter clause of the 36th verse of the 22nd chapter of Luke, which reads as follows: "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one."

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 3: 12, 13? 1. Who is the builder? 2. What the material? 3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire? 4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire? B. B. WHITMER.

Please explain 1 Tim. 1: 9; Luke 16: 15; Mark 11: 23; Mark 10: 17, 18. To what law has the Scriptures reference and to what extent should it be used? What is the most esteemed? Has it reference to any particular thing?

Also, Mark 23: 15, which reads as follows: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." S. A. ULERY.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22: 2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5: 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc.

S. A. FLICKINGER.

Some one will please explain Mark 16: 17, 18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Who is referred to?

J. L. BROWN.

SELL THE GARMENT AND BUY A SWORD.

S. A. Ulery:—

IN answer to your query in regard to Luke 22: 36, I offer my humble opinion; not however debarring others from the same liberty.

Our Savior had just entered upon His passion; the powers of earth and hell had combined to destroy Him and His religion; much now depended on the fidelity of His disciples to Him and His cause. Jesus therefore called their attention to the fact of their appointment to eat and drink in His kingdom, and to set on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. How consoling! But Jesus wanted to inform them, that they were at present about to enter a fiery ordeal, and He wished to prepare them for it. "And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye anything? And they said, Nothing. Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse let him take it, and likewise his scrip: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one." As if he had said, from the first until now, you have been highly favored; you went forth casting out devils, you healed the sick, you was hailed every-where as a God-sent: but now the case has changed, and "Satan has desired to have you, (Peter), that he might sift you as wheat, but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not. Remember, my disciples, that this that is written of me, must be accomplished, for the things concerning me have an end; and they said, Lord, behold! here are two swords." O, how must Jesus have become wearied by this time! How he must have grieved at their lack of discernment! He then, to relieve himself and put an end to their further concern about the matter, added, "It is enough." Jesus knowing that they would soon, very soon, understand it all, as came to pass soon after, in the garden, when an opportunity presented itself to Peter to use his steel. But now Jesus proceeds to disabuse his mind of the misapprehension: "Put up thy sword into its place, for all who take the sword, must perish with the sword."

MAKING PROSELYTES.

The scribes and Pharisees' teaching consisted of the annice and cummin of the law, while judgment, and mercy, and faith were ignored: hence a proselyte to such a religion was only adding an idol to idols already possessed; hence two-fold more a child of hell than themselves.

T. D. LYON.

FOR MY YOUNG FRIENDS.

BY MARY J. STEES.

My Dear Young Friends:—

DO you ever have evening reveries? Have you ever, on a beautiful evening in Autumn, when all alone, watched the setting of the sun, and observed closely the changes of nature? If you have,—and I know you have—did they not tell you, that life is short and time is fleeting?

The trees that a few days ago were clothed in green, are now stripped of their vesture. The beautiful green carpet that covered the earth is now quite sear. Only a few fragments of the luxuriant stems that furnished the nation with its produce, are left for us to behold as we scan the steps of nature. And what does all this mean? What does it tell us? Young friends, does it not tell us that we, too, are changing? and ere long must quit this arena of life? Yes, this it tells us, and this is why I write this evening.

Just one year ago to-day I met here (in the school-room) with nearly fifty pupils. This evening, after they had all departed, and I was left alone, I seated myself near a western window for a few moments' rest before I left the school-room. The ticking of the clock, the quietude, and the changes of nature in my view abroad, as I looked from the window, made me think of the sad change that has taken place here, since one year ago. (Nov. 19, 1877). One of my oldest pupils, from the effects of diphtheria, is no longer able to be with us. Five younger ones,—two since our last vacation—have left us to join that glorious school which is singing around the throne in heaven. 'Tis sad to write of them, but I know they are happier than I or those with whom I am permitted again to meet. They were sweet little children, and I loved to meet them. I miss their smiling faces, and sweet little kisses. Ah! I did not think when last we parted, that ere we met again, some of us would cross the River of Life. Dear young friends, you who attend school, has it ever occurred to you, that some day sooner or later, you must part with your school-mates and teachers, never again to meet them here? O, I entreat you to be kind to them! As you should love and esteem your parents, so love and esteem your teacher. As you should love and treat your brothers and sisters, so treat your school-mates. Treat them with such respect, that should you be the first to quit this stage of life, that they may deeply feel your absence; that when they think of you, gone—they may know that their loss is your gain. Cultivate a kind and generous spirit toward all. Begin when young to fit your mind, the immortal part of man, to dwell forever with its God. Remember there is a vast deal of work to perform and no time to be lost. So begin when young to try to gain a true knowledge by learning of Him, our Creator; for He is all we are to learn about. He says, "Learn of me." "For I am meek and lowly in heart."

And, dear teachers, there is a great responsibility, concerning the welfare of our pupils, resting upon us. Christ has given us the talent for teaching, and He expects us to improve it, that at His coming He may receive His with usury. Then let us try so to teach our pupils, that when we are done with this earthly toil, and stand at the "gate ajar," that we may say, here Lord is what thou hast delivered unto me; behold, I have gained beside these, other talents. Then will our Lord say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

DEATH.

DEAR reader, the day is not far distant when a remorseless foe will confront you. Your strength of arm, and pride of intellect and stoutness of heart will not avail. Powerless as a leaf driven before the blast, you must yield. The rarest skill and the wisdom of the wisest men cannot save you. Though hosts of devoted friends surround you, yet every effort of theirs in your behalf will be in vain. Death will conquer you. Your eyes will close to all earthly sights; your ears grow deaf, even to the tenderest whispers of love; your lips will be sealed and your throbbing heart will cease to beat. You will be laid in your coffin and borne to the grave, and weeping friends will turn away and leave you to the solitude and silence of your narrow home.

Deathless spirit, reading these brief lines, remember you are reading your own experience; for you are mortal, and it well becomes you to stop, if only for a moment, and ask yourself the solemn questions, "Am I ready to endure this momentous ordeal? Am I ready for the hour of dissolution, and the darkness of the grave?" Whether prepared or not, the hour is very near when death will claim you for his own. Already his shadow darkens your pathway, and the fatal dart is poised with unerring aim in the hands of the destroyer. There is then

"No room for mirth or trifling here,
For worldly hope or worldly fear;
If life so soon is gone;
Nothing is worth a thought beneath,
But how you may escape the death
That never, never dies!
How make your own election sure;
And when you fail on earth, secure
A mansion in the skies."

You may live, with God's help, so that death even shall not be feared; and though you fall before the king of terrors, you shall conquer, and go shouting home to glory, victorious through Jesus Christ our Lord.

NOT AS IT ONCE WAS.

BY ASA BEARSS.

WHEN I look back and view, in my early days, my state of existence, and call to mind the dangerous course I was pursuing, it causes a deep shudder and a painful emotion, excited by the then dangerous precipice I was just standing on, by times I was wholly unconcerned of that course that would lead me down to everlasting ruin, and in the future be banished from the presence of so benevolent and merciful a Being, who has borne, in patience, with many a faithless rebel like myself, and did not cut me off as a cumberer of the ground, but still extended His mercy still longer, and longer, under the powerful teachings of His Holy Spirit. Truly, we can say, "The long-suffering of God waited as in the days of Noah," when we were in prison and by the Holy Lamb of God, preaching to us in our lonely and lost state of imprisonment, and daily teaching us to come out; but could find no pardon till the uttermost farthing was paid, and when once delivered from bondage and filled with the love of Jesus that makes us wise unto salvation, we can say our feelings and desires are not as they once were. What a bright change! Behold a new creature in Christ Jesus. And what is the effect? It brought all the animal nature of man under the subjection of the spiritual Law. It brought the "wolf to dwell with the lamb, the leopard to lie down with the kid, the calf, young lion and fatling together; and a little child shall lead them." And if the soul listens to and obeys the teachings of the grace of God, it will bring it to the cross of Christ, which will crucify or correct self, and prepare the heart for the reception of the love of God, in which there is neither fear or partiality. This brings the divers natures to harmonize, so that the "cow and bear shall feed, and their young ones lie down together," so it is not as it once was. As the elder said to John, "Weep not, behold the lion of the tribe of Judah, the root of David hath prevailed to open the book and to loose the seals thereof."

Sherkston, Ont.

WHEN a stranger enters your church, always take him to a seat. He will not only feel at home then, but also likely come again.

SOME persons have great zeal for the interests of their congregation, but care nothing about the church at large. Is this from ignorance, or is it selfishness?

Do not allow yourself to rest satisfied while you can point to nothing valuable that your hands produced, nor anything which you can call your own, bought with money earned by your own labor.

WHEN I hear a person who has broken the laws of the land, railed at, and hear people cry, "Oh, he is a vile wretch; he deserves his sentence;" for my part I can't throw a stone at him, but I see that if God were to leave me to myself, I should commit as foul crimes, and a thousand times worse.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Elk Lick and Salisbury, Pa.

WE will try to give a few thoughts concerning our congregation, locality, etc. Our congregation is called the Elk Lick, with a membership of about two hundred, many of whom are quite young, with some few aged and valiant soldiers of the cross. Our meeting-house is erected in Salisbury, on a street formerly known as Jerusalem, and latterly Union, either of which we think a good place to locate a church. We have out of the two hundred, a membership of fifty-seven in this place. We have another place of worship in Addison, where about forty members reside, at which place we have preaching every third Sunday.—No minister nearer than eight or nine miles. All our ministers live in Salisbury, except elder Kelso, who lives about three-fourths of a mile North-east of here. During this last year, we lost nineteen members by deaths and removals.

Our new church, which is now completed, is a two story, plain edifice, 40x70; the room on the second floor being 40x60, for general services, and the first floor has a Sunday-school-room, kitchen, dining room and pantry.

We propose having the dedication sermon preached by elder James Quinter, on Sunday Morning, Dec. 29th. There are, also, other ministering brethren expected from abroad.—We expect to continue the meeting for several days thereafter.

Our post-office is Elk Lick, the surrounding township the same name; so if any of our Brethren or friends wish to communicate with any of our Brethren, please observe the distinction. Our branch R. R. so long in contemplation, is now completed, and connects with all day passenger trains on the main line; so that the editors at Lanark need not excuse themselves the next visit to Meyersdale for a convenience to come to our place, as there is provision made for ministers to ride at half fare, which is fifteen cents.

We have preaching every Sabbath morning or evening, Sabbath-school every Sabbath, social prayer, Wednesday evening, each week.—If any of our brethren pass through our country, to them and all who desire, we extend a general invitation to stop with us, and preach the unsearchable riches of God's Word.

S. C. KEIM.

From South Waterloo, Iowa.

ON the evening of the 21st of Nov., brother John Wise commenced a series of meetings in our meeting-house, in the West end of our congregation, and continued until the evening of the 26th, during which time he held forth the Word of Life with power. The immediate result of his labors was, two young persons came forward and were received into the church by baptism. We believe that others were seriously impressed relative to their soul's salvation. And while brother John pointed sinners to the lamb of God, he did not fail to instruct and exhort the members to love and faithfulness in their Christian duties.

On Thursday Nov. 28th, (which was Thanksgiving day), we commenced a series of meetings in our meeting-house, in the eastern part of our congregation, at 10 o'clock. The first meeting was conducted by the resident ministers, but in the evening of the same day brother Wise came among us, and commenced to hold forth the Word with his usual zeal and power, and thus continued up to the evening of the 3rd of Dec. There were no other applicants at the last meeting, but we think the members were edified and built up in faith and love. We had an evidence of this fact on the 3rd, which day the members met in council, to attend to the general business of the church, at which meeting the church was well represented, and the business that was brought before the meeting, was pleasantly adjusted, and we hope to the satisfaction of all. For some time past, there has been a cloud hanging over this church, but from present indications, we have reason to hope that before long, we will be again permitted to enjoy the sunshine of prosperity and peace, which is so essential to our present and future happiness.

JACOB A. MURRAY.

From Waldemar Meyers.

ELDER George Wolf and myself, have just closed a five night's meeting, at the Chapel school-house, San Joaquin Co. The house was crowded all the time, with good attention. Two members of the Campbellite church, made up their mind to travel with us Zionward. One of them had been a member in that church for forty-five years, if I mistake not, and held the office of an ordained elder. More, I have no doubt, will soon follow. We also found an aged sister, firm in the faith, and near the kingdom. For more than twenty years this sister has been praying, (as her daughter told us), that the Lord might send the Brethren that way. At last they came. O, what a joy for her!—what a meeting for us, with one so good!

Brighton, Sacramento Co., Cal.

From D. N. Workman.

ON Nov. 5th, commenced meeting in what is known as the Jonathan's Creek Branch church of the Brethren, and continued until Saturday, 9th, at which time we had six additions. Also held a Communion. We then thought it best to still continue longer. So we continued until Nov. 20th, at which time we held another Love-feast, and I believe it was a Love-feast indeed; twenty-six additions, and one applicant, which was baptized the next morning, making in all twenty seven additions, while I was there, and one applicant when I left. We believe that many more were ready to become Christians, as many of them said they would not stay away long. May the Savior help them to prove faithful to their promise, is my prayer.

We feel that we cannot feel thankful enough to the dear brethren, sisters and friends for their kindness during our stay with them.—Many were the tears that were shed when we parted, and many "God bless you," went up from warm hearts, when upon the bank of the stream, we bade them farewell. Now may the God of peace ever keep them, is my prayer.—With this we send our love and warmest regards to them all, hoping to re-visit them at some future time.

Ashland, Ohio.

OUR Love-feast is among the things of the past. It was a feast to our souls. One hundred and twenty members were in attendance. The ministerial force was strong, consisting of Brethren Jacob and Jeremiah Gump, of Allen Co., Ind., Michael Shotts, of Steuben Co., Peter Long, of Lagrange Co. Those brethren were elders, and there were other brethren in the second degree with us. The brethren labored earnestly in the Master's cause.

Our house is 40x90; and it was crowded, and very good order and attention. We expect to commence a meeting in the last part of our district, on New Year's evening, and continue about one week, and then commence at our meeting-house, and continue about a week also.

From Elsie, Clinton Co., Michigan.

Dear Brethren:—

BY request, I shall try and give you some church news from this part of Michigan. I was at a Communion meeting in Eaton Co.; and there formed the acquaintance of Bro. O. F. Yount, of Ohio. I insisted on him to come and pay us a visit, as we live sixty-five miles from any church; our little flock consisting of twenty-six members, and some living a considerable distance away, and I am the only minister. Brother Yount came and helped us; he commenced Monday evening, Nov. 11th. On Wednesday night three came forward, and on Thursday they were baptized. Thursday, he said would be the last night, but the interest seemed good; he then concluded to stay over Sunday. Right here some of our Brethren's joy was turned to mourning; our deacon, brother David Baker was attending meeting, and enjoying himself, when on Thursday evening the news came, that his little boy was very sick. After meeting he started home; had fourteen miles to go, and he was forty minutes too late to see his boy alive. He died with the diphtheria. On Saturday brother Yount preached the funeral, to a very interesting crowd of people. Back to our meeting at home again.—Sunday night, two more came out. Met on Monday, and had meeting, two more were willing to go along, and were baptized. Monday night three more were willing to follow the example of the Lord. Tuesday they were baptized, and Tuesday night was his last sermon. There were others almost ready to go. He worked faithful; and he saw our situation, our building, that we were four years at work at, it seemed had been shaken, and he felt that it took work to get it solid again. I felt encouraged, and feel like work again. Brethren pray for us, we need your prayers. We are not very well fortified; and our company is small, and where the enemy sees weak places, he will try and break through and scatter the sheep.—They all say, that it was the best meeting they ever was at. May God bless him wherever he labors. Brethren that feel to come and help us, are invited to come.

Yours fraternally,

Z. ALBAUGH.

From Daniel S. Replogle.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL try and pen you a few thoughts, that came to my mind while I was reading the last number of the BRETHREN AT WORK, dated Nov. 28th. I have been a reader of this paper for almost two years, and am happy to say that I have read many good sermons and admonitions, which I shall try, in my weakness, to treasure up, and especially do I approve of brother Moore's numbers, which he calls "A Few Observations." These, I think, are admonitions and warnings in the right direction, in this, our day; for we see every day more and more of these evils, namely pride in our church, and we are glad to see and read, that our editors are taking a stand against it, and are trying to carry it out by their example.—It is said that pride goes before a fall, and I fear sometimes, that pride is tolerated a little too much in our church, and it is time to keep this evil down. I fear sometimes our ministers do not preach enough about what God demands of his followers. God is a God of order, and if the church loses its order, where will we be? I say let our brethren who start out to work in their fields of labor, take the order of the church right along with them, and preach it up and carry it out themselves. It will help a great deal in keeping up the Ancient Landmarks of the church. I think the church should be very careful in sending out missionaries, to see that such brethren are sent out that have fully complied with the Gospel order of the church in dress, as well as other things. God's people are to be a peculiar people—a separate people from the world, and if our ministers go out to preach, and dress like the world and look like the world, I cannot blame their converts if they do the same; because they will say, "If the preacher can do so and so, I can too." This is the way they will reason this matter. I might quote much Scripture in defense of non-conformity, but I can not in my weakness, do the subject justice; so I will leave it, and cite all Bible readers to examine for themselves, and see what God demands of all His children.

I will close, by wishing you much success with your valuable paper. May it be a power for good, and be a means of bringing many into the church, to be lively epistles, read and known of all men, is my prayer.

Maria, Pa., Dec. 1st, 1878.

From the English Prairie Church.

ON the 8th our meeting was held in the English Prairie church. The attendance was large. Services were opened by singing and prayer. Uncle and brother Peter Long chose for his subject Philippians 2: 8, 10. The name of Jesus should be, and is very great. What Christian has not read the life and death of Jesus, without a tear, not thinking that his name is exalted and sweet? The adversary is great, he goeth about "Seeking whom he may devour." But the name of Jesus is more exalted, it reaches beyond the confines of this world. Why should we be ashamed to name the name of Jesus, when it is above every other name?

Brother Burger, from Ohio, closed with well-timed, and pointed remarks; that daily mortals are passing from the stage of action, and how unspeakably happy are those that have named the name of Jesus. It is God's will, that all should be saved. He does not want one soul to be lost. There are two roads we are all to choose, one or the other; would that all would name the name of Jesus, that the portals of heaven can be reached. Meeting closed with prayer, and singing the 380th hymn.

We again met in the evening for worship.—Brother Truly addressed the congregation, from the same subject. He said the subject is inexhaustible. The name of Jesus is so exalted; and told us why his name is exalted and necessary that it should be.

HOME.

We will close with saying a few words in regard to our earthly home, where we all need assistance and encouragement to keep us in the right path. At home we expect sympathy in our sorrow, gentle words when we do wrong.—Parents should wield an influence with their children, and, through all, guard them and keep them from evil; for it is while young the seed is sown, which in time brings forth good or bad fruit. Let all try to make home happy, when years have rolled by in remembrance of it, that they may all say with fullness of heart, my home was to me the most beautiful and dearest place on earth.

Dear Brethren:—

TO-DAY is Sunday, and as I am seated before my English book (the Brethren's Hymn Book), my mind is carried back far beyond the briny deep, and has concentrated itself solely upon the blessed Redeemer and his cross. How lonely passes the time away; I have nobody here with whom I can sing and pray,—nobody here to talk with about the blessed hopes of a brighter day,—all is left behind in America. If it was not for the hope, would not my lot be hard? But I am thinking now of that beautiful hymn:

"How oft I've seen the flowing tears,
And heard you tell your hopes and fears;
Your hearts with love have seem'd to flame,
Which makes me hope, we'll meet again."

Oh yes, beloved brethren and sisters, will that not be a happy day, when we all shall meet again, where parting is no more? O, how do I pray, that I may be one of the happy ones, that are gathered around God's dazzling throne in heaven, where we shall sing praises forevermore. Rev. 7: 9, 10. Now beloved brethren, is it not possible, that I could get a paper from you once in a while; it would be as balsam to the open wounds of my heart. I have paid for the paper till January, and if I can make it possible about exchanging money, then will I gladly send the money for your paper for the next year. But let me not wait much longer, as I want to hear of the success the Brethren are having in America. Here the people are too proud and wicked to follow the meek and lowly Lamb. Now beloved, be thousand times kissed with the holy kiss from your brother in Christ.

Report of Meetings near Fredericksburg, Chickesaw Co., Iowa.

ON Sunday, Nov. 17th, brethren Joseph Ogg and William Hipes, of Minn., commenced a series of meetings, at the above named place, and continued until Wednesday evening, Nov. 20th.

On Friday evening I commenced and continued till the evening of the 27th, making in all thirteen meetings. The turnout was large and order was good. The result was, four baptized and many more near the kingdom.

Brother Hipes is said to have delivered a convincing discourse on the Lord's Supper, whilst brother Ogg caused quite a commotion in the Freemason camp. The ministering brethren having broken the ice, I had comparatively easy work. The people being mostly single immersionists, I delivered a discourse on trine immersion. Some of the people seemed to be astonished, that so much could be said in favor of trine immersion; although the half was not told. There are now fifteen members in Chickasaw Co., with a very good prospect for more, but no preacher.

The Stein and Ray Debate seems to be doing a good work at the above named place. Also the Brethren's pamphlets. Send them on brethren, and if we can't send preachers in the presence of men, we can have those silent messengers of the pen and press preached to the people in such places as the above, and much good can be done in that way.

Notice.

WHEREAS, at the last District Meeting held in the Southern District of Indiana, George W. Studebaker, John H. Caylor and David Bowman, were appointed a committee to take into consideration the propriety of procuring a farm with suitable buildings thereon, for the purpose of keeping more comfortably than heretofore, the unfortunate poor members who are permanent church charges.

Whereupon we, the committee organized on the 8th day of Nov., 1878, and appointed David Bowman, clerk, and ordered that the housekeeper of the different branches of the church in Southern Indiana, be requested to present the matter to their churches and instruct their delegates to the next District Meeting relative thereto, at which time and place this committee will report progress. By order of the committee. DAVID BOWMAN, Clerk.

Our Series of meetings—A Glorious Season—A Noble Effort—A Few Crumbs of the Seed Sown.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

NO. IV.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson, of Perrin, Mo., came to us on the 2nd of Dec., and commenced a series of meetings the same evening, and continued till the 12th. The order, attendance and attention were most excellent during the whole time of these meetings. The preaching was good—touching and inviting, and was much appreciated by both saint and sinner.—The result is, that fourteen precious souls were made willing to put on Christ in baptism, to walk in newness of life. This was, indeed, a feast of fat things to us. The greatest revival that this church has realized since its organization, ten years ago. The church has been much revived.

The church at Falls city, has had a glorious season; fathers and mothers have been made to weep for joy, as they witnessed their children coming to the Savior, taking the necessary steps to have their names written in the great church book of eternal life. Not only Brethren's children, but others, also, have been made to feel the power of God's work, and become willing to obey the Gospel.

The church and ministers seemed to work so harmoniously together, that it was enough, of itself, to infuse new life and energy into the most indifferent in the cause. Brother Gibson's effort was far from being anything else than noble. He labored with all the power and energy given him; and to us it seemed as if he could not, possibly, long endure to labor as he did here, although, he seemed to be in a better condition physically at the close than when he came.

Truth was the theme of his first discourse. What is truth? John 19: 38, is a question of Pilate. This was answered in a logical manner. Proof text, John 17, "Thy word is truth."

2. The sanctifying influence of divine truth. 1 Peter 1: 22, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth;" John 17, "Sanctify them through the truth."

3. The result of obedience to the truth:—Freedom from sin—"The truth shall make you free, John 8: 32. Truth does not admit of any comparison. It cannot be made more true, neither can it be made any less true. It does not admit of improvement, either by adding to, or taking from, but is perfect within itself. Rev. 22: 18, 19, declaring, "If any man shall add unto these things;"—meaning truth—"God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book." "Any man taking from the words of this book, or prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the Holy City, and from the things that are written in this Book," is as much truth as any other part of God's word.

To do any less than the truth demands, is doing less than God wants us to do. To do more than the truth demands, is doing more than God wants us to do. Either would be wanting. God just asks of us what he wants us to obey, neither more nor less.

1. We ought to be sure that we have the truth.

2. That we have nothing more than the truth.

3. We ought to be careful and not mix truth and error together; for Satan did that, and to do so, would be following the example of Satan.

To be a half way Christian, will only make somebody believe that we are poor readers, or that we are not sincere in what we do, or that the children or somebody else got a hold of our Bible, and tore out some leaves, so that it does not contain the whole truth.

C. FORNEY.

Falls City, Nebraska.

From Exeter, Fillmore Co., Neb.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL give you a short sketch of our meetings here in the far West: Brethren S. C. Stump, of Falls City, Nebraska, and Urias Shick, of Beatrice, Nebraska, came to us on the 28th of Nov., to hold a series of meetings. Had preaching that evening, at our schoolhouse to an attentive congregation. On Friday night went to hear a minister of the M. E. fraternity. He gave us a lecture on the plagues of Nebraska. On the same day at 10 o'clock, we went to the water and baptized one sister. On Saturday we commenced preaching again, and preached seven sermons; holding forth the word with such power, that another soul was made willing to come out and serve the Lord, and many more were made to weep, who, we are made to believe, are almost persuaded.—Brethren come over and help us. We now number nine, four brothers and five sisters. Brethren come and preach for us, do not let the good seed that has been sown, be plucked up by some of these "isms". The brethren preached on Friday night and left the next morning. May the good Lord bless them, is the prayer of your brother,

DAVID R. KELLY.

Dec. 12th, 1878.

From J. S. Flory.

Dear Brethren:—

WE will drop a few lines concerning our visits among the brethren since here.

On Saturday before the last Sunday in Nov., Bro. Frank Holsinger took me to his home, about five miles from the city, across the state line into Kansas. Brother Holsinger has a fine location, and nursery business to a considerable extent. His father and mother also reside with him, and are members of the church.—Sister Holsinger is a daughter of elder Long, of Maryland. Meeting in school-house at night, also twice on Sunday. There are some eight or ten members in the neighborhood, and a good prospect for more, if they had a resident minister. Who will be moved to come and locate there, and help by the grace of God, to build up the church?

On the following Saturday, about 5 o'clock in the morning, we took the train for Centerview, Mo., where we arrived about 8 o'clock.—At the depot we met brother A. Hutchinson and other brethren. It was indeed a glad meeting with brother Hutchinson and family, after a separation of six years. Owing to a severe snow-storm setting in, there was no meeting that night. We then had two appointments for the next day at the Brethren's meeting-house. Brother S. S. Mohler and brother J. Crumpacker (my brother-in-law), from Cornelia, Mo., were also in attendance.—Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the attendance was not so large; nevertheless we had a pleasant intercourse with the members and friends of that locality; and felt that it was good to be there. We returned to the city Monday morning. Saturday following, brother Holsinger again came to my door while it was snowing severely, and said I must go with him as appointments were made. Two meetings Sunday. Returned again Monday morning. Have calls from different directions, to come and preach for them, but we can not possibly fill but few such calls. It is surprising how rapidly the church is spreading over this great western country. From emigrations and conversions, congregations are springing up throughout the land. We hope the practical principles of the Gospel and peculiar characteristics of the church, will keep pace with the prosperity of our beloved brotherhood, that from the outward evidences, it may be known, the inner life is indeed consecrated to God and weaned from the world.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 12th, 1878.

A Reminder.

THE notice given in the BRETHREN AT WORK, in 1877, and the first number of the Primitive Christian, in 1878, in relation to the Albaugh poor fund, still stands open. More money in the committee's hands to contribute to poor churches that come under the provisions of the will. And in order to avoid much unnecessary correspondence it is proper to state that individuals and rich churches need not apply. But those churches composed mainly of poor persons, barely able to provide for themselves, and not well able to provide for their still poorer members and neighbors, are the churches to be benefited by the provisions of the will, and all such will please send their applications to the undersigned, when the committee will act upon it.

By order of the committee.

DAVID BOWMAN.

Report of Annual Meeting Expenses.

NO doubt many Brethren have been anxiously waiting to see the report. It was expected ere this time, that the report would have been published, but in consequence of there being between four and five hundred dollars not yet paid in from several churches, the committee of arrangements could not make a final settlement, nor the clerk furnish his report. Hence the delay. The report will probably be made before long. The churches yet in arrears will have to pay up, so that the expenses and overplus, what there may be, can be equalized among all the churches. This will be fairness. A LEEDY, Cor. Sec.

Notice to Southern District of Ind.

OUR missionary funds being about exhausted, and as the brethren appointed on the Southern Mission, expect to make another trip to their field of labor soon, we are compelled to call on the different congregations of Southern Indiana, for more funds. Several congregations have not responded to the call made last Spring. We hope that all churches knowing themselves delinquent, and those that have not responded to the call made last Spring, will, as soon as circumstances will admit, respond to this call, as the money is needed.—Send it to B. F. Koons, Nettle Creek, Wayne Co., Ind.

The following is the quota of each congregation:

Upper Fall Creek,	$2.00
Piermont,	2.50
Mississinawa,	4.00
Owen Co.,	2.00
Beech Grove,	1.00
Stony Creek,	1.50
Middle Fork Wild Cat,	4.00
Four Mile,	2.50
Lower Fall Creek,	1.00
Buck Creek,	1.50
Howard Co.,	2.00
Raccoon,	2.00
Nettle Creek,	10.00
Potato Creek,	.75
Cicero,	2.00
Kill Buck,	1.50

By order of the Committee on ways and means. W. R. DEETER, Clerk.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

LAVY.—In the Upper Stillwater church, Miami Co., Ohio, Nov. 2nd, 1878, son of brother George and sister Lavy, aged 2 years, 5 months and 23 days. Disease diphtheria.—Funeral discourse from 1 Peter 1, by the brethren.

LAVY.—Also in the same family, David Wilson Lavy, aged 1 year and 5 days, of the same disease. Funeral discourse from Job 14: 1, 2, by the brethren.

EMANUEL HOOVER.

LOHMAN.—In the bounds of the Arnold's Grove church, Dec. 13th, Joel Lea, son of brother George W. Lohman, aged 2 years, 3 months and 9 days. Funeral services on the 14th, by the brethren, from 1 Cor. 15: 22

J. J. EMMERT.

LARICK.—On Rock Creek, San Luis Valley, Rio Grande Co., Colorado, Joanna, daughter of brother Henry and sister Larick, aged 9 years, 10 months and 18 days. Funeral discourse was preached by the writer, to an orderly congregation. M. M. BASHOR.

SWITZER.—In the Panther Creek church, Woodford Co., Ill., December 3rd, Ida V. Switzer, daughter of brother James and sister Mary F. Switzer, aged 5 years and 11 days.

We have had eight cases of diphtheria in our neighborhood, that fell into the hands of the doctors, six of the eight are now sleeping in the dust of the earth. How lonesome we feel since our little Ida is gone.

JAMES R. GISH.

BURGER.—Near Keota, Washington Co., Iowa, Nov. 19th, 1878, of membranous diphtheria, Almira June, daughter of brother Joseph and sister Salinda Burger, aged 6 years, 7 months and 1 day. Funeral services by elder John Thomas.

AMELIA C. NOFZIGER.

NEHER.—In the Osage congregation, Crawford Co., Kansas, Nov. 7th, 1878, Willie, son of brother David and sister Christina Neher, aged 4 years and 2 days. Funeral services by the brethren. D. D. SHIVELY.

SWINK.—In the English River congregation, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Dec. 9th, 1878, Sammie E., son of friend Oliver and sister Barbara Swink aged one year, 11 months and 23 days. Funeral services by elder Jacob Brower, from John 11: 23.

Thus little Sammie who seemed so near and dear to the family and relatives, was of short duration, and is now gone to Jesus, to ever dwell with him. SAMUEL FLORY.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money, received to be used for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor members, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the Poor Fund. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

LONGINGS.

I long for strength, O Lord,
For strength to rise to Thee,
I long for sight, O Lord,
For sight thy face to see.

I long for life, O Lord,
For Life that Thou didst give,
I long for grace, O Lord,
For grace that life to live.

I long for peace, O Lord,
For peace that knows no end,
I long for love, O Lord,
For love that Thou dost send.

I long for hope, O Lord,
For hope in Thy great love;
I long for faith, O Lord;
For faith to rise above.

I long for zeal, O Lord,
For zeal in Thy great cause;
I long for light, O Lord,
For light to learn Thy laws.

I long for Christ, O Lord,
For Christ who died for me,
I long for rest, O Lord,
For rest eternally.

I long for Thee, O Lord,
For Thee, for Thee I long:
When shall I find in Thee,
The burden of my song?

A NEW YEARS EXHORTATION.

BY AMOS CHAMBERLIN.

ANOTHER year is past and gone, never to return. Oh how swiftly time flies, hours days, weeks, months and years pass in rapid succession. Yes, time passes rapidly away, and with its rapid flight carries us on to the great boundless ocean of eternity. As we look back over the past year, what mixture of joy, grief, sorrow, pleasure and pain. We behold how many trials, temptations we have safely passed through, by the grace of our God, who is ever able and willing to succor us if we but trust him. Oh, how thankful we should be to him for the innumerable blessings he has bestowed upon us in the year that has just rolled away. While we have been spared to see the year 1878 pass away, many of our fellow-beings have gone to eternity. Yes, all around us death has been doing its work, and how solemn the thought, that many thousands of those who fell by the very hand of death, have gone to the unseen world unprepared to meet God in peace.

It is now a fitting time to consider our past lives. How have we spent the past year? Has it been our chief concern to live for heaven? In a word have we spent the past year to the honor and glory of God? If we have it is well. But in looking back over the past year we will find many misteps, many unkind words, and very little brotherly kindness. Do we shudder at our remembrance of the past? How would we feel just now should the Master of solemn assemblies appear? Are we ready? Have we our lamp trimmed and burning? Have we on the wedding garment, ready to enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb? Oh, let us profit by the past.

Now at the commencement of the new year, let us dedicate anew our hearts to God, and strive manfully for heaven and eternal happiness; so that should it be God's will to call us to another world by the hand of death, ere another year rolls away, we may be ready to meet death with a welcome. O may God help us to live near him, may we live in daily and hourly communion with him. To you, dear unconverted reader, let me beseech you to no longer delay your return to God, but come at the commencement of this new year and dedicate your hearts to God, and may you who read and I who write these words, so spend our days here that should your eyes be closed in death, and the fingers that write these lines lay motionless in the tomb before another new year comes, that we may meet at God's right hand and sing his praise evermore. May God help you to receive this exhortation, and help you to remember that you are responsible to him for what you read, and the improvement you make of it; and may I remember that I must meet what I write at the judgment bar of God.

THOUGHTS AGAINST INFIDELITY.

BY H. C. LUCAS.

I HAVE for sometime been wondering why some of the able contributors to the columns of the BRETHREN AT WORK, have not said more in regard and against the increasing tendency to infidelity among the people of this so-called and enligtened age It is undeniably true, that there is a continual strengthening and growing of infidel, atheistic and free-thinking notions among the people in many neighborhoods.

The excuses presented by the adversary of souls to the minds of those who do not profess Christianity, are very numerous and many of them are very puerile. Yet, to the uninformed mind, these weak and groundless cavils are but too weighty in many instances.

Another reason that these dark doctrines are getting foothold, is, that the professor of religion is often unable to answer the feeble objections of some disbeliever. Professors of Christianity should be enlightened upon the evidences of the same and always be able to "give a reason of the hope within you." They should be able to point to the many prophecies and their signal fulfillment. The weak and unfounded cavils of disbelievers should be taken up and answered both publicly from the pulpit and privately by the fireside. Light is never ashamed of more light,—but darkness shuns light,—does not desire investigation. Truth, though kept in the dark for centuries will finally be exposed to the rays of light.

A noted writer on infidelity, has said that there are two causes for unbelief of the testimony of the sacred writings: 1st, man's hatred towards God, and, 2nd, his lack of information. The apostle said, "the carnal mind is enmity against God," and Christ said, "men have loved darkness better than light." So these are good reasons why men naturally wander further from God, and are not inclined to seek him.

I suppose it has always been the case to a greater or less extent; but Paul enumerates among the signs of the coming of Christ, that, "men shall be lovers of their own selves," and putting this and the foregoing passages together it is not surprising that there are many denying the truthfulness of our sacred Record and Revelation of Jesus Christ.

A word to the follower of the Master. There are many things to draw our attention and service from the despised Nazarene, but let us not falter or flinch from any known duty and the promise of the reward,—heirship with Christ will not fail. There are many commotions around us, but let them not cause us to lessen our devotion, or to disregard our vows to the kind Master.

For some time I have had in consideration a project which I think if carried out would be of great benefit to many who are in darkness and have not at hand the adequate means of enlightenment, and salvation from their terrible thralldom. I will present the subject to the consideration of your readers at an early day.

LIGHT.

BY LIZZIE B. MYERS.

"And God said, let there be light, and there was light." Gen. 1:3.

IN the beginning of the creation, when the earth was without form, and darkness on the face of the deep, how soon did it become necessary to have light, and God saw that it was good, which is also the experience of every living soul upon the face of the earth.

Taking a natural view, what could we accomplish if we had not the great luminary of the day to give us light. How dreary when the sun does not shine for several days, and how we long to see his brilliant rays, cheering all nature and rousing the very soul to new life, and should call forth praise and thanksgiving from every heart; this it will wherever God's blessings are duly appreciated. As we have the sun to light this world naturally, so God has not left us in darkness spiritually, but has provided us again with the necessary Light,—his Son, of whom John said, "That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." Then the question arises, why are so many walking in darkness? "The light shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not." Here is where the great trouble comes in. What would be thought of a man building a house without a window, and living in it with the doors closed? He could not tell whether the sun was shining or not, neither would he care, for all is darkness within. That man would be pronounced a maniac, but all men are wiser naturally than to put up such a building. How careful to have plenty of windows to give light inside; very commendable too, for God gave the light for us to enjoy it.

I do not think it very wise either to curtain those windows so heavily that the light cannot penetrate and give the room a gloomy appearance, especially in the Winter season; let the sun shine in all you can, and it will be all the more cheerful as well as healthful. Just so spiritually. The sinner, while he closes every avenue, bars every door against the light of God, cannot know what enjoyment that light affords, any more than the man in the dark house, both will be unhealthy, and finally must perish. Then open wide the door of your hearts ye unconverted, let the light of God shine in your hearts; walk as the children of light in all the ordinances of the Lord as becometh those professing godliness, and the reward is sure. No one need have any doubts who is obedient to the Master in all things. All it requires is a willing mind, the denial of self, submission to the will of God, to secure the crown of glory in the kingdom of heaven. Why not purchase it at so small a consideration and be forever happy, rather than suffer an eternity of misery, for the sake of a few days gratification of self and the enjoyment this world affords outside of Christ? Solomon concluded that "all was vanity and vexation of spirit.

PLAINNESS OF SPEECH UPON PLAINNESS OF DRESS.

BY LANDON WEST.

BROTHER Moore, in No. 46, we read of your visit to Ashland O, and the reflections had while viewing the Brethren's School Building. We endorse every conclusion you made, but while we do this, we hope that no one will attribute every deviation from plainness of dress, to the one fact that the Brethren have a school-house. Those schools of the Brethren may do much to increase the habit of display among the Brotherhood, as many other schools have done for their patrons; but the school did not do it all. And, neither will our institutions do it all. And just in the same way they may do much to favor both plainness of dress and plainness of speech, but yet the school will not, and cannot do all that is done.

We have school-houses that are not known by that name, nor are they regarded in that light, and nearly all the training a man or woman gets, is got there. Those places are what we call our HOMES, by way of attachment, but in truth they are our school-houses. In them are the earliest, deepest, longest and strongest impressions made that are made.

If in these the training from childhood up, has been to favor plainness of attire, Ashland nor any other school, will be disgraced by the vanity of its graduates. But, if the atmosphere breathed in those home schools, we should say, has been such as to feed the desire for display in buildings, homes, carriages, furniture, cookery, clothing, jewelry, artificial ornaments, &c.; you may rest assured that it will take the long term at those schools and that, too, under guard, to pluck up the tares which have already been sown. The school may indeed serve as a kind of scapegoat to lay the fault upon; but the poor goat did not commit the sin; it only served as an instrument to lay the sin on, and thus ease the conscience of the one who committed it.

In our little observation, we notice that it is not always where the plainest parents live, that the plainest children are reared. Nor do we see that those who were brought up outside of the churches' training, are the most vain. And again; neither do we see that those who have the most education, make the most display; but we see the reverse, more gentlemen, modesty and humility. Neither do we see those who have the least education, show the least vanity, but quite the reverse; for here we see vanity, conceit, stubbornness, with generally a strong desire to display something, if it be no more than their weakness. And in this last, there is scarcely ever a failure,—the weakness is shown.

We should also say, that the teachers in our homes—school-houses are those to be blamed for the evil influences at work, as much or more than the teachers in the higher schools. Because in the first they have to deal with the raw material when it is pliable, plastic, and in the hands of the first workmen; but in the second case every teacher must work with material that has already been worked, perhaps more than once, and which may be at times, still under the first hammer. In that case it is not easy to make a neat job of it, but most likely there will be a failure, simply because the workmen did not work for the same thing and in the same way. But let the failure be great or small, the last school and the last teacher must bear the sin away, when by right it should have been the first,—the parent.

We have known cases where ordained elders made a great ado about the dress of their members; and when asked why they indulged vanity in their own children at home, had no more to reply, than to say that these were not yet members of the church. This was just the way to keep them out of it, and why they were not in it.

No man and woman can be said to rule well their own house when they go plain and their children in the tip of fashion. These vain things all cost something, and somebody must buy them, and somebody must pay for them, and that somebody is responsible for the deed done, and the thing won.

It is easier to forgive an ancient enemy than the friend we have offended. Our resentment grows with our undesert, and we feel vindictive in due degree with our own doubts of the chance of finding forgiveness.

CHRISTIAN WANTS.

I want my blessed Lord to see,
I want His pardoning love in me,
I want to know my sins forgiven
And to be smiled upon by heaven.

I want the exercise of grace,
I want in Christ a taking-place,
I want to feel His love divine,
I want in me his grace should shine.

I want my heart more soft to grow,
I want my Jesus more to know,
I want to feel that blood applied,
That flowed from Jesus' pierced side.

I want the Lord should bow my will,
I want His presence with me still,
I want a soft believing heart,
I want with all my sins to part.

I want that Christ should cleanse my soul
I want in Jesus to be whole,
I want a due composed mind,
I want in Christ some place to find.

I want to love my Jesus more
Than I have done heretofore,
I want to love his people too,
And praise the Lord in all I do.

I want to feel God's pardoning love,
I want my frozen heart to move,
I want His Spirit for my guide,
I have ten thousand wants beside.

I want my days should all be spent
In serving God with true content,
I want at last when I do die
To meet my Savior in the sky.

Then to sit down and tell
The wonders of Immanuel,
There all my wants will then be o'er,
When I do reach that happy shore.

A VISIT TO NEW YORK WHAT I SAW AND HEARD.

DR. Talmage, like his brother of Plymouth, caters to the wishes of his employers in his ministrations. His style is sensational, and he studiously avoids those criticisms, of popular sins, which distinguished the preaching of the apostles and ancient prophets.

For instance, when he had occasion to refer to ladies attire he complimented it as being for the last four or five years "graceful and becoming beyond anything he had known." With one single gulp, without a grimace, he swallowed all the abominations of fashionable dress, its dirty, nasty trails, its bustle which distorts the "human form divine," its chignon, which is a caricature of that image in which man was made, and its additional array of useless and sinful appendixies and etceteras which are enumerated by the prophet Isaiah in his warning to the daughters of Jerusalem. Isaiah 3: 18.

I write to you from New York relative to a revival sermon that the Dr. proposed to deliver on the subject of the "The night side of New York." The The 5th of the serial has been delivered and I read them with a thrilling interest. They show off the immoralities of the exceeding great city in graphic style.

The slime pits of Siddin are explored with a masterly hand. As I expected, however, he lashes vigorously the hoodlums, and dashes bravely through the slums and cesspools of Five Points and fourth ward and the dance houses and other notorious resorts of sin, while sin in its varnished and gilded drapery, its manifestations in fraudulent business manipulation and social rottenness, and a thousand other forms that is legalized by common usage, passed unnoticed and unrebuked.

That menagerie on Hall street, called by way of distinction as "The Stock Exchange," where men are plundered daily, openly and legally, of vast fortunes, where the most successful trickster and manipulator and schemer is honored and extolled in private and public, is not down on the black list that now arouses the righteous indignation of the ecclesiastical dignity. The sinful rivalries of society mongers, the extortions of merchants, and the legalized thefts of brokers and operators in all branches of business, the thousands of liquor makes and vendors, receives in his graceful silence, his endorsement of their operations.

Here history continues to repeat itself. The poor "Magdalens" must be stoned by the whitewashed and gilded pharisees.

A STRANGE QUARREL

is the result of this proceedure of Dr. Talmage. A Dr. Fulton, of the Baptist side of the hall, puts in an appearance in a sermon on "The Bright Side of New York." He criticises Talmage's serial in a caustic style. He, Fulton, don't see much sin in the great city. He says, "he don't know much about its haunts of vice, and don't want to know it." He thinks she ought to be held up instead of trying to drag her down.

He says that "some people, (meaning Dr. Talmage of course) just now seem to take a delight in rummaging about in dance-houses, gin-mills, brothels and other haunts of vice, clawing at whatever uninviting pile of refuse they come across, and dragging to light all manner of secret abominations. What possible excuse can there be for upturning loathsome, moral impurities after this reckless fashion," and closes with a grave intimation that "the vice which is thus so seduously treated, must be inside and not outside of those who are hunting for it."

Well, I am of the opinion that New York will neither be better nor worse because of these sermon or the quarrels. I coincide with Dr. Talmage in his opinion, that "if iniquity advances in the next hundred years as fast as it has in the past, there will not be a vistige of moral and religious influence left.

A power outside of such as are brought to bear on her social and business system by these means, can alone renovate the corrupt fabric. It needs a practical representation of that view of the Christian religion which is illustrated in the lives of the representative members of our church. It needs the preaching of that religion that condemns and excommunicates pride in its every manifestation and dishonesty and all other forms of legalized sin.

Now Brethren, there is an effectual door opened in this modern Sodom for the testimony of the Son, Jesus. Who will go in and work? Let two faithful and capable evangelists be commissioned by our next A. M, to make a tour of the cities of America from New York to San Francisco, from Montreal to New Orleans, and promulgate a pure doctrine to those who sit in the region and shadow of death. Go not into the gilded temple. The poor do not go there. Those who "hear the preaching of Jesus gladly," are not seen among the bedizened worshipers of the religious aristocracy of the great cities. Street preaching will not do. There is too much hurry and bustle &c. The public squares of which there are many are comparatively quiet, and they offer the best opportunities for such work. There are always scores and hundreds of persons on pleasant seats, and doubtless the Lord would direct many a Lydia there whose heart would be opened to receive the truths of the Gospel.

Let the brethren give the suggestion respectful consideration. If nothing else can be done, let a number of brethren combine to subscribe a fund sufficient to defray the expenses of such a commission. One cent per member would make a two year tour, wherein every city and every quarter thereof could be reached, and thus the striking features of apostolic missions would again be illustrated by our church. As a beginning, I offer to pay the quoto of one thousand members. Are there one hundred brethren who will do likewise? Put down your names before the honorable list is filled. If it is possible let the preliminaries be completed by the opening of Spring, and let the missionaries be in the field by the time of the Pentecostial gathering, and I will undertake to guarantee that the A. M., will have nothing but "God speed" for it. After twenty names are down, a choice will be made for men, yea men of God who will not waste their time in doting about "questions of words, and of their law and endless genealogies," which gender strife to the subversion of the people, but will boldly proclaim the truth as it is in Jesus.

There are capable brethren in our church who are unencumbered with families, and who would gladly go out thus into the highways and hedges of the world. Let us send them. Brethren, send your names to the office of the BRETHREN AT WORK; sisters send your names there. Look who comes next.

A WEEK'S COMPANIONSHIP WITH THE ROCKIES.

BY J. C. FUNDERBURG.

NUMBER II.

A HALF mile further and another stone school-house is passed diagonally to the right as we turn left towards the mountains again. The same grand panoramic view of thrift and industry continue to greet the eye. A few more turns and crooks and the passing of another granite edifice of learning, bring us close up to the stately foot hills.

The objective point on the programme for to-day's journey, is, brother Mason's mountain ranche far up the canyon beyond the blue ridge. Whirling along, ascending and descending with deflections to the right and to the left, rising higher and higher in successive gradation, till finally we are introduced to the beauties of mountain scenery, by crossing the line of the first great geological upheavel, through a narrow defile—long since carried out by the rapid and voluminous waters of the St. Vrain. The first page of the great geological book, is now spread out before us, it is a volume of itself. On the left is a great picture, and on the right another within a wreath of ideographics in miniature. The beauty of this scene is entirely shut off from an observer on the East, since the broad surface, many miles in length dips sharply eastward and is thoroughly coated with grass and a liberal sprinkling of the smaller growths of pine, giving it the appearance of a vast ridge, rising in height almost to the dignity of a mountain range.

The awful page on the West is in hieroglyphics though of an unmistakable legibility. Igneous ejections are evidenced by the huge dikes of Tapin rock in the picture on the left. All the while traveling up this stupendous gorge, the eye is regaled with the beautifully mottled coloring upon its gigantic walls, while the long sloping park itself is clothed in habiliments of verdure, lovely to behold for the Winter grazing of the "cattle upon a thousand hills."

At length the star-glittering mantle of night closes in around us, and the remaining two miles driven in the dark. At last we arrive at the ranche—our rendezvous for the night, which we find temporarily vacated, therefore none to greet us, the occupants living at present in Estes Park. We take possession however and make ourselves at home. A couple of the party took care of the faithful horses while the rest set about preparing for the supplying of our special temporal wants. The lights were lit and fires kindled in both—cooking stove and fire-place—kitchen and parlor respectively.

The evening was spent in close semicircle around the cheerfully blazing spruce pine; exchanging facts promiscuously, and discussing generally the topics of interest during the day until a late hour in the night. Wearied and sleepy the pallets were unrolled and ourselves given over for the sweet repose. The morning came and with it a clear, blue sky and a pure, balmy atmosphere tempered with a glowing wealth of sunshine kissing away the early blushes of morning that never emanated from a more effulgent sun. Breakfast over we packed our vehicle and resumed our journey. We now leave this slope of mountain meadow by an abrupt turn south-westward to find ourselves in the very midst of the real, old primitive granite, piled and clumped into full grown mountains, whose summits are scaled in turn by the spiral trail, affording new views of other ranges rising higher and higher mantled with dark pine forests and above timber line, the bald gray summits are skirted with broad belts of the eternal snows. Still far above those towering heights are visible the splintered storm-rifted terminal peaks themselves looking down into every park and canyon far out over the prairie as if the very sentinels of God to see that man has time and space for his work of high self-advancement.

Now the narrow road winds along the steep side of a gigantic mountain to the left under the beetling crags and boldly projecting cliffs—circling out to the right. And, we have passed horse-shoe bend—the beginning of an other canyon leading north-eastward to the valley of the little Thompson. At each successive turn, the scenery becomes more and more rugged; now among castellated monuments and frowning buttresses looking contemptuously down upon our puny forms; then the massive walls gradually break away and the surface recedes into sloping, grassy hill-sides; developing into lovely parks and enchanting bowers. And thus for a time we are shut in from all that lies beyond—by walls solid, walls broken, walls of granite and of gneiss, conglomerated walls and walls of Quartz, smoky, milky, all playfully intermixed with clay and mica and even entire clusters of pure crystal quartz, most exquisitely grand to behold—and far more picturesque than any possible stretch of the imagination is able to portray. No marvel then that the beholder should be entranced and awe-stricken in turn, while contemplating upon the mighty convulsions of gigant forces that must have shaken the earth to its center to have given existence to such yawning canyons and forbidden heights. With every thought the soul expanded with ecstasy, is lifted up into the atmosphere of a new consciousness of itself, and a new vision of its privileges. And thus brought by practical knowledge to the acquaintance with one of the great central corollaries truth—that the prizes of earth as well as of heaven, are placed so near us as to invite our desires by their size and beauty, and yet so far above us that we must climb hard and high in order to obtain them.

We camp for the night in Sister Park right at the base of Twin Sister mountains. This park is quite an extended area of mountain meadow, resembling all others in its general contour—perhaps giving rise to a few more rivulets and crystalline streams than some others do in consequence of its being so near the head of the rockies—Longs Peak, so named in honor of Colorado's second explorer, S. H. Long in 1820; and doubtless the first, to scale its summit: as did Z. M. Pike, Pikes Peak in 1806—and so likewise Fremont Peak in 1843 by General Fremont, though the State was first visited by the Spaniards in 1843. This vicinity is getting to be quite popular as a Summer's resort for the tourist; especially with the more juvenile element. Drawn, perhaps by the greater abundance of wild flowers and carpeting of green mosses, ornamented with the bluebell, buttercups and the fair lily in the lakelets by the wayside. "A gaudy dress and gentle air, may slightly touch the heart. But its innocence and modesty that polishes the dart."

THE LAST DAY OF 1878.

BY S. S. W. HAMMERS.

"Who are all of us here alive this day?" Deut. 5: 3.

IT is highly proper on particular occasions to take a retrospect of our history and the dealings of God with us through the year just past, viz., 1878. The architect does this during the rising of the structure he is erecting; and a teacher does this at the annual examination of his or her pupil. And also the mariner in consulting his log-book, and the merchant when he takes an inventory of his stock yearly.

How proper then that Christians and the sinner, and in fact every person should do it, and the last day of the year seems a suitable period for it. The heading of our article presents a very appropriate subject for meditation. "Why are all of us here alive this day?" The words of the heading of this article apply to many this day to whom it was not applicable this day one year ago. Thousands have been born in the year which has just ended; many of these may die in their infancy; some may live to be the bane of society; some may rise up to call God blessed. The parents should see to it that they train them up religiously in the fear of the Lord, and a knowledge of the Scriptures.

The heading of this article is applied to many last year to whom it is not now applicable. They were then alive, but now they are inhabitants of the tomb, and their souls have entered the eternal state. Some died unprepared we fear, so at least aliens to God, strangers to repentance, faith and holiness. There are many of us alive this day and it is wonderful that it is so, amidst so many dangers, diseases and death.

When we contemplate the matter, how amazing it is! (That a harp of a thousand strings should keep in tune so long). This is the more surprising as many of us are sickly, weak, aged. Some perhaps have been at the gates of death, yet brought back again. Our being alive is entirely owing to the goodness and patience of God. It is not because we deserve it or are worthy of it, but because God delights to spare and exercise his mercy towards us. His goodness gave us existence, and by its continuance our existence is perpetuated. We are alive under increasing responsibilities. Now many privileges and blessing have been given us through the year just ended. For all these we must give an account, talents, time, opportunities, Sunday sermons, bountiful harvests. And because we are alive we should be filled with hearty gratitude to God. Our lips, heart, and lives should show forth his praise. Now let us erect an annual stone as a memorial and inscribe upon it, Ebenezer. Let us resolve to live more to God in this year than we did in the past, and let us awake to diligence, zeal and devotedness to the cause of personal religion, and in efforts to glorify God and do good to men.

THE MISSIONARY QUESTION.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

LOOKING over the entire brotherhood, one would hardly discover a single brother or sister who would not like to see more souls brought to Christ and the borders of Zion extended. The church as a body has given its approval, and recommended the support of foreign missions as well as the missionary efforts in the several church districts at home. The general sentiment prevailing throughout the church in favor of missionary work, may be judged by the expressions given from all parts through our church papers, and the organized efforts in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas and Nebraska and perhaps in other States.

There has also a system of operations been proposed, both by committee through Annual Meeting, and by convention. That the Brotherhood is able to raise $100,000 a year and not feel it, cannot be questioned. That we have suitable ministers for missionary work, has been proven by the success of those who have gone forth as evangelists. Let us see now what we have to make missionary work more successful. (1.) Almost universal sentiment in favor of the work. (2.) Some successful experiments at home and abroad. (3.) A system of systems amply good enough to commence work. (4.) An abundance of means to defray all expenses. (5.) Sufficient talent and competent ministers to begin the work on a comparatively extensive scale. Why then is our missionary work thus far a failure? I am afraid we have too little of the self-sacrificing spirit among us. Too many who are capable of doing missionary work, love the comforts of home, the pleasures of society and church advantages too much to go out and "endure hardness as good soldiers" and start other churches. They delight to enjoy the advantages that others have brought to them without feeling the duty of doing something in return. Others again who are possessed of thousands of dollars, act as though they did not owe the Lord a cent, and generally the more money some possess, the less they feel they can spare some for the cause of Christ.

Now let me say that I believe we have everything we need to make the missionary cause a success, except a truly self-sacrificing spirit. No great cause ever succeeded without great sacrifice. None ever made, nor ever will make so great a sacrifice as was made by Christ. All the apostles and first Christians made sacrifices, even of their lives. All successful missionaries make great sacrifices and so do their families, and it is only because this spirit is not more general in the brotherhood that the success is not greater. We profess to be a self-sacrificing, cross-bearing people. Wherein does that self-sacrifice consist? Let a brother travel through the churches from Philadelphia to St. Louis, behold the well-cultivated farms, fine stock, comfortable homes, and tables spread with luxuries far more unnecessary than are some of the fashionable garments of those whom we call proud.

Now let me suggest that we go to work at once. When Districts can be called together and organized as in Northern Illinois recently—let some of the Elders make a call; then wherever a church is in favor of such work, let the elder of that church propose the matter, organize and go to work, and where only half a dozen members in a church are favorable let them come together, form their plans and go to work in some way. Then let those who have the matter at heart start out and wake up the people, taking neither staff nor scrip, and I assure them if they have the right spirit and preach the right doctrine, and work for the Lord, neither they nor their families will suffer, except when suffering is for their good.—Primitive Christian.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

BY S. H. COVERT.

"He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye." Deut. 32: 10.

AND will this not apply, O Christian to thee, as well as to Israel? He found him in a desert land, in a waste howling wilderness, and where did he find you? What was your natural state? "I am found of them that sought me not; I am sought of them that asked not for me." You did choose him, but as the cause or consequences of his choice, ye have not chosen me. I have chosen and ordained you that you should go and bring forth fruit and that your fruit should remain. Who can refuse to acknowledge him? We love him because he first loved us. There was no road, and much depended on their movements, he therefore became their conductor, and he knew how he did this. It was by a fiery cloudy pillar. As this advanced they removed; as this turned to the right or left, they turned also, as this paused, they remained. Thus they were freed from all anxiety. The distance they had to go was not great in itself. He led them about; and has he not thus led you? You know the way of man is not in himself. You cry unto the Lord and say, "Lead me in thy truth and guide me, for thou art the God of my salvation." On thee do I wait all the day. And he said, "I will lead thee and guide and instruct thee with mine eye, and has he ever abandoned you? What mistakes has he prevented? How often has he hedged your path to keep you from going astray? From how many embarrassments, the effect of your acting without him, has he extricated you? He has led you in the right way, but it has often been a trying one, and such as you could not have foreseen or conjectured in your temporal affairs.

He has perhaps checked you and turned you back. You have had life to begin again, and to seek other openings and labors, and as to your spiritual experience, instead of gaining more of the assurance of hope, doubts and fears have invaded you, and instead of victory over your enemies you have been led to see and feel more of the evil of your hearts, while you have been often asked if I am his. Why am I thus? Yet all this has fulfilled the promise, "I will bring thee blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known, I will make darkness light before them; and crooked things straight; these things will I do unto them and not forsake them. He instructed them; they had the finest opportunities in the world to learn. If you have been unprofitable learners, the fault has been your own, you have had everything favorable in your situation. A thousand sources of information have opened around you. You have the Scriptures, the preaching of the Word, Christian associations and actions from the Holy One, which teaches all things. Everything that has befallen you has taught you a lesson. Some things you must have learned—that this is not your rest, the folly of trusting in your own hearts, the greatness of your unworthiness, and that is of the Lord's mercies.

He kept thee as the apple of his eye, the tenderest part of the tenderest member. Did the serpent bite them? He provided a remedy and healed them. Did enemies assail them? It was not with impunity. He reproved kings for their sakes, saying, "touch not my anointed and do my prophets no harm." Amalek, Sihon, king of the Amorites, and Og, king of Bashan, found to their peril that he made their cause his own. Did Balaam use divination and enchantment? He owned there was no enchantment against Jacob, nor divination against Israel. He cursed them, but the curse was turned into a blessing. In their traveling were they exposed to the sun? The Lord was their shade and right hand. He preserved them in their going out and in their coming in. They were a people saved of the Lord, and who has tenderly, kindly kept you. Have you had no enemies? Why have you not been a prey to their teeth? Why has not your heart turned back? Why have not your steps declined from his way? He has held you up. You have been kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. This is what he has done for you. What have you done for him? What are you doing? What do you intend to do? Christians open your eyes.

In the Jewish dispensation there were some very holy things,—golden vessels in the holy place,—and these had a great position, as it were: they occupied a very important place in the manifested presence of God; but yet they were only the shadows of things in the heavens,—types of something that was coming,—and now we are being taught about the heavenly things themselves. Now, what are the heavenly things? If you have come to Jesus, been washed in the precious blood, sealed of the Holy Ghost, you are the heavenly things in Christ—you are the vessels for God's service.

An hour of vice is as long as is an hour of virtue; but the difference which follows upon good actions is infinite from that of ill ones. The good, though it diminishes our time here, yet it lays up a pleasure for eternity, and will recompense what it taketh away with a plentiful return at last. When we trade with virtue, we do but buy pleasure with the expense of time; so it is not so much a consuming of time as an exchange.

No man is securely loved except by those who know his foibles.

An apt quotation is like a lamp which flings its light over the whole sentence.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 50 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1 00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 9, 1879

MR. N. A. McConnell is now holding a series of meetings in Lanark.

WHEN enclosing stamps please do not stick them fast to the paper.

THE snow is said to be from one to three feet deep in Northern Missouri.

ONE more has been baptized in Denmark. Thus their little band is increasing.

WE are one week late with the Children at Work, but will soon be up to time.

WE have just received an interesting article from Bro. R. H. Miller. It will appear next week.

OUR readers will please excuse us for being a few days late this week. We will soon be on time again.

BROTHER George Mourer of the Naperville church, Ill., expects to move to Kansas in the Spring.

THERE is a preacher in Texas, who is said to have preached 4,000 sermons during the last year.

THE best weapon with which to fight our battle, is the "sword of the Spirit"—the word of God.

THE snow is said to have laid four feet deep on the level at Oswego, New York, the last week in December.

SO far, we have had a pleasant Winter. Weather cold, ground covered with snow, and sleighing excellent.

THE Golden Censer says it has no objection to the D. D. affixed to a man's name, provided it means "Double Diligence."

BRETHREN Levi Trostle and George Mourer have been holding some meetings with the Brethren at Cherry Grove and Shannon.

JUST before going to press we received a card from Bro. D. B. Gibson, stating that he is now holding meetings in South Bend, Ind.

MOST of the congregations in this county have been holding series of meetings of late. The roads are in an excellent condition for that purpose.

JOHN Flory of Bridgewater, Va., we learn, has been preaching in Sangamon Co., Ill. Wish he could have called on us before returning home.

BROTHER R. H Miller is preaching a series of doctrinal sermons in the Antioch church, Ind. From there he expects to go to New Paris, and then come to Lanark.

OUR readers will excuse the typographical errors found in some of the Supplements this week. They were not noticed till several hundred of the sheets were printed.

BROTHER Daniel Vaniman is likely near Lorain, Adams Co., Ill., holding a series of meetings, as he expected to leave home, Jan. 2nd for that place.

THE article entitled "Christmas," in No. 50 of last volume, should have been credited to Lizzie B. Myers instead of Lizzie Miller. The mistake was ours.

THE Carroll County Gazette and job office, in Lanark, has been purchased by Bro. Plate, former foreman of this office, and Mr. A. F. Clark, formerly the mailing clerk of our office. They are both practical printers, and energetic young men.

OLD brother Lehr, since our last notice of him, has been preaching in the Arnold's Grove, and Hickory Grove congregations. He is now preaching at Waddam's Grove.

FOR the want of sufficient nonpareil type, part of our money list fails to appear this week. Those who have sent us money and do not see it reported in this issue will have patience.

AS a proof of the strength of infidelity in Germany, it is stated, that a weekly paper published there, which opposes Christianity, has a circulation of 600,000 copies.

BROTHER Hixon informs us that his discussion with elder Witter passed off pleasantly. Our readers will likely hear more about it in the future. The subject discussed was the number of actions in baptism.

SOME of our subscribers, who are taking the Children at Work, want it folded in with the BRETHREN AT WORK. This cannot be done for two reasons: 1. It would require a great deal of extra labor. 2. It would be a violation of the postal law.

THOSE wishing the Brethren's Hymn Books would better order them from the Primitive Christian office. As the book is published there they are better prepared than we to fill orders.

A CARD received from South Bend, Ind., informs us that Bro. P. R. Wrightsman has been quite sick. Hope he may soon recover and be prepared to resume his regular labors in the field.

UNDER date of Dec. 30, 1878, Bro. I. H. Crist of Girard, Ill., says: "Bro. D. B. Gibson commenced preaching in the West Otter Creek on Christmas day. The congregations are large, and today two were baptized. The meetings are to be continued."

WE are sorry to state that we can furnish no more back numbers of the debate. Quite a number of extra copies were printed, but the last one is disposed of, and still there are hundreds of orders for more. We can supply them from the beginning of the present volume, but no further back without reprinting.

"DR. Kane, finding a flower under the Humboldt glacier, was more affected by it because it grew beneath the lip and cold bosom of the ice, than he would have been by the most gorgeous garden bloom. So some single struggling grace in the heart of one far removed from Divine influences may be dearer to God than a whole catalogue of virtues in the life of one more favored of heaven."

A DEAR old brother writes: "O, I would like to see you both!" Yes, we too, would like to see all of our readers—would like to talk with them of the good things of the kingdom, to sing and pray with them and have the blessed fellowship that ever attends those who love the Lord. The old brother who desires to see us, has stood long in the ranks of the Lord, and for thirty years has tried to point people to the Lamb of God. He has had the joy of baptizing about two hundred and fifty penitent believers into Christ, and heard them confess the name of the Lord, the King and Captain of their salvation. God bless the dear, old, faithful pilgrims who have so long withstood the storms of life! God being our helper we hope to see the old brother, with all the redeemed, beyond the Jordan of death.

OUR PROSPECTS.

OUR prospects for this year are what we might call good. We have a large increase of new subscribers, while the old ones are pretty much all renewing. On the account of three other weekly papers being started among the Brethren, we had expected a considerable falling off, but so far, that does not seem to be the case. We have many reasons to feel much encouraged in our work, believing that our efforts are generally appreciated by the Brotherhood.

Our agents have been working faithfully, most of them having increased their lists, and many are still hard at work. May God bless and help them in their earnest efforts to circulate the truth and build up the cause.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

WE are adjusting the names on the mailing galleys as fast as possible, and it will require a few weeks yet before everything can be properly arranged, and for that reason a few may get the paper a little beyond the time for which they have subscribed. Renewals are coming in rather faster than our mailing clerks can handle them, but by hard work they will soon be up with their part.

Those who have not renewed, will please do so at once, that they may not miss any number of the paper. It is still a good time to collect subscribers.

A TRIP TO ASHLAND, OHIO.

ON the morning of Dec. 18th, I received a letter from Bro. S. Z. Sharp, urgently requesting me to come to Ashland at once on business relating to the starting of a paper there; hence on the morning of the 19th I left Lanark and met the Brethren at Ashland on the 20th. We pleasantly talked over the project, believing that the good of the Brotherhood should be kept in view, and that whatever would be done should be in harmony with the principles of truth and according to divine wisdom. Our sincere desire is to labor in such a way as to keep down the spirit of strife and ungodly emulation. Knowing that papers exert a power in the church, we much desire that they may be conducted in harmony with the distinctive features of our Fraternity. We do not feel that we alone are entitled to the patronage of the church, but have so endeavored to conduct ourselves and the BRETHREN AT WORK as to merit the confidence and respect of the Brethren. We are for all things that will make us more pious and active in the holy work of the Lord. To advocate obedience to the one divine Law, set forth and confirmed by the one Lord, for the rule and government of the one body, is work that every "new creature" should earnestly covet.

Before leaving Lanark, Bro. Moore and I agreed that it would be well to move the Children at Work to Ashland, enlarge it, and change its name; but on reaching Ashland, I learned that the arrangements for publishing the Gospel Preacher had so far proceeded, that it must go forward. It was then suggested that the two propositions be combined, and that I go to Ashland and aid in the work there. This plan was telegraphed to Bro. Moore, who at once replied, refusing to accept the proposition. After reading to the Brethren, Bro. Moore's conclusions, I returned home, arriving on Sunday morning the 22nd in time to assemble with the children of God in public worship. Brother Moore and I talked over the project, looked at it from various stand-points, and concluded best to make no change at present. We thought it prudent not to be the means of increasing papers among us, but to go on where we are, as we are doing well, and think the Brethren generally appreciate our labors. We say this much by way of explanation for the satisfaction of many who are making inquiries concerning our intentions.

I would have taken pleasure in remaining with the Brethren in and around Ashland a few days, in order to become better acquainted with them, and to worship with them, but circumstances seemed to call for an immediate return. Hope to be able to spend more time with them at the next visit.

THE POPE.

THE term pope is from a Greek word, meaning father, and was formerly applied to all the bishops in the West, but is now restricted to the bishop of Rome, or the pope, as he is generally called. He is considered the visible head of the church, hence if they claim Christ as head also they acknowledge two heads. The woman that has two heads (husbands) is a fornicator, and so it is with the church of Rome. That church—the church at Rome—was founded by proper authority, became united with Christ, but finally broke her vow and took up with the pope, a second head, and thereby became a fornicator. Not only that, but is the "mother of harlots." Rev. 17: 5. Some of her daughters also claim two heads, and hence they are harlots too.

Those who call elders the "heads of the church" want to consider the point well. Christ is the head of the church, and the only head that a true church will acknowledge.

The Roman Catholic church regard the pope as the legitimate successor of Peter, claiming that he was the first bishop of Rome. The arguments in support of this claim are of a very doubtful character, especially when it comes to tracing a line of popes through the first century. The succession is by no means clear, and the farther we trace the line toward the apostolic age the less we are inclined to endorse their claims to legitimate succession.

The early bishops at Rome, like all other bishops of the first century, had charge of their home congregation over which they were duly appointed. Each individual church had charge of its own local affairs, had its own overseers, and was in no way subject to the rulings of any man aside from the elders, or overseers of the congregation. Popes and presiding elders were unknown. The apostolic method of church government did not demand such.

As time advanced and corruption increased, the bishops in the larger cities began to think of themselves more highly than they ought. Their advice was considered superior to that of country bishops, and by degrees they gained the pre-eminence, hence the title "metropolitan bishop." From these came the pope, the illegitimate head of the Roman Catholic church. They were not content with the simple method of church government practiced by the first Christians. Carnality caused them to look to a higher human power than that invested in the overseers of a congregation, hence they instituted the supposed higher order, and though the heresy is much talked against by protestants generally, yet there are but few denominations clear of this evil more or less. If they do not worship a pope, they must call somebody else the "head of the church," thus virtually acknowledging that the church has two heads.

Looking over the list of the popes I notice that the See has been vacant a number of times. In the seventh century it was vacant one year and three months. At another time two years and nine months, and still at another time two years and three months. The chair, at times, has been filled by very wicked men about as void of Christianity as some of the heathen tyrants.

At one period the pope virtually ruled the civilized world, and so effectually did he do his work, planting the standard of error, that most denominations still contain in their practice some of the marks of the beast. It is astonishing what effect the Roman Catholic religion has had on the world. Their energies drove the stain so far into Christendom that years will be required before it can be entirely removed.

DID JESUS BAPTIZE?

Did Christ baptize by proxy? or did he baptize with his own hands? for his disciples did not baptize any one till the day of Pentecost. They were not yet baptized with the Holy Ghost, and therefore could not have made those they baptized holy men because not holy themselves. J. P. NEHER.

IN John 4: 2, we learn that "Jesus baptized not, but his disciples," and therefore what baptizing he did was by proxy. For wise purposes, no doubt, he baptized none by his own hands. Water baptism has been intrusted to human agencies, while Holy Ghost baptism is in the hands of God. The power to administer Spirit baptism has never been given to man: it is a divine work intrusted to divine agency. In salvation are human and divine parts. Water baptism belongs to the human part: this the disciples could perform. But Spirit baptism belonging to the divine part was reserved for Christ.

The passage above, quoted from John 4: 2, is proof that the disciples did baptize before the day of Pentecost. Not having received the Holy Ghost did not disqualify them to baptize. They were acting under the direct and special instructions of the Savior whose word was of sufficient authority to them. They were holy enough to partake of the communion, and therefore holy enough to baptize.

It is unscriptural to suppose that the holiness of the administrator has anything to do with the holiness of the candidate. Holiness is not transferable from one person to another. The administrator cannot make the candidate holy. That is a work belonging to him and his God. The baptized disciples baptized those who demanded it, not by their own authority, but by the authority of Jesus Christ. He was with them, and personally directed them in all their work. When he left, the Holy Ghost or Comforter came in his stead. John 14: 16, 26.

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER II.

The Will—Christ's Blessings—Looking for a Model—The Legacy—When the Gospel is the Power of God unto Salvation—Death and Resurrection—Pedobaptist and Baptist Orders—The Gospel Order.

"For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the testator. For a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth."—Heb. 9: 16, 17.

THE word "Testament" means the Gospel plan of salvation, the one Law for the government of the "one body" of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The word "Testator" evidently means the Lord and Savior of mankind. The words, Law, Will, Truth, Covenant, and Testament, are used interchangeably in the Living Oracles. These terms are qualified, contrasted and compared as "old," "new," "first," "second," "better," "perfect," "living." These qualifying words show that there has been a change. There can be no new Covenant unless there be first an old Covenant. There can be no second without a first; nor can any one speak of a "better Covenant" unless there be first a good one. Moses was the mediator of the first Covenant, Christ of the second.

A will may, or may not, have express conditions. This is entirely at the option or wish of the testator. A will in force is supposed to have, (1) a duly qualified testator; (2) a legacy; (3) legal heirs; (4) conditions; (5) an executor or executors; (6) the death of the testator. The Will of Jesus the Christ, is not wanting in any of these particulars. He himself is the duly qualified Testator. The legacy is the forgiveness of sins, the gift of the Holy Spirit, and the promise of eternal life. "Being justified by his grace, we should be heirs according to the hope of eternal life." Titus 3: 7. The conditions, faith, repentance, baptism, and "patient continuance in well-doing," walking in "all of the commandments and ordinances of God, blameless." The church, the "one body," is the executor, and is in duty bound to execute the Will of the Redeemer. Christ, the Testator, died, thus giving power to his Will in his absence.

Before the death of Christ, the great Testator of the Will, He distributed blessings on various conditions, because all power was given to him in heaven and on earth. "And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy: Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee." Matt. 9: 2. "That is the idea," says one, "justified by faith only." Not so fast, my friend; "how readest thou?" "What saith the Scriptures?" "And Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee." Are you now ready to conclude that this case of a special blessing is a model for all who wish to come to Christ? Observe it was their faith, the faith of others that Jesus saw. The Testator had not yet died, hence could grant blessings on any condition he saw fit. In doing this He violated no law, disobeyed no one.

Now, turning to Luke 8: 36–49, we look at it closely to see if it is a model for all those who were to come after. The condition of the woman's salvation was faith, but not that of others, as in the case of the paralytic. True, all must have faith, but not faith only as in this woman's case. However before proceeding further, let us call to the witness stand the penitent on the cross. To this case many resort in support of their theory, hence regard it as a model for all those who come after. If this be a model, why is not the case of the young man who was told to sell what he had and give to the poor, also a model? Why is not the paralytic a model if the penitent on the cross is a model? Not one of these can serve as a model for a man to get into Christ now. The Will is in force, and we must comply with the conditions. It will not do to go into ecstacies over the penitent on the cross, asserting that to be a model for us.

In thus reasoning we do not wish to be understood as teaching that Christ had no Will before his death. He had a Will, his Father's Will, to perform, but before his death he had power to deviate at pleasure. The legacy was just as much his before his death as after. It was his to give, and the conditions of giving were also at his command. In John 7: 17 we are taught that, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." Here he speaks of the necessity of doing the Father's will, sometime before his death. The will, then, could be done just as fast as it was revealed. To all, the command had been given, "Repent." Men therefore should repent. To all, the command had gone forth, "Believe." Hence all could believe. The command, "Be baptized" was also given, therefore all could do that part of the Will. We have now briefly noticed the old order of things up to the last night of our adorable Jesus in the "upper room" in Jerusalem. The work done there we shall leave for a future chapter.

First, there must be a Gospel, a Word of Truth: second, this Gospel must be preached: third, somebody must hear it: fourth, those hearing, must believe it; and fifth, obey it. When all these transpire, then the Gospel is "The power of God unto salvation." Here are five clear and distinct points, all necessary to the work to be accomplished. Now keep these points in view; First, the Gospel was given; second, the apostles believed it; third, they preached it; fourth, the people heard it; fifth, and obeyed it.

Upon what conditions has Jesus bequeathed his legacy? Remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Spirit and the hope of eternal life. Let us note particularly God's order—the old order.

A sinner stands condemned before God, not because Adam sinned, not for Adam's acts, nor Adam's guilt, neither for any other person's guilt, but because of his own sins, the actual sins which he has committed. The effect of Adam's sin, separation from God, passed upon all men, but from this Christ redeemed all without any conditions. "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." "For since by man (Adam) came (physical) death, by man (Christ) came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in (or by) Adam all die, (return to dust) even so in (or by) Christ shall all be made alive" (redeemed from dust). 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22. All shall be raised from the dead, saints, sinners, infants and idiots. The "guilt of original sin" is not found in the Bible. No one is dead in trespasses and sins in Adam, but each sane adult, or person capable of discerning right from wrong, becomes dead in trespasses and sins which he himself commits. Any one who has ability to hear and believe, is called to follow Jesus according to the Divine conditions. We now call Matthew 28: 18–20 to the witness stand. "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." First, teach all nations: second, baptizing them; third, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever Christ commanded. Now comes Mark 16: 15, 16. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

First, preach the Gospel; second, those who hear, shall believe and be baptized. Mark adds belief to what Matthew said. Third, the great object of teaching, hearing, believing and being baptized, is salvation. "But he that believeth not, shall be damned." So far we have from these two witnesses, preaching, belief, baptism, salvation to those who hear, and damnation to those who hear not. Next we call up Luke 24: 46, 47. "And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

He states that repentance and remission of sins shall be preached; hence we have a complete model of what is to be done. Taking the three together they agree, and teach us that there must be preaching, repentance, faith, baptism and remission of sins; these things to be first preached at Jerusalem. Out of these three witnesses, theologians of different schools have evolved three different orders. First order, Pedobaptist. "(1) Baptism; (2) preaching; (3) repentance; (4) faith; (5) remission of sins." All truly consistent Pedobaptists will admit that it is their rule to baptize or sprinkle in infancy, hence before teaching. When they baptize an adult who believes and has been taught, it is an exception to the rule. How they can find in the last commission, one order for an adult and another for an infant, we fail to perceive. Perhaps they can tell us how they find it, and where to find it.

Second, Baptist Order. "(1) Preaching; (2) repentance; (3) faith; (4) remission of sins; (5) baptism." Now here we have two orders, differing from each other, both claiming to be drawn from the last great commission of the infallible Teacher, the Captain of our salvation, the Bishop and Shepherd of our souls. From the theories and deductions of uninspired writers we turn, and look towards the third, or Gospel Order. (1) The Gospel in fact; (2) those who heard, believed it; (3) they all received it; (4) the apostles were given power to preach it; (5) they preached it "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven;" (6) the preachers baptized all penitent believers "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;" (7) they taught them "to observe all things" which Jesus had commanded them. From this we learn, that the Gospel of Christ, exists; (2) must be preached; (3) must be heard—(Rom. 10: 14–17); (4) to be believed; (5) and obeyed; therefore the Gospel of Christ consists of facts to be believed; commands to be obeyed, and promises to be enjoyed or hoped for. The Gospel Order, then, is, (1) faith; (2) repentance; (3) baptism; (4) remission of sins; (5) the gift of the Holy Ghost. For further proof let us turn to Acts 2: 38: "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" First in order was preaching by Peter; (2) the hearers believed; "Faith cometh by hearing." (Rom. 10: 17). Their hearts are changed; they are filled with godly sorrow, and want to know what to do. Let the Holy Spirit give the answer: (3) "Repent," and (4) "be baptized," (5) "for the remission of sins" (6) "and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Thus the Holy Ghost commands a sinner to hear the Gospel, believe it, repent, be baptized, and he shall have the remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Spirit, and the hope of eternal life. This is the divine arrangement, the old order.

By carefully following the Divine order, the reader will notice that Christ's life, death and resurrection constitute the three leading facts of the New Covenant,—that faith, repentance and baptism to all alien sinners, constitute the three leading commands to them, and that remission of sins, gift of the Holy Ghost, and hope of eternal life, are the three grand promises to all who comply with the conditions. Is not this the Gospel order? If not, why not?

OUR PAPERS.

THE Brethren at Ashland, Ohio, have started a paper entitled the Gospel Preacher, the first No. of which is before us. It is a neatly printed sheet, edited by brethren S. H. Bashor and S. Z. Sharp. In this connection some explanations may be necessary. We have been corresponding nearly a year with the Brethren at Ashland in regard to moving one of our papers there, and for that purpose visited them last Fall. At first the matter was very strongly urged, but we did not see our way altogether clear to do anything at that time. A few weeks ago Bro. Eshelman was requested to visit Ashland immediately to see if something could not be done for the interest of both localities. He did so. At first it was thought to move the Children at Work to Ashland, enlarge it to twice its present size, and leave the BRETHREN AT WORK at Lanark, but the Brethren at Ashland had gone so far with their project of starting another paper that they could not well withdraw. It was then proposed to leave the BRETHREN AT WORK at Lanark under my care, while Bro. E. would go to Ashland and edit one-fourth of the Gospel Preacher in the interest of the youth, and both papers to belong to one firm. Bro. E. returned home and we talked over the projects carefully, and concluded not to make any change at present. We are very much concerned about the good of the cause, and want to labor for the interest of our holy religion.

We do not feel that it becomes us to express an opinion in regard to the effect of a multiplicity of papers in the Brotherhood, but shall earnestly labor to give no occasion for strife between the BRETHREN AT WORK and its contemporaries. We have our method of sounding out the Gospel, and see no necessity for a change in that method on our part. We hope that all will work together for good, keeping the peace and harmony of the church in view. As our papers have much to do with the peace and prosperity of the church, it is hoped that they will be conducted in a way that will reflect credit on the cause. So far as we are concerned, individually, we are ready to do anything that will be for the good of the Brotherhood at large. Our object is to do all in our power for the interest of the cause. We have no reason to complain about patronage. Our list is large, with prospects of increasing. We, however, have this much to say at present: Whenever our editorial brethren, throughout the Brotherhood, get ready to consult together with a view of forming some kind of a consolidation so as to have less papers in the church they will find us ready for just such a move. And I am satisfied that every brother and sister will say, amen.

GETTING UP A SENSATION.

THE Battle Flag wants us to either "prove or withdraw" what we said about Ray's "rough and unbecoming language." We need not prove it. Our readers know the fact of the matter. They read his speeches and know just what he writes. We cannot take it back—what we said is true. That part of the article, referring to My Ray, was written very deliberately. To Mr. Ray's credit we state, that in this written discussion he is not near as rough as he was at the Newtonia debate. He has improved that much. Of course, his cry will be, that we are trying to manufacture prejudice against him. But so far as the manufacturing business is concerned he is far ahead of us; he does that part himself.

Mr. Ray says: "We hope Mr. Moore will prove or withdraw his charges. If he thinks Mr. Stein needs help, let him come to his rescue in a more honorable way."

Bro. Stein is getting along finely. We are well pleased with his defense. He needs no help, if it is his first written debate, and he has for his opponent the best Baptist debater of the South-west. But Ray is getting uneasy; there is something coming, he has written a book, and that is to come onto the witness stand to testify against him; and to ward off the blow and if possible, lessen the shock, he is trying to raise a sensation—he wants somebody to sympathize with him. Verily his case is a hard one.

PALESTINE TO BE RESTORED.

The London correspondent of the LEEDS MERCURY, writes to that journal as follows: "I can state as a fact, and not as a mere rumor, that a syndicate is actually in process of consolidation, which has for its sole object the purchase of Palestine from the Turkish Government and its restoration to the Jews in some form. I know, but am not at liberty to mention, the name of the Secretary of the body, which already numbers some very influential members, and I can vouch for the confidence with which the Secretary, who is not a member of the Jewish race or religion, but a well-known man, regards the future success of the scheme: and his experience of the world and knowledge of men are too important to be ignored."

THE above indicates the very thing we have been expecting for some time. It would seem that the fulfilling of prophecy is at hand, and that the day is not far distant when the times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled, and the Jews permitted to return to their native land.

NOT SO FAST IF YOU PLEASE.

THE Baptist Battle Flag is getting a little out of its latitude dictating for us. It says:

"The Brethren at Work has, in violation of its contract, shut out the discussion, and sends it out on a little extra slip."

Is the printing of a matter in a supplement shutting it out of the paper? Our people want to preserve the debate and prefer it in a supplement. Is Mr. Ray afraid to have the debate preserved? It looks very much like it. The tide is turning against him, he feels it, and now wants to raise a cry of victory for effect. The man would better save his breath till the battle is over. He will need it long before he gets his backward single immersionist Baptist Church traced back to the apostolic times. The gentleman will have enough to do if he keeps his own side of the question straight.

MANY who cannot be convinced by argument, can sometimes be won by love.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL PENROD.

What is the meaning of the last two words of 1 Cor. 17: 22? "Anathema Maran atha," and what language is it? W. H. MILLER.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DETHICK.

We read in Gen. 1: 26: "Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness." Did God make man in the form of himself, or was the image spiritual? A. HOLLINGER.

Please give an explanation on 1 Cor. 5: 5: "To deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." M. W. KEIM.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual? J. Y. SNAVELY.

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 3: 12, 13? 1. Who is the builder? 2. What the material? 3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire? 4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire? B. B. WHITMER.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22: 2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5: 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc. S. A. FLECKINGER.

Some one will please explain Mark 16: 17, 18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Who is referred to? J. L. BROWN.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

Please explain 1 Tim. 1: 9; Luke 16: 15; Mark 9: 23; Mark 16: 17, 18. To what law has the Scriptures reference and to what extent should it be used? What is the most esteemed? Has it reference to any particular thing?

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK give an explanation of the latter clause of the 36th verse of the 22nd chapter of Luke, which reads as follows: "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one."

Also, Mark 23: 15, which reads as follows: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." S. A. CLEARY.

THE law alluded to by the apostle in 1 Tim. 1: 9, is the moral law. There were two laws given by Moses, the ceremonial law, and the moral law; the object of the latter was to restrain crimes, and to punish those who would commit them. This law was not for the righteous as a restrainer of crimes, or an inflicter of punishment, for such committed no transgressions, therefore the law did not lie against them. It was harmless so far as they were concerned. There was nothing in them for it to take hold upon.

Luke 16: 15. The hypocritical, worldly Pharisees are again the subjects of our Lord's rebuke. Our Savior had been speaking against the love of the world and a conservative spirit. These haughty Pharisees treated His teachings with contempt; our translation says, "They derided him." It would perhaps be a more literal rendering to say, "They turned up their noses at him." The original expresses the utmost contempt. The blessed Jesus turned to them and said, "Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly esteemed among men, is abomination in the sight of God." By your worldly wisdom, your worldly prudence, your standing in society, your wealth, you have gained a reputation among men, and by them you are highly respected and esteemed; but God who penetrates the exterior, and who sees your hearts, and knows the corruption and vile hypocrisy that lurks there, holds you in abomination. The querist does not say what point he wants explained in the above passages. Faith, however, is the principle theme.

The first passage is our Lord's address to the father of the demoniac, who was possessed by a dumb spirit. The disciples could not cast out this devil, and when the father appealed to Jesus, He addressed to him the language indicated by our querist: "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." The father had said, "If thou canst do anything, have mercy on us and help us." Jesus told him it all depended on himself, I am sufficiently able to effect a cure, I am sufficiently able to do anything, I can furnish the power, if thou canst but exercise sufficient faith to receive it. Why is it that we are not cleansed from all sin, when the apostle tells us that "this is the will of God even our sanctification?" The cleansing power is in Jesus; in Him is the ability to cleanse us from all sin; if we are not pure, the fault is ours; on our part it is lack of desire, or lack of faith.

The second passage alludes to the signs that shall follow those that believe. The word accompany would better express the meaning than "follow," "these signs shall accompany." These signs were miraculous powers that were conferred upon the apostles and those converted by their immediate ministry. These signs were confined to the apostolic age, and in that age were literally fulfilled. It is a fact, according to this prediction of our Lord, that not one of the apostles lost their lives by poison, while Mohammed, who styled himself the apostle of God, lost his life in this way.

THE SWORD AND GARMENT.

The whole verse reads thus: "Then said he unto them, but now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his script: and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment and buy one." The last clause is obscure, and difficult to understand it. We have seen, and heard several explanations, the one we most favor is that of Bishop Pearce. He thinks that the word machairan translated sword, has been inserted here. In the Bible Union translation the clause reads thus: "And he who hath none, let him sell his garment and buy a sword." The above is said to be far the most literal rendering. Such being the case, sword stands rather awkwardly in the passage; by substituting one for sword, the construction is far better. The pronominal adjective "none" would then refer to script in the former clause. Then the meaning of our Savior is plain; He tells His disciples, that now He is about to send them into all the world, among inhospitable tribes, prudence would therefore dictate that they make provisions for their journey, so necessary would it be that they have scrip, or bags to carry provision in, that rather than be without these they had better part with their upper garments to procure them. Some are for retaining the word machairan, and think it should be translated knife, which was necessary on long journeys for providing forage and fuel.

WOE UNTO SCRIBES, PHARISEES AND HYPOCRITES.

Scribes or writers among the ancients were men of learning, and were held in high esteem; they are frequently in Scripture called wise men, and counsellors. Their reputed wisdom gave them great authority and influence among the people who looked up to them as the expounders of the law. This influence and power they had greatly abused in the time of our Savior, as by their traditions and false glosses they had so perverted the Scriptures as to make them of no effect. Our Savior, in the scathing rebuke of the above passage, joins them with the Pharisees to which sect they generally belonged. The Pharisees were a sect who pretended to superior sanctity and wisdom, but who only made their religion a cloak to cover the most vile and infamous acts. Our Savior uniformly speaks of them with censure and indignation.

"Compass sea and land." This was a proverbial expression, intimating that they left no means untried, but did all in their power to gain converts to their system. Proselyte means a stranger or foreigner, hence it was chiefly among the heathen nations that these converts were made.

"The child of hell." This was a Hebraism, or a form of expression peculiar to the Hebrew language, meaning an excessively wicked person.

"Two-fold." The Greek word here translated "two-fold," is diplotteron; diplou means hypocrisy, fraudulence, and diplotteron means more hypocritical, more fraudulent; it is simply the adjective in the comparative degree. That is, the Scribes and Pharisees were hypocritical, and deceitful, but these proselytes were more so. And this character is attested to by Christian writers, Justin Martyr, a writer of the second century says, that "The proselytes did not only disbelieve Christ's doctrine, but were abundantly more blasphemous against Him than the Jews themselves, endeavoring to torment and cut off Christians wherever found.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

BY D. B. MENTZER.

A glad New Year!
To all our readers every-where;
May you enjoy its prospects fair,
And all its cheer.

View not the Past
Its many failings to lament,
But learn to be full well content
With joys thou hast.

Begin anew
Thy life on earth with hope to live,
And let each day some surety give,
Of deeds most true.

Improve thy mind
And let thy heart in peace be free;
Where'er you go, where'er you be,
Be RIGHT and KIND.

If thus while here
You strive the best of life to gain,
There shall a joy each year remain,
HAPPY NEW YEAR!!

FOR YOUNG SISTERS.

BY MARY J. STEES.

IN No. 50 of the BRETHREN AT WORK, we read that a brother writes: "We think the BRETHREN AT WORK quite a help to the young members." Yes, it is invariably a help; but am sorry to think that many neglect to adopt it as a help. Possibly you will ask why I think so. I shall tell you by asking a question. Do you read the whole or part of the paper every week? Who can answer, "I do?" While conversing with young sisters, I frequently have occasion to speak of the paper, and I am inclined to believe that some do not read one article during the week, and more inclined to believe that they neglect to read the Bible. Dear young sisters, we have undertaken a great work. The object of this work is the hope of receiving eternal life. God says, if we leave one command undone, we are in debt for the whole. O, consider that debt! How can we pay the debt, unless we daily read and meditate the Word of God. It is our duty to read it so that we may become instructive to those of our surroundings, and, like the faithful servant, improve our talent. It is very necessary to be systematic in all we do; otherwise we will get subjects huddled in our minds. A very good system by which to get our daily lesson is this: Read two chapters each week day and three on Sunday from the Old Testament, and one chapter each week day and two on Sunday from the New Testament. This will take you through the Bible in one year. By limiting your lessons you will be more apt to get one each day, and will retain more of what you read. To read without writing, is to be guilty of downright folly, says an author. If you desire to learn to write, think and compose, keep a pencil and blank paper beside you and note subjects. When you hear your subjects referred to in a discourse, add from time to time the information you acquire on it. Methinks I hear some say, "I haven't time to do this." It is true, there are various domestic duties to perform and every girl should know how to perform them, but the mind, too, needs cultivation. Of this, I will speak further in the future. We are laboring for a life eternal, and if we devote all our time to duties pertaining to this life and neglect to cultivate the mind, the never dying part of man, how can we expect to inherit that eternal life?

Dear sisters, we are working in the garden of the Lord. What a beautiful garden it is! How I wish I had commenced sooner to gather the beautiful flowers that bloom therein. How sweet they are! Just let me name a few that constitute a favorite bouquet: Matt. 22: 37, 39; John 13, 15; 1 Cor. 11. But the last mentioned some would like to discard because they are ashamed to wear it. Jesus says, "He that is ashamed of me and of my words, of him will I also be ashamed." This covering is just as beautiful as is the delicate flower of innocence in a bouquet of natural flowers. Come, young sisters, we must work with greater zeal, for sooner or later, we must take the place of our older sisters. Are we capable of this lot? If we know how and what to do, we are. And to know, we must read the Bible and Christian periodicals. Let us, young sisters, begin afresh this New Year to learn of Jesus and Him crucified.

CHRIST prefers forgiveness to every other virtue. He enjoins it oftener, more earnestly, more anxiously, and with this weighty circumstance, that the forgiveness of others is the condition upon which we are to expect and ask from God forgiveness for ourselves.

Among the Brethren—An Afflicted Sister—Church Dedication—Home Mission—Rejoicing in the Camp—Anointing the sick—A Farewell.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

NUMBER VII.

BY request of the Brethren, I went to visit Rome church, to assist brother Jesse Calvert, in holding a series of meetings at that place. Arrived on the 29th of November, I found that old veteran of the cross at work in the Master's cause and in good spirits. The meetings continued until the close of the week. The interest was growing, and we trust will not lose its effect.

On Saturday we visited our dear sister, Laura Ebersole, who is passing the crucible of affliction. We had a very pleasant interview with that kind family. After sharing their kind hospitalities, we spent the afternoon in conversation about Zion, and the upbuilding of the Master's cause. The dear sister not being able to attend meeting at the church, she desired a season of devotion at their pleasant home.—Brother Calvert selected some consoling words, the 5th chapter of 2 Cor., after which he offered up a petition in behalf of all present, and especially of the suffering sister. Amidst suffering, it was a season of joy and the power of prayer was greatly appreciated. How many suffering saints on earth, desiring to be unclothed, that they might be clothed upon with that house, which is from heaven. Yes, dear sister, while you are in this tabernacle, suffering as you do, and being burdened, oh continue faithful until God shall call you, then can you be clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

On Lord's day we went to the Southern part of their district, to dedicate their new church, called Oak Grove. This is a large substantial building, 40x70, and well finished, with a seating capacity of about one thousand. About 10 A. M., the people began to pour in from all points of the compass, until this spacious building was densely packed. Brother Calvert introduced the service, by reading Solomon's dedicatory prayer of the Temple. 1 Kings 8: 22-30. Then suggested as a song of praise, the 325th hymn, and then went to prayer. For a motto for his discourse he selected the words, "How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." Gen. 28: 17. The sermon was indeed very interesting, and we trust profitable to all. In listening to his convincing arguments and strong appeals, and of the great responsibilities resting upon the Christian, both in the care of the body and the church, it was enough to make one feel, how dreadful is the place. In the evening we re-assembled for divine services. The audience was entertained in the light of the Gospel, by one of the ministers present, on the mortality of man and his responsibility to God. Here we had the pleasure of meeting brother J. W. Reese, of Portage, and brethren Lois and our youthful brother Young, from Green Spring. Next morning returned home, and have since learned that the meeting at Oak Grove church, was a success, and that quite a number were added by baptism. Returning home as brother P. J. Brown arrived, we left Dunkirk for Pleasant Ridge church of Eagle Creek branch, where we commenced operations in the camp of the Lord. I remained with brother Brown until Wednesday, when brother E. Bosserman took my place in assisting our old veteran of the cross. On Saturday we exchanged again and I remained in the camp with brother Brown until the close of the meeting on Tuesday. The results were glorious. Six precious souls were added to the church by baptism, and the interest manifested by all in attendance was good. We return our thanks to the dear people in that vicinity, for their kindness shown while in their midst. Great was the rejoicing in the camp when it was seen that the rock was beginning to break under the hammer of the Gospel, so powerfully wielded by brother Brown. We have reason to believe that there was joy in heaven, in beholding the enlargement of the kingdom. O, may the Gospel trumpet be heralded forth long and loud until the enemy shall be banished from the land.

Again were we called to visit one of the Lord's afflicted, our dear sister Triphena King. Brother A. M. Bowers and brother W. C. Teeter assisted in the solemn duty of anointing with oil in the name of the Lord. Our dear sister is suffering very much, but feels resigned to the will of an overruling Providence, and desires to depart when the Master calls, and dwell with Christ, which is far better. Oh what a world of suffering this is! But cheer thou weary one, after passing through the crucible. There is a home beyond where sorrow, sickness, pain and death can never come.—Praise God for the happy thought. Were this our only home we would soon despair and bow to earth; our dust would mingle with its kindred element, the dust of the earth long before the appointed time. But the glorious thought, there is a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens, awaiting the faithful which animates and cheers the heart and causes us to wait patiently until the Father calls.

To-day our dear brother James and wife took their departure for the far West, to occupy their future home, and the formerly joyous hearts now wore a solemn aspect, and sorrow was depicted upon their countenances; all because the uncertainties of life are such, that in all probability we never more on earth shall meet again. But as we are all sailing together in the good old ship Zion, we trust that if the hills and valleys, mountains and streams, that now separate us, will separate us while this life remains, we will meet on the golden shore, where we can reunite and never more take the parting hand. We accompanied them to the train and there amidst the tears and farewell greetings of a kind mother and son, brothers and sisters, we saw them board the train and we saw them no more. Such are the changing scenes of life. We are glad that there is a being who is unchangeable, and that is our God. And we greatly rejoice that His laws are fixed, and that where He dwells and where we may dwell is an eternity of perpetual love and holy enjoyment. May God help us to secure that home.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Dec. 16th, 1878.

From D. B. Gibson.

Dear Brethren:—

I CLOSED my meetings in Ray Co., Mo., on the 28th of November. The meetings were largely attended, and the interest was intense; and the church was much encouraged. At the farewell many tears were shed.

I only staid at home three days. Home sweet home; be it ever so humble, there is no place on earth like home. Here I could rest my poor worn down body and weary mind, and enjoy the association of my own loved ones, from whom I am so often and so long separated. 'Tis here I could lay by the sword of the spirit and rest. There remaineth a rest for the people of God.

I started for Falls City, Neb., on the 2nd of December. This church has had its dark days of gloom, that hung over it like a portentious cloud, but I am rejoiced to say that peace and harmony have been restored to a great extent; and I found the members in as good, if not better, working condition than any congregation I have visited for a long time. Hence there was co-operation from the beginning of the meeting. God blessed our united efforts, and saints were made to rejoice, and many to turn to the Lord. To His name be all the praise.—The congregation was very large. I continued for eleven days. There were fourteen baptized, and several more applicants.

The ministers here are Christian Forney, elder S. C. Stump, J. Johnston and brother Lichty. The congregation numbers now about one hundred and thirty members.

I seldom form a closer attachment for a church than I did here. May the Lord keep them in peace and love. They are disposed, I am glad to say, to carry out our distinctive features in general appearance and deportment.

I have now enjoyed about a week's rest, which I so much needed. Am now again in the field. May God's blessing attend those who so kindly remembered sister Gibson.

Perrin, Mo., Dec. 20th., 1878.

From Denmark.

Dear Brethren:—

GRACE, mercy and peace be multiplied unto you evermore, as well as to all the household of faith in your land of liberty.

On leaving this field for a time, I can tell you that I have had meetings every evening, and twice Sunday, with continued interest, and increased congregations. I have held thirteen meetings in the vicinity of Thisted, and succeeded in opening up a promising field for good. We have gained many warm-hearted friends, of whom we expect some may come out on the Lord's side. We have had rain and muddy roads and very dark nights, yet the houses have been crowded all the time, and nearly overcrowded the last time. Among those present were rich and poor farmers; and judging by the tears that flowed, the Lord must have carried conviction to many hearts. Some we know have abandoned brandy and evil habits, and try to change their lives. Some have abandoned the State church, and several publicly declared they would never more indulge in the pernicious custom of eating animal blood.—How far they will go in the reformation of life, God only knows. Remember in your prayers, those poor people sitting in darkness.

I have had opposers, and bitter and learned ones too, who have tried hard to ensnare me in words, so that I might be brought before the magistrate and imprisoned; but the Lord has stood by me and delivered me from them all.

I am well only I am wet through, having been in the rain several days; but such things a missionary can bear with joy, when the seed he scatters is received by hungry souls. I shall, if the Lord permits, return to this place the middle of January next. Several calls from here and other places far and near have come, which demand my personal attention. I do not see how I ever shall be free from traveling, yet God sees farther than I, and I hope to be more and more a willing and, obedient child of the Father. I am not near as small as I can be yet, but still I am conscious, I grow downward; and God grant that to go on until I am nothing, but He all in me.

Dec. 2nd. Found all reasonable well at home, and can say, the one mentioned to be baptized when I left, was received into the church the day appointed.

I have commenced a series of meetings in our new hall this week, and had last night a good attentive congregation of new people we never saw before. May God bless the work to further increase.

All communications are closed on account of snow.

Our old sister Karew will be blind in a short time, and needs an operation to remove a substance growing over the eyes. She is in the hands of a doctor at present, and we have to nurse her in our home; so we have to bear burdens of all kinds. Ask God that we may be able to do so and to be faithful until death.

C. HOPE.

Nov. 27th, 1878.

From Croton, N. J.

THE Brethren here have been building a new house for worship, which according to previous appointments, was dedicated to the service of the Most High, on Dec. 5th, at 10:30, opened by singing the 32nd hymn. Prayer by brother J. P. Hetric, of Philadelphia, Pa.—Preaching by brother James Quinter, of Huntingdon, Pa., from Psalms 27: 4: "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple."

Our house was filled to its utmost capacity, with eager listeners, who after being dismissed, repaired to their homes, and to places where bodily hunger could be satisfied, to return again in the evening to hear brother Quinter.

On the 6th, brother Hetric preached an excellent sermon. In the evening brother Quinter addressed us from 1 Chron. 28: 4: "For the Lord searched all hearts." This discourse we heard men remark, was the most powerful one they ever listened to.

On the evening of the 7th was our Love-feast. Brother Quinter addressed us. We feel that our spiritual strength was increased, and was renewed by might in the inner man.—About sixty members communed. The house was filled to overflowing. After services brother Quinter took his leave for the Amwell church. Brother Hetric remained with us until the 12th. He preached several instructive discourses Although we see no immediate result of these meetings in the conversion of souls, yet we trust the word preached will be "bread cast upon the waters" which will return not many days hence; for we believe that there are those that are almost persuaded to be Christians.

AMOS S. CHAMBERLIN.

From Jesse Calvert.

I LAST wrote you from Elk Lick, Nov. 11th, from there I went to Meyersdale, and held a few interesting meetings; a few applicants for baptism. On Friday I returned to Elk Lick, and baptized two more, making in all thirty at that place. On Sunday evening, I left for Scalplevel, to fill a few appointments. Stopped at Johnstown, and attended one meeting; then reached my appointments, where we had an interesting meeting of a week, with four additions.

On the 26th, started for J. P. Ebersoles, Hancock Co, Ohio. Had a few meetings at the old church. Dec. 1st, dedicated their new church, on Limestone Ridge. It is one among the best buildings in the brotherhood. The audience was very large, and the meeting interesting. Had meeting Monday evening.—Tuesday had a Love-feast at the same place. It was a feast indeed. I then continued the meeting until December 11th, with eleven additions by baptism, and still more felt willing to come. May the good Lord ever bless and care for the lambs of His fold, and save them.

Arrived home; found all well. Thanks be to the Lord, and thanks to the brethren and sisters and friends, for their kindness to me.

From Nancy Wise.

WE have reached our new home in Illinois. I will comply with the requests of many who wished to hear from me; as it is my lot to be a kind of a pilgrim in this world, and there are many kind brethren and sisters and friends, that wished me to write to them, I thought I would write one letter for all who take your paper.

I like my home much thus far. The people are very kind to me. I have not seen many of the members of this congregation yet, but what I have seen are very kind. The weather has been cold, and the roads icy.

Dearly beloved, I think this world is a world of sorrow and grief. I get so very lonesome. I have none of my friends or relatives to associate with. The people here are all strangers to me. There is no place on earth like my native home,—the land of my friends. Sisters pray for me, that we may all meet in heaven.

From Nodaway Co., Mo.

Dear Brethren:—

AS an item of news from this county, we will say that we had a very interesting series of meetings at the Maple Grove schoolhouse, commencing Dec. 1st, and ending on the evening of the 10th, conducted by elder A. Harper, of Ray Co. We were made to rejoice to have the happy privilege of leading two precious souls into White Cloud, and baptized them according to the Master's charge. May they hold fast their profession without wavering. Many more deep impressions were made.

Dear Brethren:—

TWO have been received into the church here at Ephrata, since our late revival, and we hope that still a few more may come before long.

We have started a sort of social meeting in our district, held at private houses every Wednesday evening. This I think, should be done every-where. Brethren, meet together once in the middle of the week, and learn the Scriptures more perfectly,—sing, pray and glorify the Lord for his goodness, and feed and warm your spiritual lives, that they die not.

L. ANDES.

Dec. 21st, 1878.

From the Four Mile Church, Ind.

OUR church is situated near the beautiful little stream, called Four Mile Creek, from which it took its name. It was organized in the year 1809, by brethren Jacob Miller, John Hart and Bolton; and is said to be the first church of the Brethren ever established in the State of Indiana. When this church was organized, it was then in what was called the Twelve Mile purchase. At that time the Red man, the hunting ground and his wigwam was not very far West of us. The tide of emigration and civilization has driven them westward, and they are no more running over our State; but the wilderness they inhabited has now become one of the garden spots of America; and instead of their wigwams, the Brethren have erected their churches in which to worship the true and living God. In organizing this church, brother Daniel Miller and John Moyer were chosen to the ministry, and Christopher Witter and Joseph Kingrey, were chosen for deacons. The church increased very fast; and there has been quite a number of speakers elected in this church, and moved to different parts of the country.—Among them are brother Daniel Miller, John Moyer, William Moss, John Whiteneck, Hiel Hamilton, John Hansel and Joseph McCurty. Brother Daniel Miller is living in Monroe Co., Iowa, and brother Hamilton is living in Howard Co., Ind. The rest have passed from labor to reward. But two speakers have died in this district since its organization. Baltzer Lybrook died about the year 1828, and Abraham Moss died in the year 1860. We have from one hundred and fifteen to one hundred and twenty members, with five speakers and six deacons.

Brother S. H. Bashor came to our church November 26th, and stayed until December 10th; and preached twenty-two sermons, which resulted in twenty-six additions by baptism, and a general good feeling by all that attended the meetings. We must say that we were made to rejoice to see so many of our friends and neighbors come out on the Lord's side, and especially some of our own family. In the last year we have received thirty-two members in the church. Hoping the good Lord may bestow his grace on us all; that we may be kept in the "Unity of the spirit and the bonds of peace," which has ever characterized our congregation with a very few exceptions. Would to God that all mankind would serve him in all his teachings. Pride and selfishness is a great hindrance to the advancement of the Gospel in its true light among mankind.

JACOB RITE.

Boston, Indiana.

From Upper and Lower Conawago Churches, Pennsylvania.

BRETHREN Henry Saylor and Jesse Fox, of Maryland, and Gideon Bollinger, of Medina Co., Ohio, came and labored with us, from the 7th until the evening of the 16th of December, in the Upper Conawago church. On the evening of the 12th, brother J. A. Sell, from Blair Co., and brother William Howe, from Mifflin Co., Pa., commenced preaching in Lower Conawago church, and continued until the evening of the 22nd; and on the evening of the 23rd came to Latimore meeting-house, Upper Conawago, quite near the dividing line of the two congregations. They continued their labors until the evening of the 29th.—The result of these meeting was, six precious souls were made willing to covenant with their God, by baptism, three of which were baptized after the evening services were over, and then went on their way rejoicing. We have reason to believe that many solemn impressions were made among the audience as the people were quite orderly. To us the meetings were quite enjoyable, as the most were within a radius of from three and one-half to ten miles of the place we call home; so myself and family could attend the most of them; and often we were made to feel, if not like, yet similar to a Peter of old, "It was good to be there." On the whole, it was good to be there.

Preaching Wanted.

Dear Brethren:—

I NOTICE in the BRETHREN AT WORK, a great many calls from different places for preachers, and a few from Kansas; but have never noticed a call from this county. (Pottawatamie), and I cannot keep still any longer. I am confident that if we do not ask we shall never have any preaching, and we feel somewhat discouraged in this respect. We have not had any preaching nearer than twenty-five miles, since we moved here seven years ago. I know of but two members in this county, and they are brother David Teeter and myself, and we would like to have some preaching. Ministering brethren passing through here on the Kansas Pacific R. R., could stop off at Wamego, and by having notice we will meet them there. I hope this call will not be in vain.—I think some good could be accomplished here. Kansas needs more good preachers and the Truth ought to be expounded to these people.

W. B. PRICE.

From Ervin, Howard Co., Ind.

Dear Brethren:—

THESE few lines will inform you that the health of this section is very good at this time, and we have abundant reason to be thankful.

Regular Winter set in with considerable snow about the 20th, and now it is fine sleighing.

Brethren J. G. Royer and Andrew Culp, from White Co., Indiana, paid us a visit on Christmas day. They held four meetings while here. Although there were no additions to the church, yet we think there were some deep impressions made, and hope that much good may result from their labors. May the blessings of the Lord attend their labors wherever they go.

HIEL HAMILTON.

Dec. 29th, 1878.

From Woodbury, Pa.

ON November 18th, brother Buckalew, of Clifton Mill, Virginia, came to this congregation, and commenced a series of meetings, which lasted until the 25th. He preached twelve sermons. The brother faithfully delivered the messages from God to us, in comforting the church, and warning the sinners.

The weather and roads have been very unfavorable for the attendance of our meetings; hence they were not so large as they would have been under the circumstances. But we feel sure that his labor was not in vain. One precious soul came out on the Lord's side and was buried with Christ by Christian baptism, and rose to walk in newness of life.

LOTTIE KETRING.

Marin, Pa., Dec. 28th, 1878.

Ministering Brethren Come West.

WE, who are in the Far West, would be very glad if the brotherhood would send us a missionary. There are nine members in this vicinity, and we have not heard one sermon preached by the brethren, since we are here, excepting the sermons that five of us have heard at the Love-feast in Jewell Co., Kansas, and that was a trip of about ninety miles.

There are a few members here that have not heard a sermon preached by the Brethren for over five years. Brethren think of it, whether it would be proper and right to send us a missionary?

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

GIBE.—In the Astoria church, Ill., Dec. 6th, , daughter of brother Henry and Susan Gibe, aged one year, eight months and twenty-three days. Funeral services by the brethren, from Matt. 21: 16.

SHAGO.—In the same congregation, Dec. 4th, sister Susan Shago, aged 22 years, 8 months and 17 days. Funeral services by the brethren, from Revelations 14: 13. J. C. BEMY.

CORREL.—In Wayne Co., Ind., Nov. 16th, brother Daniel Correl, aged 69 years, 8 months and 5 days. Funeral services by the writer, from Michigan, and Christian Holdeman, from Wayne Co., Ohio, from 2 Cor. from the 1st to the 11th verse. J. B. SHOEMAKER.

FIRSTONE.—In the Eight Mile congregation, Franklin Co., Kan., brother Nathan Firstone, aged 36 years, 1 months and 2 days. Funeral services by brother Peter Brubaker and others.

The subject of this notice cut his foot very bad with the axe, and eleven days after he took the lock-jaw, and in less than three days after this he called for the elders, and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord.

JAMES T. KINZIE.

MARTIN.—In Richland church, Richland Co., Ohio, Dec. 20th, brother Samuel Martin, aged 57 years, 4 months and 15 days.

Brother Samuel was a consistent member of the church for many years. He leaves a wife and many friends to mourn their loss. He will be greatly missed in the family, church and neighborhood. Although we feel the loss it is gain to him. The Funeral occasion was improved from Rev 14: 13, by brother J. C. McMullen.

CHRISTIAN HOLDEMAN.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money, received for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor BRETHREN, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the Poor Fund. We would like to please every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

OUTSIDERS' FUND.

THERE are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefited by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer: Send us the names of such outsiders as you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them in a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as fast as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar a year. Hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thus enable us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded us.—When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the OUTSIDERS' FUND.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, all donations received and papers sent out:

SOMETHING NEGLECTED.

BY R. H. MILLER.

WE have just closed our meeting at Dora, in the Antioch church, which had in it one very remarkable feature, that is, the conduct of little boys and girls, from five to twelve years of age—a large number of such attended the meeting. These children would take the front seats till the house was over-crowded, then they would take seats on the edge of the platform, on the floor, near the stand; and their order and behavior were as good as could be asked, and we encouraged them in it, because we fear they are often neglected in our meetings. Often the children stay in the far end of the house among the hardest sinners, while the older ones take the front seats.

I want to see the congregation turned around—the young people brought in front to sing and hear and bow in prayer, as though the meeting was for them. Such a course would be nearer the ancient order of the church. In the days of the primitive church when meeting began in the morning about nine o'clock, the children had their places near where the speaker stood. The first singing was done by the children; the first prayer was specially for them; the first Scripture was read for them; the first speaking was done to them. It seems in the primitive age of the church, the main feature of their regular meetings on Lord's day was to instruct, encourage and train their children in their religious service, that Satan should never lead them off in sin and rebellion against God. These children were called catechumens, because they were learners in the meetings for worship. These children often knew the Scripture to be read and spoken of the next Sabbath, and were anxiously waiting and studying. This well prepared them to have their hearts lead to the sacred truth of the Gospel.

But I have not told it all, these children were not confined in their place all the time of meeting. After their particular part of the service was over, they were dismissed and permitted to go out while the older ones did the singing and heard a discourse especially for them. This was about the order of holding meetings in the days of Clement, Chrysostom, Basil, Cyril. These old fathers took a greater interest in the children of their day, than is taken now, and the best idea in it is, the teaching of children was right in the church; it was a church work, done in their religious service. Their work was far ahead of the Sabbath-school, or in other words, it was doing all the work of the Sabbath-school in the church. The children were made the first and great feature appearing in their religious service. This is one of the great reasons why the church increased so fast in that age. The children were taught younger than now to feel the church was theirs—the church was for them. Now many think the church is for old people, that the young must run off in sin—wander a prodigal till he is starving, and many die and never come back.

The old fathers did all they could to keep them from every sin, and teach them in every truth. This is the reason these old fathers baptized some very young. They tell us of baptizing some that were only seven years old, but they were better taught in Scriptural truth than many of our children at twice that age.

Our meeting at Dora reminded us of the meetings of the primitive church, when so many of the little boys and girls made the company around the stand. We shall long remember how these little boys and girls gathered around us to shake hands, when our last meeting closed. They came from the feeling of their own warm hearts, (they were not told to come), but they knew older ones had no preference over them, and hardly so much as they, hence they came first to express their regard to one who they knew had great concern for them. If Jesus would take "little children in his arms and bless them," we, too, should do and say all we can to bless and save them.

But we want to turn the thoughts of our ministry to the young, because we feel that they are too much neglected in our meetings for worship. The minister should try to make his discourse interesting to them, if he can possibly do so. Then he won't need to scold them to have good order. We should so illustrate our subjects with figures and things the children understand, that are interesting and instructive. Always have a concern for the young, especially, the young in the church. If you must slight any, let it be some old ones, they can bear it; but never show a coldness to the young, it will hurt them and your influence too. Try sometimes and get up something purposely for the young, and try in every discourse to get something that will interest and instruct them. Your kindness and regard, especially, to children has great influence over them. Friendship with children, is almost everything. Cold logic and reason may do for the old, but friendship and kindness mingled with simple illustrations of Gospel truth, will win the children and turn their thoughts to sacred things, and live in their memory to point them to God when your labors on earth are done. The result of our labors in the Antioch church, were not so clearly manifested in good done as we desired. Four made the good confession, one reclaimed, and we hope our effort to present our doctrine has left many good impressions. To encourage the brethren and sisters, and turn the feelings of others who are not in the church more toward the teaching of the blessed Savior.

A NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

BLESSED be God for the recorded history of Lazarus. After the angels had carried him into Abraham's bosom, this was the testimony of the father of faith concerning him. Lazarus in his lifetime received his evil things; but now he is comforted.

This rigorous winter season is the time to try the souls of the poor, and in another sense, no less the souls of the rich. Scanty food and insufficient raiment, poor shelter, or none at all, test the strongest faith and the most Job-like patience. Winter also tests the godliness of the rich. If Christ is in them, He will show Himself in the cold season. If a man's religion can stand the Winter, there is Divinity in it. The Straight Gate demands frost-proof as well as fire-proof. To sit by a warm stove, and nestle in a cozy bed, and be clad with abundance of heavy apparel, and partake of rich fare three times a day, and have money in the chest, or perhaps invested, while some poverty-stricken fellow-mortal is shivering in want, or some alien lies weltering in his blood, next door to us—this turns out the black side of our cloak. The Cross puts the ends of the earth into neighborhood. Luke 10: 29-37. When God became man He made every man our brother.

The illustration of this sublime truth by the church, is God's standing advertisement to the world, written with the blood of Jesus. The pre-incarnate Savior "was rich, yet for our sakes He became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich." Our treatment of man as man, is the deepest test Christianity admits of. Tried by this principle, we can see where we stand as individuals, and what is the status of the church. Jesus died for Cesar and Herod, not because they were monarchs, but because they were human. The publican, the harlot, the malefactor, the outcast, the pauper, the loathesome leper, stand on the same level in relation to the Incarnation, as princes and potentates, Rothschilds and Stewarts. Deprecation of the poor because of their poverity, is unchristian. I have seen a great orator in our own Brotherhood refuse to take a seat in a rail-car, because there were colored folks in. This was putting Christ to an open shame. The blood of Jesus flowed as freely and warmly for black as for white. "All flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass." The rich and mighty have no prerogatives as to their nature, no immunities as to the common destinies of that nature. All are imbred in a common ruin, all purchased by a common ransom, all amenable to a common tribunal, all partake of a common inheritance, or a common perdition. Heaven has no upper seats for the rich, and hell no comfortable quarters to be purchased with gold or greenbacks. Neither Paradise or Pandemonium has bids to offer to the mammon of unrighteousness, save a higher rapture or deeper torment according to the use we make of our money.

These are thoughts which should come home to our inmost hearts with overwhelming force while the severe season is passing. If we climb to the higher end of the Cross, and lay our hearts on the heart of the man-loving, man-redeeming, sin-atoning Emmanuel, and stretch our hands on his hands, place our feet on his feet, we will not, cannot, neglect the poor. All the shiver of winter and all the grinding, pinching agonies of poverty were in Christ's suffering. It gladdens His great, loving, yearning Brother-heart, to see His Bride feed the hungry, clothe the naked, provide for and comfort the destitute. Those who were "forward a year ago" in the mission of mercy, will not be laggard now. 2 Cor. 8: 10, 11. The noblest poor must be sought out. Souls of the finest mould do not flaunt their necessities. They will suffer even to the threshold of starvation before they will press their destitution on the reluctant attention of others. God is in the winter, and He speaks no uncertain language. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. He that has a heart to feel, let him imitate.

ANOTHER YEAR NEARER HOME.

BY MARTHA BEEGHLY.

ANOTHER year has passed away, and we are nearer to the tomb. This is a solemn thought, but one that should be considered by each and every one; that we are one year nearer to the tomb, than we were when this year commenced. When we permit our minds to run back over the year which has just closed, we notice many changes. We think of some, who were in the bloom of youth, and in the vigor of manhood, and some more advanced in years; yes, even from old age down to the little infant on its mother's knee, who were with and among us in the last year, but to-day, how changed the scene! How many homes have been visited and made sad by the king of terrors, in the removal of some dear one that is now sleeping in the silent city of the dead.

But why should we marvel, since it is just the fulfilling of the decree that went forth long since: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Much rather let us wonder why it is that we are yet here. Is it on account of the good that we have done? Most assuredly not. We must acknowledge that we all to a certain extent, have merited God's displeasure, rather than his favor. But we are glad to know and we rejoice in the thought, that God has been merciful unto us. He has not dealt with us according to our sins, neither rewarded us according to our iniquities. Through his long suffering, and and his mercy, our almost useless lives have been prolonged, as monuments of his amazing love. Since we are aware that "Our days are as the grass, or like the flower of the field," and that this life is but a journey to the tomb, the thought comes up like this: Shall we survive the present year? It may be before another New Year's day will dawn; it will be said of us, that we, too, have gone to our long home.

The question now arises: Are we ready and waiting for the change? If so, happy are we, "for the Lord upholdeth the righteous, he knows their days, and their inherit ance shall be forever." Oh, brethren and sisters, let us redouble our diligence and trust in the God of our salvation, remembering that our Savior said, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." What a cheering thought to us, if we have tried to live the life of a Christian, when our labors and our sorrows, temptations and trials, sickness and afflictions, shall all be over, and we can look beyond all this, to a brighter and far serener clime, where we shall never part with our loved ones, and never know sorrow, sickness and death any more, but shall bask in the sunlight of eternal felicity.

Because all men feel, and know, and see, said Luther, that they must die and disappear, each seeks an earthly immortality in being ever more remembered. Sometimes great sovereigns, princes and nobles, have sought it by rearing pillars of marble or lofty pyramids pointing to the skies; by these they have fancied themselves immortalized. And still, by great churches and other sumptuous edifices, warriors have pursued and striven to perpetuate honor and renown after their famous victories. Learned men seek by the composition of books an undying name, as we often see in our own day. But as to the everlasting, imperishable honor—an eternity with God—to this they pay no regard. Ah, we are a despicable race!

GOOD NEWS.

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

THE Lord reveals His smiling face,
And gently bid the showers of grace.
God's glory in His temple shines.
And all our grief and woe declines.

The Gospel trumpet sweetly sounds,
The music rolls, the spirit bounds;
Harmonious are the strains, and clear,
To all who have an ear to hear.

Of old, the children prayed and mourned,
But many ears their music spurned.
The busy throng pressed to and fro,
Nor listened to their tales of woe.

So oft the glad hosannas roll,
And ravish the enlightened soul.
Soft as the dew of night from heaven,
The words of life and love are given.

The children of the kingdom weep.
And tell the groans and anguish deep.
That pierced the bosom of the Lamb,
Who died to save rebellious man.

Two heralds of the Gospel came,
With hearts in tune to play the strain,
The one care-worn, and white with age,
The other near life's middle stage.

The entertainment cheered us all,
(With few exceptions) large and small,
I wish some more would time improve,
And visit us at Hickory Grove.

Lord bless our old brother Lehr,
And Lemmel who was with him here;
Equip them with thy love and might
To battle for the truth and right.

Brother Kepner, too, and Guinter,
Came to visit us this Winter,
Each did his talents employ,
And their presence yielded joy.

And thus from place to place we roam,
To bring the wandering sinner home;
And cheer the pilgrim on the road,
That leads to happiness and God.

Soon will our battle end below,
Then we shall quit this vale of woe;
And meet in that delightful place,
To worship God and see his face.

No pen can tell in prose or rhyme,
The beauties of that land and clime,
Where joy unsullied moves their tongues,
To praise the Lord in sacred songs.

A WEEK'S COMPANIONSHIP WITH THE ROCKIES.

BY J. C. FUNDERBURGH.

NUMBER IV.

BELOW is a sportsman looking anxiously into the water, apparently spell-bound; he evidently spies a fine big trout, salmon-like, right there near the top of the water under the edge of that leaning slab rock; and is now eagerly engaged in trying to capture him. In the effort to apply the fly, he discovers that his pole is too short and seizes hold of a tender twig that aids him to lean far out, and tossing the fly again and again, thoughtless as to the feebleness of the twig, till the tension overcomes the adhesive force of the fiber, the result, is quite obvious. Down the stream a little the further, is a fisherman squarely perched on a flat rock; he is after a big fish, throwing far out, full length, seemingly having ample line, but his troutship manifests no appetite.

The fly is changed, aha, now the fish darts quickly as if to take it; but more sagacious than its younger brothers, detects the fraud and leisurely floats away. The large trout are very cute and cunning, but soon forget unless once or twice hooked; and all there is to do once having the right fly, is to keep it playfully skipping on the water. At length the fisherman triumphant, adroitly whirls his victim from its aqueous element to fall among the cobble stones near the edge of the water or perchance striking a larger stone, flounders into the water, but so badly stunned that only a little dexterity on the part of the angler is needed to secure his trout. Our experiences are varied, and the transition of scenes are lively in the extreme.

One of our number injudiciously ventures out upon a slender pine sapling and casts his fly gently upon the rippling waters; it instantly disappears. The delicate cord trembles and the pole bends sharply to the pressure. The eye keenly follows the golden-hued beauty in its aerial flight to the full length of the tackle, and many feet higher, directly over head. It will now be lost unless successfully intercepted in the fall. Awake to this fact with uplifted arms and spread-out singers, nervously held in postion, the angler aims to catch without fail, for never so large looks a fish as when thus dangling thirty feet in the air and likely to escape into the water. Alas, too sleep his troutiship splashes in the water almost simultaneously with its would-be captor, who, having lost his equilibrium in the excitement, had but little choice in the matter. The time flies away, the day far spent and the party fully satisfied with their success as glorious enough for one day, being loaded with trout and feeling not a little hungry, set their footsteps campward. Back we go through thick brush and jungles of cedar, pine and aspen almost impenetrable, shutting out what little light was still lingering in the heavens. The situation was any thing but enviable; and calculated to make one feel somewhat timid; for why shouldn't it? Although a bear fight would be glorious, provided we were victorious. But we had foolishly left camp that morning without weapons of any kind, and I had myself seen a real, live, wild bear, but a little ways from here two years ago, and even fired several shots at it. Just think of it! We went plundering through, however, over rocks and fallen trees along the course of the stream—always steering clear of any black object that possibly might be a bear coming down for a fresh mess of trout or to drink under the cover of the evening shades. Finally circling the last bend and up over the ridge at the lower end of the park, we sight camp, all safely in. No time is now lost making ready the evening repast, which consisted, principally, of well-browned trout and steaming hot biscuits, with an abundance of fresh mountain butter, a supper of crispy, juicy morsels, never to be forgotten.

Each day is but a repetition of the routine just detailed with an occasional slight variation..

In mountaineering, a portion of the time is usually devoted to the hunting of wild and larger game. To the appreciative mind for the sublime, and to the lover of the beautiful in this life, nothing holds comparison with the richness of the feast obtained by a week's companionship with the wonderful freaks of nature as displayed in this region of the Rocky Range. And, in point of health, for enervated spirits, energy prostrated and recuperation in general, it simply has no equal.

PETER

BY J. R. HOFFER.

THE world evidently was never so much in need of salvation as at the time when the generations worshiped "the unkown God," whom the Israelites professed to know. These Israelites, or at least the Jews, or those among them who were known as Pharisees, regarded themselves as God's chosen people: and the rest of mankind they looked upon as outcasts from God. In their religion they were very zealous, but towards those whom they believed to be rejected by God, they were intolerant.

When these Israelites, who were no longer a nation, had probably the strongest hopes of speedy deliverance from the oppression under which they groaned, and of the restoration to a people, as in ages past, in fulfillment of the words of their prophets, as understood by them, there appeared among them a man of very humble parentage and appearance, who called to these devoted people, asking them to repent, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." They probably supposed that if the heavenly kingdom was indeed at hand, it came as a reward for their devotion and zeal; and they were no doubt indignant when they heard this carpenter's Son ask them to repent. They knew the young man, who was born in a stable in one of their villages. Little notice was therefore taken of him as he went about selecting a few persons of like humble parentage and position, and with them traveled throughout the country, declaring to these very religious Israelites that they were hypocrites, and had need of deep repentance. But the humbler of the people felt themselves irresistably drawn after him; and those whom he called, at once obeyed, leaving friends and property, without even asking whither he was going.

The humble people, who asked not whence he came or whither he was going, but looked to his character and works, were by no means left without encouragement; for he not only preached the Gospel to the poor, declaring those blessed who were poor in spirit, who mourned, who were weak, who hungered and thirsted after righteousness, and who were merciful, pure in heart and peacemakers, but he also "healed all manner of sickness and all manner of diseases among the people," and continually went about "doing good." All these things he did in the humblest way; asking even those whom he healed, not to make it public. But the doings of the proud and self-righteous among the Jews, he denounced, calling them "blindness of the blind."

This made him enemies of the leaders and those in authority; but among the common people he had many friends. Little, indeed, did those "learned in the law" see in this "friend of publicans and sinners" that answered to their idea of the promised Messiah.

Under these trying circumstances, when all the leading people were against him, he boldly declared that his followers must eat his flesh and drink his blood. Hearing this, many of his disciples even said, "This is an hard saying," and walked no more with him. But undismayed he turned to the twelve chosen ones, and said, "Will ye also go away?"

Nothing could have satisfied the people more than the reply of Peter, who, having just heard language from his Master which was looked upon as repulsive, said to him, "Thou hast words of eternal life," even adding, "And we believe, and are sure, that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." But Peter knew of what he affirmed, for he had seen the Master make the lame walk, the blind to see, the deaf and dumb to hear and speak; to turn water into wine; to feed thousands of hungry people with a few loaves and fishes; and even the dead he saw him restore to life. Yes, the boisterous deep, also, subsided into "a great calm" at his Master's voice. Nor did his constant followers see anything offensive in the assertion that they must eat the flesh and drink the blood of him whom they appreciated as goodness and righteousness itself; for they had heard him declare those blessed "who hunger and thirst after righteousness."

Although these devoted men knew how unpopular their Master was among the leading Israelites, and that he made no effort to gain popularity or power, they nevertheless hoped that he would restore Israel to be again a kingdom, for this they understood by the prophets, the promised Messiah would do. So sure were they of this, that they even disputed among themselves as to whom of them should be the greatest in the new kingdom; and two of them asked for special positions therein. What kingdom did they expect he would establish, whom "the winds and the sea obey," who healed the people of their infirmities and brought the dead to life again? For such a King they might well be willing to endure hardships and abuses. None of the disciples were as ready to fight for the Master as Peter, and on more than one occasion did he show that he expected to be well rewarded for this devotion.

Could it be possible that the man who repeatedly showed that he knew the thoughts of the people, would tolerate a traitor among his chosen ones? For the sake of gaining a little "filthy lucre," one of them betrayed him into the hands of his bitterest enemies. But while he was thus gratifying his lust for gain, he hardly expected that any harm could come to his Master; for he knew his powers, and that on a former occasion he escaped "through the midst of them" when they had him on the hill intending "to cast him down headlong." But in this effort to indulge the love of money, the Shepherd was smitten and the sheep were scattered.

Just before this happened, the Master had said to his disciples, "He that hath no sword, let him sell his garments and buy one." This probably encouraged Peter to strike the enemy with the sword, and wound a man. But how his spirit must have sunk in him, when the Master, whom he was defending, told him to put up his sword, and miraculously healing the wounded man, declared that he could have more than twelve legions of angels to defend him. And what a defence would this have been? for one angel was known to have smitten eighty-five thousand Assyrians. Is it possible that the man who had such a force at command, and who had shown his authority over storms and fiends, would suffer a few timid men to take and lead him before unjust rulers, who would be sure to condemn him to death?

The disciples had not comprehended the Master's words when he said, "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill;" and, "My kingdom is not of this world;" nor when he spoke of his death and resurrection. And seeing that his Master would not defend himself, nor allow others to do it, Peter, to avoid getting into trouble by being identified with him, now commenced to deny his Lord. But he still lingered near; for there seemed to be an unconscious tie that held him.

Earnestly yearning for his faltering disciples, the Lord turned his pitying eyes upon Peter, unmindful of his own terrible fate which he knew awaited him. Seeing this, Peter became conscious of his error, and "wept bitterly." Was there ever such a thing heard, that a man, as he was, led away to be crucified, for having showed from his Father, "many good works," should only be concerned for his friends? "Weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children," he said to those who followed after and bewailed him. Did Peter now fully comprehend his Master's mission?

The Lord was crucified and buried, and the next Peter was outrun by the other disciples in going to the sepulcher to see whether it is true what the women declared, that the Master is risen. The body was not there; and Peter probably commenced to reason with himself, whether indeed the Master had not laid down his power in order to gain greater, for had he not said, "I lay down my life, that I might take it again?" When he saw the risen Savior, his love for him was no doubt stronger than ever. "Peter lovest thou me?" was asked by the Lord on a later occasion. Why was this? Did not Peter try to defend him? Did he not try to outrun the rest to meet Jesus after the resurrection? Being grieved at the repetition of this question, Peter declared, "Lord thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee." But the Lord's only reply was, "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep."

The Master had spoken many parables to his disciples; and in one of these, concerning the heavenly kingdom, he said that the King told those servants who were not aware that they ever ministered to his wants, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Not only on the cross, but all the time he was in the world, the Lord gave his life for his friends. He never did anything for his own gratification; and the only way he could be acceptably loved, was by loving as he did.

Peter now, probably for the first time, understood what was meant by the words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive;" and that to honor him who, out of love died for others, like love must be shown; for what else could the Lord have meant by telling him to feed the lambs and sheep? With his wanted zeal, he therefore went about doing what he believed the Lord thus required of him.

But he had not yet comprehended the vastness and universality of the Master's love. He still supposed salvation was limited to the descendants of Jacob, who had the literal Word of God; although he had heard it said of his Master, that he was "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." He was to feed the Master's lambs and sheep; but he was not yet aware that they were not all of the fold of Israel.

In a vision Peter saw in a large vessel, let down from heaven, "all manner of fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air," accompanied by a voice which said, "Rise Peter, kill and eat." Should a Jew, as Peter was, be asked by a heavenly voice, to eat anything that the law had not promised clean? And in this vessel there must have been no clean beasts and fowls, for he exclaimed, "Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten anything common or unclean." But the answer comes from heaven, "What God hath cleansed, call not thou common." Was everything in that vessel therefore clean, even the creeping things? Peter would hardly have comprehended the full force of that vision, had not just then, three men called unto him to come to the Gentile, Cornelius, who also had seen a vision, and was told to send for him. When he came to Cornelius and saw the divine blessing come upon him and his friends, who were all Gentiles, he comprehended the character of his Master's love, and exclaimed, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation, he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him."

As Peter learned to know the true character of the Lord's love, so evidently do others in following him "in the regeneration." And how gently are led out of their selfish love wherein they are ever ready to defend their religion, or the Lord as they looked upon him; if they only bear in mind that the teachings of God's Word, as well as the Lord's earth life, are all summed up in love to God the good and true, and to our fellow-beings.

EXPERIENCE AS A TEACHER.

BY W. J. H. HAYMAN.

THAT experience is the best and most thorough teacher in the various avocations of life, is an established and generally admitted fact. Those who have been educated in the school of experience are regarded as safe and reliable. As one pretty well schooled, I feel, by way of encouragement and advice, to say a few words to others.

In the reflection of my own experience I feel nervous and my hand trembles while I write. I have trodden the giddy paths of youth—I have seen and felt that, youtful hopes are seldom realized; I have seen the vigorous frames of young men drop suddenly in death; I have observed the blooming cheeks of the robust young maiden suddenly eclipsed in the pale palor of death; I have heard and felt the groanings of disappointments, I know by actual experience that "Man is of few days and full of trouble." I have learned that earth's greatest enjoyments are delusive; its best friendships limited; its ordinary sympathy treacherous. I have walked through the (to the flesh) luxuriant valley of sin; and, with Solomon, can say, "all is vanity and vexation of spirit." I have learned that the enjoyments found in the path of sin, are not substantial, hence say to you, could your hopes of true pleasure, true character and true success on that foundation of which Christ is the chief corner-stone. There, amidst the fadings of earth's pleasures, the visitation of its disappointments, the treachery and coldness of its friendship, you will have an anchor on which to lean. When adversity comes, when friends fail, when health decays and the sorrows of death summoned you, you can say, "it is well."

Aged sinner, a few words to you. Think back, is not all I have said in regard to sin true? Does it not accord with your own personal experience? Think back, view yourself in the mirror of the past; think of the many blighted hopes in your own experience; think of the many sad disappointments you have met; think of the fleetness of time, and tell me does not that thorough teacher, experience, tell you it is high time to change, and make the glorious promises of heaven your safe prop while on the verge of the tomb? You know that what I have stated in this short and imperfect article, is hardly a drop in the bucket. For your soul's sake, profit by your past experience.

Young Christian, a few remarks to you. I can sympathize with you. Disdain an acceptance of the delusive and fascinating (to the flesh), pleasures of the world which the devil offers you, for he will not keep his word, and if you listen to him, your greatest good will be destroyed. Profit by the experimental advice, the aged veteran of Christ gives you. Make the Cross your standard and your hopes of moral, social and spiritual purity will be realized. The thorns of earth will be in full bloom for you with the roses of heaven.

To the tried Christian, I would say I know how to sympathize with you. I have experienced your sorrows and feelings of disappointment; I have been surrounded by the sorrow of death; I have trodden the gloomy road of adversity; I have felt the pangs caused by treacherous friendship; my eyes have been dazled by the fiery arrows of the enemy when flying all around me in the darkness of spiritual midnight. I have felt the consciousness of my own weakness and tendency to evil. But amidst all this, I can say, that I experienced the help and consolation of heaven. When surrounded by death's sorrows, and loved ones were falling as it were, to the right and to the left, and my ears were greeted with the doleful sound of the tomb, my heart's burden and sorrow were lightened by the cheering promise of the Master. When almost discouraged by adverse circumstances in life, I have felt, through the medium of God's promises, the rest prepared for the people of God. When pushed by the hand of treacherous friendship, I have felt and experienced that in Christ I had a true Friend, and have found warm, sympathizing hearts among the passers by. In short, I can testify, from actual experience, that the Lord will indeed be with us in six troubles, and not forsake us in the seventh. God forbid that we should glory in anything, save in the Cross of Christ.

Tried soldier of the Cross, be firm amidst the shouts of the inhabitants of bliss. You will soon be crowned with victory through him who loved us, and gave himself for us.

May God help all to a saving knowledge of the truth. What we have felt and seen, with confidence, we tell.

HEAVENLY ASPIRATIONS.

BY JAMES WIRT.

"Covet earnestly the best gifts." 1 Cor 12: 31.

THIS is a command given by the inspired apostle to believers in Christ, those of his day who were called to be saints.

The devoted follower of Jesus, by rightly applying himself to the study of God's revealed truth, contained in the Bible, may come to ascertain the prescribed means for acquiring those divine gifts, promised to those who do not become "weary in well-doing," but are continually anxious to secure to themselves "glory, honor and immortality." There are many inducements for the child of God to assiduously strive, though in a lawful way, to attain to a high degree of moral excellence, knowing there is none attainable without great labor; he will meditate upon and be guarded by the counsels of Jehovah.

Our advancement in the divine life, depends upon our exertions and a dutiful compliance to all the precepts and examples of our divine Pattern, and by doing so, enaples us to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus."

The human mind is susceptible of infinite degrees of advancement in the line of moral progression, and spiritual development, and there is no point of attainment at which the soul is satisfied, but is intently reaching forward to higher and nobler acquisitions.

The mode of assimilations in the spiritual world, are analogous to the growth in the natural world. At first is only the embryo in the new birth, but finally arives to the full statue of the man, Christ Jesus. In the work of regeneration, Christ is received within us, the hope of glory, for if we have not the Spirit of our blessed Savior, we cannot claim any inheritance in those "many mansions prepared" for us, in our Father's kingdom. Saints are studying in order to show themselves approved, and that their profiting may appear to all. God has many good gifts to bestow upon his children yet; he always withholds them till they can appreciate such heavenly blessings. They are not apt to covet anything while entirely ignorant of its worth, hence we see the utility of spiritual enlightenment that we may "covet the best gifts," which the Creator is willing to dispense to every son and daughter of Adam's race. When the renewed mind is fully conscious of its high and immortal destiny, it will desire to bring all within its reach, also to enjoy the rich provisions flowing to those who have tasted of the good word of God.

The Christian looks forward for a better state of things, when his warfare on earth terminates; yes, the true believer is assured of an eternal association with Christ and the redeemed ones of earth, and the high orders of angelic hosts, there to join with them in ascribing all praise and adoration to him, who is the only Potentate and Sovereign of the universe." "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, King of saints."

A RICH FOOL.

SOME of you have perhaps heard of that rich man, who, when a friend called on him for something for the Christian commission, drew his check at once for $10,000. He took the gentleman to the cupola yonder. The old man said, "That land is mine as far as you can see." He told him to look at the pasture for thirty miles around and see all those cattle. "Those are all mine," he said. He took him to another point and showed him houses and gardens and stacks stretching away, and said, "These are all mine." He then pointed to the town near by' where were large buildings. "These are all mine." The whole of this is mine.

I came to the West a poor boy, and have earned all this myself." When he got through, the gentleman said, "Well what have you got up yonder?" The old man's countenance fell, and he asked, "what do you mean?" "What have you got in heaven?" "I haven't got anything there," the old man said. "Is it possible a man of your ability, discredence and prudence would enter eternity a pauper?" the friend said. But a few months from that time the man died as he lived. The world may say he was rich, but the Word of God says he was a fool.—a Moody.—Sel.

To neglect, at any time, preparation for death, is to sleep at our post at a seige; to omit it in old age, is to sleep at an attack.

True ministers, in the delivery of their sermons, fear none but God, and dare say anything that God commands.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE,
M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive one copy free of charge, and for each additional name sent and above the nine names the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 50 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 23, 1879

THE address of Moses Brubaker is changed from Virden, Macoupin Co., Ill., to Girard, same county and State.

SOME mistakes occurred in our hastily prepared index last week. This notice will be a sufficient apology.

THE Brethren at Waddam's Grove held meetings every night for three weeks. They closed week before last.

BROTHER Enoch Ely was holding meetings in the Yellow Creek congregation last week, at the Studebaker meeting-house.

THE Brethren at Hickory Grove held meeting all last week. We were with them several nights. The interest was excellent, and congregations good.

THE cold weather is said to have produced an ice bridge over the Niagara River. It spans the river just below the Falls, and is nearly a mile in length.

BROTHER S. Correll says: "I notice a few mistakes in Obituary notices in Vol. I, No. 2. The name Correl should be Correll, and Wayne Co., Ind., should be Wayne Co., Ohio.

BROTHER Daniel Miller left last week for the Wisconsin mission field, with the intention of spending several weeks preaching. Brother David E. Ely accompanied him.

THE Brethren at Dutchtown held night meetings all last week. We were with them part of the time. Congregations fair and interest good.

BROTHER H. W. Strickler writes that brother Daniel Vaniman is having very interesting meetings at Lorraine, Adams Co., Ill. Congregations large and the best of interest. One made the good confession, and others almost persuaded.

WE beg pardon for a number of typographical errors which occurred in last issue. Much office work prevented us from reading the proof as carefully as we would like to have done. It takes an immense amount of work and close watching to avoid errors.

BROTHER Martin Meyers has been holding some meetings at Erie, about 30 miles northeast of Rock Island. A good interest was manifested. He expects to return this week and spend considerable time working up the interest there.

ONE of our subscribers writes thus: "I am requested by the Baptists in our neighborhood, to write you for tracts and pamphlets, and especially Bro. J. W. Stein's 'Why I Left the Baptist Church.' Send me some and I will distribute them, believing they will do good."

THE Christian Standard says: "Information received in Washington is to the effect that a plan has actually been completed by leading Jews for the purchase of Palestine. The details are not given, but it is confidently asserted that the long cherished scheme of Jewish patriots is about to be accomplished."

WHEN strangers or outsiders come to meeting, make a special effort to give them front seats, where they can hear the Word preached. We want to see them converted, and the closer they are to the preacher the more effectually that can be done. Take special pains to accommodate and make them feel that they are welcomed. In this way their regular attendance at meetings may be secured, and thereby their conversion effected.

OUR readers will please excuse us if the Item department of the paper this week is not so interesting as usual, as each of us was holding meetings at different points, from ten to twelve miles away from the office, while the paper was put in type, and therefore could not be at the office more than half of the time.

BROTHER Lemuel Hillery, when last heard from, was preaching in Ogden, Champaign Co., Ill. Brother John Y. Snavely was assisting him. They thought of spending some time in that county, and likely hold meetings at several points. Hope success will crown their efforts, as that church needs help in the ministry. May God bless and help them.

THE Bible Revision Committee is progressing finely with their work. The English revisers have completed the New Testament, and sent the result of their labors to the American revisers. In a few days we shall likely have a published edition of the Revised New Testament. It is thought by some that it will gradually supercede the common revision so long in use.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson, writing from South Bend, Ind., says: "Please say through your paper that I will close my evangelistic labors in a few days on account of business arrangements that require my immediate attention at home. Hope this will be satisfactory to those churches desiring my services. I will give due notice when I enter the field again. Baptism yesterday. Congregations large and good interest."

"GOOD NEWS" is the heading of an excellent piece of poetry, written by Bro. George D. Zollars, of Hickory Grove, Ill., and published on second page of this issue. The ministers who have preached at that place can see how their labors are appreciated by the kind-hearted members who reside there. Brother George is what we call a "born poet." He is a poet because nature made him such.

"HOW IT IS DONE" is the title of an interesting volume received from the Fidelity Publishing Company, Chicago, Ill. The book proposes to tell how the public is swindled by lightning rod peddlers, county map agents, and sharpers generally. The book is well worth reading, and is calculated to put farmers on their guard against swindlers, traveling agents, &c. Price $1.00. Address Fidelity Publishing Co., 132 Dearborn St., Chicago.

DO not fail to read Bro. B. H. Miller's article, published on the first page of this issue. It treats a subject that has been too much neglected among the Brethren. The children and youth of our people have not received the proper attention religiously—their religious education has been greatly neglected, thus leaving many of them to grow up without a proper knowledge of the teachings of the Bible. Since it is with the youth and rising generation that the government of the church must one day be left, it is highly necessary that they be well trained for the work.

RELIGIOUS people are sometimes too careless about apparently small things, which, if properly attended to, would add much to the interest of others. If a strange brother or sister comes to meeting it is frequently the case that we do not pay sufficient attention to them; we salute those we know, but make no special effort to become acquainted with strangers. This is not right. If a strange brother or sister comes into the congregation do your utmost to make them feel at home; make a special effort to become acquainted with them, and introduce them to all the others; do not feel backward about it, but walk right up to them, learn their name, bid them God speed, make them feel happy, and thus help the cause along.

AN old brother visited a place some weeks ago, for the purpose of holding a series of meetings. The people told him that they feared the young people would greatly disturb his meeting, as they were in the habit of talking and making a noise in time of preaching. The old preacher told them he would attend to that. So when the congregation gathered, he went back among the young people and wanted to know if they could sing? He found out what hymns they could sing, and succeeded in getting them to sing. He let them sing quite awhile. Then after prayer a short time was spent preaching, and then more singing. The next evening the same way, until the people became greatly interested, and not one particle of disturbance during the meeting. This was far better than scolding the people for their misconduct.

SOME one informed us that at a certain meeting an effort was made to raise needed money to carry on legally appointed missionary work, but that the elders and deacons took a stand against it, and hence nothing could be done. Just such work as that is what hurts the cause. Elders and deacons, instead of opposing the spreading of the Gospel, ought to be ensamples of the flock and do all in their power to help the good cause along. Whoever heard of the elders and deacons, in the apostolic times, opposing missionary work? Their mission was to "preach the Gospel to every creature," and do all in their power to spread the truth. Men who oppose the spreading of the Gospel oppose the very work the apostles lost their lives in trying to do. "Woe unto me, if I preach not the Gospel" should be a warning to every Christian.

A HINT TO PREACHERS.

A FASHIONABLE young lady was heard to remark: "I do not feel right when I go to our church. When I see our minister dressed in the hight of fashion I do not feel good. It is an example to us who are younger. And there is his wife, dressed in the finest style; it is a temptation for us to dress fine, too. O, I do wish the minister and his wife would dress plainer. It would be such a great help to us."

We would to God that all fashionably attired ministers could realize what they are doing toward degrading Christianity. They are leading the church still farther down into ruin until finally it will become no better than the world. Woe be unto them in the final judgment, when the damnation of thousands will be traced to the unfaithfulness of ministers, who, instead of being the leaders of fashion, should be ensamples to the flock. A corrupted ministry will end in a corrupted church, and both go to ruin together.

Then their wives should be models in the church. If there is any woman in the world who ought to dress plainly it is the preacher's wife. They have more influence in that way than they are generally aware of. As a general thing, a fashionable preacher's wife is dressed the finest of any person in the congregation. Instead of being an ensample to younger women leading them into the way of simplicity and righteousness, they become the leaders of fashion, and thus bring the church on a level with the world.

Even among our own people there are some whose hearts are yearning for fashions. They long for the day when our church government will not be so strict, and they can be permitted to adorn themselves as they please. Such persons know not the consequences of that they wish; they know not the ruin they would bring on the church of God if they could but have their own way. If these persons could see some of the exchanges received at this office, and read how many pious hearts are bleeding over the corruption creeping into the popular churches, they would get down on their knees, and pray God to keep the Brethren's church free from this sin. Even John Wesley, in his day, lamented over the condition of his people when he saw how they were bringing their fashions and styles into the church. I pray God that our church may be kept free from this sin, and may God grant that all our ministers and their wives may be good ensamples to the flock.

LOST ARTS.

MR. Philips, in his lecture on "Lost Arts," takes some of the conceit out of the American people. While reading his lecture I almost concluded that, surely "there is nothing new under the sun." It is generally supposed that the ancients knew nothing of glass, but Mr. Philips cites numerous instances to show that even in the time of the Savior glass was manufactured, and that in many respects it was superior to that of the present day. It was malleable, and could be bent and twisted around like leather. Take the Egyptian painted glass, and you can saw it into layers, and every layer has upon it the original picture perfect. The color was in some way struck straight through the glass.

He also shows that the ancients used spy-glasses of a very superior character. The painting done by the Egyptians three thousand years ago, is as bright to-day as when finished. He mentioned what is known as the "Damascus sword," made of steel, that can be bent like lead, yet as sharp as a razor. This is more than the best of Americans can produce.

"Did the ancients have railways? Herodotus says that rails were laid from the quarries to Thebes, 150 miles, and they carried these blocks of stone on them by machinery. That must mean locomotives. It is claimed that the ancients had steamboats — we know they had steam."

Lepsius was sent to Carthage to examine the ruins. He says: "I have seen carved on the ruins of Carthage every known spinning machine in Europe." This carving was done a thousand years before the Europeans invented the spinning machine. They did not know that they were used by the ancients a thousand years before that time. Thus it is shown that we, with all our improvements, are not so far ahead of the ancients after all.

TRINE IMMERSION.

BY S. HOOVER.

DR. J. P. Durbin, while traveling through Syria, visited many places of interest, among which was Philadelphia, where St. Paul founded a church, being one of the seven of Asia. This, the doctor says, is still in existence, and the only one founded by the great Apostle. By reading the first chapter of the Revelations the reader will find all but this one had in a measure retrograded from their first principles, and the different woes pronounced against them if they would not repent from their sins, which they did not, and consequently suffered the penalties of their folly.

To the church of Philadelphia it was said: "I know thy works; behold I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it, for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name. Behold I will make them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie, behold I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I loved thee. Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth," Rev. 3: 8–10.

Dr. D. says that, through all the great persecution of the churches, the wars in the East and the inculcation of false doctrines, the promise has been verified to the letter, and to day 3,000 Christian Greeks are permitted to worship there. The Greeks practice trine immersion, showing conclusively that this was the ancient mode of initiating believers into the Church of Christ.—Brethren's Advocate.

GOD BLESSING OUR WORK.

A FAITHFUL worker in the Master's cause writes thus:

"God did not bless our labors through our last short series of meetings with any additions. What the reasons are, God only knows. I believe it was not in the fault of the church, neither do I believe it was in the fault of the preaching; for I believe it was with power."

We sometimes fear that saints often look in the wrong direction for blessings. It is common to suppose that a meeting is not blessed unless there are additions to the church. Then again, many suppose that a minister who cannot bring his scores into the church, is not an able preacher—is not the man to build up and instruct the church.

Of course it is encouraging and desirable to see sinners come flocking home to God, and every lover of the kingdom will pray for the success of the cause in this respect, but do not let us conclude that God does not bless a meeting just because there are no additions. I believe there are many good and profitable meetings even where no one unites with the church. The church needs instruction and encouragement, and that is one object of preaching. To determine the success of a meeting by the number of additions to the church is not always the best method. It would be more advisable for all parties to do their duty in full and leave the result with the Lord. Plant the good seed, let others water and God will give the increase. Do not lament over the want of success because you cannot see the immediate success of your labors. Preach the Word in its simplicity: God's Word will not return to him void. The coming judgment will reveal the effect.

THE Brethren at Lanark expect to commence a series of meetings Thursday evening, Jan. 23. Hope the ministering brethren will call in and help us.

ABOUT THE HOLY LAND.

Compiled.

PALESTINE, or the Holy Land, as it is most frequently called, is a country of western Asia and borders on the Mediterranean Sea, which forms the western boundary. It is in about the same latitude as Georgia, and possesses an excellent climate. It is about 200 miles in length, and has an average breadth of 60 miles; area 12,000 square miles, and population of 300,000.

The name Palestine is derived from Philistia, the former name of a narrow strip of country lying along the Mediterranean Sea, and in the southern part of the Holy Land. It is truly a "land of hills and valleys" and remarkably separated from other countries by mountains and deserts. Its only seaport is Jaffa, about 30 miles from Jerusalem. From the coast on the west the land rises rapidly till it reaches a considerable hight, and then recedes to the east till the river Jordan and Dead Sea are reached.

In making an exploration of the Holy Land, there is nothing that so interests the Christian traveler as to observe the abounding light that country of the Bible sheds upon the Bible itself. Viewed from this stand-point, Palestine is a great "Chamber of Imagery," in which every object may be used to interpret Scripture. Every tree that grows there, every flower that covers hillside or plain, every bird that attunes the morning echoes, every star that glitters from heaven to suggest the glory beyond, every fountain whose water revives the thirsty traveler—everything has a voice to explain this volume, and open hidden allusions, making "dark things light," and crooked things straight.

"Verily," cries aloud the enthusiastic traveler when he first realizes this great fact, "Verily the God of the Land is the God of the Book. He has preserved the Land that our faith may be thoroughly confirmed in the Book."

The Birds

of the Holy Land are tuneful witnesses to the many statements of the biblical narrative. Still the stork "knoweth the appointed time of her coming; the eagle mounteth up in the clear, blue sky; the sparrow chatters upon the house-top, and is sold, 'five for a farthing;' the young ravens cry aloud to God for their food; the fowls of the air that 'sow not, neither reap, nor gather into barns,' are fed by our heavenly Father." Other references, under this head, might be greatly multiplied.

The Clothing

of the people in the Holy Land is still of the same fashions worn in distant times. Customs of dress, so whimsical and eccentric in our country, are as settled in the Orient as the eternal hills—they never change. And so the girdle of Judah, the sandals of the Gibeonites, the mantle of Elijah, the turban of Daniel, the cloak of Paul, and the seamless robe of Jesus, may all be met with any day in the streets of Jerusalem—witnesses to the marvelous accuracy of the Word.

The Climate

of the Holy Land sufficiently confirms the statements of the Holy Page. When "the south wind blows," there is heat. (Luke 12: 55). When a cloud arises in the west, there is rain. (Luke 12: 54). The Oriental year is still divided into seasons by the fall of the early and late rains; and any marked deficiency in the rainfalls of the season is still followed by terrible drouths, accompanied by famine, disease and death.

The Diseases

are of the same types as those that existed in the scriptural days, and so bear witness to scriptural truth. Around the Sea of Galilee fever abounds, such as prostrated the little daughter of Jairus, and the mother-in-law of Peter. At Bethany sudden and fatal diseases are experienced like that which overcame Lazarus, whom Jesus loved. Sun-strokes are common upon the plains, as when the son of the Shunamite woman fell under its influence. Leprosy, in its utmost loathsomeness, is as prevalent as when Moses made it a type of mortal sin, and Jesus Christ of his power to heal. Blindness is fearfully frequent. In the town of Lydda, at least one-third of the inhabitants are blind. And the blind still sit by the wayside begging, clamoring for aid in those pitiable notes that moved the pitying heart of the Lord.

Domestic Life.

The domestic life of the inhabitants of Palestine, as it was so vividly depicted by the Bible writers, has remained substantially unchanged for forty centuries, and so bears its part of Bible testimony. In the sultry hour of noon the people still sit under "their own vine and fig tree," and sleep at night in booths upon the house-tops. The bread they eat is still that daily bread for which Jesus taught us to pray—thin, small loaves, five making a meal, baked once a day, and always eaten fresh. New wine is still kept in new bottles, and so "both are preserved." People recline at the table while eating, as they did at the Last Supper of Jesus. The sound of the grinding is still heard through the quiet night, the millstones small, and always turned by women, as in the olden time. The salt used is still of that sort that lazily loses its savor and cannot be salted again. The virgins at the weddings still go forth by night with lighted lamps to meet the bridegroom. And the dead at funerals are still carried without a coffin, upon an open bier, amid the death-songs of the minstrels and the lamentations of the mourning women.

Farming.

The farmers of the Holy Land still use the tools of labor and practice the systems of husbandry to which so many references are made upon the Sacred Page. Traveling there, we see Cain a "tiller of the earth," and Elisha "plowing with a yoke of oxen." Whenever the ravages of war are intermitted for a season, the ground yields with its ancient abundance. Then "the mountains drop down sweet wine," as in the poetical figure of Joel, and "the hills flow with milk." The olive tree still "sucks its oil from the flinty rock," and the honey-bee stores up her luscious treasures in the hollow rock.

Then the glowing words of Josephus are literally verified. Then the descriptions of Moses become again true, wherein he describes old Canaan as a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees, and pomegranates; a land of oil, olive and honey; a land in which the inhabitants eat bread without scarceness; there is no lack of anything in it.

"The sower going forth to sow," still scatters a portion of his seed among the thorns and a portion upon the rocks and a portion by the wayside, where the fowls of the air come and devour it up. And still that which falls upon good ground "brings forth some thirty, some sixty, some an hundred fold."

The Geography

of the Holy Land is a solemn witness that He who created the country inspired the Book. The traveler cannot fail to experience the sensation that he is standing upon "the old ways," the ways of God. All the sacred places are there, there just where they should be, to answer the requirements of the holy narrative. There is Bethlehem; you can almost fancy you see the eastern star pointing to it, the birth place of Jesus. And there Bethany, Bethel, Jericho, Jerusalem, Joppa, Shiloh, Shechem, Samaria, Nain, Nazareth, Tiberias, Capernaum, Dan, Damascus, Gibal, Sidon, Sarepta, Tyre, Acre, Cesarea, Gaza, Beersheba, and Hebron. Looking more closely we find Gethsemane, where Jesus was betrayed, and Aceldama, bought with the price of that treason; Siloam and Gihon. All the memorable localities may be found, affecting our minds like well-remembered features upon the countenances of the well-beloved.

Fountains.

The fountains are there that used to slake the thirst of the prophets, priests and kings; that of Elisha, near Jericho, and of David, near Hebron; and of Joab, at Gibeon; the wells at Bethlehem and Shechem, and many others from which the traveler rejoices to drink and be refreshed.

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER IV.

The Faithful Minister—Afflictions and Distresses Will Come—A Touching Letter—Through the Pearly Gates—"I will have Nothing Left"—God tries Man's Heart.

A MINISTER of the Lord Jesus is one who faithfully carries God's message to the people. Among the Gentiles "they that are great exercise authority." "But it shall not be so among you," says Jesus, "but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister." Is that all? No; but "whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Matt. 20: 25, 26, 27. On another occasion the Lord said, "But let the greatest of you become your servant." Matt. 23: 11. From these passages we learn where those who desire to be great and to be chief, shall be placed. They must become servants, and servant implies master, and master presupposes authority to say "Go," and "Come." This the church maintains as being her right from Romans 10: 15. She insists upon the privilege of saying "Go," and "Come," so that the minister who refuses to go and come when called, is regarded as not performing his duty. Paul says to his son Timothy, "Be a good minister of Christ." 1 Tim. 4: 6. This every minister desires to be. There is no condemnation to him who labors to be a good minister of Christ. And more; the man who preaches the Word, in season and out of season, bears about in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus, is a good minister. But alas! good ministers must early learn to endure afflictions, necessities, distresses, buffetings, good fame and bad fame. They must learn to be chastised, though not killed; poor, yet making many rich; having nothing, yet possessing all things—Testimony—2 Cor. 6: 1–12.

These severe trials and afflictions, all good ministers willingly endure, looking to the great Master for the crown. The ministry is likened unto a man who had servants. He commanded them to go out into the field and sow good seed, which they willingly did, being obedient servants; asking no wages, save their daily bread. They sowed the seed, and returned to their master, who bade them get into the wilderness until he would call them to return. While they were seeking their living amid hardships, the master gathered the grain; sold it to merchantmen, and increased his lands. Then he called his servants and commanded them to sow again, sending them off as at first. I tell you the cries of them which sowed "are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth."

I have before me a letter from which I shall glean a little, in order to show what comes to pass quite frequently: "I have got into very straitened circumstances, having spent considerable time in preaching, thus neglecting some things at home. Of course there were losses here and there, and having interest to pay, and some debts of others, my home must now be sold, and I know not where to go. I do not want to abandon the cause, but I do feel that the ministers have to endure much hardness." Here was a devoted minister, one who loved the cause which he was called to defend. His calls were numerous. The funerals had to be attended to; home work in the church, and many other duties devolving upon a minister, called him from his secular labors. No one pitied him and his crops while he went about his Father's business. None there were who loved him as they loved themselves. Poor ministers! What if they are burdened, cast down, homeless, wanderers from place to place, seeking every spare moment to collect from this broad earth the comforts and necessaries of life? What if they long, and long to teach others the way of life, when called to feed the starving soul with the Bread of Life? Yes, what! Shall they not be gladly welcomed "over there" when worn out with labors and sorrows, they meet Jesus face to face? Here they will forever appear in glory, but where is the man who refused to bear some of the burden? Let him take his risks; I seek them not. To burden the ministry for fear that a little help might "spoil" it, is not the old order—not God's great and good arrangement. Equality runs through God's plan of salvation from Alpha to Omega, and woe to him who tramples under foot that equality.

I believe the great body of the church wants its ministers cared for—desires that they be made comfortable. It is only in certain localities where it is supposed to be God's service to afflict and neglect a minister. It is the laity's business to look after the distressed ministers, and the congregation that neglects this duty, has certainly become Laodiceanized—neither cold nor hot, but very lukewarm.

"Well," says one, "there are so many calls for aid. If I give to all, I will have nothing left." You put it too strong. The calls do not ask for all you have. They seek only a little of what belongs to the Lord; and how do you know that the calls for you to let go a little, is not God's method of trying you? Perhaps your heart has become so completely wrapt up in worldly possessions, that calls have become necessary to strip off the mantle of covetousness, and check the spirit of greed. You know that it is your duty to "give to him that asketh thee" for a good purpose, and if you obey not this command, how think you to enter the pearly gates of the eternal city? God wisely said, "Give to him that asketh thee," for it is by giving that the heart is kept from falling into idolatry—covetousness.

I rejoice that God requires to give, and the manner he wants us to give. Giving shows just what kind of hearts we have. God has many ways of trying us, and assuredly we need to be tried. Then help your ministers. When he is called away, go and look after his work. See that his corn is attended to, his wheat gathered, and the family made comfortable. God bless the poor, hard-working minister and his family!

"GETTING RELIGION"—yes, we get it; not in bulk, however, but by degrees. The Christian life is not merely a term of years, but a process of grace.

"It is a very good rule in all things in life,
When judging a friend or a brother,
Not to look at the question alone on one side,
But always to turn to the other."

The Brethren at Work.

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN,

THE BRETHREN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsought grace of God is the only source of pardon, and that the vicarious sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption.

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of salvation, and hence for the remission of sins.

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times forward is Christian Baptism.

That Feet-Washing, as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and forbidden by the principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a Non-Conformity to the world in dress, customs, daily walk and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 11, 4, 5.

It also advocates the scriptural duty of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL, PLYMOUTH.

What is the meaning of the last two words of 1 Cor. 16: 22? "Anathema Maran atha," and what language is it? W. H. MILLER.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DURNBAUGH.

We read in Gen. 1:26: "Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness." Did God make man in the form of himself, or was the image spiritual? A. HOLLENBERG.

Please give an explanation on 1 Cor. 5: 5. "To deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." M. W. KELL.

Please explain John 1: 13. "Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual? J. Y. SNAVELY.

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 12, 13? 1. Who is the builder? 2. What the material? 3. How could a man's work be tried by fire? 4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire? B. B. WHITMER.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22:2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5: 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc. S. A. FLECKENSTEIN.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE RITCHEY.

Some one will please explain Mark 16: 17, 18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Who is referred to?

HAPPINESS.

BY LIZZIE B. MYERS.

I PRESUME there is no one in all the world who is not in pursuit of happiness; but the manner in which many are seeking it is really wonderful. The miser, while he clutches the pennies and hoards his thousands, (even though perhaps not quite honestly gained), turning the poor from his door, suffering, thinks he enjoys this. "Your gold and silver is cankered," &c. James 5: 3. The inebriate enjoys his glass while he is clothed in rags, his family starving and destitution all around, yet he will spend the last penny for that which is destroying his soul and body. The chewer and smoker takes great comfort with his quid and pipe, defiling the pure air God has given us to breathe, with the fumes of tobacco, to the disgust of many, and how it can be pleasing in the sight of God, I cannot conceive. "Whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely," &c. Philippians 4: 8. The fashionable world think they have more enjoyment than any other class perhaps, are under no restrictions whatever, but what is it and how long does it last? The end of all their enjoyments is remorse of conscience.

This reminds me of a conversation with a friend who had been visiting relatives in the city who have all things about as they wish it to move in high circles; but as the conversation advanced, she concluded there was not so much solid comfort in it as many suppose—there is too much formality. I remarked, it is about all form and little reality. The mode of living at the creation, (though there was a perfect system), was so simple that I do not believe any one can truly enjoy the life fashion dictates. It is not natural, but contrary to God's Word. But there is true happiness even in this life, if it is only sought in the right direction. The child of God who humbly walks in the path our Master marked for us, is washed in the blood of the Lamb, carries out the principles of the Gospel in every deed, has enjoyments of so much a higher order, (that the carnal mind knows nothing of) even in this life and a hope that is steadfast in the world to come. What beauties the regenerated heart sees in the plan of salvation as found in the Book of all books, and what pleasure in the freedom from condemnation, such are truly happy.

NEVER MIND.

BY MARY C. DALE.

What's the use of always fretting
At the trials we shall find,
That are strewn along our pathway?
Travel on and never mind.

Travel onward, working, hoping,
Cast no lingering glance behind,
At the trials once encountered;
Look ahead and never mind.

What is past, is past forever,
Let the future be resigned,
It will help you help the brother
Do your best and never mind.

And if those who should befriend you,
Whom the ties of nature bind,
Should refuse to do their duty,
Look to heaven and never mind.

Unfriendly words are often spoken
When the feelings are unkind;
Take them not as they are uttered,
Pass them by and never mind.

Fate may threaten, clouds may lower,
Foes and traitors be enthroned;
If you trust in God for aye, dear,
He will help you, never mind.

GOSPEL OIL, AND CHURCH MACHINERY.

BY D. O. BRUBAKER.

THE above caption was suggested recently, while attending a council meeting. Hearing some very unpleasant words and sharp retorts made use of, it seemed quite evident, that a few drops of the good old-fashioned Gospel oil (love) properly applied to the bearings, especially to the main journals, (officials) would have made a decided improvement in the running of the church machinery. I once had the care of an engine, to which was attached quite an amount of machinery, and ever so much care was needed to keep every journal and bearing well oiled, in order that the labor of the engine was not needlessly increased, and that permanent injury to the machinery was not incurred. Hence my instructions were, "Better use too much oil than not enough," as oil is always cheaper than repairs.

While visiting recently the engine rooms of the city water-works of DesMoines, where is the finest and most ponderous machinery I have ever seen, I noticed quite an improvement over the old way of oiling. There is provided for each important journal a small glass vessel into which enough oil may be put at once to last two days; the glass allows one to see when the oil is about exhausted. Now, dear brethren and sisters, let us make the application to ourselves. Has not the great Master Machinist in the construction of His delicate machinery, (church government) provided each part a vessel for oil? "The wise took oil in their vessels," &c. Matt. 15: 14. "But," says one, "this oil was for lamps." Very well; I think the same kind may be used freely upon our church machinery, and if we do not wish to see the bad effects of permanent injury, and be placed under the painful necessity of making repairs every little while we must constantly keep oil in our vessels, and if we are as watchful as we ought to be we can soon discover when they need replenishing. Thank God, the oil costs but a trifle, in comparison to the great permanent injury that is sure to result from a neglect to keep well oiled. Unkind words, O, how they pierce the soul! I might add that this Gospel lubricator aids wonderfully in running family machinery; really no family can get along smoothly without it.

HEAVENLY REFLECTIONS.

BY ISABELLA F. KELSO.

HEAVEN is the home of Jehovah; the paradise of God. What a beautiful, blissful, happy place heaven must be; it is beyond the limit of our finite imagination, as "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered the heart of man what God has prepared for those that love him." Celestial city of holy, pure inhabitants; how angelic, how God-like, how spiritual shall all be who will gain an admittance into that joyous place! Blessed will those be who shall inherit the heaven of heavens; the residence of Jehovah.

A residence is a dwelling-place, as heaven is the permanent residence of Jehovah, while a residency is a dwelling-place for some time, yet not a permanent residence. The Christian's residence is earth, while life lasts, and the Christian's hope is to have a lasting residence, or place of abode with God in heaven. Heaven! how inexpressibly happy shall Christians be, when they shall be welcomed to dwell forevermore in the realms of the blest. We can look over the elysian fields of heavenly blessedness, with a discerning eye, brought to the view by Apocalypse. The golden city with all of its splendor, is brought vividly to the mind; yet, comparatively thinking, we have but a superficial idea of the beauties of heaven. Dear reader, have you ever thought of that beautiful land where God dwells? Where all is bright and glorious? where reigns the purest delight? Joy there is unfading. Sorrow can never enter that blissful abode. Sadness is known no more. Pain shall be extinct. All is peace and harmony. No weariness entereth there; nor ever grow tired walking the golden streets of that beautiful city of our King.

Reader, do you think when you look among the people of God, there is no enjoyment there, that the way is too humiliating? Don't let such thoughts pass the mind; but give your heart to Jesus, and join in with the people of God, seek salvation early, and you will find pleasure which the world can never give. Earth has no charms for me; its enjoyments are soon over, and we feel sadder than before. Its pleasures have no teachings of Jesus nor of the powers of the world to come. How true the language of Holy Writ: "We know not what a day may bring forth." Now the voice of melody and praise ascending high, seemingly outvieing angels; then sinking low in the valley of gloom. Joyful and sorrowful scenes or events are alike forgotten. How vain to remember now childhood's innocent glee; youth's unclouded morning. Let us pass to the real, the infinite, the unchangeable, the imperishable heaven. Turn away from the seen to the unseen; "For the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." As the most valuable treasures lie concealed in the ocean's nethermost caves, and are impenetrable and superior to the seen; so heavenly and eternal things unseen by mortal eye, are superior to earthly and finite things. Behold the heavenly way! See the monumental piles rising in view as so many memorials of those who have gone before! No painful separations—no, the lasting, the abiding, the eternal. O, for a home in that world where all is perfection. Where we may realize our heavenly reflections.

THE BIBLE.

THE Bible is the young man's own book. It denounces vices without feeding a dangerous curiosity. It dignifies virtue, not as a means of getting on, but as success and happiness now; and, best of all, it gives the young man the one exclusive way in which vice is vanquished and virtue attained. It lifts up Christians. It invites to the cross. It offers the new heart and the right spirit. It penetrates the disguises of elegant sin, and exposes the sophistry of cultivated iniquity. It flashes its revealing rays upon the opening abyss to which the tempter leads. It unmasks the voluptuous angel of light and shows the malicious fiend. Into the scale against the "pleasures of sin for a season," it throws the "peace of God," and the "pleasures forevermore."

An old philosopher once said that time was his estate, and he was very careful not to waste his fortune. Some people do not act very philosophically in this matter.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Central Illinois.

Dear Brethren:—

THINKING that you might like to hear something of the Central Mission field, I have returned from a preaching tour in company with brother S. Riddlesbarger, who kindly accompanied me, and will give some of our observations over this field, having been relieved of my visit to the Bureau Co. Brethren, by the Brethren from Rock Creek. We boarded the train at Amboy, Ill. Central R. R. for Lasalle, and there took the Rock Island R. R. to Henry, Marshall Co., where we were met, and conveyed to the neighborhood of brother Darby and Breese, when we preached for a number of days. The attendance was reasonable, considering the cold weather. We then took our course across the river fifteen miles, to visit our sister who had her leg broken; found her in good spirits, mending slowly, not yet able to put her foot to the floor, but went about on crutches. We held a season of worship with them, a wish expressed for fellowship with the brethren, and also for preaching in the town, but owing to appointments being sent forward could not stop to fill any at this point, so proceeded to the neighborhood of Bro. Fike, five miles East of Lacon: here we remained four days. Had good attendance, and increased interest, but now the time has come to go to Florid, Putnam Co. The first meeting was small, owing to short notice, but increased in interest, until the inclemency of the weather checked the attendance.

Last day, by request, preached the funeral of a Methodist woman, in whose house we held our meetings.

In looking over the ground of Central Mission field, we are not without hope; although no immediate effects from this trip, a beginning has been made, and with the proper training, the sheaves may be gathered not many days hence. We find the Brethren full of zeal; and it is the expressed wish for some brother to come and live among them, thinking thereby to have their appointments regular that the love of God be kindled occasionally, would not be so apt to die out, and that the work would be more successful, which is in accordance with the conclusions of District Meeting; and if after this matter has been settled, and some one takes charge, other new field could be worked up in the same way. We think missionary work may be properly done this way; for there is no use in merely preaching a few discourses and then abandoning the field. Our doctrine, or rather Bible doctrine, needs living out just where it is preached. I mean a practical religion.

Children's Meeting.

PERHAPS it would be interesting to you and your many readers to hear of the success of our Children's meeting. Our aged Bro. F. P. Isehr being with us for some time it was his desire to devote one evening to the children, accordingly Tuesday, Jan. 7th, was appointed, and members and friends invited to bring their children. The evening being pleasant, many were present. The children, about fifty in number, from about four to fourteen years, were seated on the front seats, which had been reserved for them, and O, what a sight! only those present can realize. It was indeed lovely to see their eyes sparkle and their countenances beam with satisfaction, eager to hear what "Grandpa" had to say to them. Services opened by singing the 72nd hymn and prayer, then 742nd hymn to the tune and chorus "Precious name," then addressed the children, though speaking was very hard labor on account of hoarseness. They heard many good things, which, if remembered and carried out will be to their advantage in time and eternity. He was followed by brother Enoch Eby, with very appropriate remarks to the children, and the great responsibility of parents was deeply impressed upon them. This made it solemn. Many were made to shed tears; and not only children, but parents and all received instruction, which I hope all will profit by. The brethren said, "What a value is before us." Truly there was, if one soul is worth more than the world. Now when we consider that the saving or loosing of those precious souls depends in a great measure on the parents and the manner of training their little ones, it shows a greater responsibility upon parents than many are aware of, I fear. After the address the 658th hymn was sung. After prayer, the 690th hymn was sung, and the congregation dismissed in a very orderly manner. It is my humble opinion that such meetings held occasionally would be productive of good.

This leaves some money in the hands of the Treasurer, to be refunded as soon as the churches have all paid their quota.

By order of the Committee of Arrangements, the above report was presented to me for my signature, and to be forwarded to the press. It is but due to the Committee of Arrangements and others appointed by them, as well as other Brethren who lived in reach of the A. M., and responded to every call and worked as a band of Brethren, until every arrangement for our Great Annual Meeting was complete, to say that they did nobly, yet nothing more than they felt to be their duty, to make Brethren from a distance in attending the A. M. as comfortable as the nature of the case would permit. And as to the Committee of Arrangements, it was thought by some that they should have been in part selected from other congregations, and not all out of the Manchester; but we think differently, because they very often had to be called together in consultation on very short notice, and those living off in other congregations, could not have been with them.

We all feel satisfied that we had a very good meeting, and we are further satisfied that the meeting gave general satisfaction to the outside world. Some men concluded before hand that it would be a burden, and unnecessary expense, but said afterwards that it was worth thousands of dollars to the community.

Returned to his Vomit.

Brethren in the Lord Jesus Christ:—

A FEW lines from me at this time might be made use of by you, if you are not overcrowded; but if you have a good deal on hand, then you will have no room for anything from me, so there will be no more loss than the time to look over this.

The few years that I am in the ministry I have seen that the fore part of Prov. 26: 11, has come true; "As a dog returneth to his vomit, so a fool returneth to his folly." A year or so ago we had quite an interest up some fifteen miles from here among the Missionary Baptists. The second meeting we held, the elder was there himself, and much pleased. As soon as the meeting was brought to a close we were introduced, and warmly commenced to talk about what we had held up during preaching, which was upon the Trinity, as we have it in the 1st chapter of John. Before we got along very far, I made him promise in presence of his members, that should he become convinced of the truth, that he would come to the church, and he wanted me to do likewise. So we joined hands, and promised that the one that had the truth, and could prove the same by one or two witnesses, should yield. We then began to engage with all the power we had, and before midnight he confessed that his doctrine was not the right kind, and his members saw it plainly, too. They then said, "If you turn, we will go with you." Then the elder had several places where he held meetings, and the next time he told them that he could no longer preach the way he had, that he had been in error, and that all that he had baptized, were not baptized aright, also, that he would have to leave them and go to the Brethren. Quite a number waited for him to act, then they would follow. A few days after, he came to my place, and we had a good time till about 3 o'clock in the morning. But, during that night I found out that he was not as willing as Paul was to count all things loss that he might win Christ. He wanted the assurance from me, in an indirect way, that he could go as soon as he belonged to us, and preach to them that he formerly baptized and re-baptize them: when he found out that we had a calling and did not call ourselves as he had already called himself, then it began to lower, and by the next morning about 9 o'clock, when he left, I was pretty sure that he would not come, could he not preach. A few weeks later he held meetings at his old place, and took the above text, "The dog has turned to his vomit again," and denied everything in the presence of many who formerly heard him say what I have above mentioned. The Scripture is verily true, but the honest ones had their eyes open, and through that conduct, were convinced, and quite a number have come and have proved themselves good members, while he himself became so low, that he was not respected at all. He sold out and left the country, and went to other fields where he may lead some other blind ones and get paid for it. The curse of God Almighty follows all such that willfully preach another Gospel.

H. W. LANDES.

Osborne City, Kan., Jan. 1st, 1879.

From C. H. Balsbaugh.

THINK not, Beloved Ambassadors, that I have not a hearty Christian New Year's greeting for you. I spent the first day in excruciating suffering. I could scarcely turn from side to side for agony. I need a broad phylactery to bear the glorious inscription of the Divine Fatherhood, and His Paternal care for poor me, as recorded in Heb. 12: 5–11. Such training of such creatures, with such results, is a study for angels. Eph. 3: 10.

This rigorous season penetrates to my morrow. I have never suffered so from the effects of the cold. Winter represents the Sinni-side of Deity. The cold, snow-clad, ice-crowned minister has given me a rough New Year's salutation. My scanty stock of provision was so injured by the frost, that I must throw part of it away—perhaps most of it. I felt like taking a good earnest cry over my loss, but the Spirit whispered Heb. 10: 34, into my soul. But in truth it is a severe trial for me. Job's triumphant reception of his utter destitution and bereavement strengthens me. Job 1: 21. The loss of my potatoes and fruit may bring me wagon-loads of provision from Joseph's granary. The "nether springs are fresh and sweet, but the "upper springs" are fresher, sweeter, more ravishing, and they well out of the heart of our Emmanuel forever and ever. "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable Gift." May 1879 be a glorious year for the Church of the living God.

From Mary E. Ritter.

THOUGH I be deprived of meeting with my brethren and sisters in the public assembly, I can meet often with God in secret. God is just as near and as precious here as in the East. I pray Him that a minister may be sent to us to preach the whole truth, that our souls may be edified and the sinners be persuaded to turn to the Lord and live. I would love to have brethren and sisters around me as in former times, so that we might worship God together, and be able to speak words of love and comfort to each other. Will you ministers who are abundantly able to travel, come this way with the Bread of life? Do, please. Come and gather the scattered sheep together, and feed them with that Bread which giveth life. We will gladly receive you, and help build up the church of God. Ungodly fashions and coldness have the rule here as in most other places. Come, then, and help to give the people something better. I long to see the time when mighty congregations will flourish all over this broad land. Trials and troubles are many; so let us ask God daily to help us overcome them. I often think of you who are so highly favored. I envy you not, but desire the same great blessings. God bless you all!

Dear Brethren:—

YOUR paper is doing good; it is making friends to the cause here. We have no preaching by the Brethren. We heard no preaching last year. O, that some of the brethren we read of, would come and preach for us. We have a school-house, that we have the privilege of this year. We hope to have the brethren preach for us. Send us some of your tracts; here is the place for them. Pray for us; pray God to send the Gospel to this part of His vineyard, that His church may be built up in Campbell Co., Va.; for we believe God has a people here. We long to see the time come when the Brethren shall stand on the walls of Zion in this county, and proclaim the Gospel to dying men and women. Strange to say no preaching here by the Brethren for one whole year, but none that we know of. God bless you and enable you to send out your paper all over the land, that the cause of the Brethren may be made known to the people.

From Jesse Calvert.

ONE more year is ended. I have done but little for my Master; only three hundred and sixty-nine have been added to the church at the meetings I held. Some came after the meetings would be closed; probably to the amount of four hundred and fifty.

I just closed a meeting at Solomon's Creek. It was indeed a very good meeting; one sister was restored, and many said, "I will soon come to Jesus." Hope they will not forget it. We had an interesting Sunday-school meeting, and I hope it will be profitable for all. May God bless the rising generation, to be qualified for the duties of the church when the old brethren and sisters are gone. This is the place and way to teach them in the Sunday-school.

Jan. 7th, 1879.

From Solomon's Creek Church, Elkhart Co., Ind.

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL meeting was held according to appointment in the above named church, on Thursday, Jan. 2nd, 1879. As the Superintendent and Secretary were both absent, an organization was effected, by electing brother Jesse Calvert Superintendent, John Sturgis Corersponding Secretary, and J. H. Wartsler Recording Secretary, after which the following topics were presented for consideration:

1. Are Sunday-schools an advantage to our children, to our church and to our country?

The subject was opened by brother John Sturgis, followed by other brethren, with very appropriate remarks.

2. Is it important for parents to attend the Sunday-school with their children?

Was opened by brother Lewis Muntz, followed by others.

3. What are the best qualifications for officers and teachers, in order to successful Sunday-school work?

Opened by brother William Bussard. Upon this question we heard from some of the sisters as well as from the brethren.

4. How shall we secure the regular attendance of parents and children? and by what means can the friends of Sunday-school work overcome the opposition to it in the brotherhood?

Opened by brother John Sturgis.

5. Should the international lesson leaves be used in our schools?

Opened by brother John Robinson. Upon this question brother Jesse Calvert made some excellent remarks, showing why they should not be used.

On motion of John Sturgis, a committee of five were appointed to arrange a programme for the next meeting. The committee retired for this purpose; but for the want of time, (it being evening meeting) to arrange a programme, submitted the following:

We, the committee, have concluded that each member of the committee shall send in their resolutions and topics to the Corresponding Secretary, from which he will draw off a programme for the next meeting, which will be published in due time.

JOHN STRUBLE, Chairman.
W. H. KREIDBACH, Sec.

The meeting was pleasant and we hope profitable, not so many being in attendance as might have been, as the weather was severely cold.

JESSE CALVERT, Superintendent.
J. H. WARTSLER, Secretary.

The New Year The Old Year—The Future who can tell?

[From our Special Correspondent.]

NO. V.

THE New Year comes to every one at the same time, like the tidal wave of the ocean, it waits for no man. To some it may be a happy season; to others, a season of sorrow and grief. Many, no doubt, have reached Jan., 1879, in a condition financially oppressive. But few, comparatively speaking, can say, "They never were better prepared to commence a New Year. Beginning a New Year always renews in our minds afresh circumstances and occurrences of former New Years, while some with fond recollections, are thinking over the New Years of former days, attending the nuptial feast of some happy couple just starting out in life with bright prospects of many happy days together as man and wife, each expecting to make the other happier, as they advance in the pathway of life. Others again, think of some brother, sister or kind friend whose remains were consigned to the silent tomb. The marble slab with the name inscribed, erected in some well-known graveyard, marks his last resting place.

Just now we are made to think of some whose pleasant faces and cheering smiles greeted us in the family circle about one year ago, but now by us are seen no more. Among them was one who was well known to many of our readers. Our children used to call him great-grandpa. Nearly one year ago he closed his eyes in death, at the advanced age of eighty years and nine days. No doubt many have not yet forgotten him, especially his children, and many friends may think of him as they enter the New Year. In thinking over what has taken place in the last year, we are made to exclaim, "What other year can mark the time of so many bank failures all over the world, as 1878. No former year can mark the time of so much bold and daring highway robbery. Many of the best business houses that stood the financial panics of former years, have also been laid low in the ravishes of bankruptcy in 1878. Almost every periodical records a number of crimes and outrages. The number of suicides and marriage divorces is also alarmingly on the increase. May not the world, in looking back as she enters the New Year, see great room for improvement?

The silver-locked veteran of the cross as he advances under the banner of King Jesus, fighting manfully the battles as a faithful soldier of the Master, found in 1878, at least the usual amount of work for him to do. The faithful minister of the Gospel in the time marked by 1878, had a fruitful season for his mission. Thousands have been made willing to come to Christ, for pardon and eternal rest.

Now is a good time for ministers to consider and see whether they have done all they could for the conversion of souls, and the upbuilding of Zion in the year just closed. Have we attended all the meetings we could, or did we leave some calls unheeded, that we could have filled? If so, let us be more faithful in the year we have just entered.

TO THE LAITY.

Have you been as faithful in your religious services as you should have been? Did you never suffer your seat to be vacant in the house of worship, unless you had such an excuse as God would accept. Paul says, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is, but so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Lay members sometimes think it is not necessary for them to attend meeting every time. This is a mistake. If the professor betrays a want of zeal in the cause of Christ, somebody will accept it as a lawful cause for making no profession, and it leads to something in the church that will result in small congregations. This tends to discourage the minister, and brings about a general stagnation in the cause of Christ. Again, have all the members been as careful as they should have been to avoid giving offense in any way that might destroy the peace and harmony of the church? If not, as we enter the New Year and advance, let us be more careful.

The prophets have foretold future events that have and will come to pass. Our latter-day prophets seem to miss their mark. Joseph Smith, William C. Thurman, and a number of others, have made a failure. No doubt they did the best they could; but as God did not intend for any one to know the exact time when the Savior would come again, but kept that to himself; none were yet able to tell, simply because they were to guess at it, and guess work did not hit.

C. FORNEY.

Falls City, Neb.

Elder David Garlach.

ELDER David Gerlach, bishop of the Whiteneck district, Lancaster Co., Pa., has now been nearly two years in an almost helpless condition, from paralysis. On Sunday, February 25th, 1877, he and two ministering brethren of other denominations, were holding funeral services in the Bethel of his native town of Mount Joy. He rose and commenced to speak in his usual earnest way, but suddenly his right hand dropped by his side, and his speech failed in an unfinished sentence; but he retained sufficient strength to step back to his seat, which he kept till the close of the services, when, by the aid of two men, he was able to walk to a carriage, in which he was taken to his house.

His whole side was now paralyzed, and he could no longer speak so as to be understood; but he continued to be conscious. In a few days his speech commenced to improve, and his leg to gain a little power; and after many weeks confinement to bed, he was again able to walk and to speak some. Gradually he gained strength till he could walk out, and even to be taken to a funeral and several meetings; but he never since was able to preach, or even to hold a long conversation.

Next, he was afflicted with a sort of muscular spasms, which came over him rather suddenly, and several times rendered him for some hours unconscious. These spells greatly reduced his strength, and made him nervous. It is almost three months since he had the last severe attack, and thus far he has been pretty comfortable during the Winter. He can go about in the house and speak with the friends that come to see him; and when the weather is fair, he can generally walk out into the yard.

Sister Gerlach had been quite unwell for some time before her husband's affliction came upon him; and ever since she has been almost as helpless as he, although there are very few days that she is not able to go about the house. She is very weak, and in flesh she is very much wasted, and her eyesight is bad. Her affliction is disease of the kidneys. They do not suffer much acute physical pain; but neither can nurse the other, while both need kind hands to take care of them, which they have in her sister's daughter and her husband, with whom they live. Days and nights often grow long; but feeling the assurance "That all things work together for good that love God," they are not without comfort.

J. R. HOFFER.

From the Silver Creek Church, William Co., Ind.

Dear Brethren:—

PERMIT me to say to your many readers of the BRETHREN AT WORK that the ark of the Lord is moving along slowly in our church. It having pleased the Giver of all things, to enable us to build a large and commodious house, which was dedicated on the 1st of December. The ministers present were J. C. Rosenberger and elder John Brown. The meeting continued one week, in which time we held our Communion. It was a happy meeting to all, to commemorate the broken body, and shed blood of our dear Redeemer, whose example of feet-washing we celebrated, by the single mode.

As the meetings progressed, we were made to rejoice at the willingness of six precious souls coming out on the Lord's side, willing to leave all and follow him. We think from the interest manifested, that there are others who are almost persuaded to become Christians.

On the 19th, brother Rosenberger came to labor with us again, holding three meetings at the Primrose meeting-house, and five at the new meeting-house: then going thirteen miles West to the Presbyterian meeting-house, and preached nine sermons.

Now we leave the work in the hands of the Lord, believing that Paul may plant and Apollos may water, but God must give the increase. May the Lord ever keep His chosen Israel in the good old path, is my prayer.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, money received for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor brethren, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the POOR FUND. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor brethren may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

OUTSIDERS' FUND.

THERE are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefited by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer. Send us the names of such outsiders you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them in a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as long as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar per year. Hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thereby assist us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded us. When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the OUTSIDERS' FUND.

Sabbatism.—By M. M. Eshelman. 16 pages, price 5 cents, 20 copies $1 00. Treats the Sabbath question briefly, showing that the observance of the seventh day Sabbath passed away with all other Jewish days, and that the "first day of the week," is the preferred day for Christians to assemble in worship.

The Pillar of Fire; or, Israel in Bondage.—Being an account of the Wonderful Scenes in the Life of the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter (Moses). Together with Picturesque Sketches of the Hebrews under their Task-masters. By Rev. J. H. Ingraham, LL. D., author of "Prince of the House of David." Large 12mo, Cloth, $2.00.

Campbell and Owen Debate.—Containing an examination of the Social System, and all the systems of Skepticism, ancient and modern. Complete in one volume. This will always remain a leading work on the evidences of Christianity. $1.75.

Passover and Lord's Supper.—By J. W. Beer. An able work of great merit, and should be in the hands of every person, who wishes to thoroughly understand this subject. Bound in good cloth; 258 pages. Price 75 cents.

Certificates of Membership in Book-Form.—They are neatly printed on good paper, ready to fill out, with duplicate attached and all well bound together in neat book form, somewhat after the style of blank note books. One of these books should be in the hands of each congregation; then, when a member calls for a certificate, one of these can be filled out, signed by the officers, cut off from the duplicate and handed to the member. No. 1, containing one hundred certificates price 50 cents; No. 2, fifty certificates, price, 50 cents.

SPRINKLING AND POURING PUT TO THE TEST.

BY S. J. HARRISON.

BAPTISM has probably caused more strife and contention among professors of Christianity than any other subject contained in the Bible; and it seems that the more it has been contested, the farther the parties have been separated, and the more firmly they have been established in previously adopted notions. Strange as this seems to be, it is, nevertheless, a sad and well known truth.

When all fully understand a subject, they agree—their thoughts are all the same. If men always agree when they understand a subject, what must be the conclusion when they disagree? Evidently it is, that they do not all understand it.

"Well, now, if people would think just alike, if they all fully understood a subject, would they not think more and more alike as they increased in knowledge concerning it?" Yes; as our knowledge increases, so our minds and thoughts and faith should become the same.

"You said the more people discussed baptism, the more they disagreed, are we to infer, then, that the more people study, investigate and discuss it, the less they will know about it?" No; we think the more people study, investigate and discuss a subject, the more they will know about it.

"Well, then, if the more we know on a subject, the less we disagree, and the more we discuss a subject, the more we shall know, why is it that the more we discuss, the more we disagree?" The reason why people are not more united by discussing a question, is, because they do not discuss to learn. Each side thinks it already has the truth, and expects in the discussion, not to be taught, but to teach. Each side closes its understanding to what the opposite shall say, just as we close our eyes, and of course, with the understanding closed, like the eyes closed, it receives no knowledge, just as the eyes receive no light.

Here, then, we see that the discussion does not assist one side to see truth on the other; hence, the sides are not brought any nearer together. But now let us see how the sides are separated farther, and more firmly established in previously adopted notions. While no truth is heard in the discussion which opposes them, all truth which seems to favor them, is received; and all truth which seems against their opponents, is also received. Hence in the discussion of a subject, each side gets additional evidence in favor of, and none against its previously adopted notions. It also, gets additional evidence, against, and none in favor of the notions of the opposite side, thereby separating the sides farther and giving them increased confidence in previously adopted notions.

If people will, they can bury their understanding and it cannot be reached by either knowledge or reason, and there are, by far, too many professors of the religion of Jesus Christ, who do this very thing. They are the cause of nine-tenths of all the infidels, skeptics, and scoffers that have ever defamed the name of God. I desire so to impress this truth upon your mind that it may never be erased. Disregard it and you lock yourself in the prison-house of heathenism. You make yourself lower, more degraded and more debased than the vilest reptile that creeps upon the earth; for it is what it is, because it was so made, but you are so, because you wish to be.

I now invite your attention—I beg of you to open your understanding, that you may receive the truth—or perchance I should be mistaken that you may see it clearly, and having seen it, that you will be as desirous of eradicating it from my mind, as I have been and am, of imparting it to you. I desire that you give me your undivided attention. I do not wish you to argue in your mind, as I proceed, nor to think of anything else than just what I say, that you may know, when I am through, just what I have taught and what I believe. The reason why some pupils do not understand a teacher's explanation, is, because they do not concentrate their whole minds upon just what the teacher says. They think of something at home, their friends, their clothes, their books, the room, the weather and a thousand other things which only they and the Lord know. Although their minds leave the explanation only long enough to lose one word, that is one link out of the chain of reasoning, and that chain that was binding all the facts of the subject together, making it a simple unit, falls to the ground, and the subject scatters, divides and mysteries before the mind of the pupil until it is plunged in midnight mental darkness.

You may have wearied of this long introduction, but I feel assured that if I have succeeded in convincing you of the truths contained in it that I have done more for you, than all the teachers you have ever had. Hoping then that you are willing to learn, that you are open to conviction, that you will give your whole attention, that you will not argue in your minds and that you will think of nothing while I am talking, but what I say, I shall proceed to give an explanation of the mode of baptism, taught in the language of the commission, which reads, "baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." I think I can explain this language so that no one will be left in doubt as to whether or not it teaches pouring or sprinkling.

Every sect, so far as I know, believes, in administering baptism, it is safe to do as this language teaches. However, it is understood to teach no less than six different ways, viz: By sprinkling or pouring on dry land, by sprinkling or pouring in water, and by forward and backward immersion in water.

The language used by the person administering baptism, is, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." I now repeat that this language is conceded by all Christians to be correct. One thing is self-evident, that is, the language is not authority for six modes of baptism Christ was not baptized six times—six ways. He taught all one way. Paul, the inspired writer, says, "one Lord, one faith, ONE BAPTISM." But some who profess to be followers of Christ, say, there are as many baptisms as the people want. They regard sprinkling and pouring on dry land or in the water, single or trine immersion, each, as Gospel baptism. But as we prefer the word of the Lord to the opinions of men, we ask which of the six different modes is the "one baptism," which Paul exhorts us to adopt and practice.

To learn the mode taught, we must know what word expresses the act, and what it means. We all agree that "baptize" is the word which expresses the act to be performed, but we do not agree as to what the word means. Some say it means to sprinkle only; others say it means to immerse only; others say it means each way. Long sermons and lectures have been delivered in favor of each definition. Men of most extensive learning have written hundreds of pages to prove, each, his own way to be correct. It is therefore useless for us to spend time disputing on the meaning of the word. We will try each meaning in the sentence, and if all make equally good sense, we shall say, that all are equally correct. But if one meaning does not make good sense, teaches an absurdity, of course we shall cast that aside as spurious. If only one meaning can be used without destroying the sense and purpose of the passage, then it is evident that only one meaning is correct. If baptize mean sprinkle, then no living person, of any age, of any color, in any church, in any country, has ever been baptized. If baptize mean sprinkle, then we can insert "sprinkle" for the original word, and not change the thought expressed. A. Campbell says, "The proper definition of a term substituted for it will always make as good sense as the term itself. This is an infallible canon of interpretation." Substituting the word "sprinkle" for the word "baptize," the language is, "I sprinkle thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The language now is in the most favorable form it is possible to put it to prove that sprinkling is baptism, and if it cannot be supported when we have done this, it follows that it is false—not based upon fact, and should be abandoned by every lover of truth, honesty and holiness. All who desire, or have had water sprinkled upon them for baptism, admit in that the necessity of being baptized. It makes no difference what baptism is for—whether it is a condition of salvation or whether it is a duty which the pardoned, or saved of God, must perform. So if I can show that no living person has ever been baptized, (if baptize mean sprinkle), I shall expect all who love the truth and try to obey it, to proceed at once to be baptized.

Let us hear the language once more: "I sprinkle thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." In administering baptism by sprinkling, it is intended to be done precisely as this language teaches. We shall examine it, therefore, and see what it does teach—see whether it teaches what is done by those who believe baptize means sprinkle, i. e., that sprinkling is baptism.

Learner.—What is it that sprinkles?

Sprinkler.—It is "I, i. e., the minister.

L.—What does the minister do?

S.—He "sprinkles."

L.—What does "sprinkle" mean?

S.—Webster says it means to scatter in small drops or particles.

L.—What is it that is to be sprinkled—scattered in small drops or particles?

S.—It is "thee" i. e., the man who is receiving or being baptized.

L.—What! is the man who gets baptized, (sprinkled) scattered in small drops or particles?

S.—No; it is the water that is sprinkled—scattered in small drops or particles.

L.—Then it is not the man you sprinkled (baptized), but the water, is it?

S.—No;—We—we—we sprinkle a man just like we sprinkle a floor.

L.—O, that way!—sprinkle a man, just like we do a floor, do you?

S.—Yes; we do it just that way.

L.—Well, how do you sprinkle a floor?

S.—Why we sprinkle water or sand upon it.

L.—But did you not say you sprinkled the floor?

S.—Yes, I did.

L.—Then, why do you talk about sprinkling "water" and "sand?" If you sprinkled the floor, will you please tell me how you did it?

S.—We do not sprinkle the floor, we sprinkle water and sand upon the floor.

L.—You say now that you do not sprinkle the floor, but did you not say awhile ago that you did sprinkle the floor?

S.—Yes, I said so; but I see now that I was mistaken. It is water and sand we sprinkle, and not the floor

L.—You said you sprinkled (baptized) a man just like you sprinkled a floor, and now you say you don't sprinkle the floor, but the water and sand, do you mean by that that you do not sprinkle (baptize) the man, but the water?

S.—Well—I—I see I have got mixed up on this. The only way in which a man could be sprinkled, that I see, would be to put him in a dry-house and keep him there until there would be nothing left of him but dry bones and flesh. Then he could be grated fine, like we grate nutmegs, and after being grated he could be sprinkled, (scattered in small particles), in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. In this way it is simple, plain and easy to see how a man can be sprinkled, but I see now that that is the only way it is possible to do it and obey the language used. But I do not see what benefit baptism can be to dead men—to men who have returned to dust, and I do not see what use dead men could be to a church,—baptism is for living men. A LIVING MAN CANNOT BE SPRINKLED, therefore no living man ever has been sprinkled. I now see very clearly that sprinkling water upon a man is not sprinkling the man, and if baptize mean sprinkle, I see clearly, too, that I have never been baptized, for I have never been sprinkled, it was only water that was sprinkled. So if baptize mean sprinkle, it was not I that was baptized, but the water. And whether baptism is for the remission of sins, or not, I thought it was necessary to be baptized when I had water sprinkled upon me, and now since I see very clearly that I was mistaken, that I was not baptized, and have not been baptized yet, I want now to be baptized as much as I did when I had water sprinkled upon me.

Examine "pouring" by the same rule, and it is seen to be equally absurd, and, therefore, unscriptural. Only liquids, and matter in fine particles, can be poured. Before a man could be poured, he would have to be reduced to a liquid, or to dust. The only way in which he could be poured would be to put him in a vessel and melt him like we do lead.

But now try the word dipping and see how clear, sensible and easy it would be to obey the command. "Dipping them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Could language be more complete, lucid and positive? Surely "the way of transgressors is hard."

Were the Christian perfect, he would still be subject to affliction, owing to the state of the world around him. Indwelling sin, therefore, not certainly the measure of our tribulation.

A CALLING.

BY E. L. LAWRENCE.

SINNER, Jesus calls you home,
Come, why will you longer roam.
Can you not the Savior see,
And the Cross of Calvary?

Jesus loves you, this I know,
For the Bible tells me so;
Eternal life he will give,
If you'll only look and live.

Why will you His call refuse?
One of two ways you must choose;
One is broad and leads to hell,
Where the devil's angels dwell.

The other way is very straight
Having but a narrow gate;
But it leads to joys on high,
Where the saints shall never die.

In that land one hour to be,
And the Savior's face to see,
Will repay us for the woe,
We have witnessed here below.

It's a city, I am told,
With its streets all paved with gold;
But I can't its glory know,
While I dwell in sin below.

The other way, the Christians know,
Ends in darkness, death, and woe;
Now it seems with flowers cast,
But my friend, it will not last.

Soon or later, Christ will come,
To collect His children home;
Oh, where will you then appear,
If you'll not His calling hear?

If on earth you've been ashamed,
And have not your Savior named;
When you meet Him at His throne,
He'll eternally you disown.

But why need you come through fear,
When through love you can draw near;
Think how much He's done for you,
And how little you can do.

Now the gates you see afar,
Christ for you has left ajar;
He came once, His all to give,
That the sinners here might live.

The Cross at first may large appear,
But smaller grow when we draw near;
Come, we'll take you by the hand,
Thus we'll march to Canaan's land.

ECHOES FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

BY EMILY R. STIFLER.

A Refreshing Season—A Series of Meetings—Our Love-feast—Close of the Sunday-School—Death and Funeral of a Beloved Sister—Souls Returning to God.

THE congregation at Duncanville, Blair Co., Pennsylvania, has enjoyed a delightful season of refreshment one which will long be remembered by at least some who were in attendance. Those who absented themselves from this shower of God's love truly missed a glorious and refreshing season. "Neglect not the assembling of yourselves together," is a word of inspiration.

A SERIES OF MEETINGS

was commenced here on Saturday evening, Oct. 5, by brother J. W. Smouse of Smixburg, Indiana Co., Pa. The evening was dark and rainy, consequently the congregation was small. The brother spoke from Matt. 28: 20. On Sunday morning, he addressed the congregation from 2nd Cor. 6: 2. Sunday evening, brother J. W. Wilt of Clarr's congregation, came to his assistance. He addressed the congregation from Heb. 2: 2, and part of the third verse. Monday evening, he spoke from Numbers 32: 23: "But if ye will not do so." The evening was again rainy. It was decided to hold services on Tuesday morning. The congregation was quite small, but the Lord has promised to be with those who assemble in his name, if but two or three. At ten A. M. we had again the happy privilege of meeting in God's house for worship. Brother Wilt again addressed us from Philip. 3: 14, and conclusion by brother Smouse. Oh, that every one might press more vigorously for that prize to be obtained at the end of the race, and found their faith more determinedly on the "Rock of Ages," Christ Jesus—that glorious prize is at the end of the race, so run that ye may obtain.

The evening services opened by singing that old familiar hymn, 328. Address by brother Wilt from 2 Samuel 12: 7: "Thou art the man" Reader, art thou the man that hath great possessions, and yet wilt thou rob thy neighbor? Return thy stolen goods and come and follow Jesus. Thou art the one whom Jesus calls.

"Pray without ceasing," is a Bible command. Erect your family altar, and while none but God's eye beholds the scene, pour out your heart-felt thanks to him to whom we are indebted. Wednesday evening again addressed by brother Smouse from Psalms 116: 18: "I will pay my vows." Reader, have you paid all your vows unto the Lord? If not, go this night, for to-morrow may be too late. Remember, dear reader, that vows are solemn engagements, and that we may at sometime have vowed a vow and not fulfilled it. Sinner, delay not paying your vows until you are prostrated upon a bed of affliction, perhaps your death-bed. Death-bed repentance is doubtful. God gives us plenty of time to repent, and work out our soul's salvation, but he does not want us to procrastinate.

Thursday, Oct. 10th, was the day previously appointed for our Love-feast. Ere the appointed hour, 4 o'clock P. M., a goodly number had assembled to celebrate the solemn ordinance of God's house. Brethren Wilt and Smouse, with the resident ministers, brother Grabil Myers, James Price and David Sell, were the ministers present. Brother Wilt read from 1 Cor. 11. He spoke on the subject of self examination.

1. Examination, condemnation, and judgment.

2. Our temporal tables and the Lord's table.

There is a vast difference between our temporal tables and that of the Lord's, and let us be very careful, brethren and sisters, that we make that proper discernment. Let us not eat damnation to ourselves by not "discerning the Lord's body."

CLOSE OF OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

As the close of our Sunday school came during our series of meetings, we feel to say a word about it. On Sunday morning Oct. 13, its first session closed. It was addressed by brother J. W. Wilt. We trust that God will bless the work of brother Ellis Brubaker and all officers and teachers engaged in the work. May it be the object of every one who labors in the Sunday-school cause, to try and do his whole duty in the service. I have many times been made to wonder why we close our Sunday-school in the Winter and keep our public schools in session. Could not the children attend Sunday-school once during the seven days, when they attend public school five days in the week?

DEATH OF AN AGED SISTER.

A dear old sister, Mary You, one of our number has passed into the valley and shadow of death. Her remains were consigned to the tomb the following Wednesday. This dear sister was very unexpectedly called from the stage of action. When will be our evening time? Perhaps soon; yea, very soon.

Sunday morning, Oct. 20th, sung praises to God from 686, that beautiful hymn by Sutton. Text, Amos 4: 12: "Prepare to meet thy God." This was not spoken directly to us. The Lord visited the Israelites with a pestilence that they might return to him. He is the same God to day. We must prepare ourselves to inherit eternal life. Fight the good fight of faith. Our life is a continual warfare with Satan. We must not only make good resolutions, but do them. We cannot receive the benefits outside the church, or if so, why come in it? Faith in God is the believing of pardon according to his Word. Repentance and baptism are the conditions thereof. Ask yourself this question, Have I submitted to the will of the Lord? If not, immediately "Prepare to meet thy God." While we sung the 250th hymn, the last invitation of this meeting was extended to the sinner. One more responded to the invitation, and came forward to embrace the Savior. She complied with that beautiful command, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth." We repaired to the river-side, and emblematical of Christ's burial and resurrection, she was baptized in the liquid stream. Thus seven precious souls accepted Jesus at his word. At times our dear brother was caused to become much discouraged, but the darkest hour came just before the morning dawn. This was our last meeting on this occasion. How beautifully we were reminded of our last meeting here on earth.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

SIN AND ITS REWARD.

JOHN L. SNAVELY.

THE great bar to the happiness of man and that which procures all his miseries, is sin. Take away sin, and nothing will harm him. "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6: 23. How dreadful must be the case of those who continue in sin, or those who continue to transgress the law of God, for, says the apostle, "Sin is the transgression of the law." Set yourself to the study of the Scriptures and you will find, in every dispensation, that the people who lived and submitted to the commands of God had peace and prosperity, and that no other people enjoyed the riches of God's blessing as much as those who stood upon God's Word. On the other hand, you will find when the people walked contrary to his will, poverty and division soon fell upon them, and their dispensation was wound up in sorrow, unless they repented. The people were not only to have intentions to repent, or to repent, but had to do the work, or that duty would rise up against them in judgment. The same instructions are for the people to-day.

Men and women do not sin because they do not know what sin is, for the apostle has made that too plain and comprehensive to be misunderstood. We can easily comprehend that everything we do, think, desire, say, or omit to do, or anything that is found defective when compared with the Law of God, is sin. Then the reason man is so prone to sin, must be on account of the depravity, and pride of the heart from which come evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witnesses, blasphemies. These are the things which defile a man. Matt. 15: 19, 20. That which defiles a man, is sin. Men sin wheo they know to do good and do it not. Men sin wheo they "change the truth of God into a lie, and worship and serve the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed forevermore." The man who is unconverted, to whom God manifests so much patience, and he perverts and abuses that patience, is sinning; but let him remember, though he may prosper even in his vice, he is bound, as it were, in the chain of his sins till the day of God's wrath, when he must be brought to judgment, and have executed on him the most terrible punishment. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished."

Would we escape this judgment we must often pass sentence of condemnation on ourselves here. Take heed of giving thyself liberty of committing one sin. To begin a sin, is to lay a foundation for a continuance. The great hindrance to many souls to come to Christ, and quit or leave off sinning, is they are so much addicted to the pleasure of this life, and we know of nothing that renders leaving off sin so insupportable to the professed adherents of religion as the vain love of the world, which is dangerous; and why is it dangerous? Because it is forbidden by the apostle in positive language: "Love not the world neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him, for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world, and the world passeth away, and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Until the soul is freed from this, it can never have a true love for God. Then love not the world, for it is transgressing the law of heaven. It is sin, and he that committeth sin, is of the devil. 1 John 3: 8. The apostle would inquire, "Know ye not to whom ye obey; his servants ye are to whom ye obey, whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Faithful servants to both, we cannot be; "we cannot serve God and mammon." Then the way is clear; God or the world must be left at parting time. Ah, the love of the world is a moth in a Christian's life. It looks to be such folly to labor all our lives for the "meat that perisheth." The honors and riches of this world, which are nothing compared to the glories of heaven, and neglect the food of heaven and eternal life.

Sinner, what a condition will you be in when you leave this world, having never repented and left off sinning? You will find it true; you will wish you had never been born.

The apostle Paul addresses himself to us by the word of the Lord, telling us that the Lord himself shall "Descend from heaven with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God," to summon the dead to appear before the tribunal of God. The righteous shall hasten out of their graves with joy to meet their Redeemer. These are they which are not defiled by sin. Others shall also be raised, and they will call for the hills and mountains to fall on them to cover them from the scrutinizing gaze of their Master. All must come forth—"They that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." Salvation is not promised more surely to the godly, than damnation is, and is to be executed upon the wicked. Let us therefore try in time to be proving which of these two we will be. Satan's influence is great. He labors hard to keep out of the heart of man things that are good, especially thoughts of passing from this life to another world. He knows full well if he can only banish thoughts of death, and keep you in your sins, much easier are the wages or hire of death. Think often on the subject of mortality; it will have a tendency to make you more earnest—more diligent in working out your salvation. It will do much in taking your heart off from vanities, and create desires in you for holiness. And now, little children, abide in him that when he shall appear, we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

CHRISTIANITY VS. FORMALITY.

BY H. P. BRINKWORTH.

THAT religion in the present day is undergoing a series of revolutions, not equaled for centuries, I believe no sane man could question; and the progress of Christianity to-day, is a matter not to be doubted. On the streets of our towns and cities, we find men engaged in conversation on religious topics. In the Western States it is no unusual circumstance to enter a store and hear the views of different persons concerning the second coming of Christ, and other all-important subjects.

Occasionally we hear men advance the idea that as long as a person entertains conscientious views on the Scriptures, though they might have the same religion or ideas antagonistic to their opponent, and though the one could advance the idea that man must in order to be a Christian, follow Christ, and the other says, I do not believe that: for I know the man who pays his just debts, who respects his neighbor and lends and borrows, and never cheats or lies, or steals, is the man who will be saved, regardless of any other imposed duty. Now how shall we reach the answer to the query? Which is right, or which will do to risk? We find ourselves involved between Christianity and morality. We conclude that man, to be a Christian, must become a moral man, but a man may be a moral man and not a Christian. Further, we advance the idea that a man may outwardly attend the ordinances imposed upon church members to which they gladly submit; he may be an attendant weekly, and pay his subscriptions, and be considered a good, thorough-going Christian man. Yet there is a danger; he never has experienced the transforming power that necessarily constitutes a true Christian. The man morally good has a good standing in society; yet he has not become of the same mind as his Master. He will not conform to the Christian life, but is yet desirous of having his own way.

Can we conclude that this unrenewed will, this stubborn mind, is a mind thoroughly subdued by the transcending power of God's Holy Spirit? Has he become of no reputation in order to follow his Master? Has he followed Christ, who even pleased not himself? Certainly not. Is that character a Christian in every sense of the word? The Scriptures say, "He that knoweth his Father's will, and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes."

The formalist says, "We are obliged to do, not as we wish, neither can we pray as we desire, but we must pray from the book, therefore we cannot pray wrong." Is there always a formal prayer that sinks the emergency of a man subjected to vicisitudes in life that involved an ejaculatory prayer? What shall we do under the circumstance? Shall we omit to pray because no form is at hand?

I tell you loving readers, we want something more consoling, something more durable, something to which we can flee as to a tower for protection against the fiery dart of a known enemy, and what shall we do? I answer, "Take it to the Lord in prayer."

If we have trials and temptations, if anything in the affairs of life demands a with-drawing from the world, a secret entering into the dark and mysterious recesses of the soul, and there pouring out our soul before God, we should instantly do so. The form of prayer is not at hand, but O, my God thou knowest that the upward lifting of the eye, the deep sigh, the yearning of the spirit within, speaks more than prayer could ever utter. Thou hearest and answerest such prayer, and art ever ready to hear thy children's petitions, and answer as far as thou seest would be good for the desired wants. Then I lay my wants on Jesus, and he will attend unto my cry, for precious in the sight of the Lord are his children.

THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL ON THE MARRIAGE RELATIONS.

BY C. F. DETWEILER.

IN the seventh chapter of Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians, he instructs them concerning things whereof they had previously written to him, and among the circumstances are made mention of, where one member of the head of a Gentile family was converted and the other was not. The marriage relation having been formed while they were yet both unconverted, and the question as to whether such a marriage relation is to be broken, in case the unbelieving husband or wife is minded to remain, is answered on this wise: "But to the rest speak I, not the Lord;" (mark that), "If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away. And the woman which hath a husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him. For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband; else were your children unclean; but now are they holy. But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or sister is not under bondage in such cases; but God hath called us to peace. But what knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife. But as God has distributed to every man, as the Lord has called every one, so let him walk."

As this Scripture is sometimes taken by Christians as authority to marry out into the world, I quote it all, and wish to present a few thoughts as a help to a right application of it. The way to interpret a Scripture correctly, is to take in consideration, first, all the Scripture that bears directly upon the same subject; second, all the facts and circumstances connected with it; and third, but not least, an application in a sense in which they all harmonize.

Truth is not divided against itself. We will first notice the circumstance under which these questions arose. The marriage referred to, according to the evidences that were formed, not only before they parted, believed, but before they had ever heard of the religion of Jesus Christ. The propriety of breaking this marriage vow, in view of the evil attending the dismemberment of a family, of severing the cord upon which the influence for good depends; through, which (as Paul says), the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife by the husband; for the believer by his own act thus to forfeit his influence for good over those who had become his or her own, by circumstances over which they have now no control, an act that is not only against every feeling of true kindness and love between husband and wife, against every impulse of nature that is motherly in a mother, or fatherly in a father, but under all ordinary circumstances against the law of God. These were some of the conditions of the subject in question, and the simple fact that such a question under such circumstances, arose at all, is in itself conclusive proof that the thought of forming such relations voluntarily, was totally foreign to their views of Christianity. "But God has called us to peace," says Paul, as another ground of the expedience in every one remaining in the condition in which God has called him; in matrimony or otherwise, in circumcision or uncircumcision, bond or free.

But the sanctifying influence which the believing husband or wife exerts over the unbelieving companion, and over the family, may be good, for remember, Paul does not say, over the companion who has a sort of a historical faith, and expects to become a church member before he dies, but over the unbelieving wife or husband. The supposition that this sanctifying influence under these circumstances justifies a voluntary marriage of like character, puts the question in this wise: Is it expedient for a Christian, to marry an unbeliever? The liberty to a voluntary choice based on these given premises, either embraces that much, or nothing.

Is there any fellowship connected with a Christian marriage? "What fellowship hath he that believeth with an infidel?" Does Christian marriage imply a yoking together? "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." "The wife is bound by the law to her husband as long as her husband liveth." To the penitent, it is said, "Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate," saith the Lord, "and I will receive you." Can two be bound together and yet be separated? "But if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will, only in the Lord," Can we marry only "in the Lord," and the other "out of the Lord," and yet marry "only in the Lord?"

From the days when the sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were fair, and brought upon themselves the displeasure of God by taking them wives of all which they chose, down to the present time. In all the history of God's chosen people, we can see that it was his design continually that they shall be a separate people. The fact of his being grieved with their mixing with the daughters of men in the early history of our race, is not based upon any temporary design, but upon a principle that is as eternal as God himself, and custom cannot change it.

IS IT SO?

(Christian Cynosure).

IT is said, that if a Masonic minister is in his pulpit preaching Christ, and him crucified, and a Masonic Jew, who regards Christ as an impostor, should enter the church, and make that minister a Masonic sign, he, the minister of Christ, would be bound by his Masonic oath to make a corresponding sign in answer to it. It is added, that in making this sign of intelligence and secret understanding with an enemy of the Lord, he would dissemble before the congregation, pretending to make a gesture prompted by the spirit of his discourse; but in reality he would be holding Masonic by-play with an infidel, and that infidel perhaps making merriment out of the Christian minister for his own diversion.

Can these things be so? Does the Christian minister, by becoming a Mason, take a halter around his own neck and place the end of it in the hand of an infidel, to be led blindfolded into dissimulation and fraud?

It is furthermore said that the worst and bitterest enemies which our republican government has to encounter, are clergymen; and that these clergymen are largely members of the "mystic brotherhood." If half of the Protestant clergy of the Northern States are Masons, probably three-fourths or more of those of the Southern States are such; and they are declared to be rank enemies of the government.

Add to these facts that it is not now the Jesuits of the Romish church that assassinate kings and princes, but it is the Jesuits of the lodge who do such things, and one would suppose that the subject of Freemasonary ought to engage the attention of every honest man and woman in the land.

HOME.

BY D. M. MILLER.

HOME! home! This word has associated with it, the beautiful, sublime as well as sadness. The home of the redeemed of the Lord. How rich, grand and inexpressibly noble. Our homes here are at times the home of mourning and grief. The social ties are severed by the hand of death. Loved ones are its victim, gone, to meet no more in the family circle here below, while the home of the redeemed in the celestial city, is the reunion of the ransomed of the Lord. No more death, sorrow or disappointments, no tearing asunder of the ties of near and dear ones, but ascribing of praise to the Lamb of God, who has redeemed us, and made us kings and priests unto God. How happy the thought, when looking back across the river of death and singing the songs of redeemed love. It is our privilege to attain to that state. Faith gives us the victory over the world, and finally triumphs over death, the grave, hell and unbelief; while unbelief in the heart goes back to the flesh pots of Egypt, and barters eternal life for a morsel of meat, for a little revellings to gratify the flesh.

But the spirit of Caleb and Joshua confides in God, goes forward at his bidding, leaving unbelief in the rear, lays hold on the commandments of God and hopes for eternal life.

"I have known of instances where a whole family voluntarily did without any gifts that they might send coal and flour to some who were suffering. And I have not doubted that they were repaid by him who said that good done to his children, was done as to himself."

He that despiseth small things shall fall little by little.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1 50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under $1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

LANARK, ILL., JANUARY 30, 1879

OLD Brother Luehr reached his home in safety. He thinks of traveling and preaching considerably.

THE Brethren at Arnold's Grove held a series of meetings last week. Brother George D. Zollers was with them.

CAN any of our readers furnish us a copy of Ellen White's Vision? The book is out of print and difficult to find; hence this notice.

NOT the man who makes the loudest profession is the best Christian, but he who meekly and humbly submits to all God's requirements.

WE learn that arrangements are being made to hold another Prophetic or Advent Conference, in London, about the first week in March.

THE Brethren's Advocate is the title of a new paper just started by Brother D. H. Fahrney, of Waynesboro, Pa. Its make up is good, and the appearance neat.

THE Brethren at Cerro Gordo Ill., concluded to commence a series of meetings January 21th. They expect Brother George Cripe to be with them.

THE Catholics are supposed to be strongly opposed to secret orders, but the "Society of Jesus," known as Jesuits among them, is said to be a secret society of the worst order.

BROTHER Waltermer Meyers, the Brethren's traveling evangelist in California, is said to be doing a good work in that State. Several have lately been added to the church.

MR. John Lemley, former editor of the Guldon Censer, has started a paper in Albany, N. Y. entitled The Zion's Watchman. Mr. Lemley is a bold and fearless writer.

THE H. H. Witter, with whom Bro. Hixon held his public discussion, was a Baptist minister of considerable experience as a debater, but Bro. Hixon was enough for him.

WE are out of No. 1 of this volume, hence cannot fill orders for them. New subscribers will have to commence with No. 2, of which we still have a few back numbers.

WE cannot fill orders for any more Almanacs. The publishers inform us that the edition is now run out. Those who have ordered Almanacs and do not receive them will please inform us what to do with the money.

BROTHER Samuel C. Bashor, formerly of Whitesville, Mo., expects to make Colorado his home. Hope success may crown his efforts in building up the cause in that part of the far West.

THOSE of our readers who want to know how our ancient Brethren used to travel and preach in an early day should not fail to read the article "From the Pacific Coast." That looks like pioneer preaching.

"BIBLE VS. MATERIALISM." By Elder Wm. M. Roe. This is the book to post one against the Soul Sleeping Doctrine. 172 pages, bound in paper cover and sent postpaid for 50 cents. Address this office.

BROTHER Lemuel Hillery returned home the middle of last week, much pleased with his trip, having preached one week at Hudson. He expresses himself as pleased with the prospect of doing good in Champaign county, provided proper ministerial aid can be procured. He thinks it a fine county, and there are special inducements held out for those wishing to labor in the interest of the cause.

THE price of the BRETHREN AT WORK from the first of March to the end of the year will be $1.30. With a little effort a number of new subscribers might be gathered to commence the first of March. Try it, and see what you can do.

BETWEEN the shores of the "known" and the "unknown" roll the waves of a mighty ocean, in which the highest attainments of human knowledge is lost, but which a Christian's faith can bridge with a single prayer. What a power there is in faith!

BROTHER E. A. Orr says: "I am well pleased with the tract business. Pamphlets have already done much good, and I believe they will continue to do good work. I know some conversions made by reading them that could probably not have been reached in any other way."

OUR letter this week from Limestone, Tenn., indicates that the cause is prospering in Tenn. The Brethren's plan of devoting Christmas season to special religious services is certainly a good one. We shall be pleased to hear from the Brethren in Tennessee quite frequently.

IN the Elk Lick congregation, Somerset County, Penn., there are said to be about eighteen members under fifteen years of age. It is encouraging to see young people thus coming to the Lord, and preparing themselves for the more arduous duties in the church of God.

IN order that all our subscribers may see the Children at Work, and know of its contents and appearance, we conclude to devote the last two pages of the BRETHREN AT WORK to that purpose next week. Hence, look out for something interesting for the old and young.

THE Sunday School at Dutchtown, this county, was organized June 20, with ten teachers and a full corps of officers. The average attendance was about sixty. Seven of the pupils were baptized during the summer, thus showing that where the Bible is taught there will be good results. School closed January 12th.

SEVERAL brethren have expressed their approval of Bro. D. C. Moomaw's project of having the Gospel more extensively preached in cities, and have also sent in their vouchers for the same. Hope to hear of others, and next week we shall commence publishing these vouchers that the readers may know how the work is progressing.

A WRITER in one of our exchanges, when speaking of a certain brother and sister, says: "They have raised a splendid family of children, obedient to them in all things." What a blessing it would be if that could be said of all families. The bringing of children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord ought to be one of the noblest objects of life.

BROTHER John S. Snowberger, of Monticello, Ind., under date of January 15th, writes: "The good work is still going on with us. Last Sunday one more was baptized, and to-day two more were willing to go into the flowing stream and make the good confession; and the waters are still troubled. May God still add such as are to be saved."

BROTHER Brower's letter from the Pacific Coast this week is interesting. It is evident that the Brethren need ministerial aid to successfully carry on the missionary work in those Western Territories. Here is a good chance for some of our wealthy ministers to do good, and an equally good chance for some wealthy ones who are not ministers to lend a helping hand in spreading the truth.

THE Chief of Police, who of course is posted on all such matters, says that three-fourths of the abandoned girls in the City of New York were ruined by dancing. Young ladies allow gentlemen privileges in dancing which, if taken under any other circumstances, these gentlemen would be reported as improper persons; and thus, step by step, girls are brought to ruin.

IT is not a common thing to hold a Love Feast in mid-winter, but the feast at Elk Lick, Penn., at the close of the year, is said to have been a very enjoyable one. Brother Quinter was in attendance, and gave a full account of it in the Primitive Christian. The Brethren in that congregation have just completed a large two-story house of worship in Salisbury. The audiance room is above, while the lower part is used for other purposes in time of Love Feasts, etc.

BROTHER J. W. Stein is expected at Mount Morris, Ill., Feb. 1st., and will remain but a few days, having been called there on special business. We expect to be with him while he is there. And from that point Brother Eshelman has arranged to go to Hudson, Ill., to hold a series of meetings for the Brethren.

WE are in receipt of a long letter from old Brother Isaac Price, of Pennsylvania. He is getting quite old, too old to preach. His day of labor is over, and now he sits quietly in the boat, musing on the silent past, waiting for the keel to strike the other shore. God bless the old preacher in his declining age, and give him grace to pass gently over.

"THROUGH BIBLE LANDS." Notes of travel in Egypt, the Desert and Palestine, by Phillip Schaff, D. D., LL. D. Square. 12mo. pp 413. New York: American Tract Society. This is the most interesting book sent us for examination since we have been in the publishing business. Every reader should have a copy. Kept at this office for sale, and sent postpaid for $2.25.

BROTHER Jesse Heckler, of Hickory Grove, who has been spending some time preaching in Cedar County, Iowa, returned home week before last. He has made arrangements to locate in Cass County, Neb., in a locality where there are eleven members and no minister. That is the way to spread the truth and build up churches. He thinks of moving sometime in the Spring.

A SENSIBLE brother, who had just united with the church, on being asked to explain some points of the doctrine, replied, "I will explain as far as I understand it, but for the rest you must wait till I learn more." That was certainly a sensible conclusion. Never explain things farther than you know them, and for the rest wait till you learn it. Children should learn to walk before they attempt to run.

SOME years ago a church in Quincy, Ill., so ran down that the Presbytery sent a messenger to formally disband it. He could find no officers, no male members, and only one female member. To his surprise she answered, "I will not be disbanded!" and demanded a minister. A minister was sent, and a church speedily built up. Let small churches with few members make a note of this, stand up for the cause, and keep working away till they get some one to come among them and build up the church.

A PHILADELPHIA minister has the good sense to "oppose the practice of wearing full mourning, contending that it is not consistent with health, sense or religion. He says that a bit of black ribbon, worn in some way, will tell the story of bereavement just as well as a complete mourning suit; by substituting this simple badge of mourning, a weight of useless expense and a costume that is always gloomy and, in warm weather, very uncomfortable, would be taken from the shoulders of bereaved mourners." But among Christians, even the "black ribbon," as a badge, should be dispensed with, as the custom is uncalled for, and adds nothing to the good of the cause in any way, shape or form.

UNDER date of January 18, Brother John Metzger, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., says: "I have been afflicted for some time with rheumatism, so that I could do no labor in the missionary cause. My health is improving somewhat, and if it be the Lord's will I hope the time will soon come that I can start on my mission again, as there are so many hungry souls starving for the Bread of life. Letters come nearly every day, "Can't you come?" We expect to commence meeting in the new meeting house the first of next month. Our meetings in Cerro Gordo have been interesting since the new house is finished; congregations large. Ministering brethren traveling over our railroad, stop with us."

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER V.

Prayer.

YOU say you pray because it is your duty. Is this your highest motive? Do you pray because you are commanded? Do you pray because you have a right to thus speak to your heavenly Father? O, gracious, hallowed privilege! Sweet prayer, divine blessing! How can a man with the love of Christ in him pass by the exalted privilege of prayer?

Many years ago a nation sinned, and God sent fiery serpents among them, and they were sorely tried. They then went to Moses and asked him to pray for them. So it is in this generation. In times of peace, plenty and health the people play, dance, revel and riot in pleasure, but when famine and pestilence come, then they want good men to pray for them. When the calamity is removed then like Pharaoh of old, they go on in pride and extravagance—they want no more prayer.

Faith and Prayer

are twin sisters, and never travel apart. Much faith, much secret and open prayer; little faith, little prayer; no faith, no prayer. "Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving;" so speaks the man of Inspiration. Can a man continue in prayer when he never began? How can a man "watch in the same with thanksgiving," if he never began giving thanks? Is this a command of God? Certainly it is. Is it right to obey the command, "Continue in prayer?" Every voice responds, "It is right." If it be right to obey the command of God, then the man who continues in prayer is continuing to do right, and no man will be condemned for this.

When Jesus, the Christ, had gone up into heaven, the disciples who saw him ascend went into an upper room in Jerusalem, and there "continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren." That was a grand prayer meeting. The apostles were there, women were there—yes, the mother of Jesus was there, and his brethren were there. O, that this old order were not dead, but alive in full power! I do not advocate the pandemonium style of prayer, but the apostolic manner—the orderly manner. Are we not assured that the

of a righteous man availeth much? James 5: 16. Why then neglect the thing which availeth much? Arouse, and on to duty! Let not dull sloth eat up your hope of glory. Ah! why begin, and then draw back? Why this coldness?—why this indifference and carelessness concerning the coming kingdom? Is it because so little effectual prayer is being sent up to the throne of God?

Do you want to know how God answers prayer? That is not the knowledge to seek after. God alone knows when, where and how He will answer as He sees proper. Our business is to ask for the strength which we have not, for the things we need, believing that God will abundantly supply. Of course it is useless to ask Him to do that which we can do ourselves. Why ask Him to give us new hearts, when He has given us all the means to make them new? Do as He bids us, and most assuredly the new heart will be the result. Do not think that you can of Deity by your prayers, for his mind is unchangeable. His mind is to answer all prayer that is right, and wrong prayers never can be answered. He does for us "abundantly above all that we ask or think." We are not called to dictate to the Lord how and what He must do, but to beseech Him—to ask in faith for needed things. "I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." The trouble is not about God answering prayers, but the trouble is there are too few agreeing to ask God in faith. A good many are agreeing to ask for what they see, but the few are asking in faith. Some want to see how God answers prayer, and if they cannot see how He does it, then they will not ask at all. Hear further our Lord, the one Redeemer and Savior: "I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Believe that ye receive when you ask. Is it a strange thing to believe? When Jesus says "believe," can a man obey by not believing, or by doing something else? "O, well," says the skeptic, "suppose I should desire a million dollars, and ask God for it, would He give it to me?" No; riches are a snare to men, and no man should desire to be led into temptation. "Follow after charity and desire spiritual gifts," is the voice of God. "As new-born babes desire the sincere milk of the word," saith the Holy Spirit. Until men can labor as if they labored not; give as though they gave not, skeptical questions will come up. No one should even expect God to answer unholy desires. Should a man suddenly receive a million dollars, he could not endure—down to ruin he would go at once. Then ask for spiritual gifts, for grace, for peace with God, and strength to overcome sin, and the Father will hear. He is ready. He is willing—go to Him now. M. M. E.

PREACHING IN CITIES.

Please tell us why the German Baptists do not preach more in cities and towns? M. Y

THERE may be several reasons for it. Most of our people are engaged in agricultural pursuits, hence live in the rural districts, while comparatively few are found in cities and towns. This has had much to do with keeping our preaching out of towns, for ministers are more inclined to travel and preach where there are members, or where they have special calls to preach, and of course they get but few calls from cities.

The education and general habits of our ministers adapt them to country work much better than that usually required in cities, at least they think so, and for that reason towns have been avoided. It requires more preaching, and harder work to build up and maintain a congregation of our people in town than in the country. To work successfully in a town, the minister himself ought to live there, and give special attention to the work. But owing to the fact that nearly all our ministers are farmers, they are kept in the country, and do not feel disposed to work much in towns.

The want of greater missionary efforts upon the part of our people, has also had much to do in keeping them out of towns. They have but few missionaries, and these are confined to country labor, and do not have time to work up an interest in cities.

I am much in favor of city work, but unless we take hold of it right it will not prove a success. When the apostles went into a city to build up a church, they spent months, and even years in one city. They did not preach a few sermons in one city, and a few more in some other place, and so on, but when they entered a place it was with the intention of accomplishing something, and they were generally successful, because they clung to the work. And if our people intend accomplishing anything in cities they must work on the same principle. Appoint skilful men to the work and let them take their time to it.

The first Christian church established on earth was in the city of Jerusalem. The apostles spent most of their time preaching and building up churches in cities. By them the truth was planted in the larger cities and permitted to work its way into smaller places. Their plan was a successful one.

Times and customs, however, have changed. Our people do their most successful work in the rural districts, though we have a number of churches in towns, and some of them are doing well. The apostles could do more in towns than we. They were better preachers, better informed, had more zeal than most of preachers these times, and then they possessed the peculiar and good faculty of holding on till they accomplished something. They did not preach a few sermons in one city, and then go to another, but took hold of the work with a will and then clung to it. J. H. M.

THE QUINTER AND McCONNELL DEBATE AGAIN.

J. H. Moore—Friend:

SINCE you have published to the world at large, and your brethren in particular, that the Church of Christ, on Dry Creek, Linn county, Iowa, has disbanded or gone down; that it was broken up or went down in consequence of the Quinter and McConnell debate held in that vicinity in October, 1867, and since you point to this as an evidence of the victory Mr. Quinter gained in said discussion, and have likewise said that wherever your people have held discussions with the Disciples, the Disciples have gone down, etc.

Will you permit me to make to your readers a plain statement of facts in reference to the church on Dry Creek, where Quinter and McConnell debated?

In 1850 there were living in that locality a few families, some of whose members were connected with the Church of Christ, which met alternately at Marion [six miles distant] and Dry Creek. About that time they commenced a house of worship which was never finished, still it was occupied as a place of worship for fifteen years. During this time the Diciples built a large and commodious house of worship in Marion, and several families moved into town from the Dry Creek neighborhood—others went elsewhere—still we maintained preaching in that neighborhood somewhat regularly until September, 1863, when I, the only preacher in the county, removed to Oskaloosa to engage in a more general work. That point was neglected, as a result, and only occasionally was there preaching there.

Out of the few families spoken of above, eight sold to German Baptists and moved away. Seven heads of families have died. A few who are left in the neighborhood have membership in the church at Lafayette, and some ten or twelve have membership at Marion. Others not mentioned have moved to other parts, while there are remaining in the vicinity several who have no local membership. Daniel Albaugh, wife and one daughter joined the German Baptists; also Aquilla Newman. Mr. Albaugh always believed with Tunkers, and simply united with the Disciples because there were no Tonkers there at the time, and when a favorable opportunity was offered he went with them. Mrs. Albaugh is a Stiffler from Pennsylvania. Nearly all of her connections are German Baptists. The daughter married a German Baptist, a son of a minister. Aquilla Newman's son and wife have since united with the Church of Christ. Jonathan Keys [who was elected to the ministry by Tonkers] and wife united with the Disciples. Shortly after the debate I baptized the son of a most devoted Tunker, and his brother, who attended the discussion for the purpose of settling, or hearing settled, the issues between the two people, is to-day in sympathy with us, but out of undue deference to the feelings of his mother, withholds his obedience to the Gospel. In March last I baptized the daughter of Mr. Ransier, a most zealous Tunker. She was educated a Tonker in the strictest sense, but when she "became a woman" she turned from the doctrine, and, with her husband, confessed the Christ. Another fact: The German Baptists have no church in the neighborhood where the debate was held. At the time of the debate we had three congregations in the county; the Tunkers one, perhaps two. We now have seven in working order, and a nucleus of some twenty or thirty members within two miles of the Tunker Church for another; and it is confidently expected that within the next year there will be a congregation organized. Besides, we have brethren all over that county not reckoned in these organizations. At the time of the debate we had but one minister living in the county. We now have five, and another spending half his time in Linn county. Our members then would not have exceeded 350. We now double that number, while a large number have gone to other parts. Surely the Quinter and McConnell debate ruined our cause in Linn county, Iowa, in consequence of the grand victory achieved by the head and front of the German Baptist fraternity.

Another young lady, a daughter of a German Baptist, has since been baptized into the one body. Also at other points in the State, where we had no churches at the time of the debate and the German Baptists were strong, we have now flourishing churches.

From the above unvarnished statement of facts, it is evident to every clear-headed, unprejudiced, candid person, that the little band of Diciples, known as the Dry Creek Church, ceased to meet in the meeting-house where the debate was held; not because of the splendid victory of Quinter and the defeat of McConnell, but because of death, emigration, change of local membership, absence of ministers to preach the gospel, the absence of the elders, etc., and the springing up of other congregations. N. A. McCONNELL.

REMARKS.

Some weeks ago Mr. N. A. McConnell was holding a series of meetings at this place, and while here frequently visited the office. A few days before leaving he presented the above, wishing to know if we would publish it, at the same time giving us to understand that if we did not publish it in the BRETHREN AT WORK it would be published elsewhere. Of course, we agreed to give him a hearing, and thought it best to have some additional "unvarnished statement of facts" from the other side of the house to publish along side of his "unvarnished statements," hence sent a proof of the article, and a number of questions, drawn from his article, to the brethren living near where the debate was held. Below are published those questions, followed by the brethren's answers. The reader can likely tell where the "varnish" comes in:

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

1. Who were the eight families that sold to German Baptists?

ANS. None have sold to German Baptists since the debate, but three before the debate.

2. Who were the seven heads of families that died?

A. Quite a number have died, and some have moved away, that is, if we count back twenty-nine years as Mr. McConnell does. But since the debate, only a few have died or moved away.

3. Who are those living in the vicinity that have no local membership?

A. Only three within two miles of the house where the debate was held.

4. Did Mr. Albaugh believe "with Tunkers" before he joined the Campbellite church?

A. No; he first believed the Campbellite doctrine, and probably would have continued with them, had they practiced what they preached.

5. Did he unite with the Brethren church at first opportunity?

A. No; not till about thirteen years after the Brethren organized at Dry Creek, and two years after the debate. [This Albaugh was the elder of the Campbellite church at the time of the debate, but afterwards united with the Brethren.—Ed.]

6. Did Miss Albaugh marry a German Baptist?

A. No; but he and his wife have come to the Brethren since.

7. How long after the discussion was it that "Aquilla Newman's son and wife," joined the Campbellite church?

A. About eleven years.

8. Did Jonathan Keys live in Linn county at the time of the debate?

A. No; we think he lived in Marshall county, and moved back shortly after, bought a home near the Lafayette Campbellite church, and suppose united with them for convenience' sake.

9. Have the "German Baptists" a church in the neighborhood where the debate was held?

A. Yes; members all around, and a meeting-house within two and a half miles.

10. Has the Brethren church increased or decreased in the neighborhood where the debate was held?

A. Increased; nearly all are Brethren within two miles around the Campbellite house where the debate was held.

11. Have the Campbellites increased or decreased where the debate was held?

A. Decreased; no worship in the old church any more. [And but few meetings have been held there by the Campbellites since the discussion.—Ed.]

12. Have the Campbellites seven churches in working order near where the debate was held?

A. No; the nearest is two and a half miles north of the Brethren's house. The Brethren have preached some in there.

13. How many united with the Campbellite church at the time of the debate?

A. One, at the time of the debate.

14. How many united with the Brethren church at the time of the debate?

A. Eleven at time of debate.

15. How many members were there in the Campbellite church at the time of discussion?

A. They had some forty or fifty at the time of the debate, but at present no church.

16. How many members were there in the Brethren church at time of debate?

A. About fifty; at present there are five ministers, six deacons and about one hundred and eight lay members.

17. Did more Campbellites die than Brethren?

A. About an equal number of each church have died, and more Brethren have moved away than Campbellites.

One of our sisters turned Campbellite for a few years, and dressed in the vain fashions of the world, but she soon saw that was not the way to heaven, and so turned back to the Brethren church. Five Campbellites joined the Brethren's church.

"Surely the Quinter and McConnell debate ruined" the Dry Creek Campbellite church. But we don't want to boast of our work: give God the glory.

ADDITIONAL REMARKS.

We are not aware that we "have published to the world at large," "that the Church of Christ, on Dry Creek, Linn county, Iowa, has disbanded or gone down," but as a matter of news, it has been published to some extent, that the "Campbellite Church has disbanded or gone down in consequence of the Quinter and McConnell debate." The "Church of Christ, on Dry Creek, Linn county, Iowa," stands to-day firm as a rock, but the "Campbellite Church" is among the things of the past. It could not stand the light of truth shining upon its unscriptural practices. We are not any ways alarmed about the "Church of Christ" going down. It has stood the test too long for that.

From the above "unvarnished statement of facts," from both sides of the house, it would seem clear that the "Quinter and McConnell debate" did ruin the Campbellite Church on Dry Creek. Of course, we do not claim that it materially affected the mind of every man, woman and child in the State, nor that it changed the minds of thousands in Linn county who did not hear the debate, but that it did have some effect on the "Dry Creek" Campbellite Church is evident from the "unvarnished statements" before us. The question is not what effect the debate had where it was not held, but what effect had it on the Campbellite Church "on Dry Creek, Linn county, Iowa?" The debate was held in their house, their people listened to it, some of them were convinced by it and united with the Brethren, and among them was the elder of the Campbellite Church. Here is "unvarnished statement of facts" for you. But hear the gentleman in his closing paragraph. He says:

"From the above unvarnished statement of facts, it is evident to every clear-headed, unprejudiced, candid person, that the little band of Dizciples, known as the Dry Creek Church, ceased to meet in the meeting-house where the debate was held; not because of the splendid victory of Quinter and the defeat of McConnell, but because of death, emigration, change of local membership, absence of ministers to preach the gospel, the absence of the elders, etc., and the springing up of other congregations."

Now why did he not say that the "absence of the elders" was caused, to a great extent, by one of them joining the Brethren, because convinced that the Campbellite doctrine was not Scriptural? I presume that is an "unvarnished" fact. And then he speaks of "death," "emigration" and "change of local membership," but what the brethren say, in answer to our questions above, takes all the starch out of Mr. McConnell's "unvarnished statements of facts." MORE HEART CONVERSION.

THERE are persons who, because they were baptized with certain things on, think they have a Gospel right to continue wearing them. They say, "If these things were good enough to be baptized in, there is no harm in wearing them." When people talk that way, there is something not just right about the heart. More than likely the heart has not been fully converted. People who hate the things they once loved, and now love the things they once hated, are not inclined to evade the Gospel simplicity in that way.

When old brother Henry Kurtz was baptized he was attired in his priestly robes. How would it have looked for him to have continued wearing them, claiming that if they were good enough to be baptized in, they were good enough to wear? It is presumable that the Ethiopian eunuch was baptized in his official costume. Should he have continued in his official costume all the days of his life just because he was baptized that way? Paul, who was baptized only a few days after being convicted, had not time to lay aside his costly array and attire himself in becoming plainness before his baptism, and he laid no claim to the privilege of dressing in the style of the world. The same might be said of the three thousand who were baptized on the day of Pentecost. They were convicted and baptized the same day, and doubtless many of them were attired in their fashionable garbs, yet they did not plead for fashion on that ground. Nor will any other person whose heart has been fully converted.

It at times so happens that persons are convicted and baptized the same day; and not unfrequently while fashionably attired. This cannot be well avoided. But for such persons to come up and plead that they can dress fashionably all the days of their lives, just because they were so dressed when baptized, shows that something is not just right. They need a renewing of the mind before they can prove by their walk and conversation just what is right. The heart needs a little more conversion. J. H. M.

MEETINGS in Lanark closed Sunday evening. One applicant for baptism.

AND now comes a report, stating that a Cincinnati engineer has just completed a contract with French capitalists to build a narrow guage railroad from Jaffa to Jerusalem.

THE sufferings in England, from the great depression in business, is increasing, and it is feared that the worst has not yet come. The poor and weak must go to the wall; the death rate is constantly increasing, and crimes are becoming more numerous.

JUST as we were about finishing this page, we received a letter from Brother David F. Eby, stating that Brother Daniel Miller is having good success on the Wisconsin mission. Four have been baptized, and among them was an aged Campbellite preacher. The interest was running high, and the congregations large.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell"

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible. In order to promote Bible Truth, Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL PENROD.

What is the meaning of the last two words of 1 Cor. 16: 22? "Anathema Maran atha," and what language is it? W. H. MILLER.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DITRICK.

Please give an explanation on 1 Cor. 5: 5: "To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." M. W. KEIM.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

1. How many thrones are referred to in Rev. 22: 1? 2. What constituted the baptism of "our fathers" referred to in 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2? 3. How often were they baptized unto Moses?

THOMAS BLACK, JR.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22:2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5, 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc.

S. A. FLICKINGER.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the house-top not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE REEDY.

Some one will please explain Mark 16: 17, 18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Who is referred to?

J. L. BROWN.

WISE MASTER BUILDER.

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 3: 12, 13? 1. Who is the builder? 2. What the material? 3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire? 4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire? B. B. WHITMER.

WHO is the builder? I say Paul. He was in this case spoken of as a "wise master-builder." He was then going about and building up churches, and was one of the builders of the Corinthian church, and he (Paul) said that they were the temple of God, and if any man would defile the temple he would be destroyed. So those that would defile the temple are some of the wood, hay and stubble which are perishable matter; and those that would not defile are the gold, silver, and precious stone, which are called the substantial material of which the temple of God is built. At the coming of the Lord Jesus every man's work shall be tried, hence all the temples that are built on Jesus Christ, that sure foundation, which Paul had laid for the Corinthians, will be tested, and he is warning those who would build on that foundation that they should be careful how they build thereon, for the work was all to be tried; and as Paul was the wise master builder, he would be saved even if many of his converts would be destroyed as hay, stubble and wood. I think that all those who are preaching and converting men and women to Christ are builders in the cause of Christ and should not build wood, hay and stubble on that foundation. Were this done there would be less trouble in the church in the present day. Troublesome members, about doctrinal points are members who are taken into the church before they are taught, and then when another one like Paul comes along and preaches the whole doctrine, such members will become stubble in the church to the man that had converted them.

M. FORNEY.

IN THE IMAGE AND LIKENESS OF GOD.

We read in Gen. 1: 26: "Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness." Did God make man in the form of himself, or was the image spiritual?

A. HOLLINGER.

AHEAD, eyes, ears, mouth, arms, hands, fingers and almost every part of the human body, are mentioned throughout the Scriptures as also belonging to God. The human body is suited to the character and nature of man, as the body of every animal and plant is adapted to its peculiar use; and evidently more than in these must there be harmony in everything that pertains to God. And so far as man is in His image and likeness so far must he be like Him; and this as to form, for in Jesus, God appeared as a man; and in spirit also, if we live Christ-like, for could He be otherwise in us and we in Him? See John 17: 21-23. J. R. HOFFER.

THE ORPHAN.

BY DELLA STUTSMAN.

I'm in this world of care
Without a father's love;
No mother's voice in evening prayer—
They are with God above.

No sister's gentle smile—
No brother left me here;
I'm left alone a little while
Without a kindred dear.

But Jesus is my friend,
In Him I put my trust,
So when my life on earth shall end,
I'll dwell among the just.

And when in that great day,
What pleasures mine will be,
If in that world so far away,
My parents I shall see.

And when you kneel to pray,
Add just one word for me,
That I more patient every day,
And faithful try to be.

THE LOVE OF GOD.

BY JAMES WIRT.

THE fall of man in Eden's garden gave an occasion for an exhibition of the grace of God towards the human family, and there are two personages more prominently brought to view in man's fall and redemption. The fall was occasioned by the disobedience of the first man, "who was of the earth earthy;" the atonement was accomplished by the Model Man, "the Lord from heaven." When we consider that "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself" during the period of His suffering, labor and self-denial, we may then more easily see that the supreme love of our Creator was extended to us, and this will enlist our sympathy and support to forward the cause of Christ; and could we also know that we are the recipients of divine compassion, our benevolent natures should be called out in affectionate obedience to all the requisitions of our divine Teacher, as the promised rewards contained in the Gospel to fallen man flow only to those who are faithful in Christ. The commands are to occupy till he comes, and if we are faithful over a few things, we shall be made ruler over many things, when we enter the joys of our Lord. Our life should be "hid with Christ in God." If we are "risen with Christ" we will "set our affections on things above," and not exclusively on things of earth. Through the work of redemption our salvation has been obtained, as we "have been bought with a price"—the precious blood of Christ, which entitles us to an inheritance with all the saints in light. Behold what manner of love that we should be called the sons of God, and equal with our Elder Brother in the fruition of heaven.

By constantly dwelling upon the truth of the Gospel, we imbibe the nature of its Author, and when we are "thoroughly furnished for every good work" we will be like him, for this enables us to see Him as he is; Christ was interested during his ministry, in the work of his Father. He was heard to say, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work, and greater works than these shall ye do because I go to the Father." After Christ finished the work of his Father on earth, he ascended to heaven, and is now seated on the right hand of the throne of God, interceding for us. The promised Comforter, the Holy Spirit, is at present with the children of God, guiding them into the way of truth and righteousness, that was pointed out by Jesus, our Exampler. This is done by bringing to our remembrance all things whatsoever he would have us perform.

Now, since God has done so much for us, are we not willing also to deny ourselves, take up our cross and follow the Captain of our salvation, who was "made perfect through suffering" and "was tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin?" Through the present life we may prepare for that future state of existence beyond the grave, where we may become in possession of the glorious felicities revealed unto us by the Holy Spirit in our home in the heavenly world, and be permitted to associate with holy angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect through the atoning blood of the Savior. There we may dwell among the blood-washed throng of the redeemed, and eternally show forth the praises of him who has loved us, and has done so much for us by denying himself of the glory he had with the Father, and stooping so low as to take upon himself our humanity; that by so doing he might draw us back into the bosom of the Father, to again enjoy that sweet fellowship and communion severed by our fall from innocency and purity before contaminated with sin.

Meditating upon the precious truths of the Gospel of Christ enables us to grow in grace and the knowledge of divine things, for the truths of the Bible are food for the soul; it is by this means that the divine nature is developed, and from babes in Christ we grow up to the full stature of the man Christ Jesus.

How consoling to the minds of those who have been refreshed after the image of him who created them to dwell upon the destinies of our immortal spirits. Our highest natures can only be satisfied when we awake in the likeness of our Redeemer, though at present it doth not fully appear what we shall be; neither are our finite conceptions able to comprehend what it is to be like Christ.

Our greatest delight and highest ambition should be, that after the vicissitudes of life are over, we may ourselves be in a state of readiness, and have induced as many other members of the race who came under our influence also to have embraced the Gospel of the blessed Son of God, that they, with us, may receive the crown of life when death intercepts our earthly career, or Christ comes to collect his jewels—the precious ones of earth—and gather them home, where they may have a right to the "tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city," the New Jerusalem. "Blessed are they who do the commandments."

There are many great and precious promises contained in the written Word, and the enjoyment of these are insured to us if obedient to such commands as "If ye love me keep my commandments." Christ gave to men a perfect law, and this law contains the new commandment that we should love one another. He opened up a "new and living way" from earth to a blessed immortality. Our hopes of eternal life are continually confirmed while contemplating upon the meritorious work of our dear Lord. The children of God are at present the recipients of his grace, and enjoy, to a limited extent, the blessings of Christianity. The reason they do not enjoy more is because Satan is permitted to exert his influence in opposition to the peaceful doctrines of the cross; but when once he is bound, and his power circumscribed within the narrow limits of the "bottomless pit," then will the long, and much desired reign of Christ in person begin on earth, and the "kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of Christ" and yield to him their happy allegiance.

MOSHEIM'S "AN IMMERSION."

BY SAMUEL SALA.

MOSHEIM, in his Ecclesiastical History says: "Baptism was performed in the first century, by an immersion of the whole body in the baptismal font." This is considered, by some, as being equivalent to saying single immersion was practiced in the first century; but trine immersion is also an immersion of the whole body, for the whole body is immersed in the sense Mosheim refers to the "an immersion." The question then is, What did Mosheim mean by "an immersion of the whole body?" Evidently trine immersion, for the following reasons: 1. He cites Girard Vossius as his authority, and Vossius says, "The ancient church practiced trine immersion all over the world, except Spain." 2. On page 91, Vol. 1, in a note at the bottom of the page, he says, "Tertullian gives an account of the ceremonies used in baptism in the second century, and says: 'They were not dipped once, but thrice.'" 3. On page 113, on the subject of baptism, he refers to the second book of Chrysostom, who says: "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism, in three immersions of the body." 4. On the same page he says: "Jerome and Augustine were great and noble men, and labored to infuse into the minds of the people just notions of religion." And Jerome says, "We are thrice dipped in water that the mystery of the Trinity may appear to be but one." Augustine says, "After you professed your belief, three times did we submerge your heads in the sacred fountain."

This is sufficient to show what was the general practice of all antiquity.

NUMBER IX.

The Old Year—New Year's Day—A New Field —The Fading Flower—Another Day's Labor in the Camp.

ANOTHER year is now numbered with the things of the past.—Yes gone with all its joys and sorrows, and the result will only be revealed in eternity. Ah, what has the past year not seen! It has witnessed in this our beloved land, a country blessed with peace and prosperity. Productiveness every-where, and garners well filled—the result of the labor from the hands of the husbandmen. Universal peace abounds within her borders and with sister nations, and no calamities have befallen her save the scourge of the fever-stricken South. It has witnessed many sorrows throughout the world, nations arrayed against nations, and many noble sons have fallen victims in this dreadful carnage to satisfy the ambition of ungodly men. It has also witnessed disasters upon land and sea; all of which teach us that we are doomed to dissolution and must pass away. In the peace and prosperity enjoyed, it should awake thankfulness in every heart and prompt us all to greater obedience to our Divine Father. In the trials and tribulations endured should cause adoration to flow from every heart and acknowledge a power Divine, who governs the universe and guides the destiny of nations.

New Year's day is here—and a very cold day it is, and while we draw our comforter around us, bracing the storm or sit by the hot fire on this cold Winter's day, how many in this wide world are suffering for the necessaries of life, and do not enjoy the blessings that we, through the Providence of God, are permitted to do. Should not this awaken sympathy within our hearts towards the poor? The depth of our sympathy is always measured by the amount of practical benefit we bestow upon the suffering ones. This is a fact that all should remember.

This is Sunday, and the word of life will be held forth from the stand to the people throughout the land. Oh, may God enlighten the minds of the Pauls and the Peters, that this day the truths of the Gospel may be spoken in such convincing terms that many wanderers will return to the fold of Christ. Brother W. C. Teeter and brother E. Bosserman conducted the services at the Old church, and preached unto the people as God gave ability, and we learn, had good audience and attention.

The writer opened up a New Field among the Baptists, down on the Blanchard, and preached in their church to quite an interesting congregation. To stand in the temple holding forth the truths of the Gospel, is a very responsible position, yet it affords me pleasure to teach humanity the way everlasting, that we might all become more God-like, and be brought so near his holy image, that he can see God in us and dwell with us and we with him throughout the annals of eternity.

To-day we received the intelligence that the brethren and friends are worshiping at the house of mourning at the Old church. A little blooming plant of brother Phyles is now wrapped in the cold embrace of death, and aching hearts is the sad lot of that dear family. Brother E. Bosserman officiated in the funeral obsequies, and held forth the truths of the Gospel as God gave ability. This world is one vast house of mourning. Though many are the joys associated in life, yet sorrow and grief are the common lot of all. Our associations in life are of short duration. Soon, ah very soon we see a separation, the wife; the husband, the parent or child is stepping off the stage of action, and sad hearts rest in the bosom of the survivors. This exemplifies the fact clearly to our minds, that in this life we have no abiding place, all doomed to dissolution however dear to us. This, then, draws the mind and our aspirations heavenward, "Knowing in yourselves that ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance." What a consolation to the Christian! This is the inheritance gained, the "enduring substance," which Paul calls "an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time." 1 Peter 1: 4, 5. This is the Christian's hope, and upon this anchor we rest and await the bidding of the Master. Sinner, would you have this hope, this holy peace and serenity within your soul? Lay hold on the promises of God by yielding obedience to all His divine commands, that when life with all its trials are over, you can live in peace and bliss in that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Lord's day is here again, and hailed with joy by the believers in Christ, and onward we go to our field of labor. Our home mission field being somewhat large, and the calls for preaching frequent, we divide up the ministerial force, and alternate each Sunday, thus building up the cause by mutual labor. Brother E. Bosserman met the appointment at the Gardner school-house. Brethren W. C. Teeter and Jacob Witmore at Pleasant Ridge church. The writer at a point some fifteen miles distant, near Findlay, Ohio. We met a full house, and tried to entertain them for a while in the spirit of the Gospel. Subject, "The blind Beggar." Mark 10: 46–52. Many souls are sitting outside the gate and are totally blind; cannot see any attractiveness or beauty in the person of Jesus Christ or the Christian religion. Thus they sit and procrastinate until the harvest is past, the Summer ended and their soul is not saved. Now and then a few are made sensible of their condition and they, like the blind man, are begging, and when Jesus makes that path His passing way, they embrace the opportunity and cry, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy upon me," obey the call, comply with the conditions, and are saved. Oh sinner, Jesus is passing by, perhaps this is the last chance, the last opportunity. Will you not seize the blessing while it may be obtained? Come, oh come, Jesus will stop and effect a cure. Will you permit him?

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Jan. 14th, 1879.

From the Pacific Coast.

FOR the satisfaction of many of the readers of the BRETHREN AT WORK, I will say, I left my family and residence on the 6th of Nov., en route for Washington and Idaho Territories, on a mission of love. Traveled most of the way by steamboat, some by railroad, some by stage, sometimes on a wagon, some on horseback and some on foot. Arrived at brother Moses Hunts, Columbia Co., W. T. on the 11th of November. Remained with the Brethren here a few days. Had a very small council meeting on the 14th.

On the 15th, in company with brother A. E. Troyer, of Columbia Co., we started for the Palouse country; arrived at brother A. P. Flory's, Whitman Co., W. T., on the 15th. Had a small meeting on Sunday afternoon.

On the 17th, in company with brother Flory, we started to brother Abraham Steward's. Arrived there the same evening. This is in Nezperce county, Idaho Territory. We found nine members of the church residing in this neighborhood. Here we held a series of meetings; had ten public meetings and one council meeting, at which time we organized a church, calling it the Palouse Valley church. There were seventeen members present, and all agreed to carry out the general order of the church. We then held a choice for a minister and deacon; the lot fell on brother Thomas Steward for minister and brother Nathan West for deacon. May the Lord enable them to be useful and faithful in their calling. They had one deacon before we organized the church, viz., brother William R. King. The address of all these official brethren is Moscow, Nezperce Co., Idaho Territory. During these meetings there was one accession by baptism. These were the first meetings ever held by the Brethren in that county.

On the 28th of Nov., in company with brethren Thomas Steward and Nathan West, we started for the Pataha church, Columbia Co., W. T. Arrived at brother A. E. Troyer's on the 29th. Remained here one week; had seven meetings and one council meeting. Found things in a pitiful condition with most of the members—so much so that it was necessary to disorganize this church. On the morning I left that neighborhood there were two made application for membership, to be attended to at the first opportunity that will offer itself.

December the 7th, C. W. Frick conveyed me down to brother F. N. Winder's, the same county. Had two meetings here.

On Monday, the 9th, brother F. N. Winder conveyed me to Dayton, the county seat of Columbia Co. Went from Dayton to Walla Walla city. Arrived at Walla Walla city on the 11th. Lodged with brother George Bashor, who resides about one mile East of the city. Next day, went out to David Bashor's, nine miles nearly South of Walla Walla, where I met brother David and sister Kiester, who arrived here from Ill. the 8th of Nov. While in this neighborhood, held four meetings; thence back to Walla Walla city the 16th of Dec. Remained here with brother George Bashors, I then started on the train for Wallula and arrived the same evening. Next morning, I started on the steamboat for Multnomah county, in the lower end of the Willamette Valley. Arrived at Stott's Landing, near the mouth of Sandy river, on the 20th. Lodged with friend J. Stott; next day I went to brother J. Heiney's. Here we held six meetings, five at the White school-house and one at Stott's school-house. On Friday the 27th, brother J. Heiney conveyed me to Portland, and next day to Dayton, Yamhill Co., where we had three meetings. Lodged with brother Samuel Douey on Sunday night; thence home, at which place I arrived on the 31st of Dec. Found all in moderate health. While I was on my trip I had very good luck, enjoyed good health and generally met a very kind reception; preached thirty-three sermons since the 15th of November, and attended three council meetings. Had very good attention generally, for which I feel truly thankful to the Lord and to the brethren and sisters and friends for their kindness towards me.

Distance traveled on the above journey is between eight and nine hundred miles.

Now after taking the above long and tedius trip, being absent from home eight weeks, and having labored hard for the cause of our Divine Master, I wish to say to the Brethren in the Atlantic States, that we need help here on this coast very much indeed. We have a scope of country all of five hundred miles in length, with only one ordained elder to preside over these scattered brethren and churches. Eastern Oregon, Washington Territory and Idaho Territory, as it stands now only have one organized church, with only one young minister and three deacons, who reside at Moscow, Idaho Territory, near the line between W. T. and I. T.; and here in the Willamette Valley church, we have a large territory with only a very few working ministers, and our members very scattering indeed. While you are working at the missionary cause out there, think of the large field of labor here in the Far West. Could not some of the elders, ministers, deacons and private members emigrate to this country, and settle down somewhere, and help us carry on the great work of the Lord? Souls are starving here for the bread and water of life.

There are so many calls here for meeting—many more than we can comply with; and very seldom do I have any ministerial help at our meetings, while you in there often have from four to eight or more ministers present at one meeting. Will you not consider our condition? Can you do your duty and not heed this Macedonian call? Our country is good enough, and the climate mild. We have had very little rain since the 15th of Nov., and a few little snows; mostly very fair weather of late; but this is not common here at this season of the year.

Since I arrived home we had six meetings here in our neighborhood. Brother A. H. Baltimore, of Albany, Linn Co., was with us at four of these meetings. Attention and order were good. Closed our meetings last night. Our text last night was the Lord's Supper, showing the difference between the Jewish passover and the Supper instituted by the Savior the last night before His crucifixion.

Yours fraternally,

DAVID BROWER.

Dear Brethren:—

I LEFT Colorado the 7th of last month, and arrived here the 10th. Glad to meet with the dear friends again; but feel sad to see the cause not progressing as it should. There is no one that loves the cause of our Master, that looks indifferently upon a congregation that has lost its influence, especially when they have seen the rise and progress, and have labored, wept, and prayed for its success and triumphant victory over error. But alas! when ministers fail to work, losing their influence, deacons unwilling to give the people encouragement and the laity cold and indifferent, how sad to think, sinners driven farther and farther from the church, and probably die without even being brought into the fold of Christ; all because the church has not the power to save, nor the influence to draw. Yet there are some warm-hearted brethren and sisters who have sad hearts and low spirits, to them I will say, never cease praying to Him who maketh intercession for you with groanings that cannot be uttered. Erect the family altar, and once a day, or oftener get your families together and bow in sincere prayer. If you thus bring about a reform in your own home, then you may expect a reform in your neighbors' homes.

In conclusion will say, we expect to return to Colorado and make that our future home. Think it as good a country as any one could desire. Myself and little family will leave for Kansas, to see our sister whom we have not seen for several years.

Missionary Convention.

THIS missionary question has been talked of by quite a number of brethren in Middle Indiana, and at a Love-feast last Fall. Two councils were held, and both decided in favor of a convention, and I was requested to correspond with the brethren to obtain a place to hold the Convention. On application to Jonas Umbaugh, the elder of the Spring Creek congregation, he informed me that they will take the meeting. Consequently on the 22nd day of April next, this meeting will be held with the Spring Creek brethren. As this is an adjoining congregation to where the next District Meeting will be held the day following, brethren can come to the Convention and then be conveyed to D. M. A general invitation is given. Brethren coming by rail to the convention will necessarily have to come on the 21st to Purston or Colamo stations on the Eel River Valley R. R., where they will be met with conveyance and taken to place of meeting. Brethren of Middle Indiana are way behind our sister State districts in this noble work, which has for its object the salvation of souls. Now let us organize on the Brethren's Work of Evangelism, or some suitable plan that we may agree upon.

In the Midst of Life we are in Death.

THIS thought was brought very forcibly to our minds by the circumstances attending a visit to Bedford Co., this State, from which we have just returned. On last Saturday morning I left home by special request by letter, to visit a sick brother, he wishing to be anointed. I traveled twenty-five miles on the cars. Was met by a brother with conveyance, then traveling ten miles brought me to the place where he resided. Arrived at 5 o'clock P. M. Found him suffering exceedingly in body, but altogether rational. I talked with him concerning his desires and hopes, and the probability of the near approach of death. After talks of these things, he calmly and intelligently expressed his resignation to the will of Him in whose hand his destiny was.

About one hour after my arrival the brother who was called to be with me in the service arrived. We then still waited for the arrival of some friends who were expected, nearly another hour elapsed before they came. At that the sick brother asked to be lifted up. He sat up on a chair a few minutes. We were now preparing to commence the work; however he asked to be laid down again. He arose upon his feet, and asked his attendants not to press too hard upon his body, was in the act of falling, was laid upon his bed (as we thought) in a fainting condition. Re-toratives were administered, but alas! the spirit had departed and brother Jacob Clingenpeel was numbered with those that sleep in Jesus. We were sorry that the anointing was not actually performed, yet virtually I believe it was, and that the blessing designed was imparted to him. Thus just about two hours after my arrival, he passed away. I remained over Sunday, and on Monday at 11 o'clock, preached the funeral to a large congregation, (considering the inclemency of the weather) of sympathizing friends and relatives, including the youthful, distressed and heart-broken widowed sister, with her infant of a few months in her arms. Thus were severed the union in matrimonial life of about thirteen months. These affectionate hearts, seven months of this short period, were consecrated to the service of God, which secures to them the assurance that He will, with the precious gift of a Savior, "Freely with him give them all things."

The subject of this sketch was about twenty-five years of age, and only a few short weeks ago, bid as fair for long life as any other, and presents to all the importance of being always ready.

B. F. MOOMAW.

From George W. Cripe.

I LEFT home on the 23rd of December to hold a protracted meeting with the Brethren at Millmine, Illinois: preached three discourses, and on Christmas I went to Cerro Gordo, to attend a Communion. The occasion was a very solemn one, being the first meeting of the kind ever held in Cerro Gordo, and what made it still more solemn, the meeting was held in the new meeting-house, built by our dear old brother John Metzger, and he being very much afflicted at the time—so much so that the Brethren were afraid he would endanger his life by attending, and tried to persuade him not to attend. But the dear old brother said, "You can wrap me up in blankets and robe, and carry me out to the sleigh, and then carry me into the church, and I do not think it will hurt me." They did so, and to see the dear old brother sitting during the services and enjoying the feast as he did, though suffering severe pain, impressed our minds more of the feelings of our blessed Lord, at the time he instituted this sacred ordinance. Immediately afterwards I thought of the many excuses some make in trying to justify themselves for absenting from the house of God; here was the dear old brother who had preached the glad tidings some forty-five years, and spent thousands of dollars in time and money, now in his old days built a nice, comfortable church in which the people of Cerro Gordo can meet and worship God, which again cost him about two thousand dollars. May God bless him and reward him abundantly, and may we redouble our diligence, and spend more time and money for the Redeemer's kingdom. If we had one hundred such men, the glad tidings of salvation could be preached among all nations. May God operate on the hearts of those who are blessed with thousands, to give more freely to the cause of God.

We went back to Millmine; preached some eleven more discourses; had small congregations, owing to the stormy weather. Two baptized on Friday after New Year's day, by elder David Trostle.

I came home and commenced preaching. We are still holding meetings, but no additions yet. We have large congregations. Hope the Lord will bless our labors.

Our Papers.

TRULY our church papers are welcome visitors to the Christian family, bringing good news from all parts of the brotherhood. Almost every paper tells of some precious souls who have come out on the Lord's side, and have forsaken the kingdom of Satan, and have enlisted under the banner of King Jesus in the army of the saints, to fight the battle of the Lord. This is encouraging to the followers of Christ. They also come loaded with many soul-cheering sermons from all parts of the brotherhood, encouraging the saint on his pilgrimage journey, and warning sinners to flee from the wrath to come. I am truly glad to see that so many of our dear brethren and sisters are taking such an active part in making our papers both interesting and profitable to saint as well as to sinner. Our papers are good missionaries. They make their weekly visits to many families, where our ministers cannot. They are also good preachers at home where the ministry is weak, to aid in converting souls to Christ. This we have experienced in Cowley Co., Kan., where our organization is not quite three years old. Our number is few and the ministry weak, and the doctrine new to most people; yet we have two live agents for the BRETHREN AT WORK, who are introducing the paper to families who will not come to hear the Brethren preach. One of our agents one year ago was a servant of the world, and engaged in playing cards, playing the fiddle, cursing and swearing, chewing and smoking tobacco; he has now forsook all these things, and is now a faithful worker in the vineyard of the Lord.

The Witter and Hixon Debate.

Dear Brethren:—

THE discussion between brother A. J. Hixon and Mr. Witter, of which you have several times made mention through the columns of your paper, took place here at the Brethren's meeting-house Dec. 26th and 27th. It passed off pleasantly. I will give you the proposition:

Baptism as commanded by the Lord, and practiced by the apostles and their immediate successors, was one immersion into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. Mr. Witter affirmed, brother Hixon denied.

Some of the Brethren feared that brother Hixon would not be able to compete with the learned Baptist; but their fears were premature, for he proved himself capable to meet any emergency. The people generally, except the Baptists, claim that the Brethren's cause came out successful, and some even express the idea that Mr. Witter will never challenge our Brethren for another debate on baptism.

The Brethren feel much elated over the effort of their champion. Brother Hixon's closing speech was truly eloquent; and judging from the appearance of Mr. Witter and the audience, we feel that they felt the force and weight of it, too.

This is brother Hixon's first discussion; Mr. Witter has considerable experience in discussions, having taken part in several.

DENNIS CLARK.

Good Hope, Ohio.

From Limestone, Tennessee.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have had, so far, considerable rain and cold weather this Winter. For a month past, embracing the latter part of December and first of January, the weather has been quite cold for this climate, though with light snow falls. The coldest was about three degrees below zero.

During last Sunday, the waters were quite high in this vicinity, doing considerable damage to farms, carrying away fences, etc.

The Brethren in a number of congregations have devoted the Christmas season to religious exercises, seeking to glorify God, to advance His kingdom, and to renew their spiritual strength. As a result, many poor hungry souls were fed with the Bread of life, and greatly refreshed, and a number were gathered from the ranks of sin into the fold of Christ. At Cherokee eleven were added to the church, including two reclaimed. At Limestone seven were added by baptism and one reclaimed, while at Leesburgh, eight were baptized and three more applicants, making thirty accessions in all at the three places above named.

"O, praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise Him, all ye people, for His merciful kindness is great towards us: and the truth of the Lord endureth forever. Praise ye the Lord."

J. B. PENCE.

Jan. 16, 1879.

From the Springfield Church, Summit County, Ohio.

WE commenced a series of meetings in our meeting-house, on the evening of January 1st, 1879, and closed on the evening of the 5th. The first few days were very cold, and we had small meetings, and just about the time the people became interested, the meetings closed, with no additions. Brother S. J. Peck, of Lanark, Ill., did the principal preaching, assisted by brother J. J. Hoover and S. Sprankle, of Stark county, who are both young in the ministry, but able speakers, and several others of adjoining districts; so we did not lack for ministerial help.

On the 8th, a series of meetings commenced in the West Nimishillen church, Stark county, where brother Peck did nearly all the preaching. Preaching twice a day, and one day three times.

JACOB MISHLER.

Magadore, Ohio, Jan. 13, 1879.

From Labette Co., Kansas.

BROTHER Sydney Hodgden came to us on the 27th of December, and labored with us until the 2nd of January. He worked hard for the good cause, and made lasting impressions, as bread cast upon the waters will be gathered many days hence. It has been over one year since he preached in this county. The members had become cold and careless, and the first was to get them all right. We called a council meeting at sister Chrisbaum's house. Opened meeting by singing and prayer; then brother Gish read the 12th chapter of Romans. Brother Hodgden then proposed to organize a church. As it is the first in Kansas we named it the Labette County church, composed of twenty-four members. Brother Joel Kenberry and the writer are in the first degree of the ministry. Brother Hodgden has the oversight of this congregation. Oh, if we had many more brother Hodgdens, good earnest laborers as he is, the Gospel would soon be preached where it is not known.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

STEWART.—Mary Margret Stewart was born August 9th, 1843, and married Samuel R. Johnson, October 18th, 1870, and died January 8th, 1879, aged 35 years, 4 months and 29 days. GEORGE DAVIS.

WHITMORE. Near South English, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Jan. 12th, 1879, Francis Whitmore, widow of David Whitmore, aged 46 years, 8 months, and 28 days.

She moved with her son-in-law, Eli Jones from Rockingham Co., Virginia, about three years ago. She was a member of the Mennonite church, and seemed to be zealous in the cause of her Master. Funeral services in the Brethren's meeting-house, by the writer, from Matthew 24: 44. SAMUEL FLORY.

PERRY.—In Cicero church, Hamilton Co., Indiana, Dec. 3rd, Jacob Perry, son of J. N. and M. J. Perry, aged 16 months. Disease diphtheria.

PERRY.—In the same family, of the same disease, Dec. 4th, Anna Perry, aged 6 years and 10 months. Funeral by Pierce and Bowser.

KISER.—In the Saginaw church, December 7th, 1878, Peter Kiser, son of brother and sister Julian Kiser, in the 15th year of his age.

Peter and his younger brother and a neighbor boy went out to shoot rabbits by moonlight. They saw a rabbit and the neighbor boy shot at it, and Peter only about eight yards from him was shot. The whole load of shot entered the lower part of the shoulder blade and passed through to the heart, causing instant death. There is some suspicion that the boy did it intentionally, as there are some mysterious things connected with the affair. Yesterday the boy had a trial, but did not get through with it. His father had gone away with the writer, and also his son and wife, to attend a meeting the next day. We did not get home until the next morning, and when we entered the room we witnessed a sad sight. The funeral sermon was preached by elder Isaac Miller, of Barry county, Michigan, assisted by the writer, from Phil. 1: 21. This text was selected by the two little sisters of the departed one. They have the sympathy of the entire community. Z. ALBAUGH.

WHITELEATHER.—Near Milwood, Indiana, Jason M., son of brother Moses and sister Susan Whiteleather, aged 1 year, 8 months and 15 days. Funeral services by the Brethren. J. H. MILLER.

GREEK.—In Home district, near Wyandot county, Ohio, Nov. 4th, 1878, sister Elizabeth Ann Greek, wife of brother Simon Greek, aged 36 years, 8 months and 9 days.

She leaves a kind husband and seven children to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. Funeral services by the writer and brother John Kabell, from Heb. 9: 27. JOHN P. EBERSOLE.

PHENICIE.—In the bounds of the Urbana arm of the church, Nora L., daughter of friends Joseph and Louisa Phenicie, aged 4 years and 9 days. Disease diphtheria.

Nora was a sweet child, the youngest and pet of the family. But Jesus transplanted this dear little floweret to fairer healthier climes. In thy better home may we meet thee. MATTIE A. LEAR.

STONEBROOK.—At Henrietta, Blair Co., Pennsylvania, Jan. 9th, 1879, of heart disease, my beloved father, aged 66 years, 7 months and 26 days. Funeral services by brother Daniel Holsinger and others, from Rev. 16: 15. S. B. STONEBROOK.

Dick's Sideral Heavens.—The Sideral Heavens, and other Subjects connected with Astronomy, as illustrative of the Character of the Deity, and of an Infinity of Worlds. By Thomas Dick, LL. D. Illustrations. 18mo, Cloth, 75 cents.

Dick's Celestial Scenery. — Celestial Scenery; or, The Wonders of the Planetary System displayed, Illustrating the Perfections of Deity, and a Plurality of Worlds. By Thomas Dick, LL. D. Illustrations. 18mo, Cloth, 75 cents.

Treatise on Trine Immersion.—Proving from the New Testament, and the Established Rules and Principles of Language, that Baptism by Trine Immersion is the only valid Baptism. Consisting of a Grammatical Analysis of the Commission, and Analogy of the Commission and other passages, and miscellaneous proofs. By Lewis W. Teeter. Put up in a neat pamphlet form, and will be sent post paid for 15 cts., or two copies 25 cts.

Why I left the Baptist Church.—By J. W. Stein. A tract of 16 pages and intended for an extensive circulation among the Baptist people. Price, 2 copies, 10 cents; 40 copies $1 00.

Ancient and Modern Egypt. — View of Ancient and Modern Egypt. By M. Russell, LL. D. Engravings. 18 mo, Cloth, 75 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN LEGATION.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Brother A. S. Leer, of Illinois:—

YOUR letter of January 7th, made me groan in spirit. My heart bleeds for you, and for the poverty-stricken ambassadors of Christ whose souls are on fire with the inspiration of the Cross, and who would gladly push the conquests of the Gospel into the territory of Apollyon, but are held back by general lack of sympathy in the church with the blessed ends of Jesus. Some ministers need bridles, some need spurs, but those who "know nothing but Jesus Christ and Him crucified," have Divine voices within and without to guide them. To say that the Church as a Body is but half awake to the grandeur and responsibility of her mission, might be offensive to many; and yet to say less would be offensive to the Truth. To be as intent on the exemplification and promulgation of the Cross, as Jesus was to bleed and die upon it for the sins of the world, would make a very different people of us. But the "farm," and the "five yoke of oxen," and the "wife"—or in other words, the seductions of the world and the flesh—destroy our relish for the viands of Emmanuel's table. If we would penetrate more deeply into the awful mystery and significance of the Incarnation and the Crucifixion, and look upon humanity and sin, and gaze through the Gates of Pearl, and down into the flaming damnation of ruined souls, as Jesus did and does, there would be less contention, pride, mammon-worship, and self-idolatry.

The account you give of your ministry, broke my heart. O what a solace to the Christ loving, soul-seeking, self-sacrificing ambassador of Heaven that "he has not an High Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Turn back to the ministry of Jesus and contemplate His soul-harrowing rebuffs from His Baptism to His Crucifixion. Even His chosen pupils, whom He had constantly under His eye and voice and personal magnetism, were so carnal and selfish and spiritual doltish, that He sharply rebuked them again and again, even saying, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe." He crossed Gennesaret in a surging tempest to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation to the Gadarenes, cast a legion of devils out of one soul, thus opening the way and manifesting His readiness to dispossess the whole population of demoniacal thralldom, but they besought Him to leave their coasts. With what heart-ache must He have turned His back on that benighted people. And His dear Capernaum, whom He had exalted to Heaven with the exhibition of His Divine Love and Power. He had to denounce with the wrath of Omnipotence, and consign to the abyss of hopeless damnation. Who can fathom the wail of the Godman in Luke 13: 34, or interpret the bitter meaning of Luke 19: 41? O those tears! From what a bottomless fount of love and sympathy and agonized disappointment they gushed. The servant is not above his Master. You are walking in His steps, and feeling a little of the sorrow that crushed His heart in His life-consuming work of saving souls. In all your conflicts, privations, sacrifices, weariness, disappointments, and discouragements, He is whispering into your inner ear the thrilling interrogation of Mark 10: 38.

The ministry includes the cup of Gethsemane; but also the presence and power of Him who drained it to the dregs, and filled it again to the brim with the water of life. "Lo, I am with you always," is a pledge which is sustained by the everlasting love and veracity of Jehovah-Jesus. "Said I not unto thee, THAT IF THOU WOULDEST BELIEVE, thou shouldest see the glory of God." John 11: 40. Your "life hid with Christ in God," His heart beating in your heart, His love kindling your aspirations and quickening your energies, and unvailing to your inner gaze the glory and rapture of Heb. 12: 2, you can go forward to your arduous duties, weeping as you sow the seed of the endless harvest, every fibre of your being quivering in the high, Christ-sustained confidence of 1 Cor. 15: 58.

The reproach of the Cross has not yet ceased. To imitate the self-forgetting zeal of the Lamb of God in the upbuilding of the Temple of grace, we may be cut to the core by the insinuations of our own members that we are "beside ourselves." Mark 3: 21. When the minister has a large territory to cultivate, and the calls are many and pressing, and he must expose himself to inclement seasons, while his wife and little children struggle at home with grim want; and then to be told that unless he provides for the necessaries of his own family he is worse than an infidel—O how must such inhumanity thrust like a poisoned dagger through his spiritual sensibilities. When such blows fall, let the words, "Looking unto Jesus, the Author and finisher of faith," roll over your bleeding heart with the overwhelming tide of Divine consolation. Turn Heb. 12: 3, into a sympathetic heart-beat with the past experience and present tenderness of the Godman. In all your perplexities and dark passages, forget not that James 1: 5, is the cardiphonia of Him who died for you, and whose minister you are. Let ear and eye and mind and heart be ever open and eager to catch the mind of God in every passing providence. The holier you are, the more you "crucify the flesh, with the affections and lusts," the more you allow the Holy Ghost to wrap your body, soul, and spirit in the righteousness of Jesus, the more will you learn when and where God would have you go, and what to do for the extension of His Kingdom. Not all your calls may have the Divine endorsement. "Satan may hinder, once and again." 1 Thess. 2: 18. You may map out a certain locality for your labors, and may be restrained by the Holy Ghost. Acts 16: 6. God has His times and seasons. His ways and means, and nothing will so put us into harmony with His ends, as a radical commitment to Rom. 8: 1, 2. "For me to live is Christ." "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." "I am determined to know nothing but CHRIST." Surely, "the man of God is thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. 3: 17. "Ambassadors for Christ." "beseeching in Christ's stead," authorized and panoplied by Christ—such a ministry will be "the power of God unto salvation" to many souls. It will spread like leaven, and cast out devils, and pluck brands out of the suburbs of Hell, after the minister has passed to his rest.

You have the arm of Divinity for your support, His eye for your guide, His heart to pity you, His Spirit to comfort you, and all the assurances of "God manifest in the flesh" to "make you more than conqueror through Him that loved us." What grace has done, it can still do. Jesus is "the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever." "All power in Heaven and in earth," are His to-day. In Him still "dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." "In Him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." It is still the office of the Holy Ghost to "take of the things of Christ and show them unto us." Here are boundless resources, and free access through the atonement and intercession of Incarnate Deity. The world is given us to save, and all the weapons of the Divine armory, and all the riches of the Divine treasury, put at our command for the great consummation "Watch ye stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong." 1 Cor. 16: 13. Be much in prayer. Let the fire on your altar never go out. Pray and wrestle earnestly for personal sanctification, for the unity of your family in the purpose, claims, and sacrifices of your high calling. Call in faith for the fulfillment of Matt. 9: 38. In every possible way consistent with holiness endeavor to kindle in your members an exalted apprehension of the magnitude and urgency of the Christian legation, including the efforts of the laity no less than of the ministry. Drones in the church are the sport of devils. "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" Hands pocketed or arms akimbo are a reproach to any Christian professor. If Heaven and Hell are living realities to our faith, we will not let minister's families struggle in want and isolation, while the husband and father is executing his office in the order of his course. Luke 1: 8. Minister to Jesus of your substance, and thus show yourself in sympathy with His sufferings and glory. Luke 8: 3. Such sacrifices are going to count in the day of judgment. Heb. 13: 16. Philipp. 4: 18. Matt. 25: 34–40. Jesus puts the cup of water on record, and notes the falling hair. How few really "love His appearing" because they are not one with Him in the character and object of His Cross. Let us make sure work. Deception is easy. Five were wise and five foolish. O how many lamps and no oil. Speak boldly yet lovingly and tearfully for Jesus, at home and abroad. Knit us many hearts to yours in sympathy and prayer as you can. Pray God to print into your heart in large living capitals the famous parenthesis of 2 Cor. 10: 4. Let this be your battle-cry: "MIGHTY THROUGH GOD TO THE PULLING DOWN OF STRONGHOLDS."

MOOMAW'S PROPOSITION.

NOW Brethren, there is an effectual door opened in this modern Sodom for the testimony of the Son, Jesus. Who will go in and work? Let two faithful and capable evangelists be commissioned by our next A. M., to make a tour of the cities of America from New York to San Francisco, from Montreal to New Orleans, and promulgate a pure doctrine to those who sit in the region and shadow of death. Go out into the gilded temple. The poor do not go there. Those who "hear the preaching of Jesus gladly," are not seen among the bedizened worshipers of the religious aristocracy of the great cities. Street preaching will not do. There is too much hurry and bustle &c. The public squares of which there are many, are comparatively quiet, and they offer the best opportunities for such work. There are always scores and hundreds of persons on pleasant seats, and doubtless the Lord would direct many a Lydia there whose heart would be opened to receive the truths of the Gospel.

Let the brethren give the suggestion respectful consideration. If nothing else can be done, let a number of brethren combine to subscribe a fund sufficient to defray the expenses of such a commission. One cent per member would make a two year tour, wherein every city and every quarter thereof could be reached, and thus the striking features of apostolic missions would again be illustrated by our church. As a beginning, I offer to pay the quota of one thousand members. Are there one hundred brethren who will do likewise? Put down your names before the honorable list is filled. If it is possible let the preliminaries be completed by the opening of Spring, and let the missionaries be in the field by the time of the Pentecostal gathering, and I will undertake to guarantee that the A. M., will have nothing but "God speed" for it. After twenty names are down, a choice will be made for men, yes men of God who will not waste their time in doting about "questions of words, and of their law and endless genealogies," which gender strife to the subversion of the people, but will boldly proclaim the truth as it is in Jesus.

There are capable brethren in our church who are unencumbered with families, and who would gladly go out thus into the highways and hedges of the world. Let us send them. Brethren, send your names to the office of the BRETHREN AT WORK; sisters send your names there. Look who comes next

D. C. MOOMAW.

S. T. Bossermun says, "you can take down my name as one accepting brother D. C. Moomaw's proposition. May God bless the movement."

Franklin Angelmyer, of Locke, Ind., says: "I am glad to see the movement that D. C. Moomaw has made, in regard to having the Gospel preached in our large cities, throughout our broad land. He says, one cent per member would make a two year's tour, I will pay the quota of one hundred members, $1.00 (one dollar). How many will do likewise? Let us send the Bread of Life to the poor of our cities. How can they hear without a preacher? Let us not let this opportunity pass unheeded. Let us send brethren sound in 'the faith once delivered unto the saints,' and let us equip them well to fight battles for the Lord. If they could win but one soul, the good we did with our few dollars could not be estimated. If we do raise the needed amount, (and I know we can), then let us send men that are willing to hazzard their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. See Acts 15: 26. Do not wait till next week, next Summer or next year, but let us work to-day, 'for the night cometh wherein no man can work.'"

Alexander W. Reese, of Warnersburg, Mo., says: "In a late issue I see that brother Moomaw proposes to start a fund for carrying on missionary work in the large cities. If such a scheme should be inaugurated, some of us here wish to send in our nunies and mites. Please advise us if the thing is started.

REMARKS.

We suggest that no money be sent to us, but that each one send in their obligations on a postal card, or otherwise.—Eds.

Sublime words make not a just man—it is a virtuous life that maketh one dear to God.

A GRAND OLD POEM.

WHO shall judge man by his manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Panders may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less;
Crumpled shirt, and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings,
That to honor upward soar.

There are springs of crystal nectar,
Ever welling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overgrown.
God, who counts by souls, not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles of the sea.

Man unpraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters, rulers, lords, remember,
That's your meanest kind of men;
Men by labor, men by feeling,
Men by thought and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine,
In a man's cuncbling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little weed-clad rills,
There are feeble inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills.
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me,
For to Him all vain distinctions,
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same—
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifted up his voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with lovliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper,
While there is a sunny right.
God, whose word-heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its tides,
As pebbles in the sea.

WHY BOAST OF THYSELF?

BY LEMUEL HILLERY.

WE are swelling in our own estimation, just while we are getting smaller in the estimation of others. The credit we get from God and every true child of God for what we have done, is not because of how much we have done, but from the motive. Not because of how we have done it, but from the motive. For we may do a thing right, so far as form is concerned, just for the admiration of men, to please men, and the life be black within.

When we want to do something to please men and to cause big I, to swell up within us, we are apt to tell all, all, ALL we have done, only when we think we have done much,—and when we think probably we have done more than our neighbors. Sometimes our neighbors are compelled to receive our apologies as an evidence of our boasting: for instance, a woman goes to a great deal of trouble to get up a good meal of victuals; the table is crowded and the food excellent, but just listen: "Now sit up and eat if you can find enough, and its not very good either." When she said this, she thought it was about the best meal she had ever gotten up.

Again, a man has followed chopping wood, trying to do as much as he can in one day, (to boast over, of course). Now see him, hear the sigh of regret—and hear him say to his friends, "Another day has passed, and I have not done very much—I have chopped only seven and a half cords of wood. I suppose if it were measured carefully it would make about eight cords." My brethren, marvel not if I tell you such a spirit ought not to exist among us.

If we are traveling, preaching and exposing ourselves much, so as to have something big to tell, or write; it at once becomes a little, disgusting piece of work in the eyes of God and of every saint. Just so it is brethren with us; if we are laboring only to get people into the church, it would be a very little work, and hardly worth mentioning, though we converted our thousands; but if we are instruments in the hands of God to get people to let the Lord convert them, and are reproving sin, no matter where it is found, whether in the church or out, and exhorting and comforting the believer, then we ought to keep right on, be diligent; and if in one year, five, ten, or twenty years, you prove yourself an instrument in the hands of God to save one soul from ruin, go on; you have done a great and big work. Never give up while you are doing with pure motives just what the Lord has told you, and in the way he has told you. God is setting that thing down as a big work. Don't be discouraged, if you can't see anything great that you have done, only keep on. If you work for the Lord, it will be recorded, and you will be astonished how it will foot up at the end of the race. In his own good time he will publish your work. And others who are making out their own list and counting up the wonders they have wrought, will be surprised how little it foots up at the end of the race when God declares his own record of their work.

Brethren and sisters, let us be like the preacher where enemies tried to discourage him by saying, "You can't preach, and you better quit, for you have been instrumental in saving but one person in twenty years." The preacher asked, "Have I done this much?" They answered, "Yes, we think just about this much." He replied, "Then here goes for another twenty years." Oh, may God help us to work for him and not for ourselves, then we will have done a great work indeed.

MISSIONARY WORK.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

THE Israelites were required to give one-tenth of their annual income for the services of their sanctuary, and if God had reasons why they should give this sum, have we not the strongest reasons to believe that it is his will that his people in these last times should do at least as much, especially since he has laid upon us the duty of preaching the Gospel to every creature?—a duty which was not laid on his ancient people.

Doubtless many of us think that we have given as the Lord has prospered us, but is it so? I think not. We would not think it prudent to force it upon the members of the church to give one tenth of their annual income to the Lord, "for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver," but they ought to consider it their duty as well as their privilege, "on the first day of the week to lay by them in store" such contributions as would annually amount to this sum.

In these last days, when God has opened every door for the entrance of his Gospel, and so amply provided the church with talent, and when the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us," comes in from every quarter and from all parts of the world, how can any true Christian refuse to do his part in fulfilling what is evidently God's design? How can he go to the table of the Lord, and in truth obey the commaad, "Do this in remembrance of me," while he refuses to obey the command equally as binding, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

But in sending out our missionaries to preach, some expenses must necessarily be incurred, and as a matter of course, it is as much the duty of Christian men and women to give their money to send the Gospel, as it is the duty of the ministers of Christ to go and bear it to every creature.

Now we believe that in sending our missionaries, great care should be exercised to make the money thus expended accomplish the most possible good.

THE AUTHORITY AND HONOR OF OUR SAVIOR'S PRIESTHOOD.

BY W. BOROUGH.

"Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee." Heb. 5: 5.

GOD also said at another time, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. 5: 6. This priest, "being made perfect, became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. 5: 9. He is called of God a high priest, "after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. 5: 10. Melchisedec was a priest, who had no predecessors nor successors in his office; he did not descend from a lineal priesthood, neither was his office handed down through a line of successors, therefore he was "without father, mother or descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." Heb. 7: 3. He was a "king of rigtheousoess," so was the Savior. He was "king of peace," so was the Savior. To this priest Abraham paid tithes. The Levites in Abraham paid tithes to him, and received a law, called the law of Moses; which, however, was not perfect, containing carnal commandments. But out of the tribe of Juda, came another priest after the similitude of Melchisedec, of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning the priesthood. He was not made by the law, but by an oath by him that said unto him, "The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec, by so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament." Heb. 7: 21, 22.

The law made nothing perfect, consequently there were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death. But this man, because he continued ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood, wherefore, he is also able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them. Heb. 7: 24, 25. He does not need to offer up daily sacrifice for his own sins and for the people's, as did the priests made by the law, "for this he did once when he offered up himself," Heb. 7: 27, thus making a great difference between his priesthood and that of the Levites. By the eternal priesthood of Christ, the Levitical priesthood of Aaron is abolished, and the temporal covenant of the fathers vanished under the eternal covenant of the Gospel. "If the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Heb. 8: 7. The Lord made a new covenant with the house of Jacob, and the house of Juda, saying: "I will put my laws into their minds, and write them in their hearts," Heb. 8: 10, and "all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest." Heb. 8: 11. This law was written in the minds and hearts of the apostles and inspired men, who wrote it to be read and preached through all successive generations until all shall come to know the Lord.

"The first covenant had also ordinances of divine services, and a worldly sanctuary," Heb. 9: 1, which I need not describe here, "but Christ being come a High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once unto the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." Heb. 9: 11, 12. "For this cause he is the Mediator of the New Testament." Heb. 9: 15. For a testament is not in force until the testator is dead. Under the law almost all things were purged with blood, and without shedding of blood is no remission; it was therefore necessary that the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these. For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us; not as the high priest did, once a year or he would have died many times, but once for all and for all time to come. So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation. Melchisedec received tithes (gifts) of the people. The priesthood of Aaron also received tithes of their brethren. No less honor is due to our great High Priest; hence it becomes our indispensable duty to offer without reserve our tithes of thanksgiving and supplication to him daily that we may be guided and protected by his mighty power.

In conclusion, I would state, that I did not write this article to spring new ideas upon this subject, but have merely brought it to your notice to reflect upon. Paul gives us a beautiful lesson upon this subject, and calls it the first principles of the oracles of God, and negligence in the knowledge of the same, is reproved. Then let us seek to know these principles, that we may become more thoroughly attached to our great High Priest, who to-day is sitting at the right hand of God to make intercession for us.

THE ETIQUETTE OF DEATH.

THE royal personage and the humblest peasant, the rich, the poor, the chieftain, all command a certain degree of attention in death that was not believed in life. The miserable Irish hod-carrier dies in a hovel where he was uncared for while living; but as soon as the breath is out of his body, a host of "friends" gather in, and an expensive "wake" is planned for the coming night. There is to be free whiskey and a nocturnal frolic, and on the coming Sunday if Pat happens to die after the middle of the week, a big funeral is to be paraded. The most significant part of the poor man's career was ended after he was dead.

A well-to-do individual dies, and the neighbors speak solemnly of the event—they discuss the manners and merits of the man, passing lightly over his faults. Death has softened asperities, and dignity to the departed. Many crowd around the house where the funeral sermon is preached, or loiter in the recesses of the premises. When the funeral cortege is arraigned before the craped abode, and the real mourners have occupied carriages immediately behind the hearse, the extra vehicles are quickly filled by strange people who seek this opportunity in fine weather to steal a free carriage ride through the suburbs to the beautiful cemetry five or six miles away. It is common that a part of the burial services of many Christian churches be performed at the grave; and while this ceremony is going on, the males stand with uncovered heads, and the delicate females are exposed to the scorching blasts of a death-dealing wind. A wailing daughter in delicate health takes a cold or chill from which she never recovers. She immediately loses her life in keeping the etiquette of death.

A letter appeared recently in the London Times, in which the writer asked for legislation upon the burial question; he says, "Let the burial services of the church of England be so arranged that the whole of it may be read in the church or chapel." The argument being that standing for several minutes in the pelting rain, or in a blinding storm of snow, their hearts broken with grief, and stomachs without accustomed support, must often prove detrimental to careless, yet well-meaning mourners. In country places it is not uncommon to see little children kept in view of the coffin during protracted religious exercises, and then taken for miles to the churchyard, no regard being paid to storm, or to the incapacity of infancy to understand what the tears, torture and slow travel, are all for. The snail pace of the funeral train would seem to be enforced in order to prolong the misery, already drawn out. A terrible sacrifice is made for the etiquette of death.

CHEAP LITERATURE.

[The Humane Journal].

THERE are a dozen publishing houses in the United States—there is at least one in Chicago—using all the facilities of their business to turn out, one after another as fast as type and machinery will do it, this sickly, demoralizing trash. Tales of adventure by land and by sea among the Indians, among the islands of the Pacific and the Atlantic, among the slums of the cities, the gutter, the pawn-shop, the thieves' quarters, the low variety show—no matter where the plot is laid, the characteristics are always the same. Goodness is burlesqued and sneered at, evil is glossed over and rendered "smart." What boy that reads these books does not envy the smart villain who always gets in the last word and the best argument? Vile language is hinted at or openly used; slang and bad grammar show up bad manners and worse morals; coarse and cruel sports are minutely described and boldly encouraged; the obedient boy or girl is always a fool or a sneak; the unruly and impenitent is always the manly fellow; and so these books go on, through impossible but fascinating adventures that render the sweet but homely tasks distasteful, until the requisite number of pages has been filled, when there is a grand denouement, the good sneak is unmasked, and the hero (!) who has been abused by parents, guardians or circumstances so long, is rewarded for his rebellion by some great stroke of fortune that leaves the reader forever dissatisfied with the ordinary and natural course of events.

This is only a general outline of this dime and nickel literature. What is characteristic of one will be found the leading feature of the others. Only as our rising generation reads more and more of these publications, serial writers and publishers find demand for higher spiced sensation—and they supply it.

"Ah!" said a fond mother, "my boys would not like such books."

Are you sure? If never a night sees their eyes close until they have talked with mother about all they have seen, done and read for the day, perhaps they have been taught not to admire these books; have, with a little guidance, acquired a taste for better reading. But if not, if the mother has been too busy, has calls to make or receive, other duties or pleasures that she thinks paramount to knowing all her children do and think, let her flatter herself that her boys would not like to read, without discrimination, anything that smacks of adventure and daring.

Remember there are thousands and thousands and thousands of these pernicous stories issued annually, and they must be sold. The ghouls and vampires that can send out such deadly things to murder innocence and happiness, are not philanthropists to adhere to a losing venture. The books are bought and sold. Some mother's boys and girls read them. Are you sure it is not yours?

There are books and books and books in this class of literature whose heroes had run away from homes in which they were not appreciated, and to these books may seriously be traced the epidemic of runaways, of which we see and read and hear so much.

There are other books which narrate in all their sickening details, dog-fights, chicken-fights, and animal torture of every description, that palliate these great crimes and accustom the minds of the young readers to contemplate torture and cruelty unmoved, and thus enable the youth to take active part in such sport when opportunity offers. There are few people born cruel. Cruelty, like any other vice, is acquired.

"We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

It is useless to try to stop the publication of this trashy literature, except by destroying the demand which creates the supply. Fathers and mothers, look to it that your children have good reading, and plenty of it, and no other

As we have already said, somebody's children are reading these books. Is it yours? An awful responsibility lies on the parents that permit it. Is it you?

[This is a sad picture, yet true. Parents see what your children read. Give them good food, good examples, good manners, good ways. If you do not you may be sure that they will seek the bad, and follow it, and die with it. Take your children in your arms, talk with them, love them, keep them in the good and guard them from the evil.—Eds]

PEOPLE WILL TALK.

BY B. F. BRINKWORTH.

WHEN we hear the various expressions of love manifested in our behalf, we often feel to bear the same as best we can, and generally consider the source of emanation. It is the characteristic trail of a Christian to be swift to hear, slow to speak; but many of us do not possess the needed characteristics; and why? Simply because we not cultivate the art, for there is a science to be developed here worthy of all attention. I often think if we only could practice more truly this spirit of forbearance, we would not as often be found wrestling with the comparatively little incidents coming under our notice; charity would cover them with wings outspread with affection and love, and our strongest desires would be to forgive and forget.

"But people will talk," and the consequence is, vanity is produced in the heart. We regret that we are so prone to express ourselves so quickly, for the tongue is a little member, but what a world of iniquity lieth underneath. Oftimes we are pained to hear that such an one is bearing tidings about our character that assimilates us with those of an opposite nature. We are not prepared to receive such from those we only know to love; consequently in the heat of the moment we say what we should have kept to ourselves. Oh, the bitterness it causes us, the intense grief, the agony. Yes a word spoken in wrath, is a cup of sorrow. "A soft answer turneth away wrath." "But people will talk." Oh, let us have charity, it heareth all things, and therefore the tongue-lashing of our dearest ones.

Brethren and sisters, it does seem that we should not do so, but it is nevertheless true, and we are guilty. Can we withstand future attacks? Will we try? By God's grace we may comply with his requirement if we will. Oh, our stubborn wills, how obstinate, how contrary. This is not the Spirit of Christ. Will we retain a spirit antagonistic to that, that bringeth forth the fruits meet for repentance? Let us consider, pause, reflect, and change our conversation; for our conversation should be as one professing godliness. Brethren, love one another, for love is of God. Hatred is of the devil. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

THE TWO ROADS.

BY G. NEVINGER.

SOMETIME ago, while waiting at the depot for the freight train to pass, so that I could unload my grain; I noticed that each car was labeled, or marked, so that any one could tell to what road it belonged. While musing on the variety of names, the thought came to my mind that there are but two ways or roads spoken of in Holy Writ. And as there are but two roads, men are traveling on one or the other of these roads. While one road leads to peaceful happiness beyond the tomb, the other leads to regions of dark despair. We came to the conclusion that if the children of men were labeled like the cars, to designate which road they were traveling on; and if every dark and ungodly deed, from the midnight murder down the whole catalogue of crimes, to those little unkind acts that we do to our fellow-man, were printed on the actors brow, how changed would be the actions! Those petty, jealous feelings which occur, even in the "children of light," would be subdued more and more until we could realize that "unfeigned love of the brethren," and become more Christ-like, "that ye may prove what is that good, acceptable and perfect will of God."

Though we do things that we would be ashamed for men to know, and can to some extent keep them hid from men at present; yet do we not know that the King of heaven sees and knows every word, thought and action of men? And not only this, but his eyes behold the darkest recesses and the most intricate labyrinth of our hearts. Beside this, all our actions shall be made known to the world, "for there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed; and hid that shall not be made known." Thus we see that the deeds done in the body will be made as clear and comprehensive to the world, as if the sacred Orb himself, would write with golden letters upon the western horizon, the actions of each one during the day. Verily "the way of the transgressor is hard."

—The interior of Greenland is an unknown territory. Three Danish scientific gentlemen who were exploring the coast, undertook, the past summer, to penetrate the mystery, and to ascend a mountain 45 miles from the coast. They started July 14 on their toilsome journey of twenty three days over the ice, encountering fogs and snowstorms on the way. The weather cleared July 31, when they ascended the mountain, which was 5400 feet high. As far as the eye could reach, only ice-sheets and glaciers could be seen, and not the smallest speck of land free of ice.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., FEBRUARY 6, 1879.

THE address of Jesse Calvert will be Dunkirk, Ohio, till February 15th.

B. TALHELM'S address is changed from Maysville, Iowa to Abilene, Kansas.

THE Southern Indiana District Meeting will be held in the Stony Creek church, April 9th, 1879.

BROTHER G. W. Gibson, writes from Girard, Illinois, that two more have been received into the church by baptism.

BROTHER Jesse Roop, of Lingamore, Maryland, has been quite ill for some time, but is now convalescing.

THE District meeting for the Southern District of Iowa, will be held at Mt. Etna, Adams county, April 7th, 1879.

THE District Meeting of Northern Indiana, will be held May 1st, 1879, in the Whitehead meeting-house, Elkhart county, Indiana.

BROTHER David White writes: "In the Black River church, Ohio, fifteen precious souls were baptized into Christ, at our late meetings. The church has been edified and strengthened."

DR. Carr told the truth when he said in reply to Col. Ingersoll's ideas: "Teach men to die like beasts and you go a long way towards teaching them to live like brutes."

WE are in receipt of a roll of manuscript from sister Mattie A. Lear, containing answers to a number of queries. Will commence publishing them next week.

TWO were baptized at brother David Puterbaugh's, two miles north of town, last week. One was from the Shannon congregation, and the other from Cherry Grove.

BROTHER Martin Meyer left here last Thursday morning for the Wisconsin mission field. Quite an interest is being worked up in that part of the country.

BROTHER Daniel Vaniman has been holding some very interesting meetings in Adams county, Ill. Nine came forward at one point. A report of his work will appear soon.

THE First District of West Virginia, will hold its next District Meeting on the 18th and 19th of April, in the Luney's Creek church. Further notice will be published in due time.

BROTHER John Nicholson has been holding a series of meetings in Toledo, Ohio. With what success we have not learned, but hope there are good prospects for building up a church in that city.

MOST all the names on our list have now been properly adjusted, and if any of our subscribers fail to get their papers, they will please inform us at once, that we may make the necessary corrections.

SINCE the year 1804 the Bible is said to have been translated into 215 languages. To accomplish this has required an immense amount of labor, saying nothing about the time and patience required to learn the different languages.

BROTHER John W. Metzger has been under the doctor's care for five weeks, and wishes us to say to the Brethren in the Southern District of Indiana, that he is now unable to fill his place in the mission field, but expects to resume his labors as soon as it is safe for him to do so. He wrote from Cerro Gordo, Ill., expecting to return to his home in Indiana in a few day.

IN answer to many inquries, we will state that we cannot possibly fill orders for back numbers containing the debate. Even number two of the present volume is exhausted. New subscribers will have to commence with number three.

IF your neighbor, or any one else wants to abuse you, just let him alone; let him empty his "barrel," and then likely you can put something into it. It is difficult to put anything in a barrel that is full; better have it emptied, and if possible cleared well, before putting much in it.

JERUSALEM is said to be adding 1,500 to its Jewish population every year. Should the contemplated railroad, from Jaffa on the Mediterranean Sea, to Jerusalem, be completed, it will greatly increase the population of the place, and flood the country with travelers and pilgrims.

MEN who oppose the Bible, on the ground that it speaks of miracles, ought to remember that the preservation of that Book is a miracle of itself. Nothing save the Divine hand could have sustained the blessed Book amid the opposition there has been urged against it.

AS a proof of the great amount of labor required to translate the Scriptures into some of the foreign languages, it is stated that in Madagascar a band of revisers has set for ten years, endeavoring to render the translation as correct as possible.

WE have on hand a few hundred extra copies of No. 5, that might do good if they were judiciously distributed. Send for a bunch and distribute them among your neighbors. They will be sent post paid for the following: 3 copies, 10 cents; 11 copies, 30 cents; 27 copies, 50 cents.

THE last two pages of this issue is taken up with the Children at Work, that all our readers may see and know of its contents. Examine it carefully, and if you like it, and think it will interest your children, subscribe for it. Price 50 cents per annum.

BROTHER Martin Meyer held but five meetings at Erie, on the Rock Creek bottoms, and had to close on the account of high waters. The interest was good, and the house densely crowded. Brother Meyer thinks of returning to Erie and work up the interest in that locality.

WE learn that brother John K. Ollinger, of Trotwood, Ohio, has been confined to his bed nearly three months. "His days on earth," says brother Simon Oaks, "seem nearly ended, but his hope of an eternal house beyond the river grows stronger and stronger as his body wastes away."

OVER one thousand dollars have been subscribed, in England, to be expended in exploring the Sea of Galilee in the Holy Land. Recent developments in the Bible lands render news from that part of the world extremely interesting. We shall endeavor to keep our readers posted on all that is important.

FROM various sources we learn that many of our brethren are quitting the use of tobacco, and are determined to carry out their vows in abstaining from its use. God be thanked for that. We call that good news, and hope the day is not far distant when not one particle of tobacco will be used in the brotherhood. We shall do our utmost to get all our people to quit it, for when Christ and the holy angels come in the clouds of heaven, we are sure that not one of them will be using it, and when that event takes place we want all our members to be ready and prepared to be caught up amidst the throng of holy, heavenly beings. Brethren, think over this matter, and let us hear your conclusions.

THE Methodists of this place are holding a very interesting revival meeting. On last Thursday evening it was our privilege to be present. The discourse, though well delivered, was not doctrinal, but directed largely to the sympathies, consisting in the recital of a number of exciting incidents. Near the close of his discourse the speaker said he "thanked God that the Gospel does not teach Methodism, nor Lutherism, nor Congregationalism." To this we thought "Amen." The sooner people get to discarding these "isms" and laying hold on the old Gospel order the better it will be for the religious world. It is not modern isms that should be preached, but the Gospel. Let all ministers get to preaching the one Lord, the one faith, and the one baptism taught in the Gospel, and it will not be long till we all will be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and the same judgment, all speaking the same thing.

THE money, appropriated by the Tract Association for the free distribution of tracts, is nearly exhausted, hence but few more tracts can be sent out free until more money is appropriated. If some of those, who are abundantly able to do so, would donate to this fund, considerable good might be accomplished by the proper distribution of good pamphlets and tracts. The Secretary will make his report next week.

FRIEND G. W. Sell, of Emporia, Kan., says: "My wife joined the Brethren church last Fall. One of the members here gave us some of your papers and we have read them over several times. I do not belong to the Brethren myself. I was baptized in the Campbellite faith, but they hold to things I cannot sanction. The truth is what I want." We hope the BRETHREN AT WORK will prove a great help to our friend in his search after the truth.

DR. McLeod of Philadelphia, has preached against the expensiveness of funerals. A reform society, on this subject, has been organized in England, with prominent individuals at its head.

It is generally supposed that the times demand just such a society. That is because churches do not do their duty, and enforce the Bible rules and principles laid down to govern the church in all such cases. Let Christians do their duty, set a good example in such matters, and there will be no need of extra societies.

IT is a fact that some ministers need holding back a little, while others need spurring up. The same treatment is not adapted to both classes. To know how to treat men they must be studied, and their dispositions understood, and our treatment applied accordingly. But above all things do not discourage ministers, but encourage them in that which is right and just. If you think they are too fast, do not throw a stumbling block in the way, upset the vehicle, and smash everything to pieces, but counsel them to keep in the right direction, and not take the wrong road, and after awhile you may succeed in getting them to drive slower so that the main army can keep up.

FROM the Progressive Christian we learn that brethren Bashor and Sharp have been visiting at Berlin, Pa. The object of their visit is thus stated by that paper:

"The primary object of the visit of these brethren at this time was to take in the Progressive Christian, they and we believing it would be better not to have two papers in the same field at the same time. But during the interview it was ascertained that brethren Bashor and Sharp were only authorized to take and not to give, and that no union could be effected without the total extinction of the Progressive Christian, in name, character and management. This we were not prepared to submit to, though we were exceedingly anxious to consolidate. We are willing to give up all the name, if need be, though a better is not to be found in the catalogue, half the management, or all if it must be, but to our principles we adhere the more firmly."

THE CHURCH IN THY HOUSE.

IN the epistles of Paul we find frequent mention made of the church that is in thy house, Col. 4: 15; Rom. 16: 5; 1 Cor. 16: 19; Philemon 2, showing that in the apostolic times there were entire households set apart to the worship of God. The entire family was converted, set up a religious altar, and worshipped around it. The family had heard the glad tidings, embraced the Christian religion, and invited others in to share in the joys of the Lord.

A similar course might be pursued in many localities in this age. There are households where at least most of the family are members, and no church in the vicinity, and not very often meeting by the Brethren. Now, if such families would invite their neighbors to meet with them each Sunday evening, or some other evening of the week, and spend the time singing, reading the Scriptures, and in prayer, it certainly would have a good effect. In this way churches could be built up, the doctrine spread and many souls saved. Such families who are well posted in Scripture, and have a clear understanding of the doctrine, might invite their neighbors to their houses and instruct them more perfectly in the way of the Lord.

These families could do a good work by sending for a few dollars' worth of books and tracts, and at the close of the meeting divide them among those in attendance, requesting them to read the works carefully and return them. Then lend to others and so on. Another good work might be accomplished by lending papers and other good reading matter in defense of the Bible doctrine.

In this way every isolated member's home might become a mi-sionary station: a house of the Lord where people could meet and be edified, sing, and hear the Scriptures read. Brethren and sisters, try this method, and see if some good will not grow out of it. By proper efforts you might succeed in having a church in your own house, and then call for a minister to come and assist you.

OUTSIDERS' FUND EXPLAINED.

SEVERAL, who have lately written us, seem to misunderstand our method of sending papers to outsiders for $1.00 a year, hence we will have to explain a little farther. There are many outsiders who will not subscribe for the paper, yet derive much good from reading it. To such we agree to send the paper for $1.00, provided some one will donate the money, we throwing off 50 cents to make the burden lighter for those who donate, but if the outsider pays for it himself, then he must pay full price the same as other subscribers.

It is worked in this way: Our readers send us the names of outsiders whom they think would be benefited by reading the paper. These names are carefully entered in a book kept for that purpose, and taken off and placed on the mailing list just as fast as money is donated to pay for them. If three dollars are donated today, three names will be taken off of the book and passed over to the mailing clerk, who will place them on his regular mailing list for one year. When more money comes in, then more names are sent over to the mailing clerk. By this it will be seen that outsiders, who receive the paper for one dollar a year, are those to whom the paper is donated. The poor fund is worked on the same principle.

Last year we paid something over two hundred dollars towards sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor members and well-disposed outsiders. We concluded that was a little too heavy a burden for us to bear, and hence offered to throw off fifty cents on each paper donated to outsiders and poor members provided our readers would pay the other $1.00. Hence these funds. The regular subscription price of the paper is $1.50, alike to outsiders and all, only we throw off 50 cents when you want to donate the paper to some one who will not subscribe for it. Hope we are fully understood this time.

We owe many thanks to our generous hearted members for donating so freely to these funds. The paper is doing good, only keep the work going. Heaven will amply reward you for all the efforts you make looking to the salvation of your fellow mortals.

THE CONDITIONS OF SALVTAION.

BY salvation here, is meant pardon, or remission of sins. He who is pardoned is saved from his sins, and justified in the sight of God.

In salvation there is a human part, and also a divine part. The human part man performs; it consists of things that he can do. The divine part God attends to; this consists in things that man cannot do, but God can do them for man. Man is the one who is to be benefited—is to receive all the blessings.

As an illustration, the reader is referred to Naaman's case. He was told to go and dip himself seven times in Jordan, and he should be healed of the leprosy. Going to the Jordan, and dipping himself seven times was the human part. This Naaman could do, and did do. To heal him of his leprosy was the divine part, and was something that Naaman himself could not do: God did it for him, but on certain conditions, which were clearly specified. God placed the virtue, not at the beginning, not in the middle, but at the end of these conditions. The conditions were, going to Jordan, and dipping himself seven times. When he reached Jordan, and stood down in the water he was not yet healed. He dips himself five times, yet receives no benefit, because the virtue has not yet been reached; but when he dips himself the seventh time he comes to where God has placed the virtue, or power, and is healed. Who did the healing? We answer, God; that was the divine part, and the great object to be attained.

This healing was a free gift from God; Naaman did nothing to merit it. He was told where to find it: did what the old prophet commanded him, and was blessed in the deed.

Salvation from sin is also a free gift: it is something God does for man. Man does nothing to merit it. It is therefore free, and hence of "grace." God pardons on certain conditions, which are clearly specified. These conditions embrace the human part in salvation: they constitute the part that man must perform in order to reach salvation. Salvation is free, but must be accepted before it can be possessed. To accept it is to comply with the conditions.

To show that salvation is free, and at the same time offered on certain conditions I must illustrate. Suppose we have in the neighborhood a highly respected family, composed of father, mother, son and daughters. The son having been led into bad company, falls into the habit of drinking, becomes a drunkard, and brings disgrace on himself and kindred. He becomes despised and is rejected by all respectable people. But he has a wealthy uncle, who loves him, and is pained because of his degraded condition. He resolves to do something in behalf of the young man, and if possible reform and elevate his character. This must be done by elevating the affections and surrounding him with better and nobler associates. Hence the uncle makes him the following offer: "If you will agree to quit your drinking, reform your life, leave off your bad associates and sign a pledge to that effect, I will make you a present of $100, and give you the use of the best farm I have; and if you hold out faithful to the promise for ten years I will give you a clear title to the entire farm."

The young man agrees to accept the offer. He signs the paper in the presence of an officer, quits his drinking, forsakes his bad associates, receives his $100, and the use of the best farm. Having reformed his life, he is respected by all as a good neighbor and a faithful citizen. Remaining faithful to his promise, at the end of ten years he receives a clear title to the farm, and it is his own.

I now ask, is not that $100, and farm a free unmerited gift? Did the young man do any thing to merit it? Was not the whole thing for his good, to elevate his affections and reform his life? Yet the whole thing was on certain conditions.

Just so it is with our salvation. The sinner is degraded, has become polluted with sin, and is therefore unfit for the decent society of heaven. To take him into heaven in his present polluted condition would be to disgrace the paradise of God, hence his affections must be elevated and his character reformed. To effect this, God proposes certain conditions, not as a price for pardon, but as a means by which to reach pardon. Before he can receive pardon three things must be effected. (1) His affections must be changed. Things he once loved he must now hate, and things he once hated he must now love. He must "set his affections on things above." (2) His life, or conduct must be reformed: he must cease to do evil and learn to do well. (3) His relation must be changed; he must come out from the world and be duly initiated into the family of God, and then he receives his first gift—the remission of his sins.

The affections, or heart must be changed by faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please God," Heb. 11: 6, and "he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 16. Man cannot set his affection on things above without faith. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness," Rom. 10: 10, hence the change of affections.

The life or conduct must be changed by repentance. Repentance is the reformation of life, or as the prophet expresses it: "Cease to do evil: learn to do well." Isaiah 1: 16, 17. God "now commandeth men every-where to repent," Acts 17: 30, and "except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish. Luke 13: 3.

The relation is changed by baptism, or being born again, for Christ said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John 3: 5. "Born of water" here refers to water baptism. It is in baptism that the sinner pledges himself to "live a life of obedience until death." When he is buried with Christ by baptism, "in the likeness of his death" (Rom. 6: 5) he by a figure, comes in contact with the blood that cleanseth him from all sins. 1 John 1: 7. Hence we have faith, repentance, and baptism laid down as conditions of salvation, pardon. These are the human parts in salvation. The divine part is to pardon our sins, give us the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the promise of eternal life.

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER VI.

OUR needs drive us upon our knees. Greater help than ourselves we must have, hence we seek the help from One who is greater. Prayer reacts favorably upon our minds, because we are expecting something grand and important. We are looking for grace, for blessings, hence go where they may be had. But the inquiring man asks,

Does God Answer Prayer?

God answers prayer. If we conclude that He does not, then why do we pray? Do we ask with the expectation of not receiving? This would be mere mockery. Let us go to the Bible and find out whether God has answered prayers. If God has answered prayer, and still commands us to pray, then He continues to answer prayer. Pharaoh begged Moses to entreat the Lord to take away the plague of the locusts. Hear the divine Record: "And he went out from Pharaoh, and entreated the Lord. And the Lord turned a mighty strong west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the Red Sea." Ex. 10: 18, 19. That prayer was answered. Now listen to the prayer of Jacob: "And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the Lord which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee: I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast shewed unto thy servant: for with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands. Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and the mother with the children. And thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude." Gen. 32: 9–12. Hear the result of this prayer—look at the answer: "And Esau ran to meet him, and fell on his neck, and kissed him: and they wept." Gen. 33: 4.

We next turn to Hezekiah, who when asked to be spared. God sent the prophet Isaiah to him with this answer: "Go and say to Hezekiah, Thus saith the Lord, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears; behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years." Isa. 38: 5. "I have heard thy prayer," says God. "I have seen thy tears." Blessed be the name of God! But we bring up a case or two more of answer to prayer, as found recorded in the Old Testament. While Moses was on Mt. Sinai receiving the Law, the people demanded an Egyptian god, and Aaron made a golden calf for them. This the people worshipped. When Moses came down and saw the wickedness of the people, he was filled with anguish. To God he goes, who tells him that He will destroy this rebellious people, and make of him a greater nation. But Moses began to pray for the people and said: "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin: and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written. And the Lord said unto Moses, Whosoever hath sinned against me, him will I blot out of my book. Therefore now go, lead the people unto the place of which I have spoken unto thee: Behold, mine Angel shall go before thee: nevertheless, in the day when I visit, I will visit their sin upon them." Ex. 32: 34.

Sick Unto Death,

Look at Elijah

and the prophets of Baal. Up to Mt. Carmel goes a great company of prophets, dressed in gorgeous apparel, for they are the popular men of the day. Meek Elijah follows after, ready to vindicate the plea of God. The altar of Baal's prophets is ready. The wood is in place; the animal is there; so the prophets began to cry unto their god. And more; they "cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them." 1 Kings 18: 28. Their god would not hear. He could not. Witness meek Elijah. His altar is ready. The sacrifice is in place, and that the plea of fraud might not be set up, he said: "Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt-sacrifice, and on the wood. And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time. And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water." Elijah was not afraid of water, not even much water. Hear his prayer. "Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again." Read the answer: "Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt-sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench." Behold the effect: "And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord he is God." 1 Kings 18. Should the reader desire one more remarkable answer to prayer, as recorded in the Old Testament, turn to Daniel sixth and read. Let us now search the New Testament for

More Answered Prayers.

"For a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet: (The woman was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation,) and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs. And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs." The final answer of Jesus was: "For this saying, go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter." Hear the result: "And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed." Mark 7: 25–30.

Our next Gospel case is that of Peter who was put in prison by Herod. "Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing of the Church unto God for him." Were these prayers answered? Did God hear this prayer which was made without ceasing? Let the Oracles of God speak: "And behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands. And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me. And he went out, and followed him, and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision. When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him. And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews." Acts 12.

Cornelius Heard.

"And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing, and said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God." "Well, now, since the prayers have been heard, is that not sufficient? Why dear angel, if my prayers are heard, that is all I ask: that is quite enough for me." Is this the way praying Cornelius reasoned? O no; but meekly submissive he waits for the command of the Lord, who said: "Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea-side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee. Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." Ah! there was one at Joppa who could help. "We are all here present before God." What for Cornelius? "To hear all things that are commanded thee of God."

Conditions of Success.

God has not promised to answer mere form prayer. It must come from the heart. 1. The heart must feel the want of prayer. 2. It must reverence God. 3. We must have a filial spirit. 4. We must not come murmuring, but with gratitude. 5. Not in an exalted manner, but with humility. 6. We must not doubt, but believe that we receive, and we shall receive. 7. The spirit of obedience must dwell in us. 8. We must be ready at all times to forgive injuries. 9. To ever ask according to His Will. "This is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us." 1 John 5: 14. 10. To ever ask in the name of Jesus. 11. Union with others who follow the Gospel directions, will lead to success. See Matt. 18: 19. When God set up His physical system, He did it in strict harmony with the natural laws of matter; and "when he ordained the moral system, he did it also in strict reference to the nature and laws of the mind.', All answers to prayer are in harmony with the laws governing the moral system. FROM A BAPTIST LADY.

Dear Editors:—

YOU express a desire to hear from your subscribers. I am not a subscriber, but a very attentive reader. Some kind friend sends me your paper to read and distribute, and I should like to subscribe for myself, but my husband, although he likes it, wants his secular papers, and having had a succession of misfortunes, and being a member of several "fraternities," you will probably understand why we have but little money for reading matter. But I have distributed them faithfully, have sent them by mail and otherwise where I thought they might do good, and if you have tracts or other literature to dispose of, in the same way, I will hereafter have a very good chance, as the railroad is about to be completed and the cars will run in three or four weeks, and I can go to the station and give them to the passengers.

I am reading, with intense interest, the Stein and Ray Debate. (I am a Baptist). I am retaining all the numbers for a final reading when it shall be completed. I am at present a little afraid our champion will come off "second best." Yours will win outside readers by the superior chasteness of his language. I believe in trine immersion, and if I had not been once immersed before I thought as I do now, I would be baptized by no other mode. I like your position on secret societies. I have for many years watched the workings of Odd Fellowship, and have long ago, by slow degrees, become firmly convinced that it is a farce. I would write an article on the subject and offer it to you for publication if it were not for offending my husband, who does not like for me to speak against them, and as I believe him to be conscientious in his devotion to the order, I do not wish to wound his feelings.

God speed you in your noble warfare, on the world-blighting, soul-destroying curse—alcohol. It is sweeping the earth with the besom of destruction, and then church members say it is a good thing in its place. I hope the day may be near by when you will have flourishing churches all over Texas.

Very Respectfully,

REMARKS.

From the above it can be seen whether it does any good to send the paper to outsiders. Through the kindness of a free hearted brother, whose name we withhold, this Baptist lady has been permitted to read the BRETHREN AT WORK and a number of our tracts, and it is gratifying to see how eagerly she grasps for the truth. May God bless her, and thousands of others in search of the truth. Brethren, send along your donations and let us see if we cannot get the paper into the hands of a couple thousand outsiders. See our terms on last page of No. 5, and each one lend a helping hand.

BUSINESS NOTICE.

If any of our subscribers do not receive their paper regularly they will please inform us at once, giving their name and address in full, always stating by whom the subscription was sent and when. Do not write abusive letters, but explain yourself fully. We do not send the paper to any address unless the party has subscribed for it, or some one has subscribed and paid for him. We send no duns to parties who have not ordered the paper, and if the paper should chance, by mistake, to go a few weeks over the time of subscription we are responsible.

Pleasant Sundays — Holidays in Wolfe Creek Church—Test of Discipleship—Thonghts at Close of the Year—The Brethren at Work and Ashland College.

I RECENTLY enjoyed several very pleasant Sundays. In the first place I met with the brethren and sisters in the sanctuary of the Lord to celebrate the praises of the Most High. After services we stopped at the homes of brethren and sisters, whose conversation was in heaven—whose delight and meditations were in the law of the Lord; and out of the abundance of their hearts they spoke of the marvelous, gracious work of redemption.

We thought, first, how much better it is to spend our Sundays in reading the Scriptures, and talking of their divine origin, power and influence, than to converse about lands, stock and "the news of the day;" or what is worse, use our tongues as torches of hell in disseminating the foibles and peccadillos of brethren and friends, and putting a wrong construction on their good deeds.

Second, what a mighty—an almighty leavening power would the Brotherhood be, if all its subjects were "living epistles" "of righteousness and peace," having their "speech with grace seasoned with salt," obeying from the heart the form of doctrine delivered unto them.

As the holidays are spent in idle and wicked amusements, religious frolics, feasts, and gambling, not to say anything of ball rooms, gambling-hells, and dens of debauchery, the Brethren on Wolf Creek, to counteract these evils, and to present a better opportunity of spending these days, concluded to have religious services on them. Accordingly, meetings were appointed for Christmas and New Year's Days. These meetings were well attended.

Elder Bumbaugh made some very appropriate remarks at our Christmas meeting on the test of discipleship. He said that we hear much boasting in our day of how much we love the Lord, and Lo! here, and Lo! there is Christ. The publicans and harlots went into the kingdom of heaven before the boasting Scribe and Pharisee. In the day of judgment the boasting class is sent away from the Bar, with the damning denunciations of the "Judge of the quick and the dead." But there is a "more excellent way," and that is the apostolic way. And that is, we should let our light so shine that men may see our good works and glorify our father which is in heaven. We should show our love in a practical manner, and that only can be done by keeping his commandments and loving one another. "For whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments," says the Lord. "Whosoever loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." "By this we know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren."

"So let our lives and lips express,
The holy gospel we profess."

As the old year departed we had to think of the many changes that took place in its course. Beloved side companions, lovely children, and fond parents were called to try the stern realities of eternity. Aching voids were made in many hearts, which the world can never fill. On the other hand we thought of the bliss of those who lived and died in the Lord. And of those blessed lambs, who

"Before their heart had learned,
In waywardness to stray;
Before their feet had even turned
The dark and downward way;

"Ere sin had sear'd the breast
Or sorrow woke the tear;
Rose to their throne of changless rest,
In yon celestial sphere."

I cannot conclude these echoes without expressing my approbation and satisfaction of the satisfactory manner in which the BRETHREN AT WORK is conducted. We were particularly pleased with your editorial observations on our institutions of learning, plainness of attire and nonconformity in general, etc. Your conclusions were the natural results of investigated truth. God bless you in your efforts to promulgate primitive christianity.

A great many brethren of the Valley think it best to keep our schools and periodicals separate. To let each stand on its merits or fall on its demerits.

Home Again.

Dear Brethren:—

ILLINOIS Brethren who feel concerned: I remained over night with Dr. Fahrney, at Chicago. Took the Lake Shore Railroad at 9 A. M. Reached South Bend at noon, in the hope of finding my wife at our son's, but failed. Next day I took the train to Niles and Kalamazoo. There I laid by till 3:30 P. M., and reached our station (Bloomingdale) after five; but did not get home till next evening, because no teams were passing on account of snow storm and depth of snow. The thermometer has not been lower than 5° below zero at any time. I found the feeble and sick convalescent. My companion is now willing to go with me to any place, but never to be left back any more. Thus you see I am re-inforced, and those that desire my services can have them in a double form—but not otherwise. She thinks she has been divorced often enough and ought to be entitled to enjoy the love and kindness of the loved ones abroad as well as we preachers: perhaps she is right, and if it would be left to a vote among the preacher's wives, a large majority might be the result.

We now design to leave home for South Bend, and if my countrymen find me a house to speak in and a congregation to speak to, we shall likely remain three or four weeks. Then I shall be at the service of Brethren at any place desired, but I don't think it best to shift too often.

Some Brethren may say: "Why don't you stay in your own State; is there not work enough?" Yes, my Brethren, there is more than I can do. I have planted the seed by the blessing of God, others are now watering, and I am now laboring to enlist others into the field. Not any good brother is qualified to labor successfully in the mission field. I met with a number in Northern Illinois lately, that could do a great deal of good here, but there are very few standing idle. They are like the builders of the Temple in Cyrus's time. They have a great work to do for the Lord. They cannot come down here.

Time and language would fail me to express my gratitude for the many tokens of kindness and love shown me. Be it sufficient to say our enjoyment seemed to be mutual. Not leaving out even the little ones, whose countenances beamed with joy and eyes sparkled with pleasure. Long shall I remember the blessed sight before me in the different congregations, of those bright, angelic countenances of purity and innocence—a heaven on earth. If we only would become as little children, knowing nothing but to do our Father's will, as given us by the dear Saviour.

There are a few yet among the Brethren who cannot fully see the propriety of bringing the children together on the Lord's day to teach them by word of mouth, and from the Book. Why, dear Brethren, could you select a holier spot on the face of this globe than the house of the Lord? Could you bring them into better company than your brethren and sisters and their children? Could you give them better employment than to sing, read and pray? Would you like to see a handsomer sight than to see fifty or a hundred little children, and that many of your grown up sons and daughters, with their fathers and their mothers, bowed down upon the footstool of Jehovah, the King? Where would that unbeliever, that sceptic, that defamer, that mocker, who comes into your congregation, I say, where would he hide his face?

I will close by saying, be of good cheer all ye that work in the Vineyard of the Lord.

F. P. LOBB.

Bloomingdale, Mich., Jan. 17, 1879.

From Wooster Church, Ohio.

AT present, for the satisfaction of the brotherhood in general and more especially to those who formerly resided in this church, and were acquainted with the difficulties existing here, I can truly say that the dark cloud which had been hanging over us for sometime has disappeared, and the day dawn has again appeared to us, and we feel that the good Lord has blessed us.

Our series of meetings began at the Fountain Hill meeting-house, on the 8th of January, and continued until the 13th. Brother Silas Hoover, of Somerset, Pa., was with us and labored earnestly for the salvation of souls. I am sorry to say there were no additions to the church at this place, although there was a good interest manifested in attendance, and in giving attention to the word preached. We hope the seed sown may be as bread cast upon the waters, which can be gathered many days hence.

From here the meetings were moved to Paradise meeting-house on the evening of the 14th, where brother Hoover, accompanied by others, labored earnestly in the cause of Christ, pointing sinners to the Lamb of God, and warning them to flee from the wrath to come. Here we were made to rejoice in seeing eight precious souls, who were in the prime of life, come out from the ranks of Satan, renounce sin and all the pleasures thereof, and enlist under the blood-stained banner of King Emanuel, to go forth as soldiers of the cross, to fight the battle of the Lord. Our meetings closed on the evening of the 19th. Brother Hoover bade us farewell, and it caused some degree of sorrow to think that we had to part, and that he could remain with us no longer. He had to leave for another field of labor.

ISAAC STEEL.

From Gilboa, Ohio.

I CLOSED a meeting at this place last evening with as much interest as I ever saw at any meeting. Three were received by baptism and one restored to fellowship, and quite a number of applicants which will be baptized in due time. May the Lord bless them all; and hope through their influence many more will come.

The brethren and sisters were all well, excepting two brethren who are on their death-beds with consumption. What a great pleasure it was to be at their bed-sides and hear them talk of their heavenly homes. Brother Welch was raised by Catholic parents; his mother came to his bed to weep for him because of his Protestant profession. He gently replied to his mother: "Do not weep for me, but for yourself; my joy is complete and I am willing and ready to go to sleep in the arms of Jesus, knowing that I am saved through obedience to him." Oh! blessed hope! Brother Conine is also perfectly happy and said: "I am willing to suffer still more; it is all pleasant with me. Only one thing troubles me, and that is my dear children." But he hopes that ere long they will all come to Christ—that the family may all meet in heaven. Dear children, think of a father's prayers and tears for you.

I arrived at Carey, and there found Brethren Levi H. Dickey and S. T. Bossermun at work; good interest up, and one baptized to-day. More at the close of the meeting.

JESSE CALVERT.

Jan. 21, 1879.

From Ervin, Howard Co., Indiana.

THE general health is good, and union and harmony prevail among us. I notice in our paper that a very singular circumstance occurred last week in Fountain county, this State. I copy it off for the BRETHREN AT WORK, that others may see how mysterious are the ways of Providence, and how necessary it is to be ready when the messenger of death comes.

Mr. Leonidas Grover who resides in the vicinity of Newtown, lives on his farm with a married daughter and her husband. On the evening referred to, the married couple had been absent on a visit to some neighbors, and upon returning at a late hour, entered the house, finding everything in usual order, and supposing that Mr. Grover had already retired, went to bed themselves. Next morning the daughter arose, and prepared breakfast, went to the adjoining room to call her father, and was horrified to find him lying upon his shattered bed a mutilated corpse. Her screams brought her husband quickly to the bedroom, and an inspection disclosed a ragged opening in the roof, directly over the breast of the unfortunate man, which was torn through as if by a cannon shot, and extending downward through the bedding and floor; other holes showed the direction taken by the deadly missile. Subsequent search revealed the fact that the awful calamity was caused by the fall of a meteoric stone, and the stone itself, pyramidal in shape, and weighing twenty pounds and a few ounces avoirdupois, and stained with blood, was unearthed from a depth of nearly five feet, thus showing the fearful impetus with which it struck the dwelling.

The position of the corpse, with other surroundings, when found, showed that the victim was asleep when stricken, and that death to him was painless.

HIEL HAMILTON.

From Carleton, Neb.

BROTHER J. H. Fillmore, from Iowa, is now holding a series of meetings among us. No additions as yet, but we believe there are several who are "counting the cost" and are "almost persuaded." Bro. F. holds forth the word in its purity, and in such a way that sinners are left without excuse. His subjects have been so far as follows: "The way," St. John 15:6. The essentiality of baptism; "Come, now, and let us reason together," etc.; The Christian race, 1 Cor. 9:24. Trine immersion, and "Remember," as found in Luke 16:25. Bro. Lugenbeel, from Ida, Kansas, was also with us and preached some excellent and timely sermons. He also gave some preaching to the York county Brethren. I hope to give you a report of additions soon.

From Chicago, Ill.

IT seems to me very strange indeed that there is no Brethren Church in this city. Some time ago I read in the BRETHREN AT WORK that there are about twenty Brethren living in Chicago. There is a need for a primitive christian Church here: this is a large field. Let it not be overlooked as it has been formerly. A Free Baptist would be glad to co-operate and get others to do the same. I do not belong to any religious society now; have longed to see the Brethren come here and proclaim the Gospel. Such of the Brethren that have not self in view, but the glory of God and a dying world, need to gather in prayer to the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. I know the Lord will hear and grant the request of those who will thus pray him.

From J. W. Southwood.

BROTHER R. H. Miller came to our place of meeting viz, Dora, Indiana, on the 4th of January, 1879, and remained with us one week; preaching in all thirteen sermons, and, as is usual with him, the preaching was mostly doctrinal, and delivered with power and plainness, so that many were made to feel the weight of Gospel truth, and some to acknowledge its saving power.

He then went from here to Lancaster, which is about twelve or fourteen miles east of this place. At that point it was my happy lot to hear him four times.

May the Lord bless him and his labors wherever he goes.

Notice.

HAVING concluded to move from my present location (in case I can suit myself) in the coming Spring, and having received a number of solicitations to move into other localities or congregations, I herewith desire to say, that if there are any who may desire my assistance, to correspond with me immediately. Would likewise request correspondence with others who have not as yet extended any invitation or proposition, as I have a desire to locate permanently. My reasons for the contemplated change, are on account of inconveniences, and having no permanent occupation outside of the ministry. If you wish to write, do so at once. THE Springfield church, Indiana, is still in love, and among the living, standing in harmony with the different churches surrounding it, trying to serve God and our fellow man. Our watchmen are at the gates, but have not of late, heard a single solemn knock. It seems the people are slow to comprehend the truth and interpretation thereof. With an eye of faith we look to God for a refreshing shower of grace. May the Lord bless the missionary cause beyond the vast Atlantic. Greetings to the Brethren who dwell there. Hope to meet you by and by beyond the river of Jordan.

Dear Brethren:—

WE are having very cold weather here now. This morning the thermometer stood 10° below zero.

The Brethren have resolved to call their new church the "Bethel."

I see in No. 1, of the present volume of the BRETHREN AT WORK you make me say that the hymn used at the opening of the dedication services was the 32nd, which is a mistake. The first line of the 32nd hymn is: "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform;" while the one that was used commences: "O, bow thine ear, eternal One;" being the 325th. Fraternally,

Children at Work.

M. M. ESHELMAN, Editor.

"Suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me."—Acts 22: 6.

SOMETIMES those who respect themselves so much, are the only ones who do so.

"My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth."

TRUTH is immortal. The sword cannot destroy it. Fire cannot burn it. Famine cannot starve it. Cursing cannot kill it.

YOUNG man, are you spending your time loafing? Are you going into saloons? Stop! If you keep going that way, and go on loafing, ruin will be the result. Time is of great value. Good books and good work will make you what you ought to be. Follow the good.

THE world is being filled with bad reading matter. It is found in bookstores, in cars, in hotels, in libraries, in schools, and in family circles. There are few places where children are safe from its pernicious work; and parents need to watch every point to keep the slimy serpent out of their children's hands.

THE Book of God teaches: "Children obey your parents in the Lord."—Eph. 6: 1. Now, parents, one of the best things you can command your children is, that they go to meeting, and then have them sit on the front seats. There are many reasons why they should sit in front. And the preacher should talk plain and simple to them that they may know what was said. If he can become as one of them, he will do much good.

WE want the name and address of every Sunday school superintendent in the United States. We have something that we wish to present to them for their consideration.

ON Sunday, Jan. 12th, there were one hundred and sixty-one scholars, and fourteen teachers present at the Brethren's Sunday-school in Lanark. On the 19th one hundred and thirty-one scholars and fourteen teachers. The Bible, pure and free, is our motto; and in teaching this, we all take pleasure.

That Journey of Ours.

CHAPTER III. BY THE EDITOR.

"COME Lizzie," said Ida, "let us take a little journey to-day. Let us go out to the barn, and play house-keeping." "All right," answered Lizzie, and off they went like two happy birds. "Now I'll be mother," said Ida "and you be papa. Let us begin."

Lizzie.—See here, old woman, why is not supper ready. Do you not know that I am out of tobacco, and must go to town this evening for some?

Ida.—O, your nasty tobacco; go away with it.

Lizzie.—You'd better not be quite so fast. I will attend to my business; you may attend to yours.

Ida.—Just what I am doing. It is my business to get supper, so I am attending to that.

Lizzie.—Be careful what you say; I am boss of this house.

Ida.—And I am boss, too.

Just then their mother called them to come to dinner, and off they ran to the house, feeling that they had made a good beginning at house-keeping. Had they not remembered some things pretty well? "Give me some bread," said Ida. "You never say please," said her papa.

"You never say 'please' to mamma, nor to me, and Lizzie; you always say to mamma, 'you must.'"

"Yes," cries Lizzie, "we played house-keeping out in the barn, and we had got as far as the two bosses when mamma called us to dinner. We think it real nice fun to talk loud and hard to each other, so we put on a good deal of style in our house-keeping. We are going to try it again some day."

The husband looked at his wife, and the wife at the husband, as if they saw a good deal of folly. They could see what and where their children were being taught. This ought to have made them both wiser, but it was soon forgotten, as our next lesson will show.

Smoking Alcohol.

Compiled by the Editor.

PERHAPS very few persons know that alcohol is used in making cigars. The cigars that won the prize at the Centennial Exhibition were sprinkled with New England rum. It is well known that rum and tobacco are closely related. Beside the saloon there is sure to be a tobacco store. In every saloon there is tobacco. No saloon can be run without tobacco. Every man who puts a cigar in his mouth, gets the taste and some of the effects of alcohol. This may be the reason why it is so hard for a smoker to give up the bad habit. It is the time that the gospel light was let in on this whole business. Many men smoke on and on not knowing that they are smoking alcohol as well as tobacco.

Loving and Trusting.

GIVE Jesus your heart! What does that mean? It means love him. Why should you love him? Because he has done so much for you. What has he done? He died that sinners might be saved. How are sinners saved? By trusting in the merits of Jesus' death. What do you understand by that? Relying upon his death as a sufficient punishment for your sins. If he has been punished for your sins, there is no necessity for your being punished for them too. So, you see if you trust in Jesus, God will forgive you and save you.

A Child's Evening Prayer.

Dear Jesus, look between the stars
And down to this my little bed;
Show me thy face, and gently place
Thy hands in blessing on my head.

The darkest hour is bright with thee;
Then smile upon my happy rest;
My covering be thine arms 'round me,
My cradling-bed thy loving breast.
—Children's Friend.

Little Children.

Thank God for little children!
When our hearts are cold and gray,
They come as sunshine to our hearts,
And charm our cares away.

I almost think the angels
Who tend life's garden fair,
Drop down the sweet wild blossoms
That bloom around us here.

"Don't Let Me Die."

WHEN the yellow fever raged in Vicksburg many incidents occured which are worthy to be remembered. Among them, one of the most touching is that of a little girl who offered a simple, trusting prayer to God to be saved. It was first given in the Sunday-School Times.

Some two weeks ago a little orphan girl, named Maggie Beggs, between six and seven years old, was taken with the fever at the house of Colonel Martin Keary, a noble and generous Irishman, and a friend of the widow and orphan, who has since died of the fever. Little Maggie was very sick. One afternoon Dr. Shannon, the attending physician, an excellent Christian gentleman, who has had great success in treating the fever, called to see his patients, of whom he had a number in the house. After examining the little girl, he said in a low tone of voice, as he supposed, to Mrs. Wilson, the lady in charge, "You need not do anything for Maggie; she will die during the night." With senses all quickened at such time, the child heard it, and immediately began to pray.

She was a child of the Sunday-school, and evidently had a faithful teacher. She repeated all the little prayers she had been taught or learned in the Sunday-school. Then she commenced to improvise prayers of her own, in substance like the following:

"O, good Lord! blessed Father! don't let me die. Dear Father in heaven, I don't want to die now. I don't want to die now. I don't want to go down in that dark hole, in the cold grave! O Lord, I have no father or mother on earth to take care of me! You are my heavenly Father, and have promised to take care of me. Good Lord! please let me live a little longer. I have tried to be a good girl, and if the Lord will spare me now I will try to be a better girl than ever, and love him so good. All I ask for Jesus' sake."

So the child continued to pray almost during the entire night. When the morning light came, there was a great change in little Maggie. She was better, and improved rapidly. Yesterday a gentleman who lives in the same house, was in my office, and on inquiry he told me that little Maggie Beggs was running about the house and yard, as lively as she could be, and as bright and sweet as a May morning.

Now what do you call that? Was it chance? Did it happen so? No, never, never! It was in answer to humble, child-like, importunate, trusting prayer. May the Lord help other children, and older people, too, to imitate the beautiful example of this little Sunday-school girl.—Henry B. Whitfield.

A Mirage.

DID you ever read about the Mirage on the deserts of Africa? You can see away ahead of you a lake of water, and waves rolling on the lake, and trees on the banks of the lake waving their tops. You can see the same phantom in Nebraska. You may travel all day, even the camel will push its speed to get to it, to get a good drink of water; but they never get to it. It's all a phantom. It is like some boys, (and we are sorry that it is so) when they get to be fifteen or sixteen years old, they see a Mirage away off some where, and will leave a good home and good father and mother, and make their bundle like the Prodigal son, and start after the Mirage that they see away off, and most of them never get to it. After travel ing for years, getting into bad company, they will become hardened in their sins, and go from bad, to a bad end. I have known many such cases. Disobedience to parents is a strong start towards destruction and the prison. Then you will find when too late, that you were following a mirage, a phantom.

Three Good Reasons.

THERE are three good reasons why boys should always tell the truth.

First, for their own sake. One who tells the simple truth, with no attempt to gloss it over, no matter how much it may seem to be against him, is always trusted. So it is the best policy.

Secondly, for the sake of others. The opposite course will surely lead some one else to commit the same sad sin. His best friends will be grieved, and some one may be terribly wronged by the telling of an untruth about him. So it is a selfish practice.

Last, but not least, God has in many ways expressed his great displeasure towards him that "maketh a lie." To him we must render account for "every idle word," with every "secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." So, it is best on principle.

What can be more foolish than a lie? And how many an evil thing, kept hidden by a crafty deception, will be dragged to light when, alas! too late to flee the consequences; for the Lord has declared that the dealers in those things, shall in no wise enter heaven.

There is a little sermon for you, boys, that we want you to remember always. Stick to the truth; buy it at any price; sell it at no price.—Kind Words.

Said a little child, about four years old, "Mother, does God love me when I do wrong."

The mother replied, that God could not love anything sinful or wrong.

"O," said he, I know how it is. God loves me, but he does not love the wrong things that I do." Ah! my dear children, if God did not love you, you would not be alive before him; for how much you do that is wrong!—Well-Spring.

Our Sunday Lesson.

Casting out the Unclean Spirit.

Jesus, James, John, Simon and Andrew went out to Capernaum; and on the Sabbath Jesus went to the Jews' place of worship, and there taught the people who were very much pleased at his manner of teaching. He taught like one who had the rightful power, and not as the scribes.

In that place there was a man who had an unclean spirit. He cried out, "Ah! Jesus of Nazareth, what hast thou to do with us? Art thou come to destroy us? I know that thou art the holy one of God." Jesus said, "Be quiet, and come out of him." Then the unclean spirit threw the man into spasms; and making loud cries, came out of him. This made all present wonder, and they asked one another, "What does this mean? What new teaching is this? He commands with great power, even the unclean spirits, and they obey him." From that time his fame spread throughout all Galilee.—Mark 1: 21, 28.

QUESTIONS:—Where is Capernaum? On what day did Jesus teach the people? Where did he teach them? Why was his teaching liked by the people? From whom had he this power to teach? What is an unclean spirit? Do men have unclean spirits now? If so, how may they be cast out? Did the unclean spirit confess Christ? What did the unclean spirit do to the man? What effect had the casting-out of the spirit, upon the people? Was this miracle a new teaching? Where did Jesus' fame spread?

NOTES.—The Sabbath here spoken of, was the seventh day, or what we call Saturday. The multitudes were pleased at Jesus' manner of teaching; but the chief priests—those who held office—were all the time jealous, hence stirred up the people all they could against Jesus. The Savior could keep the people on his side while with them, but in his absence, the wicked rulers would do all they could to injure Him. The unclean spirit cried out. And more; it threw the man into spasms. It did not want to leave the man. Here we have an unclean spirit crying and tearing a man. And this action of the unclean spirit, and its crying out astonished the people, so much so that they spread it abroad every where. Galilee is north of Samaria.

Our Letter Box.

From Ardie E. Wilt, Sarah, Pa.—I am a little boy eight years old; so you see I cannot do much but go to school and learn to read and write. This is Sunday, and papa is at Warrior's Mark preaching. We are lonesome without him. I have a little brother and sister. Some of my cousins live in Armstrong county. I wish they would write some for our little paper. This is my first letter. Farewell.

From Samuel H. Brubaker, Iowa Center, Iowa.—I enjoy reading the paper very much. I am saving each number very carefully, and at the end of the year I want to make them into a book, which I believe will be worth saving. I have a nice Bible of my own, and when I get a paper from the post-office, I get my Bible, and when I read in the paper and it refers to the Scriptures, I turn to the passage, to see how it reads in the Bible. Since I have read the paper, I have found many things that I did not know was in the Bible, and it is more interesting than I thought it was. I am only twelve years old, and when I see how many things there are in the Bible to read and learn, I feel almost discouraged; but then if we try as hard to learn from the Bible as we do our arithmetic, I think we will learn a good deal. Once arithmetic seemed all hard to me, now I am in reduction of compound numbers, in third part of arithmetic; and it seems easier than simple addition did when I first started out.

From Estella Moore, Milville, Ind.—I am only ten years old. My health is very poor. I am not able to go to school; and our little paper gives me much pleasure. I have spent many hours sitting in my little chair reading our paper. I am sorry that we cannot have Sunday-school at our meeting-house. I have one little brother and one little sister alive. Little brother Frankie has fallen asleep in Jesus. O, little friends, may we all meet in that happy land, and be with Jesus and the loved ones forever.

From Katie Lilligh, Mulberry Grove, Ill.—I like to read our little paper. In answer to the question, which is the second shortest verse in the Bible, I will say that I think it is (1 Thess. 5: 16) "Rejoice evermore." A good verse it is. Mathuselah was the oldest man. He was 969 years old when he died. Read the 5th chapter of Genesis, and there learn what is said about old people. Where was Saul going, and for what purpose when the Lord stopped him? Who baptized him?

From Nellie L. Nowlan, Mulberry Grove, Ill.—The letters from different persons, I like to read. We should not let "Our Letter Box" get empty. The editor is very kind in giving us a chance to talk to each other through the paper. We should not neglect writing. Elder John Wise came here in December, and is now living in this town. He attends our meeting, which is every two weeks. What was Christ's first miracle, and where performed? How long was Solomon in building the temple? Where did Absolom die?

From Minerva Brumbaugh, Bradford, O.—I like to see so many little letters in the CHILDREN AT WORK. I want to try to be good. I like to go to meeting and sing and hear preaching. My health will not permit me to go to school very much. I still try to learn at home. Papa and mamma are reading in the Bible. We live one-half mile from the meeting-house. I am no member, but if the Lord spares me, I will be when I get older. I think it is nice and good for young folks to follow Jesus. I will say that Mathuselah was the oldest man. We read it in Genesis, fifth chapter.

The Publican and Pharisee.

By the Editor.

SEE this proud Pharisee dropping his tithe, or tenth part of his income, into the treasury. He says, "I give tithes of all I possess. I fast twice a week." He says, "God, I thank Thee, that I am not as other men." O, what boasting! Hear him further: "I thank Thee, O God, that I am no extortioner; that I do not make hard bargains and take more than belongs to me. I thank Thee that I am not unjust; that I am no adulterer. Yes, Lord, I thank Thee that I am not even as this publican." Dear children, this is a poor prayer.

Both of these men went to the temple to pray. Their motives were to pray. But now listen to the poor publican's prayer: "God be merciful to me a sinner." O, what a grand prayer! He had no money to drop into the treasury to boast of. He felt that he was a sinner, and he told God so. See him looking down, while the Pharisee holds his head high. The poor publican was not dressed in fine linen, but look at the costly apparel of the boasting Pharisee.

Will we all learn a lesson from this? O, never boast of your own goodness and good deeds, or that you are better than others. Feel thankful that God shows you mercy, and confess your sins. "Every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."—Luke 18: 14. The publican humbled himself and was blessed. When we get little in our own sight, we are big with God. Watch how you pray and how you think.

Love God and keep His commandments.

THE PUBLICAN AND PHARISEE.

An "Awful" Story.

ONE time there was an awful little girl who had an awful way of saying "awful" to everything. She lived in an awful house, in an awful street, in an awful village, which was an awful distance from every other place. She went to an awful school, where she had an awful teacher, who gave her awful lessons out of awful books. Every day she was so awful hungry, that she ate an awful amount of food, so that she looked awful healthy. Her hat was awful small, and her feet were awful large. She went to an awful church, and her minister was an awful preacher. When she took an awful walk, she climbed awful hills, and when she got awful tired she sat down under an awful tree to rest herself. In summer she found the weather awful hot, and in winter awful cold. When it didn't rain there was an awful drouth, and when an awful drouth was over there was an awful rain. So that this awful little girl was all the time in an awful state, and if she does not get over saying "awful" about everything she will by-and by come to an awful end. And this awful little girl lives in this awful city.—Cincinnati Times.

THE largest Sunday school in the world is at Stockport, a town in England, with a population of only 53,014. The school building cost $100,000, and has about 90 teaching rooms. Since its opening, 5,084 teachers, and 90,803 scholars have been registered.

ECHOES FROM THE CENTER.

The Pruning Knife—A Wanderer Returned—A Pleasant Visit—Sunday's Labor—A Suffering Sister.

THE Gospel is the only pruner that works effectual. And the person who handles it should not forget that his life is to be governed by it, and that it also will be his judge at the final day. Then brother, judge not harshly nor decide prematurely.

To-day we met in church council, as is our custom once per quarter, and labored in the vineyard of our divine Master. Considerable matter was brought before that body which was adjusted and finally disposed of as we believe in the fear of the Lord. Christ is the Vine, we are the branches. The Vine needs no trimming, but the branches do. Christ is perfect, and all true branches have life and by abiding in the Vine, they have life more abundantly. No vine-dresser will detach a branch from the vine unless it is a decaying or fruitless branch, or not growing out at the proper place. Hence he must be keen of perception and good judgment; must study the nature of the vine and the best methods of rendering it productive. And in order to do the vine no injury, he must acquaint himself with the pruning knife, and how to use it with accuracy. So it is with the body of believers when adjusting church business. They must be acquainted with the pruner, (the Gospel), study how to enrich the branch, not apply the knife (judgment) too soon, so that the vine sustains no injury. He must also be of keen perception, good, sound judgment, to know when to detach the worthless branches, so that the vine (the body of Christ) sustains no injury by being cumbered too long with unfruitful or disobedient branches. Do you envy the position of those who have to decide—the body or committees? Ah, no; I trow not. It is a very responsible position, one for which we must account for in eternity. Then let us pray for one another that all may be done to the honor and glory of God, and for the welfare of souls.

During our meetings a wanderer returned to the fold again, and sought safety in the cleft of the Rock, Christ Jesus. There was rejoicing among the saints, and feelings of triumph over the works of the devil. He may be able to ensnare and decoy the lambs from the flock, but, bless the name of the Holy Eternal, he cannot hold them, and when they return repentant, will and can be received despite all his pretense of power.

Again, we made a flying visit of a few days among the brethren to assist in a series of meetings. On the 19th inst., was escorted to the place of meeting, near Vanlue, Ohio, and found the brethren already at work a few days, and a good degree of interest worked up. Remained until the 23rd. Two confessed Christ and were baptized while there. We were joined by our dear brother J. Calvert, who continued the meeting until the 25th, and we learn since that they repaired to the waterside again, and others were made happy in a Savior's love. Oh, the joy that sinners experience when once relieved of guilt, and regrets expressed for not coming sooner. One dear brother that was baptized, at the close of our meetings, desired to make a few remarks, and with tearful eyes said, "If I would have started out in this good cause twenty years ago, my children might all be glorifying God. I have raised a family of eleven children, and only one is taking up the cross with me." Oh, what a solemn statement! Fathers and mothers yet out of Christ, will you not come and enter the fold that you may be the means of getting your children to glorify God and be prepared to meet each other in heaven? I see more and more propriety of evangelizing the world. Brethren of the Cross, arise! gird upon yourselves the whole armor of God and go forth in the power of his might, and tell the good news of a saving Gospel to a sin-ruined world, that many more may be made free of sin and travel with us on the highway to heaven. Let the church arise and shake off her dull sloth, unearth her coffers and establish an evangelizing fund, open up the Law of God, use every Bible means to save sinners, that the whole world may know Christ and be saved. All may be saved, "for there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek; for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?" Rom. 10: 13–15.

Then is not the church responsible? Oh may she arise in all her beauty, love and power and go forth in the beauty of holiness and bring forth the life-giving food which will be to the saving health of the nations of the earth.

To day we met at Pleasant Ridge church for divine service, and were pleased to see so many gathered together in the courts of our God. And from the expression of the countenances in the audience, they thought, "beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion." Then we, with the Psalmist, "thought of thy loving kindness, O God in the midst of thy temple," for his mercy towards us in permitting us again to meet. The services were introduced in the usual manner. The speaker then arose and offered the following motto for discourse: "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste," Isa. 28: 16, and deliberated upon the following deductions:

1. The Foundation which God has laid for the support of his church.

2. The character of Christ as a Foundation, a Stone.

3. The character and safety of believers.

Christ is the Sure Foundation, the Eternal Rock, and all who build upon that Rock will stand the test at the final day. Believers in Christ shall be secure and when the storms come they find repose and safety in the Rock of their Salvation. They will be composed in the hour of their dissolution, and can sing, "Come welcome death, thou end of fears I am prepared to go." Sinners will make haste in the final day, and will run to and fro, crying unto the rocks and mountains to fall upon them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne.

To-day by special request I again visited the house of affliction. Our dear sister King who has long been suffering, desired to have a season of devotional exercises and in compliance to her request I visited their humble abode. The dear young sister has strong consolation in Christ, and is patiently waiting the bidding of the Master. We read the 5th chapter of second Cor., and endeavored to speak some words of consolation to her, and to those whom she holds dear to her heart. Though, to sing upon such occasions is more painful than pleasant, yet as it was her desire, we tried to sing a song of praise, selecting the 411th hymn.

"O there's a better world on high;
Hope on, thou pious breast, etc.

Then went to prayer with that dear family in behalf of our suffering sister. Yes, mother, God will hear prayer and soon he will bid thy dear daughter to come up higher, and then she can exchange a world of sorrow and pain for one of love, pleasure and happiness.

May God bless us all, and conduct us all safely to that land where we can enter that house not made with hands eternally in the heavens.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

WILLIE.

Willie, thou art gone to God,
You fell beneath the chast'ing rod,
So young, too fair on earth to stay,
So God has taken you away.

Dear Willie, loved so well while here,
Your death caused many a bitter tear,
Your life was very brief on earth;
Your voice is hushed from joy and mirth.

But you have joined the angel throng;
You were too pure to do one wrong—
You've joined that bright angelic band,
Cherubic legions fill that band.

Yes, Willie, you are happy there,
You'll always be an angel fair,
You beckon your dear parents, "come,
To meet me in that better home."

Dear parents, mourn not for your child,
Just look and see those youth so wild,
They're staggering home along the street,
Their loving parents there to meet.

Willie will never share their fate;
He's living in that high estate,
Where only angels ever dwell,
Dear Willie, now a long farewell.

OUR GOD.

BY S. J. HARRISON.

MEN have many gods whom they ignorantly worship. Our God is he whom we obey, love and honor. The most popular god at this time is Opinion. A man says, "I think," "I feel," "I believe" so and so, and then becomes angry if those who hear his opinions do not concede to them.

Reader, what is your god? Is it Opinion? Do you object to things because they are contrary to your opinion or because you know they are not the truth? Do you advocate things because they are truths, which you can prove, or because they are your opinions? Practically with many Opinion is God. A man can loose his reputation sooner in no way than to oppose people on opinions. It is evident many of our ministers are serving the god of Opinion. They can preach with tremendous zeal and power against some evils which exist in "other denominations" because it is popular to do so, but to correct errors into which some of their brethren have fallen, is too much for them to do. They would lose their reputation if they did that! So, we see more attention is paid to opinion than truth.

God speed the day when all our ministers shall break the unadulterated Bread of Life regardless of opinions. Opinion is a farce and they who trust in it will find it out sometime, even if it be not before they weep and gnash their teeth in outer darkness.

TRUE ENJOYMENT.

BY VINA ELLER.

WORLDLY joys and pleasures are extended unto all who desire them, but the joys and pleasures which the world can afford us, are of short duration. They are momentary; or, like the sun in the West, they are soon gone.

Yet how many we see seeking worldly pleasure, instead of preparing for the enjoyment in the world to come. How many of our young friends do we see giving the service of their best days, to the enemy who is only seeking to destroy their never dying souls.

The wise man Solomon said, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Would it not then be wisdom in us all to try and prepare for heaven? For the things of this world are transitory and will all pass away.

But the happiness which the pilgrim experiences, and the joys which animate his heart, are of a durable nature, and will reach beyond the gloomy grave. Then cheer thee up, weary pilgrim thou shalt be well repaid for thy toilsome days of toiling here—heaven shall be thy reward and thy everlasting home. There, among the joyful exclamations and unceasing hallelujahs of an innumerable company of angelic beings, shalt thou enjoy thyself in that peaceful home above.

FOUND OUT.

ON the top of a hill was an orchard, and on one of the trees was a boy stealing apples; another boy was at the bottom of the tree, on the watch to see that nobody found them out.

Nobody was near that they could see; but that did not prove that no one saw them; for, seven miles off, Professor Mitchell, the astronomer, was examining the setting sun with his great telescope, and the hill happened to come within its range, the actions of the boys, the very tell-tale look on their faces, attracted his notice. He saw what they were up to. He found them out. There was no escaping the great eye of his telescope looking full upon them. They little thought of such a thing.

But there was another eye upon them, a greater eye and a sharper eye, and the eye followed them. It was God's eye, and his eye is on us. It sees near, it sees afar off. It sees in the day, it sees in the night. It sees out of doors, it sees in doors. It sees our actions, it sees our hearts. It sees us too by name. Professor Mitchell did not know the boys. God knows.—Sel.

GOD.

O THOU Eternal One! whose presence bright
All space doth occupy. All motion guide;
Unchanged through time's all devasting blight,
Thou only God! There is no God beside.
Being above all beings! Mighty One!
Whom none can comprehend and none explore
Who fill'st existence with thyself alone;
Embracing all, supporting all, ruling o'er—
Being whom we call God—and know no more.

A million torches, lighted by thy hand,
Wander unwearied through the blue abyss;
They own thy power, accomplish thy command,
All gay with life, all eloquent with bliss;
What shall we call them? Piles of crystal light?
A glorious company of golden streams?
Lamps of celestial ether, burning bright?
Suns lighting systems with their joyous beams?
But thou to these art as the noon to night.

Yes, as a drop of water in the sea,
All this magnificence is lost in thee:—
What are ten thousand worlds compared to thee?
And what am I, then? Heaven's unnumber'd host,
Though multiplied by myriads, and arrayed
In all the glory of sublimest thought,
Is but an atom in the balance weigh'd
Against thy greatness, is a cipher brought Against infinity! What am I then? Naught!

Naught?—But the effluence of thy light divine,
Pervading worlds, hath reach'd my bosom too;
Yes, in my spirit doth thy Spirit shine,
As shines the sun-beam in a drop of dew,
Naught?—But I live, and on hope's pinions fly
Eager towards thy presence; for in thee
I live, and breathe, and dwell; aspiring high,
Even to the throne of thy Divinity.
I am, O God, and surely thou must be!

Thou art! directing, guiding, all. Thou art!
Direct my understanding then to thee;
Control my spirit, guide my wandering heart;
Though but an atom 'midst immensity,
Still I am something fashioned by thy hand!
I hold a middle rank 'twixt heaven and earth,
On the last verge of being stand,
Close to the realm where angels have their birth,
Just on the boundary of the spirit land!

THE AUTHORITY AND HONOR OF OUR SAVIOR'S PRIESTHOOD.

BY W. HOBOOH.

"Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee." Heb. 5: 5.

IN the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we have an High Priest who is preferred above the angels, both in person and in office. In person he is owned of God and acknowledged to be his Son, made equal with God. This has never been said of any of the angels, much less of the frail creatures of humanity; the priesthood of Aaron not excepted, although their offerings were acceptable with God when properly made. When our great High Priest was baptized of John in Jordan, "coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him, and there came a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Mark 1: 10, 11. Such honor never was conferred upon any being, or creature, except the Savior; but this is not all; in addition to the personal honors, he also received official honors. God by an oath made him an High Priest forever after the order of Melchisedec, and also anointed him King, and gave him a kingdom and scepter of righteousness by which to govern his people; set him upon the majestic throne; gave himself all power in heaven and in earth; enwrapt him with grandeur that outshines the sun, which forever guards him and fortifies him against the approach of his enemies. Of his power, he spoke to the eleven in the mountain, saying, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." He gives us an illustration of his magnificent glory, splendor and brightness in the conversion of Saul of Tarsus.

Saul of Tarsus was at that time an enemy of Christ, he was in pursuit of the followers of Christ, equipped with all the power that the Roman government could bestow upon him as an officer, was made chief in this work. Then we have the chief of sinners coming in contact with the Chief of righteousness,—our great High Priest and King, and what is the result? The chief of sinners is melted into submission by the brilliant splendor of the Sun of Righteousness as a snowflake melts under the bright rays of a noonday sun.

Then, my dear reader, if you are not at peace with the Sun of Righteousness, if you are yet in open rebellion against him, how can you hope to meet him without a preparation? "The Lord thy God is a consuming fire." Deut. 4: 24; Heb. 12: 29. In consequence of the brightness of his glory, to the unprepared, heaven itself would be a place of excruciating torment. Then it becomes important that we be at peace with the Lord our King and Priest, for we must all meet him in his splendor to render an account to him for our deeds. We fear that there will be many that will not be able to withstand the brilliant glory of him that sitteth upon the throne, but will call for rocks and mountains to hide them from the brightness of his splendor; for our Lord is a consuming fire. But not so with those who are prepared to meet him in peace; for they shall be like him. To them, heaven will be a happy place; no night there; for "the Lamb is the light thereof." Rev. 21: 23. No waiting for a revolution to receive light from another planet, or planets which can only give us light a portion of the time at best, but is illuminated forever and ever by the honor and glory of our great High Priest. Such are his official honors. They are worthy of the acknowledgement of all humanity. The angels do acknowledge them. And there can be no reason given why we should not do the same, and with gladness obey his commandments. Then let us put on the whole armor of faith, and fight manfully the battles of the Lord, and obtain the great treasure laid up for us.

BURYING THE DEAD.

BY DANIEL BRIGHT.

"Buried with him in baptism, wherein also, ye are risen with him, through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." Col. 2: 12.

MEN, of different nations, have various ways in dealing with their dead. Some hasten them back to their origin, "dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," by the quick process of cremation. Others, like the ancient Egyptians, embalm them in odors to keep them from decaying; and perchance avoid the soul's transmigration. Others, again bury them into the earth, where they slowly return to their mother dust, which also is the most reasonable way of dealing with them. But people are not buried while they yet live, neither are they raised from the dead before they had died and were buried. To bury men while yet alive, is inhuman, and were it done, it would be atrociously wicked; but to raise people from the dead, bodily before they had died is impossible. Yet, spiritually, I am afraid, the former is frequently done, and the impossibility of the latter, attempted to prove. That the "old man" of the believer in Christ, is "buried with him in baptism," is a doctrine taught so unmistakably plain in the New Testament, that, to attempt to disprove it, a man simply exposes his folly, his ignorance, or his total insincerity. But it is not the outward form that accomplishes the work, but that which is wrought within.

Peter tells us that "baptism doth save us," but not the outward washing, the immersing of the body, which he terms "the putting away of the filth of the flesh," but the inward workings of the Spirit of God; the "old man" being buried into Christ's death; the separating of the "body of sin" from the soul; and hence "the answer of a good conscience toward God," by or through "the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."

The "old man, the body of sin" is not buried into the baptismal waters, but into Christ's death. It is the believer's body that is immersed, "buried" into the watery element in baptism, and typifies that which takes place within: not that which took place, a month or a year before, but that which takes place at one and the same time. The immersing, the burying of the body of the believer, typifies not only the burying of the "old man" into Christ's death," but as it is in baptism also raised out of its watery grave, it therein typifies the resurrection of the "new man," the rising with Christ through the faith in the soul which grasps God in his resurrecting power, with which he raised Jesus from the dead.

Baptism is the grafting in of the believer, into Christ, a branch into the True Vine; the being planted "together in the likeness of his death," in order that we may be also "in the likeness of his resurrection." But to be planted together in the likeness of Christ's death, we see that it is necessary that the "old man" first dies,—Christ was first crucified, and then he was buried. But mark, he was not first risen from the dead and then buried. So likewise must our "old man" be first crucified before he is to be buried, but not risen with Christ.

But what is the "old man," and how is he crucified? The old man is our sinful nature, the inherited sinful inclinations and evil propensities. It is equivalent to the body of sins," the members of which are "fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affections, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry, anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, and filthy communication," Col. 3: 5–8, and to crucify it, is to forever renounce them; to cross the desires and appetites thereof by doing just the contrary to what they tempt us to do.

To "be dead with Christ," is not to really have died; that our natural bodies are dead, but "to be dead indeed unto sin," and to be dead indeed unto sin, is not that sin itself is dead, but that we are dead unto sin; and to be dead unto sin, is to "have crucified the flesh, with the passions (margin) and lusts," Gal 5: 24, to have forever renounced sin, and in our hearts resolved never more to will unto sin. Hence our will, is the life of the "old man" or the "body of sins," and when we no more will unto sin, for Christ's sake, then are we indeed dead unto sin. Not that sin is dead in us. For it moves yet in our mortal bodies, strives for the mastery, wars against the spirit, trying to get the sway and so to reign in us. But Paul tells the Roman brethren who were "dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ, our Lord:" "Let not sin therefore (because they were dead unto sin) reign in your mortal bodies, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." Rom. 6: 11, 12. Hence he who has "crucified the old man," for Christ's sake, whose will unto sin is dead, he is a Gospel subject to be "buried with Christ in baptism," in order that he may also rise "with him through the faith of the operation of God, who raised him from the dead." He who divorces the "buried with Christ in baptism," the being baptized into his death, the being planted together in the likeness of his death, the being also in the likeness of his resurrection, the rising of the new man to walk in newness of life, from the administration of the rite of baptism, the immersion of the body, the burying of the believer into the baptismal waters, and disconnectedly place it, without any Scriptural authority, a month, a year, or two years before it, commits so great a crime as he who breaks the command, "Thou shalt not commit adultery," puts asunder that which God has joined together, or as he who takes the spirit of the body—commits murder.

The Gospel subject for baptism, truly must be dead unto sin, before he shall be buried with Christ in baptism, but he is not required to have risen with him. The thought of Christ being buried after he was risen from the dead! Who ever thought of burying the saints after they have risen from the dead, when the Lord has descended from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God? Thess. 4: 16. Who does not see the inconsitency of such a thought, yea the absurdity? And yet it is no more so, than the doctrine that those who are risen with Christ, shall then be "buried with him in baptism." The truth is, the old man is buried with Christ, buried into Christ's death, in baptism, never more to rise, but to mortality and decay; and the new man risen with Christ to walk in newness of life. "Oh," says one, "Cornelius was risen with Christ before he was buried in baptism." I deny the assertion, and ask for its proof. He was no more buried with Christ, and risen with him when the Holy Spirit fell on him, than was Saul the son of Kish when he met the company of prophets and the Spirit of God came upon him, 1 Sam. 10; 10, and how could Saul have been buried in Christ's death and risen with him, seeing that Christ himself had not yet died and risen?

Receiving the Holy Spirit, is not rising in Christ. For that which rises is a new creature, a new man, not the Holy Spirit, though the latter possesses the new creature, the new man, and it is no greater miracle for the new man in Cornelius to receive the Holy Spirit before he was born, though conceived, than it was for John the Baptist to be filled with the Holy Ghost, and leap for joy before he was born.

In the setting out of this article, I mentioned three ways that men deal with their dead, and now let us see whether it does not agree with the practice of the present-day Christian professors, in a spiritual point of view. We find many who do not bury their converts, those who are seemingly dead unto sin, at all, but pass them through the quick process of cremation—anxious bench, revival excitement and thereby consume, and reduce the old man, the body of sins in them so completely, that for them to sin any more is simply impossible. (?) Others embalm them first, which frequently takes six or eight weeks before they deposit them in the tomb. This is done to keep them from mortification and decay, and is termed in the Scripture, "making provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof."

Others again, having sufficient evidence to believe that their converts have crucified the old man, are dead indeed unto sin, and that a new creature, a new man is conceived in the hearts, they bury them—their old man, the "body of sins," by baptism, into Christ's death, there to mortify and decay, and finally to pass into oblivion; in order that they may, through the faith in the powerful operation of God in raising Christ from the dead, also rise with him and walk in newness of life; and by this resurrection, finally conquor death hell and the grave, and obtain the crown of life with the inheritance, incorruptible, and that fadeth not away, which is reserved for them in heaven.

THE LITERAL INTERPRETATION OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES.

BY ALEX W. REESE.

"But he answered and said, it is written thou shalt not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Matt. 4: 4.

THE Scriptures of Divine truth comprise a revelation of the will of God to the human race. This revelation is addressed to moral, intelligent, accountable beings. It is the voice of the Creator, clothed in human language, addressing itself to the moral nature of man through the prescient faculties of mind. While the intimate connection between mind and matter is too subtile for the finite conception of man—this we do know that we are brought into relation with external things, solely through the medium of the organs of special sense. Language is but the expression of thought—the medium, which by common consent, and the force of imperious circumstance is used as the vehicle of communication between man and his fellow-man. Words are but the signs of ideas, they have no intrinsic value or special meaning in themselves. They are arbitrary terms employed for the expression of mental forms and forces. God, in communicating his will to man, employed the instrumentality of human language to convey the workings of the divine mind to the comprehension of human intelligence, for this is the only agency, short of miraculous intervention, by which he could reach the human mind.

If this view of the subject be correct, it then inevitably follows, as a logical sequence to the proposition, that we are to accept the literal interpretation of the Holy Scriptures as the rule of faith and practice. We are to accept what God says as being what he really means.

Some months ago the writer fell, incidently into a conversation with a learned divine of a popular denomination, in which he took occasion to compliment the Brethren, on their blameless life and conversation, on their devotion to the cause of Christ, and their veneration for the Word of God as they understood it—strongly emphasising the latter clause.

He then added, that he had just finished reading a book defending the doctrines of the Brethren, which had been loaned him by one of our preachers. "Yes," said he, "it is a very well written book, and logically conclusive, if you admit the premises! "But," he continued, "I by no means admit his premises!"

"Wherein," I asked, "are the premises defective?" "Well, there are insuperable difficulties in the way of a literal interpretation of the Scriptures." The letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive." At this point in the conversation, we entered into a friendly discussion of the points involved, in which he endeavored to sustain his position against a literal interpretation of the Word, which continued for perhaps an hour. As many points of interest were brought out, and some of the objections introduced being rather novel to my mind, I was led into some reflections on the subject, which I embodied in a sermon shortly afterward, founded on the language of the text at the opening of this sketch. As I dislike the frequent use of the personal pronoun, the essence of the conversation above alluded to, will be given in the form of "objection," and "answer."

1. Objection. The Brethren themselves, with all the stress they lay upon the subject, do not literally "obey" the Divine Word. Example: We are commanded to go into all the world and "preach the Gospel to every creature." Now, a horse is a creature—a mule is a creature, but you do not preach the Gospel to them, hence you fail to do as the Gospel commands."

Answer. The Gospel is addressed to God's moral, intelligent, accountable creatures—not to the "beasts that perish." They are not subject to the moral government of God. They are not included in the list of intelligent, thinking creation, hence are not embraced in the command. To preach to them would be a palpable absurdity,—and we cannot have so low an estimate of God, as his character is revealed to us in the light of his Word, as to suppose that he would impose an absurd obligation upon his creatures. The man, however sincere he might be in attempting to obey the literal word, who would preach to the horse and mule, would be considered a fit subject for the lunatic asylum.

Objection. The proposition then involves the question of absurdity. What is an absurdity? Is it definitely settled? Might not a thing which would appear absurd to one mind present a very reasonable aspect to another? How can we arrive at a just conclusion as to the intimate essence of what an absurdity is?

Answer. That there are degrees of absurdity, we cannot deny. That some minds have a keener perception of the ludicrous than others, is equally true; but we arrive at all conclusions—we reach the truth by the general consent of mankind. Some things are a palpable absurdity—by common consent they are accounted as absurd, because they strike the minds of the mass of mankind as absurd, therefore they are absurd. If I were to say, "the moon is made of green cheese," this would constitute an absurdity by the universal verdict of intelligent men. So in regard to the man who should preach to the horse, the ass etc., the universal verdict would be "that man is a fool"—a greater one than the animal to whom he preaches.

Objection. Christ says at the last supper, when he took bread and blessed, then brake and distributed to his disciples, "this is my body, broken for you;" also of the cup, "this is my blood shed for you." Do you believe this to be literally true? Answer—we do not. This is figurative language. Ah, but says the objector, "we hold you strictly to the proposition, Christ says, this is my body, this is my blood. You can't dodge off into figures! You must stick to the text."

Answer Very well. You would not insult the intelligence of mankind, and so do us the injustice to assert that we think there are no figures in the Bible. We know that the sacred pages are full of figures of speech, metaphors, allegories, parables, similes, etc., etc., many of which cannot be interpreted literally, but our position, is, that where the Bible teaches plain duty without the aid of figurative speech, it is our plain duty so to interpret it, and simply to obey it. Any contrary statement puts us in a false position, and one that does no credit either to our honesty or intelligence. We do not believe in the doctrine of transubstantiation, as taught by the Romish church, because it is neither supported by the Word of God, nor by common sense. It is a palpable absurdity in itself. Look at the circumstance where Christ uttered these memorable words. Was the body of Christ literally broken at the time? Did he not sit at the table in his entire personality at the very moment he gave utterance to this declaration? Was there a drop of his precious blood shed upon the occasion when he said, "this is my blood shed for you?" It is universally conceded that the age of miracles ceased with the mortal lives of the apostles, and yet if this doctrine were true, how many millions of times has this miracle been enacted within the past eighteen hundred years. Think of the unnumbered millions of nominal Christians all over the world who have celebrated this ordinance since the sad night of its institution by our adorable Redeemer himself. Would not Christ's body have been consumed centuries ago, unless miraculously renewed? The doctrine is absurd, unworthy of Christ, and hence we reject it as unworthy of us.

Objection. You teach that baptism, the literal washing with water, is essential to salvation, while the ordinance really teaches, by its spiritual signification, the cleansing of our carnal natures by the Holy Spirit.

Answer. We are plainly commanded to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins. We believe that the penitent believer is the only proper subject for baptism on the face of the earth—the only one embraced, or comprehended in the command. In that sense we do believe that baptism "is essential" to salvation. Faith, repentance, and baptism are the conditions of pardon and acceptance, and these conditions are truly and literally within the reach of every man and woman of the human race within the sound of the blessed Gospel of the Son of God. To say that men ever have been, or can be saved without baptism, since the commission was given to the apostles and their successors, is to say what God has nowhere declared in his Holy Word. It is to say that men can be saved outside of God's method; it is to say that men can remodel God's plan; it is to say that they can improve God's way, and that what God has plainly and emphatically commanded, man may ignore and set aside—it is to say that we may safely regard "the commandments and traditions of men" while we neglect and refuse to obey the commandments of God. These are surely not "safe grounds" for us to occupy, and we dishonor God when we exact the opinions of men above his infallible Word.

DEPENDENCE.

THERE is no more important lesson for men to learn than that of their utter dependence, as well as of all things in this world, upon each other relatively, and absolutely upon something that cannot belong to this world. It is well understood that in this world there is nothing that exists of itself and is therefore entirely independent; nothing that has within itself all the means of its existence. But that there must be somewhere a cause, which has its own existence within itself, must be admitted. And more than this; it must be the cause of all other existence outside of it, in regular succession from the highest to the lowest. And since no cause can produce its own equal, this first or original cause, must be superior to its highest and all its production; hence a Being above all human beings that were and will be in all worlds, and to all other creatures and creation.

There is nothing in human life that is more constantly and clearly before man than his utter dependence; not only upon the things which surround him, and upon his fellows, but upon the almost innumerable parts of his own, being; as well as the dependence of all these things upon a First Cause. A person who is a perfect human being, with all the faculties complete, is nevertheless utterly helpless without surroundings suited to his capacities; for what would the best eyes be worth without light? and the best ears without sound? And if a man's surroundings were ever so completely suited to a perfect human being, so far as there is a defect in him, are they useless.

From an increasing knowledge of this dependence, man is constantly discovering new issues in nature. All discoveries and inventions are thus made. The relation between things is their dependence upon each other. Human wants are evidences of human dependence, and these direct attention to the relation between man and man, and between man and other things; and continuing this investigation it must lead to a better knowledge of the relation between creation and Creator, thus between cause and effect, until the first cause is contemplated. It must progress from dead matter to living spirit, and thence from spiritual creation or effect, towards spiritual Cause.—Mt. Joy Herald.

THE STOLEN SERMON.

THE Watchman tells the sermon-stealing story of a young man who stood before a presbytery in Scotland, asking ordination; Principal Robison was moderator. The young man was rigidly examined, and asked to preach. The examination and the sermon were both satisfactory. The candidate retired, and the moderator said: "I feel compelled to say that the sermon which the young man has preached is not his own. It is taken from an old volume of sermons, long out of print. Where he found it I do not know. I supposed the only copy of the volume to be found was in my library, and the candidate has had no access to that." The young man was called in and asked if the sermon he had preached was his own. "No," he frankly said. "I was pressed for time, and could not make a sermon in season. The sermon I preached was one which I heard Principal Robison preach some time ago. I took notes of it and liked it so well that I wrote it out from memory, and have preached it to day." Nothing was said; there was nothing to be said!

God overrules all mutinous accident brings them under his laws of fa and makes them all serviceable to l purpose.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1 50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name over and above the nine names the agent will be allowed ten per cent, which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 20 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1 00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - FEBRUARY 13, 1879.

BROTHER GEORGE W. CRIPE, we are informed, is holding a series of meetings at Cerro Gordo, Ill.

NOTICES of a number of District Meetings will appear soon. They have been delayed for want of room.

WE are informed that elder Eli Caylore, of Noblesville, Ind., is lying very low with the bronchial fever, and is not expected to recover.

BROTHERS FRANMORE, of Iowa, and Lugenbeel, of Kansas, lately held a series of meetings in the Bethel Church, Thayer county, Neb. One made the good confession.

THE District Meeting of Northern Iowa will be held on the 7th of March next, in the meeting house, four and one-half miles south of Waterloo, Blackhawk county.

OUR generous contributors and correspondents will please excuse the delay of some of their articles. We are doing the best for them we can, and are thankful for the aid they are thus affording us.

BROTHER D. B. GIBSON, under date of February 4th, writes from Chicago, stating that his meetings at South Bend, Ind., closed with sixteen additions, and one restored. He was on his way home, where he expects to remain for the present.

BRETHREN B. B. Whitmer and Isaac Studebaker held a series of meetings at Sharpsburg, Ill. Four were added to the church by baptism. They also held a few meetings in the west part of Christian county, and had the pleasure of seeing one come and confess Christ.

ON the seventh page will be found a letter from our aged brother, Isaac Price. It is likely the last article he will be able to prepare for the press, and he very much desired to be heard once more on the subject which he has given much attention to in former years. His age entitles him to a hearing.

SOME, whom we thought were getting our paper regularly, now inform us that they have not received a copy for six months, and even longer. Of course these persons do not feel well toward us about it, though we are innocent of any intentional error, and very much regret the mistake. If persons who do not receive their papers in due time would inform us of the fact, the matter could be looked up, and thus unpleasant feelings avoided.

A SISTER, who has the welfare of souls at heart, says: "I will send in my mite for sending the paper to poor members. If I had as much as some of our members I would send more, but as I had the misfortune to loose nearly all the money I had, and have much to pay in our church here in the city, I cannot do much. I like to do all I can for the mission cause while traveling through this wilderness of woe. My prayer is, that much good may be done through your paper and the missionary cause."

OUR visit to Mt. Morris last week was a pleasant one. Mt. Morris is a pleasantly located town about 25 miles east of Lanark, and is situated in the midst of a large settlement of Brethren. We were with them three days, and attended meetings in the town hall each evening. Such an assembly of people is said never before occurred in the history of the place. Brother Stein reached the place the Saturday before, and while there preached some able sermons. We left on Wednesday evening, Brother Stein expecting to remain till the first part of this week. A number of brethren and sisters from adjoining churches were in attendance.

A LETTER just received from Brother R. H. Miller informs us that he has been sick for over a week, and for that reason has not been able to come to Lanark, as was expected. He promises to come just as soon as he is able. Much preaching, and great exposure have greatly affected his health.

WE are informed that The Deacon, a paper published in Pennsylvania, has been publishing some statements about the financial business of this office that are doing us harm in certain localities. As we seldom get to see that paper, and are not posted on its contents, we cannot now correct the statements which it has been circulating. It will be a favor to us if some one will send us a copy of The Deacon containing the objectionable statements, so that we can publish the necessary corrections.

BUSINESS.

THE following is a sample of letters frequently received at this office:

"I registered you one dollar about the last of November for the BRETHREN AT WORK. By calling at the post office I find you received the money, but I have not received the paper. My time was up the 1st of September, but received the paper till the third number of the Stein and Ray debate. I wrote you to send me the paper from that time on. Please get the debate complete, as I want it all. John Walker."

This letter comes to us without any post-office or state, and therefore can not be attended to; but had he given his address the whole matter could be looked up. But as it is nothing can be done, and of course we will be blamed for not attending to our business. Once for all, allow us to say that we cannot send the paper to any one unless we know his address. No man should ever write without giving his address in full. We get scores of letters on business and no address on them whatever; hence, they must be laid aside till the parties write again.

GOOD ADVICE.

AT the installation of a Baptist minister in Lower Canada, recently, the following advice was given to the congregation. The speaker said:

"Dear brethren, I suggest that you pray for your minister daily; guard his reputation carefully; hear him preach weekly; listen to the word wakefully; labor with him patiently, both individually and collectively; * * * give him a bit of meat and a ball of butter occasionally; call on him frequently, but tarry briefly; greet him cordially, but not rudely; and may the God of all grace bless you abundantly, and add unto you daily such as shall be saved eternally." And to this we further add: If he makes any mistakes, go to him, and in a Christian spirit, tell him of it, not as a fault-finder, but as one who loves the cause. Do all you can to help your minister along, both spiritually and temporally. If he is behind with his work, help him. If he is poor, bear part of his burden, and God will bless you for it.

LOST HIS SERMON.

HOW does this look for one of the greatest preachers in America? "Bishop Simpson, at one of his Yale lectures, found himself in an unpleasant predicament when he came before his audience, a portion of his manuscript being missing. A professor went in search of the mislaid pages, however, and the speaker occupied the moments before his return with a few interesting reminiscences of President Lincoln." If some uneducated farmer should lose a part of his sermon while on his way to meeting, and send some one out in search of it, it would not look so bad; but when it comes to a college professor having to depend on manuscript it is rather a poor comment on education.

This, however, reminds me of what is told at John Wesley's expense. Mr. Wesley entered the meeting-house, pulled off his overcoat, felt in the pockets, first one and then the other, seemingly very much troubled. Finally a good-hearted old sister stepped up to him and said: "Brother Wesley, what is the matter? you seem troubled." "I have lost my sermon," he replied. "Well," responded the pious old sister, "can you not trust the Lord for one sermon?" Mr. Wesley said that taught him a lesson.

REPORT OF TRACTS AND PAMPHLETS DISTRIBUTED FREE.

ON the 20th of December, 1878, the Board of Managers ordered that tracts and pamphlets, to the amount of $40, should be sent out free. Only one and a half months have elapsed since the order was given, and in that time 1018 copies, or about 25,000 pages of reading matter, has been sent out to different parts of the country. That the reader may see where they have been distributed, I hereby give the names and addresses of persons to whom they have been sent:

J. P. Moomaw, Purple Cane, Neb.
Henry Crouse, Montrose, Iowa.
C. C. Root, Mirabile, Mo.
Martin Bowers, Colfax, Ind.
A. T. Metz, Hutsonville, Mo.
J. E. Neher, Salem, Ill.
Emma Watson, Geneva, Ind.
Thos. C. Wood, Lynch's Station, Va.
W. H. Ownby, Moscow, Kan.
J. P. Neher, Roseville, Cal.
Wm. B. Sell, Martinsville, Mo.
A. White, Hedge City, Mo.
Mrs. L. G. Stone, Woodland, Cal.
L. G. Garman, White Rock, Kan.
Marshall Ennis, Corning, Ark:
Bell Berkley, Cassopolis, Mich.
D. Hershey, Mahomet, Ill.
J. B. Goodman, Woburn, Ill,
D. M. Miller, for Wisconsin Mission.
D. E. Zuck, Kepler, Kan.
H. T. Hoffman, Bristolville, O.
J. W. Smouse, Smicksburg, Pa.
Waldemar Meyer, Lathrop, Cal.
E. A. Orr, Stewartsville, Mo.
C. M. Martin, Ft. Larned, Kan.
C. R. Paige, Mt. Vernon, O.
Alman Mock, Boydston Mills, Ind.
Allen Ives, Burr Oak, Kan.
S. H. Swihart, Appleton, Wis.
A. Ohmert, Salem, Oregon.
J. H. Roberts, Myrtle Point, Oregon.

Here we have 1,018 tracts and pamphlets, or 25,000 pages of reading matter, at the extremely low rate of six and one-fourth pages for one cent. This shows what can be done by printing in large quantities. The American Bible Society are now putting out good Testaments for five cents each. They can do this, because much of the money is donated, and they are enabled to publish them in large quantities. So in the case of good books and pamphlets. If published in large quantities, they can be put out very cheap.

The design of the Tract Association is to sound out the doctrine of Christ by means of the press, at the mere cost of labor and material. It is not calculated to enrich any one financially, nor to further the cause or pleas of any particular person or persons, but to make known the apostolic faith and practice.

We might write column after column giving the results of distributing pamphlets free, but think it not expedient. Now what say you, brethren and sisters, shall this work be continued? Shall the Distributing Fund be replenished, so that this work may be carried forward with more vigor than ever? Calls continue to come for these silent, but effective, messengers; and now shall they be heeded? May our hearts be so impressed, that our hands will be moved to act for the good of our fellow-men. We are but instruments in God's hands for any good purpose, and as He willeth so should we hasten to perform.

M. M. ESHELMAN,
Secretary.

MANY CONVERTS.

ONE of our exchanges is sadly mistaken in stating that it "is capable of proof that when everything is taken into account, the extention of the kingdom of God has been greater during this century than during the age of the apostles." It is generally presumed that one million persons were converted during the first century, and at that time there was but one church, and everybody had to join that or none. They had but one baptism and every convert had to submit to that or nothing, but not so now. There are hundreds of churches, and most people can find something just to suit their mind. And as for baptism, they can have that in most any way they want it, or if desired, not at all. Let men now start out and preach the plain old Gospel as it was preached by the apostles and they will find whether more is being accomplished than in the apostolic times.

If you let people to dress and act about as they please, after they are in the church, their conversion will be found quite an easy matter. There is but little conversion to be done. It is much like plowing: if a man only about half plows his ground he can get over a great amount of it in a short time.

RAY'S SENSATION.

THE editors of the BRETHREN AT WORK entered into a written agreement to publish our discussion in that paper. They began to publish it in that Tunker paper, according to agreement, but when hard pressed they have forfeited their word, contract, and honor by shutting it out! They have deliberately and wilfully violated their written obligation!! Yes, they know, that printing the discussion in that separate little slip only, is "shutting it out of the paper." By this trick their paper can be circulated without the debate. Why did they agree to publish the debate in the BRETHREN AT WORK, if they did not intend to do it? We demand that the discussion be published in the BRETHREN AT WORK, according to contract.

Also, the editors of this Tunker paper refuse to "prove or withdraw" their personal charges, that we have used "rough," "unbecoming and abusive expressions," in the discussion. They know that they cannot prove it, and they have not the kind of religion to prompt them to correct the injury. The Tunker editors have turned "the key" and shut out the discussion. They "love darkness rather than light."—Baptist Battle Flag.

The great champion debater of the Baptist church is still laboring to save his lost cause by getting up a sensation, and wants to make his readers believe that he is doing wonders with our doctrine, and making havoc in the ranks of our people. Not knowing anything else to get up a sensation over, he makes a drive at our supplement, and wants to make his readers believe that a supplement is not a part of the paper. Many of our readers expressed a desire to have the debate printed on a separate sheet so they could preserve it, and so far as we have heard from them they are well pleased with the plan, and did it not cost too much we would put the supplement up in a shape so it could be bound into a book after the debate is over. But it seems Mr. Ray does not want this done; he don't want it preserved, but wants it in the paper so that when the paper is torn up the debate will be destroyed too. While it was printed in the paper many of our readers would cut it out and paste it in their scrap book in order to preserve it entire.

But there are some things being brought to light that does not please Mr. Ray. He has written a book, endeavoring to trace the Baptist Church to the times of the Apostles, and in doing so has run the line through the church that practiced trine immersion, and in many other respects were very much like the Brethren. They would not go to war, would not take oaths, and obeyed the commands of the Lord blamelessly. These things are being held up before the gaze of the public, we are printing them in a form to be preserved, and that Ray does not want done. The supplement is sent out with each paper, and all our subscribers get it.

As for his rough language, each reader of our paper is a witness to that part. It needs no proof. He might as well ask us to prove that D. B. Ray is not a Baptist preacher. If he were to see some of the letters we get at this office, and hear what some of our readers say about his "rough, unbecoming and abusive expressions," he would be ashamed to ask for proof. We confess that we "have not the kind of religion to prompt us to correct the injury" that the champion debater of the Baptist Church does to himself.

THE South Bend (Ind.) Daily Tribune publishes an interesting biographical sketch of Bro. John Studebaker, who died at South Bend, Ind., Dec. 15, 1877. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. R. H. Miller, and will be published in the next issue of this paper.

BROTHER P. R. Wrightsman, of South Bend, Ind., after an illness of eleven weeks, is now able to be up and walk around in the house. He writes us that he is improving slowly, and it is hoped that he will soon be able to resume his regular ministerial duties.

The Prayer of Faith.

...E is no need of passing through the ...ths of Physics and Metaphysics in ...g the result of faithful prayer. God an... prayer. More: He answers all prayer of ... Believers in Christ, have no doubts about ... answers. God is not only Lord of the ... and spirit, but also of the body. The Christ ... suffered, died and arose, not only did so for ... soul, but also for the body. The same con... manifested for the soul, was also manifest... for the body. The Redeemer for the soul ... also the Redeemer for the body. The church ... "purchased with his own blood." The ...rch consists of people, human beings, and ... have a way opened up for them to man... ...s of bliss—not only for their souls and spir... but for their changed bodies. Soul and ...t must be changed—purified. Body must ...changed too. God takes care of soul and ...t in this life. God takes care of the body ... this life. Or to be plainer, God gives us vis... ...means to keep soul and spirit pure before ...m. Where these means are not sufficient, ...supplies the lack when we ask. God gives ...means to preserve our bodies. When these ...ans fail, He readily supplies the wants.

The Creator of the soul is also the Creator of ...e body. The Provider and Nourisher of the ...l is also Provider and Nourisher of the body. "Do ye not know that your bodies are members ... "What! ...w you not know that your body is a temple of ...e Holy Spirit in you, which you have from ...d?" The body a temple; is that all? No, ...t "you are not your own; for you were bought ...with a price." 1 Cor. 6: 19, 20. The body is a ...mple. What is in the temple? The Holy ...ost. Does God take care of the temple of the ...oly Ghost? He does, where we are not able ...take care of it. "Likewise the Spirit also ...lpeth our infirmities." Rom. 8: 26. Here it ...expressly stated that the Spirit helpeth our ...firmities. What are infirmities? Weakness; ...eblemess; especially disease of the body. Hence ...e Spirit helps to make us strong where the ...dinary means fail. We now come to the

It is our duty to obey even when we cannot ...e quite clearly that the thing commanded can ...e any good in itself. In itself, or apart from ...e command of God, the people could not see ...at good could come by striking the lintel and ...o side posts with blood. Could not the de...oying angel know whom to spare, without ...tting blood on the door posts? Yes; but ...s human part God required, and salvation ...uld therefore not be obtained without it.

It is our duty to obey God when we can see ...ite well that the thing commanded, in itself, ...apart from God, cannot do any good. Adam ...d Eve were commanded not to eat "of the ...e of the knowledge of good and evil." Had ...y not commanded to abstain from this tree, ...harm could have befallen those who ate of it: but in eating, they disobeyed the command of God. It would have been useless for Noah to build an ark—could have done no good, if God had not commanded him to build.

Abraham was commanded to take his son Isaac and offer him to God on Mt. Moriah. It was his duty to go and obey God, though the thing commanded may have seemed clearly wrong in itself. Saul was commanded to destroy all the Amalekites, men, women and children. In itself and apart from the command this may seem wrong, yet it was the duty of Saul to obey the command of God. Thus we see, what may appear wrong to us, is right with God. Whatever God commands, is right. The simple fact that He commands a thing makes it right.

"And he called the twelve, and began to send them forth two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits." Mark 6: 7. 1. He called the twelve. 2. He gave them authority over unclean spirits. 3. They went forth as God commanded. That is how they obeyed the command, "Go." Hear the result. "They cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them." Mark 6: 13. They expelled, not simply some, nor a few, but many devils. They anointed not simply some, nor a few, but many that were sick. And more; they were healed. Now what was sick and was healed? The soul? No; but the body. What was sick and was healed? The spirit? No; but the body. The medicine for the soul and spirit was not oil. "They shall lay hands on the sick, and

They Shall Recover.

And they went forth, and preached every-where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following." Mark 16: 18, 20. The Lord gave authority as follows: 1. Go into all the world. 2. Preach the Gospel to every creature. 3. Baptize them that believe. 4. Expel demons. 5. Anoint the sick with oil. "Doing this, my protection shall be upon you, and the result of my work through you shall be. 1. Believers shall speak with new tongues. 2. They shall take up serpents. 3. Poison shall not hurt them. 4. The sick shall get well."

"Now see here," queries a friend, "that was the apostolic course, and not designed for us." Let us see. "Take this and divide it among yourselves." "Do this in remembrance of me." Luke 22. Was this command to the disciples only? No: for we read, "Take eat; this is my body, which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me." 1 Cor. 11: 24. Very well, now we all believe that the loaf and cup were designed for all believers in all ages of the world. Luke records it, and then Paul brings up the same thing which we accept in all good faith. Now let us take a look at anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord. Matthew, Mark and Luke teach concerning the healing of the sick by those who were sent by Christ. Next we go to James who, in an epistle says, "Is any sick among you" (the disciples)? "let him call for the elders of the church: and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick," (person) "and the Lord shall raise him up: and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." James 5: 14, 15. "Yes," says my friend, "but I do not believe it that way. My opinion is that it means, that a man will not be raised up; that the prayer of faith will not save the sick person in this age of the world." So you can believe the communion has been handed to us, and are confirmed because Paul speaks of it in approving terms. Why can you not accept the anointing the same way? Matthew, Mark and Luke show that it was used; not only used, but successfully used. James comes in and commands that it be continued—that all believers will be blessed in using it. Still more: he shows that they shall be saved, as in times past. Let us now throw aside prejudice, ignorance, false teaching and look at it as we do at all other plain Scriptures. If this be an institution in God's house, it is there by the authority of God, and all our "if's," and "suppositions" cannot get it out.

"Is any sick among you?" Is there a sick person among you? Not, is there a sick soul among you, for no elder can anoint the soul with oil. 2. Let the sick person call for the elders, or eldest, in the church. This is all the sick person can do; he must call. 3. Let the elders pray over him. 4. Anointing him (the sick person) with oil. How? "In the name of the Lord." This is all the elders can do. Having prayed over the sick person, and anointed him, their part of the work is done.

What the Lord Does.

1. The prayer of faith shall save the sick person. God answers the prayer of faith. The elders cannot answer their own prayer, but the Lord gives the effect—the answer, and that is, the sick person shall be saved. 2. And the Lord shall raise him, (the sick person) up. The elders cannot raise him up, but the Lord can. 3. If he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him. If: but if not, then there are none to be forgiven. God does not even leave the guilty man on his dying couch without the promise of remission. These are to console the guilty, that if the prayer of faith, anointing with oil in the name of the Lord, are complied with, he shall be free from his guilt. If he have not committed sins, (the negative side of the case,) he shall be saved, raised up also.

CHILDREN AT MEETING.

MR. Moody, in a discourse recently delivered in Baltimore, says that he fails to see "why people don't bring their babies to church. I have often pitied those poor mothers who cannot afford nurses, and who are kept from church because they have to mind the baby. Suppose they do cry; we don't mind it at home, and I don't see why it should be so awful here. There are some fidgety people who don't like babies, but then I think they are the ones who ought to stay at home. I hope the time is coming when it will be the fashion to bring babies to church."

This is about as good an opportunity as I shall likely have for making some remarks in regard to bringing children to meeting. It is well enough to leave babies at home when it does not prevent the mother from attending services, but for mothers to stay at home all their lives for fear the baby will cry in meeting is not right. If there is anybody in the world who ought to attend church it is a mother.

Let them come to meeting, bring their children, do their best to keep them quiet, and if they do cry a little that need not disturb any one. There are persons who can sleep soundly under good preaching, but if some baby chances to make a little noise it seems to spoil the whole meeting for them. If these, as well as all others, would pay strict attention to the word preached, and let the mothers manage the children as best they can, they would derive more good from the meeting. Who ever heard of sheep feeling bad and running off from their food just because some of the lambs got to bleating a little? We certainly ought to have as much judgment as sheep.

Children who are old enough to behave themselves should be encouraged to occupy front seats, near the ministers. This will cause them to observe better order, and be more attentive to the preaching. Give them hymn books so they can take part in the singing. Children love to sing, and should be encouraged in it.

Mothers, having small children, should occupy seats next to the aisle. If necessary, they can then pass out without disturbing any one. Parents ought never to allow their children to contract the habit of running over the floor in time of services; nor should they be allowed to run out and in while the meeting is in session. The habit is a bad one and should be discountenanced on every hand.

Last, but by no means least, let the minister not keep the meeting up so long as to greatly tire all the mothers and children in the meeting. They should remember that mothers have a hard time of it at best, and some regard should be had for their feelings. If the little folks do not behave themselves just right, speak to them kindly, and in a gentle tone. Harsh words do not become a minister, especially so when speaking to children.

WHAT SMOKING DOES FOR BOYS.

A CERTAIN doctor, struck with the large number of boys under fifteen years of age whom he observed smoking, was led to inquire into the effect the habit had upon their general health, says the British Medical Journal. He took for this purpose thirty-eight boys, aged from nine to fifteen years, and carefully examined them, and in twenty-seven of them he discovered injurious trace of the habit. In twenty-two there were various disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and more or less marked taste for strong drink. In twelve there was frequently bleeding of the nose and ten had disturbed sleep, and twelve had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth, which disappeared on ceasing from the use of tobacco for some days. Medical treatment was of little use till the smoking was discontinued, when health and strength were soon restored. This is no "old wife's talk." The facts are given under the authority of the Journal.

This is bad enough, but the effects to be thereby carried to the rising generation is still worse. Think of these thirty-eight boys when they grow up to manhood and marry. There are thirty-eight tender-hearted young wives to be annoyed by the offensive habit, and oh, the bitter heart aches to be thereby produced. Then think, these thirty-eight men are to become fathers and teach their children the same habit; and then look down a few generations and see the result; health lost, money spent, wives rendered sick and tired of life, and a whole generation of smokers, whose habits are of no real benefit to anybody. Fathers, are these the lessons you are teaching your children?

YOU SAY AND DO NOT.

[Primitive Christian]

ONE day last Winter at a depot on the B. & O. R. R., a man stepped up to me and said,

"I presume you are a professor, sir?"

"Yes, sir," I replied.

"What church do you preach for?"

"I preach for the German Baptist Brethren."

"Well, sir, there is not much difference between us."

"What church do you belong to?"

"I belong to the Disciple Church, sir."

"Well, yes, there is quite a difference between us."

"Not in baptism," said he.

"Yes, sir, considerable."

"Please state the difference, will you?"

"Yes, sir, we say and do, and you say and do not."

"How is that?"

"When I take an applicant for baptism into the water I say I baptize you in the name of the Father, and do it, and of the Son, and do it, and of the Holy Spirit, and do it; but when you baptize you say you baptize in the name of the Father, and don't do it, and of the Son, and don't do it, and of the Holy Spirit, then you do, therefore fail to do what you promised the applicant to do in the name of the Father and of the Son."

"Well, now," said the Disciple, "there is something in that I never saw before." After pausing a few moments he said, "You have only a partial baptism after all. When you baptize there is a part of the applicant immersed before you say anything."

"Very well, my friend, when you take an applicant into the water to baptize there is a part immersed before you say anything."

"We will talk about it," said the Disciple, "on the cars."

When we boarded the cars he and I sat together. He then confessed that he had never looked at the commission in that light, but I want, said he, to do just what the Gospel requires at my hands. I gave him brother Quinter's pamphlet on the Origin of Single Immersion, also brother J. H. Moore's pamphlet on Trine Immersion.

J. NICHOLSON.

The Weekly Beacon, published at Akron, Ohio, says: "The Baptist Church holds a 'Social Tea Meeting' on Wednesday evening at the church parlors. All the members of the church and congregation are to sit down to a social meal at 7 o'clock, after the style of the 'love-feasts' of the early Christians. It is to be without charge." So it would seem that the "early Christians" did have "love-feasts."

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell"

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL PENROD.

Some one will please compare and explain Acts 1: 18, and Matt. 27: 5.

Also Ex. 21: 10, 11, and John 1: 18. H. H. R.

Please give an explanation on 1 Cor. 5: 5: "To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." M. W. KEIM.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

1. How many thrones are referred to in Rev. 22: 1? 2. What constituted the baptism of "our fathers" referred to in 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2? 3. How often were they baptized unto Moses?

THOMAS BLACK, JR.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22: 2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5: 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc.

S. A. FLICKINGER.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE BERDY.

Some one will please explain Mark 16: 17, 18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Who is referred to?

J. L. BROWN.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb; and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men; and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

JUDAS AND THE COMMUNION.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DETRICK.

HE was present at feet-washing, and also at the Lord's Supper, or else he could not have partaken of the "sop." It appears that immediately after the sop he went out to betray the Savior, and did not any more return. And as the Communion was not served till after Judas went out, it therefore follows that he did not partake of the Communion.

M. FOUNEY.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

THE apostle had been speaking of the necessity of serving God acceptably with reverence and godly fear; now in the clause under consideration He gives the reason why they should thus serve Him. For, or in consideration of the fact, that God is a consuming fire. This language of the apostle is a quotation from Deut. 4: 24.

In the preceding part of the chapter Paul had labored to show the Hebrews the superiority of the Gospel system over the Jewish religion. The superiority of Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant, over Moses, the mediator of the Old Covenant. He had taught them that the crime of forsaking Christ and His Law, was as much more heinous, as their privileges were superior to those who lived under the law, and that in proportion as their crime was greater, so would their punishment be greater. Then again, in the clause we are considering He reiterates the great truth, that sin under the Gospel is as abominable in God's sight as it was under the law; and as God is a consuming fire' His grace, if we place ourselves beneath its rays, will consume our sins. Otherwise His judgments will consume us.

What is the meaning of the last two words of 1 Cor. 16: 22? "Anathema Maran atha," and what language is it? W. H. MILLER.

Anathema is Greek, it means accursed; i. e., a person devoted to destruction. The apostle did not, likely, say this in the way of a wish or imprecation, but as a prediction of what would come upon them, should they continue impenitent, and continue to hate and execrate the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul probably here alludes to some of the modes of excommunication among the Jews, of which there are said to have been three. One of these forms of excommunication is an almost exact counterpart of the forms of excommunication now in vogue in the Roman Catholic church.

Maran atha: This is a Syric word meaning, our Lord is coming, i. e., to execute the judgments denounced. The apostle here probably alludes to the last verse of Malachi: "Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse," and perhaps intimates that the Lord was now soon to come and smite the Jewish nation with that curse, which prediction was fearfully fulfilled in a very few years. MATTIE A. LEAR.

LIKENESS AND IMAGE.

We read in Gen. 1: 26, "Let us make man in our own image after our likeness." Did God make man in the form of himself, or was the image spiritual?

A. HOLLINGER.

SIMILITUDE or likeness does not necessarily require a full resemblance in all, or even in part in the figure that illustrates the thing itself. For instance, the Lord is to come as a thief in the night. There is to be a resemblance, a likeness here, and how are we to apply it? We are not to look to the temper and disguise of the villain who breaks open houses in the night, but to the sudden and unexpected manner in which he comes. Christ's coming is to be just as unexpected, and here is where exists the similitude. So also in regard to the query: there is not a positive identity nor a close resemblance existing between man and his Creator, not even in any one particular point. Man cannot be like God in a bodily form; for God is a spirit and exists every-where, fills even the vast immensity of space; is every-where present. Neither do we resemble God spiritually, in spiritual purposes, in spiritual designs, and spiritual accomplishments, from the fact that we are to be spiritually regenerated so as to become His spiritual children, and, too, we are dependent upon Him for the accomplishment of our spiritual works and he is responsible to none; he works and no one can hinder.

But the likeness that exists between God and man, certainly consists in authority. God passed man in authority over all of the things of earth. See Gen. 1: 26. All things here is to be subject to his will and control. Just so with God; He has absolute control of the universe; all things are subject to His will and power. This likeness still remains. Our position is confirmed by the apostle in Corinthians; he says that a man ought not to cover his head, for he is the image of God; God's power, or authority is never surrendered, neither should man surrender his authority; but if he covers his head in prayer or prophesying he virtually does it, as hair denotes power or authority. So the woman is permitted to have this power on her head because of the angels; but because of the authority that God placed in man, she is to cover that authority and thus surrender to her head (the man). Her long hair denotes her freedom and full equality with angels where there is to be neither male nor female, bond or free, but are all to be one in Christ. The woman then will be equal with the man, but here not so; she is to be subject to him in all things; and a covering is worn to denote her surrender to her head (man). But man exhibits his power or authority by uncovering his head in prayer &c., yet he is not to wear his hair long, while the woman is, showing that his authority is limited, that he is not equal with God, that his likeness is diminished, hence he ought not to cover his head inasmuch as he is the image of God and this exhibits his authority. But he is to crop that power that is on his head to show his inferiority to God, that his power is limited while God's is not; then he is to crop his hair (the power) to show the limits of his power. The woman is not to crop her hair, (the power), but to cover it, showing her entire and complete surrender of power until she is permitted to enjoy the capacity and society of angels, and there and then made equal with all of God's created beings, to enjoy completely and fully the blessings of all that glorified state in heaven where all are one in Christ.

DAVID L. WILLIAMS.

Brownsville, Mo.

A SINGLE sigh breathed from the bottom of a burdened heart is a loud cry in the ear of God.

IS YOUR LAMP BURNING?

Say, is your lamp burning, my brother?
I pray you look quickly and see;
For if it were burning, then surely
Some beams would fall brightly upon me.

Strait, strait is the road, but I falter,
And oft fall out by the way;
Then lift your lamp higher, my brother,
Lest I should make a fatal delay.

There are many and many around you
Who follow wherever you go;
If you thought that they walked in a shadow
Your lamp would burn brighter you know.

Upon the dark mountains they stumble:
They are bruised on the rocks, and they lie
With their white, pleading faces turned upward
To the clouds of the pitiful sky.

There is many a lamp that is lighted,
We behold them anear and afar;
But not many of them, my brother,
Shines steadily on like a star.

I think were they trimmed night and morning,
They would never burn down or go out,
Though from the four quarters of heaven
The winds were all blowing about.

If once all the lamps that are lighted
Should steadily blaze in a line,
Wide over the land and ocean,
What a girdle of glory would shine.

How all the dark places would brighten!
How the mists would roll up and away!
How the earth would laugh out in her gladness,
To hail the millennial day.

Say, is your lamp burning, my brother?
I pray you look quickly and see;
For if it were burning, then surely
Some beams would fall brightly upon me.

SOCIAL MEETING.

BY H. K. DALE.

PAUL tells us "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works." Upon this Scripture we all agree. Paul further says "not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching." This is a good work, and Paul would have us provoked unto love and good works. He did not want his brethren to neglect it.

I believe in the apostle's time they held what we call prayer meetings. Here the believers would sing, and pray, and exhort one another. But some people understand these to have been public meetings. Paul says, "let the prophets speak, two or three and let the other judge." 1 Cor. 14: 29. This is when they came together for public preaching. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns, spiritual songs singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord." As we are living where iniquity abounds and the love of many waxing cold we ought to perform every humble duty devolving upon us.

THE UNFINISHED PRAYER.

[The Index.]

BELOW we reproduce, with much pleasure, a singularly sweet and touching little poem that has gone the rounds of the press. The poem is justly admired for its touching tenderness, and the simple, yet graphic touches with which the author portrays child nature. It was first printed in the Presbyterian Index, of Mobile, and is the production of Mrs. E. H. Morse, recently of Prattville, Alabama. She had written it for a friend in Chicago, without intending it should reach the public eye. Her brother, J. K. Hazen, now Secretary of the Presbyterian Publication Committee, at Richmond, Va., saw the poem among his sister's papers, and requested the privilege of publishing it.

"Now I lay"—"repeat it darling"—
"Lay me," lisped the tiny lips
Of my daughter, kneeling, bending
O'er her folded finger tips.

"Down to sleep"—"To sleep," she murmured,
And the curly head bent low;
"I pray the Lord," I gently added,
"You can say it all, I know."

"Pray the Lord"—the sound came faintly,
Fainter still—"my soul to keep;"
Then the tired head fairly nodded,
And the child was fast asleep.

But the dewy eyes half opened
When I clasped her to my breast,
And the dear voice softly whispered—
"Mamma, God knows all the rest."

O, the trusting, sweet confiding
Of the child-heart! Would that I
Thus might trust my Heavenly Father
Him who hears my feeblest cry!

Correspondence.

These things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.—John.

From Winfield, Kansas.

TO those ministers or Brethren who intend coming West, I will give a short sketch of our county. It is one of the largest in the State. It lies in a compact square form thirty-three miles north and south, by thirty-four east and west, and contains 4,500 quarter sections of land, sufficient for an ordinary farming population of 25,000. Winfield is the county seat, located on the Walnut and Timber Creek; has a population of about 2,000, and is in a healthy and prosperous condition. West, eight miles, is the Arkansas river. Twelve miles south, you will find Arkansas City, with a population of six hundred, and north, twelve miles, Douglas, and twenty miles east, Dexter, and north of Dexter, twelve miles, Lazette, and a number of post-offices dotted over the county.

Now about the soil; it is a deep, black loam, resting upon a high colored subsoil, consi-ting of loam, clay and gravel; both soil and sub-soil being so porous that surface water rapidly passes through them; and in no case is there any difficulty experienced in crossing with wagon or stock, any water course, or beds of streams. Teams may be driven across springs or creeks or low bottoms fearlessly without danger of miring. Cowley county is well watered; no other county in the State has more streams or good pure clear running water. The average depth of wells is about twenty-five feet. Timber of various kinds on all streams. Wood is from three to four dollars per cord. Coal has been discovered in the eastern part of the county at a depth of two hundred and fifty feet, but the cheapness of timber has given no inducements to prospect for coal. In all parts of the county the supply of the best magnesia limestone is inexhaustible. When first taken from the quarry it is soft and easily worked with the hammer or chisel, and saw, but when exposed to the air and sun it hardens and becomes durable, appearing much like marble. The climate here is by no means a dry one.

This county contains one hundred and eleven school districts, nearly all of which have substantial school-houses. There is a church organization in nearly every neighborhood in the county. Most of these hold their services in school-houses. The Brethren have located on Silver Creek, in what is termed the Rose Valley school districts, about nine miles southeast of Winfield. We have about twenty-five members in this district. There were three baptized at our Love feast, one a Baptist. He wished to follow the examples of our dear Savior fully. We can boast of one thing, that is the nasty, filthy tobacco sin is no more with the Brethren. It is a sin to spend money for tobacco, when children need clothes, and with the same money we all can pay for the BRETHREN AT WORK, and the Children at Work, and have some left to give to the poor.

JOHN EASTON.

From Western Illinois.

BROTHER Daniel Vaniman, one of the evangelists of the Southern district of Illinois, came to Berry, Pike county, about the first of December, and preached seven sermons, with one addition. From thence he was conveyed by brother J. Clingingsmith to Liberty, Adams county. He remained a few days with the Brethren, and preached twelve sermons, and nine precious souls stood up for Jesus. From there he went to Concord church, same county, where he preached four sermons, and baptized three that had previously stood up. At this time brother Daniel felt it his duty to go home and see his family, one of whom was very sick with the lung fever. After remaining a few days, and arranging some affairs of his own, he set out again with a determined zeal to make his mark in the enemies' camp.

On the evening of the second of January I met him in Camp Point, and the next day conveyed him to my place, some eighteen miles distant. We have no meeting-house at this place, but a school-house 26x48, where we commenced our meeting the same evening. Brother Daniel did not fire much shell, but a good deal of shot in the enemies' camp. Two or three rounds, and one of the enemies found herself prostrate at Jesus' feet. Brother Daniel, in his clear way of speaking, soon convinced the people that he didn't intend to pull down their houses, lest they might complain, but that he would build them a better house, and then invite them in, that they might be the guests of a crucified Savior in an upper and better kingdom; and right here would say in the language of brother David, that this is the common way of preaching the Gospel. By this time the interest of the meeting grew intensely warm. The congregation increased, and the enemy began to be much alarmed, when he found many of his ranks had been already wounded. Two nights the house was so crowded that there was no standing room for any more, and I had to give up my seat and stand very close behind the speaker, and some, cold as it was, stood outside and looked in at the windows. Our valiant brother kept up his preaching for twelve sound sermons, and found two more ready to come into the church, and two others greatly impressed. The next morning, after having dismissed the meeting, and had taken our leave for other fields of labor, and had gone, and was but a little way on the road, one of the convicted persons stopped us, and told us that he could hold out no longer, and to count him one of our candidates. Bidding him a hearty good-bye, we went on a mile or more further, and another man stopped us on the road, and told us to enroll his name with the saints, making in all five applicants at this place. There is a territory here of twelve miles wide, and eighteen long, that has no religious organization. But thanks be to the Lord of heaven there is now the way opened for the Brethren, as there is now nine of us within one mile and a half of each other, and we have the sympathy of about all the surrounding neighborhood. Who will come and help us move the ark along?

We then reached Camp Point, where brother Daniel preached two telling discourses in the Christian church. There, too, I think, is a good opening for the Brethren. Who will go?

We then took the parting hand, exchanging greetings of love, and was soon found on the way to our temporal homes, there to be faithful in our calling till the cold hand of death approaches us, when earthly powers shall fail, and even life itself shall fade away, and the summons for us to cross the river. Then may the Lord reach his hand and say, "Come ye blesed of my Father, enter into the joys of your Lord."

H. W. STRICKLER.

Loraine, Ill.

From Salem, Oregon.

Dear Brethren:—

ELDER D. Brower devotes much of his time in preaching the Gospel, but his territory is too large, hence not able to fill all the calls for preaching; besides Washington Territory is dependent upon him, where he is now spending about two months, looking after the scattered lambs of the fold, and has, since he is gone, organized one church. We know this is his duty as an elder, but I feel like calling the attention of the Brethren to the fact that Oregon and Washington Territories are two extensive fields, and the churches in which the two elders live, are too weak to bear all the traveling expenses necessary for them to attend to the many urgent calls in the various parts of the above Territory. They are willing and faithful workers, and often go and pay their own expenses, but the calls are too many and the expense too great, and the cause of Christ has to suffer. Therefore I am constrained to ask the Brethren of the Atlantic States if there is not a fund raised in the church for the purpose of carrying on the missionary work in the isolated district, or among the isolated Brethren? and if so, could it not be arranged so that some means could also be furnished to the Brethren of the Pacific States who have to carry on that part of the work, so that it might be carried on to a greater extent, and thereby many hungry starving souls for the want of the bread of life might be fed?

The cause of my writing in the manner I do, is the heavy impression that was made upon my mind this Fall, when an urgent call came from Washington Territory from a small district, (partly torn to pieces by a wolf) and the church here not feeling themselves able to bear the expenses, they were refused, upon which they renewed their call, to which elder Brower responded, took the burden on himself, besides spending several months time in the field. The last account we had he was in Idaho, and of necessity should be in the field all the time. Brethren, think of this; it is worthy of a thought, and demands attention.

The debate is read with great interest here by the Brethren and many others, and think Stein is ably defending the truth. The cause is moving slowly here; had some additions in the last year.

The crops last season were ordinary, being an unusually dry Summer; wheat only yielded from ten to thirty-five bushels per acre. Present prices, wheat, 80 cents; oats, 40 to 34 cents per bushel. The season thus far has been extraordinary fair; some rains in September, and since occasionally rain; warm and much sunshine. Hence Fall grain looks very promising. Flowers are blooming, and many apples yet on trees not frozen. Fruit of all kinds was a good crop. Health generally good.

SAMUEL FORNEY.

From Old Brother Price.

Dear Brethren:—

THE blessing of the Lord be with you.

Thank the Lord my health is much improved; as well now as I ought to expect ever to be at my age, with the antecedents of my past experience. I am taking good care of myself. On good days I go to meeting. I enjoy meeting. Never get drowsy. The poorer the sermon the more wakeful I am. But thank the Lord we are well supplied at present. Our elder, brother Gottwalt is uneducated, but very zealous, energetic and persevering. He is an excellent housekeeper. Brother J. T. Meyers is a zealous brother; and has a free flow of words, and speaks distinctly.

I have ceased to preach. Even in exhortations my mind flits abruptly from one thing to quite a different one. My memory fails me in texts and in words. Discretion, O that blessed faculty in a public speaker, has been faded out in my mind; and I find myself flying from grave to comical in a sudden flit of the mind.

After meeting yesterday, and during the night, I was under serious exercises, whether I ought to rise at all in meeting.

The thought of passing away does not trouble me; but to remain with faculties fading out, is not comfortable to me. I had always, for many years past, expected to die suddenly; while in full possession of my mental faculties I thought I had heart disease, but two years ago when I put myself under the care of a physician for dropsey, (which he cured) I learned that my heart was perfectly sound. So now the prospect is I shall decline gradually in mind and body to the end. I try to say, the will of the Lord be done.

When a boy I was raised on a farm, on the bank of a river, (Schuylkill), and in June I often sat on the bank and saw the shad trying to go back to the ocean from whence they came. They were too old to swim below water, but would float partly on top and make continued efforts to keep under water, but in vain. The parallel is not strong, but I have oft of late had that remembrance come to my mind.

Before I pass away I would like to see our many papers all hoist the flag of freedom from all that intoxicates; and to see the Communion Cup freed from alcohol. The Bible appears to speak of two kinds of wine. One the figure of heaven, the other the figure of hell. It was no doubt in my mind the latter that Jesus when he turned water to wine. The word "Must" is a cavil, and the same that Paul recommended to Timothy. If he was to drink no longer water, not likely the apostle Paul would recommend any other. I am just as confident that Jesus Christ did not make a drink with alcohol in it, as I am that He is my Savior.

In the days of the apostles there was a distinction between the world and the disciples; greater than now, in more things than dress. The worshipers of Buchus did use the alcoholic wine and the apostle call it the cup of devils. When Jesus gave the cup He called it the fruit of the vine. Never is it called wine in reference to the cup of the eucharist. Who originated the idea first that Christ made wine that would intoxicate? We know alcohol is one of the inventions. I mean when extracted from grain or fruit, when on the way to putrefaction; and the juice of the grape when fermented is on that road, but can with care be arrested. If not it goes on to the acetic, and becomes vinegar. Before distillation was discovered, it was difficult to keep wine from fermentation, and it could not be conveyed from place to place. To keep or to carry it, they add to it alcohol or spirits of wine.

The mode of preparing the juice of the grape to use, and to keep for use as a drink became lost; and the distinction between the blessing and the curse was also lost.

The Mohammedans with all their errors of war, polygamy, etc., yet retained so much of the principles of the religion they apostatized from, as to use no intoxicating drinks for centuries. It is only since they hold free intercourse with Christian nations that they have begun to drink intoxicating wine and to swear. When a Mohammedan drinks or swears, they say of him, "he drinks, or he swears like a Christian." But enough.

From New Enterprise, Pa.

ON the evening of the 20th of December brother James Quinter commenced a series of meetings in our district. He preached three sermons in the Waterside meeting-house, and on Sunday the meeting was moved to the large meeting-house at New Enterprise, where he continued till on the evening of the 26th, during which time he held forth the Word of life with great zeal and power. The immediate result of his labors was, there was one made willing to come and join in with the children of God, and was received by baptism. We believe that many more were seriously impressed relative to their soul's salvation. While brother James pointed sinners to the Lamb of God, he did not fail to instruct us as members, to love and faithfulness in our Christian duties; and I think we, as members, were edified by our meetings, which it was our happy privilege to be if we all give heed to what our dear brother has tried to teach us.

Dear Brethren:—

WE commenced a series of meetings on the 6th of January, and continued for three weeks. We expected brother Sterling, of Fayette county, to be with us, but as he did not come, we did the best we could ourselves. We had very interesting meetings; pretty good attendance, and the best of order through the entire meeting. The result was, four were made willing to be buried with Christ by baptism, to rise to walk with Him in newness of life. There were also four reclaimed, making eight in all. May the Lord keep us all by His grace, that we may all be bright and shining lights through our day and generation, and finally shine forth in the kingdom of our God beyond the silent waters of death.

Notice.

TO the elders, brethren and sisters of the Southern District of Indiana:

The Brethren appointed by the last District Meeting for the Southern Indiana mission desire to make another mission. There are but six dollars and fifty-six cents in the treasury. I have agreed to advance to the Brethren the necessary funds to carry on said mission. Now will the different churches in Southern District of Indiana please see to this matter at once? A few of the churches have done nobly in this good work, while others have done nothing.

Send money by bank draft, post-office order or registered letter, to B. F. Koons, Nettle Creek, Wayne county, Indiana.

"If our Gospel is hid, it is hid for those that perish." 2 Cor. 4:3.

THESE few lines read with serious reflection by an earnest believer may cause both joy and sorrow; for if any thing can gladden a heart, it must be this, that there is a saving Gospel given from heaven, and to have part in it for the welfare of our souls. What joy in this world can be compared to this? None at all; for not only does it deliver from the fear of death, but rather makes one exclaim, "Death is to me a gain;" and moreover while we live it gives peace and joy to the soul, and fills the heart so it flows over with praise and thanksgiving to him that brought it to fallen man. But who is not pained to see that this glorious Gospel is hid from so many? Judging from the fruit whereby a tree is to be known, it is evident it is hid from the many. Cause and effect follow each other, and hence it profits but little to do as many do, speak about bath and repentance, and church salvation and perdition, etc. If those things we call fruit accompany not these things, which without we are empty, hollow sounds. The Gospel of peace will ever produce "fruit meet for repentance." God's true children are often said to judge others when they present the Gospel truth; but God's people know and admit that only one shall be the judge of all. But if we see a sign over a door representing a glass flowing over with poisoned liquor, who would not suppose that inside that door was dealt out strong drink? So poor sinner, bad actions show the heart to be corrupt and a stranger to grace. I tremble when I think of them. May God grant that the New Year bring great blessings, that the Gospel may be spread and believed of many. Lo! the great harvest for those sent in the place of Jesus, may all hold hard to the form in which it is delivered, for unto all who do otherwise is promised a fearful curse. Lord of host, stand by thy poor children and be with them evermore.

C. C. ESKILDSEN.

From Jesse Calvert.

WE closed a meeting last night in the out skirts of this district. We preached in a Campbellite church. We could only have the church four days. They got very uneasy, and I dropped the remark on the text "learn of me," Matt. 11: 29, that we need not go to Peter; we were taught to learn of Jesus. One of their Brethren went for me. I simply told him, after answering his question, that no gentleman would do as he did at a protracted meeting. I then preached them one sermon on baptism, and our time was out. The truth on that subject had a telling effect on the audience. We baptized three and have more applicants, and restored one. Could we have had meeting longer we think much good would have been accomplished.

This morning we accompanied brother L. H. Dickey to a brother Stalls, and found him very sick. His request was to be anointed. This was done for him. Afterward he said, "I am now ready to go to eternity, and feel safe and happy. I wish and hope to meet my family. O, what sweet comfort in a dying hour! All is well, because I have done all the commandments of my God, and can die in peace." Can those who do not thus obey the truth say as much?

Fostoria, Ohio, Jan. 26, 1879.

From Christian Hope.

Dear Brethren:—

PERHAPS you wonder at my silence. I have been from home for some time. I went to Frederickshaven to fill an appointment, and had a good congregation, which had been called together by our friend, the Methodist missionary. From there went to Old Seagen, the most northern point in Denmark, where we held two meetings. Had large congregations. Here found some relatives of brother Eskildsen. A young girl was made to see her sinful condition, and believe on Jesus. She expects to join the church of God soon. The meetings had a good effect here. This is a promising field for the work of the Lord.

From Old Seagen, we went two miles east to Seagen, where no missionary ever succeeded in doing any good. We went from house to house to get a room to hold meeting in, and at last we got a small one by paying four crowns. Held two meetings; many were moved by the word spoken. The interest manifested demands my return soon. From there I started home, but on the way hold meetings wherever I can. Have made many warm friends, and are gladly welcomed by all. Thus we learn that the bitter opposition which first met us, is rapidly subsiding. The church and mission are now respected, and our members loved by all. This is a change for the better. When we first came all hated us, and tried hard to withhold every inch of ground, but this is so no more. I will reach home January 8th, and leave on the 9th for the South, to remain one week, then come home a few days, then start for Thyland. Thus is my time spent. All earnestly pray for me, that soul and body may be sustained. My wife is still poorly, but is patient when she hears that the work of the Lord is prospering.

Now since some have asked me about the country I traveled through, I will give a short description of it. About Seagen the country is generally level, and not much above the level of the ocean. Here and there is a quicksand hill. These run sometimes in ridges, and are heaped together by strong winds. Seagen is built on sand and very near the water. The waves sometimes roll up to it, hence quite dangerous for sailors. Vessels are sometimes washed ashore, and they stick so deep in the sand that no human power can get them out. Near the end of Seagen is a light-house 123 feet high. The top is reached by a stairway of 216 steps. On the top is a glass arch large enough to hold seven or eight persons. Here is a large lamp which gives out a very fine light. This can be seen over thirty miles distant.

There is very little vegetation in Seagen; nothing but drifting sand. I noticed one little spot covered with trees, and a little ground is tilled. The town contains 1,100 inhabitants, who live mostly by fishing. The people are ignorant, and have generally no means of their own. In polities and religion they stick close to the priest and police. At first they were afraid of us, thinking us criminals. They however soon got acquainted with us, and concluded that we had as much right to preach there as their priest. A number asked us to come again. The time of my departure has come, so I must gird on my sword and start to the battle. Farewell to you all. I wish you all a Happy New Year.

Jerup, Jan. 3, 1879.

A Card.

MY reply to the discourses, delivered in reply to my "Epistle to the members of the Christian church," at Dalgertown, had the desired effect. The date for the origin of backward baptism was too much, even for the minister, who hoped that the next epistle would be addressed to him. Although this "next epistle" was published in the BRETHREN AT WORK of July 4th, and a copy sent to this theologian, yet we hear nothing from him. This is all the evidence necessary to prove that the argument used in the reply, in favor of trine immersion and in opposition to other modes of baptism are unimpeachable. This fact has prompted me to publish, systematically arranged in hand-bill form, these invincible arguments, for general distribution. I will send them post paid to any at 10 cents per dozen or 60 cents per hundred. Here is an opportunity for scattering broadcast over our land, a knowledge of that mode of baptism which can be traced to no other source than Christ himself. Address E. UMBAUGH, Pierceton, Kosciusko county, Indiana.

Two Burials in One Day.

ON the 23rd I witnessed an unusual scene,—a little baby of seventeen days old was buried beneath the clods of earth, while the father and a girl living in the same family, desired to be buried with Christ in baptism. The former grave having been opened to bury the child, it was first buried, then the ice was cut to admit the ordinance of baptism, to be performed as exemplified to us by Christ. Thus three were buried; one to await the first resurrection, the other two to rise in newness of life. Here was truly sorrow mixed with joy; the mother and wife, who had her cup filled with sorrow in the loss of her beautiful darling babe, and returned in joy over her dear husband, who stood out long in the barren mountains of sin and folly, at last joining her in the Christian warfare. Oh, the joy to that wife and mother in the very time of adversity.

Many more fathers and husbands are just doing as this brother did. Why not come and join your dear wife in her Christian warfare, before it is too late? Should that be the case, you could never meet with her in the kingdom of our God. Would it not even now be a torment to you to know that you should be doomed to die the death that never dies, and your Christian companion join the heavenly host, to dwell with Christ forever, and you sink down into everlasting torment? This will be your certain doom, if you do not turn to Jesus while you have the opportunity.

From H. C. Lucas.

THROUGH the kindness of the editors I would say through the BRETHREN AT WORK to those who have written me for the paper treating of short hand writing, that I will accept of good books in return for instruction, as I think of establishing a free library in the West or South as soon as I can make arrangements to do so. Should be glad to have correspondence with any that this proposal would suit. I still send the large sixteen page paper to persons who think of studying phonography, that contains alphabet and answers many questions on the subject. Sent on receipt of two three-cent stamps.

Fallen Asleep.

BRIEF notices of deaths in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

OBITUARIES should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

RODERICK.—In the Hawpatch church, Noble Co., Ind., Athol Adelia, daughter of brother David and sister Roderick, aged 9 years, 7 months and 19 days. Disease cankered sore throat.

RODERICK.—In the same district, Feb. 1st, of lung affection, Minnie Ethel, infant daughter of friend Joseph Roderick, aged 1 month and 8 days.

Both bodies were carried by one hearse at the same time, and both funerals preached by the writer at the same time. BENJAMIN LUER.

HUNTER.—In the Sugar Ridge congregation, Hancock Co., Ohio, Jan. 19th, Jennie B., daughter of friend John and sister Hunter, aged 4 years, 4 months and 11 days. Funeral services by the writer.

J. P. EBERSOLE.

WALDRIN.—In the Springfield district, Ind., Jan. 26th, infant daughter of brother Harrison and Sarah Waldrin, aged 20 days. Funeral services by brother Christian Weaver. JOHN BOLDIN.

KING.—Near Dunkirk, Ohio, Jan. 29th, sister Triphena, daughter of sister Lydia King, aged 17 years, 5 months and 21 days. Services by the writer, assisted by brother E. Bosserman, from 2 Cor. 5: 1.

S. T. BOSSERMAN.

HACHSTETTER.—In the Lick Creek church, Owen Co., Ind., Jan. 22nd, 1879, sister Susanna Hachstetter, aged 70 years 3 months and 14 days. Funeral by brother David Culler and R. R. Goshorn.

JOHN LONG.

CARRISON.—Lydia Margret Carrison, daughter of sister Susan Carrison, Jan 4th 1879, aged 1 months and 27 days. Funeral services by the writer.

K. HECKMAN.

GOUGHNOUR.—Near Elkhart, Polk Co., Iowa, January 24th, Louis D., son of Brother Samuel and sister Belia Goughnour aged 10 years and 22 days.

He was sick nearly a month. He had been attending school very regular before he took sick, and studied very hard most too much so, as the doctor thought. The nature of the disease was inflamation of the brain. The funeral was largely attended. Services by one of the Brethren, from Heb. 9: 27. J. W. MOYER.

STUTZMAN.—In Bango district, Elkhart county, Ind., August 31st, brother John Stutzman, aged 78 years, 5 months and 7 days. Funeral services by brother Levi Weaver and John Metzler.

BORDER.—In the same district October 23rd, brother William Border, aged 74 years, 4 months and 1 day. Services by John Metzler and Jacob Bentler, from 1 Cor. 15: 22.

SHAFNER.—In Elkhart Valley district, September 8th, brother Franklin Shafner, aged 31 years, 10 months and 8 days.

He was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, and had a desire to be with the Lord. Thus we have reason to believe that he fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. Services by D. B. Stutzman and the writer, from Rev. 22: 12. JOHN METZLER.

FIKE.—In the Milledgeville church, Carroll Co., Ill., Jan. 25th, 1879, of erysipelas, brother Elias M. Fike aged 20 years, 2 months and 6 days.

He bore his affliction with Christian fortitude, and, though young and surrounded with all that he could desire to make life happy, he expressed a desire to depart and be with God. People addressed from 1 Thess. 4: 13, by Michael Kimmel and the writer.

M. M. ESHELMAN.

ULERY.—In the Turkey Creeek congregation, Ind., Jan. 17th, 1879, of lung fever, Minnie Elizabeth Ulery, infant daughter of brother Levi and sister Catherine Ulery, aged 11 months and 12 days. Funeral by John B. Miller and the writer. DANIEL WYSONG.

CARTER.—In the bounds of the St. Vrain church, Boulder Co., Colorado, Jan. 16th, brother J. H. C. Carter, aged 60 years.

He leaves a sorrowing wife (a sister) and six children to mourn his departure. Some days before his death he called for the elders of the church, to be anointed in the name of the Lord. Was fully resigned to the will of God, and died with a full hope and prospect of a blessed immortality. Funeral discourse by the undersigned. He was the first adult member of this arm of the church taken from us by death since its organization four years ago. A large concourse of friends followed him to his last resting place. J. S. FLORY.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money received to be used for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor members, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the Poor Fund. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

FUNERAL SERMON OF JOHN STUDEBAKER, OF SOUTH BEND, IND.

BY R. H. MILLER.

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8.

THIS text was selected by brother John Studebaker, something near five years before his death, to be used at his funeral, because it would in some degree express the feelings of his own heart, which he wished to have impressed upon the minds of his family and friends when they came to the last farewell to consign him to his resting-place, to await the great resurrection when the glory of all his hopes will be fully realized.

There are several points in this text to which we refer in their order, hoping that these may, as the old father seemed to desire, be left a lasting monument in the memory of his children, on which is written the life, the experience, the hope of their father. It is not needed that we speak now of him personally as it has been done in the papers of your town.

The language of the text gives the impressive figure of an old soldier when his warfare is ended, passing from his labor to his reward. It is his last look back over the many hard-fought battles of his life. He says first, "I have fought a good fight." This language expresses the feeling of the apostle, when he contemplates the life of the Christian with its trials and labors as a warfare ended, the victory won, and the old soldier lays his armor by. The soldier's life is full of interest, trials and dangers—his common lot; watching and fighting his great work. Though the battle be hard and long, the fight is a good one, because it brings the victory at last. How well this thought in the text applies to father Studebaker; he could look back over a long life full of trials, misfortunes and sufferings, but deliverance and victory have come. The last battle is over. His passport sealed to go home. But ere he starts, he selects this text to tell us, the fight in all its troubles, has been a good one.

Our old father spent nearly fifty years in the service of the Master. In all that time the good fight has been the great work of his life—the cause of Christianity, the strictest honesty, charity to the poor, even beyond his ability, to do good to all around him, and ever contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, have made the great and unwavering features in his long life. Well might he look back over all his labors, and with the apostle say, "I have fought a good fight."

Another thought making this text impressive, is the warfare; it is not alone for the benefit of the soldiers, but mainly for the good of others. Thousands reap the reward of the soldier's suffering and victories. Many rejoice in peace and prosperity, where the soldier bled and died for the cause of others. So the apostle in many hard fights suffered long. And how many are richly blessed by the labors of that soldier of the Cross. So, too, our old father, a faithful soldier in his integrity, fought the battles of life for the good of others, teaching and defending the sacred principles of his religion, in industry and honesty, thus laying the foundation of prosperity for the family, who in business and influence are equal to any in the West. They, to-day, should look back to the life of their father and feel the truth of the text, that he has "fought a good fight" for them. This thought, too, sweetens the bitterest cup in the life of the soldier, to see his suffering is the coffin in which the richest jewels are kept. In the hand of contest and trial, the golden sheaves are gathered for the angel harvest. So, too, the church as well as his family may also look back and see his labor for fifty years often more than he was able to bear, and witness too, that he has "fought a good fight."

Second, the apostle says, "I have finished my course." In this, is expressed the feelings of one who has laid down the cross and is ready, waiting to receive the crown. The work is finished; then comes the change from labor to reward. Oh, how sweet is rest to the worn out and afflicted soldier, when he receives his long furlow to go home; his final discharge signed; his passport sealed. He gently sings,

"When I can lay my armor by,
And dwell with Christ at home."

The Christian sees much of God in the work when it is finished; trials, afflictions and sorrows may have made up its days and years, but God appointed them all, and his divine power safely keeps his faithful soldier when the storms of sorrow rage. The work is finished; how good it is for the soldier who can stay till his work is well done. He takes his passport and goes home; but he leaves the work he has finished, a blessing to all behind him. The apostle has gone home, but what a glory in the work he has left us. How many bright Christian examples are left a shining monument where the work is finished and the laborer gone home! So it is with our old father; his place in the family circle is vacant, but his Christian example still lives in the hearts of his family and friends—a treasure richer than jewels and more lasting and bright than marble glass; and we pray that that example may ever live in all its power and influence, when other years have come, still pointing the dear family to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

Third: "I have kept the faith." This is another look Paul takes over his past life, and speaks of the great joy and comfort in his faith unshaken, unwavering, when he comes to cross the river. Through all the misfortunes of life, in perils by land and sea, in prison, in stripes, and among false brethren. His eternal inheritance in saving faith never failed him. In the cold, damp dungeon at Philippi, his feet made fast in the stocks, faith could find songs at midnight to sing of redeeming love, and cheer the prisoner with the hope of immortal life, and the crown of righteousness soon to be given. His faith in God, he kept to the last, even when led to the block of Nero, and all men had forsaken him; "Nevertheless" said he, "the Lord stood by me to strengthen me."

How true, the same unwavering faith in the life of our old father. In adversity or in prosperity, in sickness or in health, his faith never failed in its strength, or wavered in its firmness. But in all his reverses in Ohio, when all was lost, faith was still his strong support. In poverity and want, he ever worked in the cause of the Master. His trust in God, sure and steadfast, and when nearly six long years, paralyzed and helpless, all his work turned into faith, it was all and all to him. When I visited him last, a little before his death, though our acquaintance was intimate for nearly twenty years, I could not be sure he knew me, for he was speechless. But when we got the Testament to read, and have a season of prayer with him, he would bow his head and point his palsied hand to the sacred Volume, showing us clearly that, while his body was sinking down under affliction, his faith would rise in its strength above all the weaknesses disease could bring, and stand his strong support when death's mantle was spread around him.

"Henceforth there is a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day." A crown implies all the honor, and power and wealth that can be conferred upon the conqueror when the warfare is ended. This Paul uses to represent the glory of eternal life given to the soldier of the Cross when the victory is won. "By henceforth" Paul means the crown is now ready, waiting for me; not a crown of gold, pearls and diamonds to give earthly honors and power, but a crown of righteousness to give the heir of God; "an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled that fadeth not away reserved in heaven" given when crowns of gold and diamonds have lost their value.

Our old father would have this text at his funeral, because it points his Children to his hope in the crown of righteousness, richer than all earthly things, and waiting for him beyond the river. "The Lord, the righteous judge shall give" that crown when the soldier gets his last discharge and comes home. It is not a bounty of a few acres of land, or a few dollars in money. But a right to sit with him on his throne. Oh, the crown of righteousness which gives the right of him who gives the crown, and made kings and priests in the resurrection made in the glorious likeness of the Son of God, crowned to reign with him forever.

This crown the Lord will give at that day. There is a day, a time appointed when the Judge shall give the crown. We may all soon change worlds, then go and take the crown, when the Judge says, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom"—you are now crowned; for that your streets are paved with richer jewels, your jasper walls and gates of pearls finer than earthly kings have ever worn. As Abraham would look for a "city whose maker and builder is God," so our old father did, out of his afflictions, look to that city, and feel that the "crown is waiting for me." Out of his long afflictions on earth, he could look beyond the river, to that city where no more sickness or sorrow, pain or death ever enter its jasper walls; no funeral trains ever walk its golden streets.

"And not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing." This shows the ardent desire of the apostle for the welfare of others; still like the faithful soldier, his warfare is not for himself only, but also for the good of others: like this great government, is the fruit of the revolutionary struggle our fathers made. The soldier then fought and bled for our good as well as his own. So the apostle, in all his labor and work of life, toiled and suffered for his brethren, and when he left the field of battle to take his crown, would not go till he tells his brethren the same glory is waiting for them. This point in the text we can realize when we think how great are the blessings given to the church by the labors of the apostle. What a heritage for after generations has been given by the labors of this old apostle, to lead them on to righteousness and to victory, to lay down the cross and take up the crown. How truly this beautiful thought in our text, "not for me only" applies to the life of father Studebaker. Few men could be found who had more concern for the welfare of others than he. His charities were often more than his circumstances would allow; his family, the church, and the poor, were three great objects in the work of his busy life; never forgotten in his poverty or affliction, or changed when better circumstances came; and we are glad to see, that after so much labor and love in his eventful life, plenty and peace crowned his old age. This text points his children back to all the labors of his life, with the thought, "not for me only" and turns us to his crown of glory, taken with the words "not for me only."

In conclusion, a few words to the family, and we are done. To our old mother, who has been bereaved of her husband, we can turn with no earthly comforts sufficient to fill the heart left aching by death. In your declining years your pathway must be lonely and drear, even amidst all the comforts earth can give. But you can turn from these sorrows of earth, where death is written upon all, to the brightest hopes of eternal life, and from the grave of a risen Savior, learn the glories of a resurrection in the likeness of the far off God. Go to the throne of grace, where the powers of the resurrection can reach you, and there "wait all the days of your appointed time till your change come." Trust in God for support and help when all the powers of earth have failed, for he is able to make "all things work together for good to them that love him."

And to you children, we would say, though it seems there is no need that we should tell you how great your duty to your weeping mother, for you whose kindness never failed in the long afflictions of your father, cannot fail to appreciate all the importance of the duty you now owe to a good mother, when affliction, old age and weakness have come upon her. All her enjoyment in this life is shallow in the cup, and must be filled with the love and kindness of her children. And we are glad to see the Christian example of your father is brightly living in your memory, and we pray God that the busy scenes of coming years may never destroy the memory of such a father from your hearts. We would not tell you not to weep, but rather thank God that children have tears to shed, when bidding farewell to one who has done so much for them. But we pray you will long treasure in your hearts the bright example death cannot destroy, and may it turn your hearts more to the spirit world, when you go to his grave to weep. But O take with you the empty tomb of the risen Savior to cheer the darkness of death with the glories of a resurrection, "when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality," and all the sorrows of death are swallowed up in the hope of eternal life. There you can find a reason not to sorrow as those who have no hope. May God bless you all.

It is little troubles that wear the heart out. It is easier to throw a bombshell a mile than a feather—even with artillery.

NEVER FAILING BANK.

I HAVE a never failing Bank,
A more then golden store:
No earthly bank is half so rich,
How then can I be poor?

'Tis when my stock is spent and gone,
And I without a groat,
I'm glad to listen to my Bank,
And beg a little note.

Sometimes my Banker smiling says,
Why don't you oftner come?
And when I draw a little note,
Why not a larger sum?

Why live so niggardly and poor?
Your Bank contains a plenty;
Why come and take a one-pound note,
When you might have twenty?

Yes, twenty thousand ten times told,
Is but a trifling sum,
To what your Father has laid up,
Secure in Christ his Son.

Since, then, my Banker is so rich,
I have no cause to know;
I'll live upon my cash to-day,
And draw again to-morrow.

I've been a thousand times before
And never been rejected;
Sometimes my Banker gives me more
Than asked for or expected.

Sometimes I've felt a little proud,
I've managed things so clever:
But, oh, before the day is gone,
I felt as poor as ever.

Sometimes with flushes in my face,
Just at the door I stand,
I knew if Moses kept me back,
I surely must be damned.

Should all the banks in Britain fail,
The bank of England smash,
Bring in your notes to Zion's Bank
You'll surely have your cash.

And if you have but one small note,
Fear not to bring it in;
Come boldly to the Bank of Grace,
The Banker is within.

All forged notes will be refused;
Men's merits are rejected;
There's not a single note will pass,
That God has not accepted.

The Bank is full of precious notes,
All signed and sealed and free;
Though many doubting souls may say,
There is not one for me.

Bare unbelief will lead the child,
To say what is not true,
I tell the soul that is self-lost,
These notes belong to you.

BY ALEX W. REESE.

NUMBER II.

"But he answered and said, it is written thou shalt not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Matt. 4: 4.

OBJECTION. But "we are saved by grace, through faith, and that not of ourselves; it is the gift of God. If of faith, it is then no more of works." Such being the case, how then can baptism be essential to salvation—the literal act of washing by water?

Answer. Very true, we are saved by grace, not by water, and through faith, which is merely the instrument of our salvation—one of the prime factors in the great work of man's redemption from ruin and sin—but the man who considers baptism non-essential to that work, and who, in positive violation of God's Word, refuses to be baptized, could give no surer evidence that he has neither repentance nor faith. The heart of such a man, so far from being filled with humble penitence and submission to God's will, is full of rebellion against God and his Holy Word. So far removed is he from "a living faith," and humility of heart that is acceptable in the sight of God; he is literally "dead in trespasses and in sins"—he is yet "in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity;" having "a name to live" while he is dead."

Objection. But how about the thief on the cross? He was not baptized, and yet Christ, on his expression of faith alone, declared to him in the agonies of death, "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise!"

Answer. There was no command given to the thief on the cross to be baptized. It was an impossibility for him to be baptized. He was a malefactor, suffering the extreme penalty of the law under a Pagan government. He was in the iron grip of a stern inexorable fate. There was no escape. Christ himself was "numbered with the transgressors," and a victim to the same despotic law. Had Christ commanded baptism for the thief then must he have exerted his divine power, and worked a miracle in behalf of this violater of law in order to make it possible for him to obey.

But God demands no impossibilities of men. He only demands at their hands what he himself declares to be but their reasonable service. But he does command you and me to repent, believe, and be baptized, and there is no promise for us unless we do.

Besides all this, the Testator was then alive, he had not left his will behind him, by compliance with the provisions of which we can only "inherit eternal life." Christ had the gift of eternal life in his own hands—he could bestow it upon whomsoever, and in what manner he chose, he could say to the woman, "Thy sins be forgiven thee"—he could say, "Thy faith hath made the whole." But the Testator has gone from earth. He has left his will behind, and we are to come into heirship in accordance with the provisions of that will, and in no other way.

Objection. But we think you lay too much stress on minor matters—non-essentials, etc., such as dress, taking of oaths, washing feet, wearing jewelry etc.—while you are inclined to neglect "the weightier matters of the law." These little things we regard as the "mint, the cummin, the anise."

Answer. This is the great delusion of the age! So impermeated with the "faith alone" doctrine is the popular mind, that the great doctrine of Gospel obedience is almost totally ignored. "Believe! only believe!" is proclaimed, not only from every sacred desk in village, hamlet and town, and re-echoed from the lowly log "meeting-house" of the illiterate negro, to the metropolitan church gorgeous in its imitation of pagan architecture, where

"Through the long drawn aisle and fretted vault
The pealing anthem sounds its notes of praise," but the refrain is caught up by strolling adventurers, and peripatetic evangelists who peddle out the same kid-glove and rose-water gospel on the most accommodating terms, and at bed-rock prices—(all per "spot cash.")

If Cicero, a Pagan Orator, could exclaim, "the times are changed, and we change with them!" how much more could an impartial historian say this, contrasting the faith in Christ as preached in the days of the apostle Paul with the present status of popular Christianity. If one portion of God's Word may be changed in the interest of any one sect's peculiar views, why not another portion in behalf of some other denominational view? If the Baptist may re-translate the Bible to sustain single immersion, why not the Methodist and other Pedo-baptist sects, to uphold and defend sprinkling in facts and otherwise? If one man may take liberties with the inspired text, wherefore not another? "My views are as good as yours." And this door once opened, no power on earth can shut!

Is not the taking of oaths, of all description, positively forbidden in the Scriptures? With what sort of consistency then, can one calling himself a follower of Christ, do this God-forbidden thing? Is not the wearing of gold, and jewelry, and costly array equally forbidden to the follower of Christ? How then can a follower of the "meek and lowly Jesus" so disregard the command of his Master as to adorn his perishing body with these idle gewgaws, which at best, but minister to earthly vanity and pride? God says you must not do these things. Modern Christianity says, "these things are not essential to salvation—wear them if you like". What mockery of Christ is this!

Sometime since, not very long ago, a great "revival" meeting—a "union" meeting, was started in this town by a couple of traveling evangelists, assisted by all the pastors of the local churches. The meeting continued for several consecutive weeks, and over two hundred conversions were claimed as the "net proceeds" of the work. Curiosity, perhaps more than anything else, led me to attend one of the night meetings which was held in one of our large and fashionable churches. The structure was densely packed—I was about to say from pit to gallery, and, indeed, the audience looked not unlike that one might observe at the opera or first class theatre. There was the floating of white ostrich plumes over velvet bonnets and hats—the rustle of silks, the faint, sweet odor of costly perfumes, the glitter of gold, the flash and sparkle of jewels, the fluttering of gay, parti colored ribbons and scarfs, the waving of delicate, spray-like, feathery fans, in soft, white jewelled hands. The woman in scarlet shawl was there, and the humble Christian in patent-leather boots, "in purple and in fine linen," and diamond breast-pin was at her side. One of the evangelists, clad in faultless black presided at the organ, and conducted the exercises in praise—with every motion of his body, the soft rays of light from the chandeliers reflected and sparkled from the diamond pin in his bosom. He sang a highly sensational song,

"Almost Persuaded,"

At the conclusion of this performance he arose, came to the front of the platform, and made a brief harangue to the audience. He stated that if any one in the crowd wished to confess Christ—to speak a word for Jesus, now was their time. Don't delay! Speak at once! Be quick! Time is precious! Just a word! Be brief! Long speeches are not wanted! Any of you over there! (indicating a certain part of the house). You over there! (indicating by a gesture another!) You here in front etc. The argumentum ad hominem acted like a charm. Several penitents arose in quick succession, and made a few stereotyped and trite remarks, and then subsided to the evident relief of all well-balanced minds.

One highly dressed sister, sparkling with jewelry, redolent with perfume, and carrying a snowy feather of great length over a black silk velvet hat, arose, in my immediate vicinity, and in a tremulous voice, faintly echoed the popular refrain, "I love Jesus!"

I looked at this vain woman, covered with these God-forbidden deckings of human pride, and the words of John rose involuntarily to my mind: "If any man saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, he is a liar and the truth is not in him."

Objection. "Then you think this woman, though she says she loves Jesus, will be lost, because she was fashionably dressed?

Answer. I did not say so, but will you say that she will be saved living in open and palpable violation of God's Holy Word?"

Ah! um! well—ah! can't say that she will! Then you think nobody but the Dunkard's will be saved!!!

Answer. Has anything of the sort been intimated in the present discussion on my part? I think candor will compel you to say there has not. Are not the positions we assumed amply sustained by the Scriptures of divine truth? As to mere opinions of men about the word! the difference amounts to but little; one man's opinion being about as good as another's. But when God speaks, why should man seek to evade, or explain away the plain meaning of the word? Is not this a perilous course?.

If Christ has commanded us to wash one another's feet, enforcing the command by personal example, what should we care what man may say, or do unto us! Do God's people need more than this? If so, then we may well doubt their professions of "faith alone" in Christ. If we are commanded in the Book of Inspiration—not once merely, but repeatedly, to "greet one another with a holy kiss!" What but human pride and rebellion against God, shall keep us from obeying the Word of God. Does it matter that we call ourselves the friends of Christ it we cast contempt on his authority and Word? "Ye are my friends" says Christ, "if ye do whatsoever," (mark that word, "whatsoever) I command you."

Those who obey God's Word—"that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints," will be saved whoever else may not; whether they be called Dunkards or not, and none others will: God has so declared; "and if God be for us who shall be against us?"

Warrensburg, Mo.

A VISIT TO SHAKER TOWN.

BY LANDON WEST.

DURING our stay with the brethren at Zimmerman, in Green Co., Ohio, and on Saturday January, 18th, on which day we had no meeting in day-time, Brother Rideuour and ourself walked up from brother Daniel Shoup's, where we had lodged, to see and learn what we could of our

SHAKER FRIENDS.

Upon arriving at their home, we went first into a building used as a shop, where we met an old man, alone and at work, to whom we introduced ourselves, and then told the objects of our visit.

This old man is named Moses Eastwood, aged seventy-five years, a native of Ohio, and reared up in the society of which he is now an elder. We thought ourselves fortunate to thus meet one of the societies' oldest and best men, and so we made free to ask questions, and he was quite free to answer.

The following is a summary: The name of their village at this place is Water-Vleit, and the farm is located in both Green and Montgomery counties, and their home is five miles east of the Dayton court house, and near to the Xenia Road. There are two homes in the village, one for the aged and the other for the middle aged, youth and children. The main buildings are brick, and both are large and commodious. Their farm contains near a thousand acres.—all good land, a large part of which is devoted to farming and grazing, with quite a large orchard of both large and small fruits. They have a number of out-buildings, such as barns, shops, etc., also a mill, chapel and school-room. Only a short time ago, they lost a barn by fire; supposed to have been set on fire by some one smoking in it, while lodging there for the night.

They are much imposed upon by the so-called tramps, and also by some who are known as being, "Winter Shakers." But although fully aware of the fact, they did not complain or say hard things as is very often done by others. And we were told by others, that they, the Shakers, are very good to lodge strangers and to feed the hungry.

THEIR FAITH.

They believe that both the Old and New Testaments are Revelations from God, and they also believe in a present and continual revelation. This, they believe, is by visions to certain ones by obtaining knowledge, and these they allow, are later than the written Word, but to agree with it. They claim to take all of the Gospel and to believe in Christ's second coming, but think he has come the second time, but in spirit, and do not look for him to appear in person any more. They look for him to again come, but in spirit, to each one, who receives him, and when he has thus come, he is to remain. Those who remain faithful until death, have the fulness of the spirit, but those who fall away, have lost it, or had but a part of it. They claim that this spirit is obtained by confession of sins, and the taking of the cross, which is the giving up of all that is bad, to be led by it no more, but to be led by the good spirit, and then to have all things common.

They assert that a special revelation was made to one Ann Lee, and that it has made the female equal with the male, in every respect. That Christ opened the way fully, for the males, and that Ann Lee has now opened this way for the females. They tell us that Ann Lee, was born in England, in 1732, and lived about forty-eight years, that she worked miracles, in healing the sick etc., but that her main work was to set the example to her followers by taking up her cross. And that she could know the sin and what it was, in those who came to see her, that she was a discerner of spirits. There have been, they say, revelations of late years, but only occasionally, and not so much as formerly.

The example of Ann Lee, was given for both male and female, and they say, they admit none to membership, who are bachelors in feeling, or any one who hates a woman or does not love children. They do not take the dead letter of the New Testament, as they say, but take the spirit of it, and in case any do not have it correctly, the elders endeavor to instruct these, by both reason, experience and Scripture. They hold that the term called "day of judgment," means dispensation of judgment, and is present and continual.

After hearing the foregoing from elder Moses Eastwood, we were told to go to the South Building and consult the elders there,—one Stephen Ball, who is elder in the family of younger members. To this we went, and were welcomed in, just as they were called to dinner. They bade us remain where we were, until they had dined, and then we should also be provided for. When elder Ball had returned to where we were, he began a very pleasant conversation, and seems to be a man quite intelligent. He said they did not invite others to eat with them because of the ceremonies while at table. These we did not see, but suppose the statements correct. He said that all of each family eat at the same time, and in the same room, but the males at one table and the females at another. All kneel and pray (in silence) both before and after meals. They regard every meal as a sacrament, and that while it is being eaten there is not a word spoken, unless something may be lacking to some, or something has been overlooked. He said that the food was spread on the table in sections, all the same, and each one in the same way, and that each section was just for four persons and no more; and these, seated in a square, had some of everything on the table. There was mostly one sister who did not sit at the first table, but served others supplying whatever was lacking. They eat no pork, but use beef and mutton, but sparingly. We were soon asked to come and eat, and with Mr. Ball to lead the way, we went through the dining hall into a smaller room where a table was furnished with an abundance of food gotten up in good style, but without flesh of any kind. The furniture, dishes, chairs, were all of the plainest kind. So were the tables, and that too without any table cloth upon any.

Their stoves are as plain as a plank, not large, not a flower or letter on them. Their beds, or rather lounges, were well furnished, with two in each room where but two brethren reside together, and these sleep separately. We were told that this is the order throughout the Home—each one sleeps by himself. After dinner, we returned to elder Ball's room, and there continued the conversation. We give first a sketch of his life. Stephen Ball was born in Cornwall, England, in 1815. Came to America in 1832. For awhile he was a Methodist, and with others who looked for Christ's glorious return, in 1843, (some say it was in 1846), he met with those known as Millerites, at Cincinnatti, Ohio; and, on the day set for the long looked for event. They being disappointed in this, as all know, and just at the same time, meeting with some Shaker missionaries, he and about seventy others of the disappointed Millerites, at once joined the Shakers. And from that time to the present, he has been a Shaker; and is now one of the three elders of the village. Moses Eastwood, before mentioned, in the older family. Stephen Ball of the younger, and Margaret Patterson of the sisterhood, in both families. In large villages they have four elders, two male and two female, but in this they have but three, and at present have no minister. They number in this village forty-one. Their number here seems to be falling off. They are opposed to war, in regard to going to law, this is not done with each other, for all things are held in common. But will go to law and sue the Gentiles to obtain rights and claims.

Their officers and grade are as follows: Ministers, elders, deacons, trustees and members. The duty of the minister, is to travel from one village to another, and to preach when they thought proper, from both Old and New Testament. These also select, when this is not done by the family, those to fill other offices, and to give to all who are chosen either by the family or by the minister, the authority belonging to their particular offices.

The duty of elders, both male and female, is to govern the families under their charge, in connection with assistant elders of the same family, and the faith of the fraternity. The deacons are required to look after the temporal affairs of the family, to oversee the farm, its stock, grain etc., and to see also that sufficient is obtained for the support of the family. Each one of the family is expected to do some part of the labor pertaining thereto, and we believe that no member is looked upon as an idler, but all have some useful employment.

The trustees attend to all matters of the family, relative to trade and to finance. These are the business men of the Home. We did not see them in worship, but from what they told of it, we think it peculiar. We were in their service room, but saw in it little else than vacancy—a stove in the center, and but four or six short benches—each near, and along part of each wall.

We were told that at worship, which is on Sunday of each week, they come together and four persons who are singers, take their places in the center of the room, where they as a center, remain standing and singing, while the others in circles, the children nearest the center, and the oldest and largest, in circles outside, pass at a rapid rate around the singers, keeping time to the music, with both hands and feet. This, they say, is Ezekiel's "wheel within a wheel," and is continued in motion sometimes for half an hour. They use only vocal music, and are said to give considerable attention to the cultivation of this gift. Both sexes come together in worship, and the service is shared by both, and they have other meetings, also, when all come together for social conversation upon all useful and general topics, but aside from this, there is not any or very little intercourse between the sexes. Some meetings are for social enjoyment and others for religion.

They all arise at about the same time and at the ringing of the bell, and at this they all go to meals. If any are in any way rebellious, the elders of the family try to reason with them, but if they will not hear, they are then expelled. But if confession is made, they are at once forgiven. When any apply for membership, an inventory of what they bring, is taken, and if they should in a year or so wish to withdraw, this much they can take, but if they stay until confirmed and then leave, they can take nothing but themselves. They have missionaries in different fields, and have also one paper. They have seventeen villages in the United States, but none in any other country.

The Shaker faith is held to be the second visible coming of Christ. They regard their church as the New Jerusalem come down to earth, and their church to be indeed the Lamb's wife. This, they hold, in the millennial time, and theirs the millennial church.

Membership is obtained by the applicant confessing all past sins, and this is made to one or more elders. In case all cannot at once be remembered, the applicant is received, and confession may be then further made, as sins are remembered until all are confessed. This is the rite of admission to membership, and is full or incomplete just as confession is made.

Repentance is held to be the waters of life, and this with the baptism of the Holy Spirit, makes the new birth, which they regard as two-fold. The one to the law the other of a higher order. They hold that salvation is for none but the Shakers. To be saved from sin, is to deny ourselves of all sin. And they hold also that Christ did not recognize either the parental or marriage relation in his church, and therefore these do not belong to it and are not found in it.

They oppose the use of all stimulants as mere beverage. Require all applicants to lay aside tobacco, but do allow it in some cases. Do not at all allow smoking. Their motto is, that he who will take offence will also give offence. They do not claim perfection. They are the most confirmed spiritualists we have ever met, and their reading matter was largely made up of this class. To our question, they replied, that all communications with spirits, here in the West, was only spiritual, but that in the East it was material and visible. But they admitted that one might have all these evidences and still not be in a saved condition.

They claim that Christ's life and reign was spiritual, but that they are now in the celestial state. Their church relation is heaven itself, and do not look for a better one on this earth. They do not believe in a resurrection of the dead, but believe that the elect immediately after death pass into the eternal home above.

We now close our sketch of our visit, feeling that the world affords its vanity in religion as in all other things. We give no comment further, and would say as we close that what we have given is near all in their own language. This will account for its short explanations.

AN APPEAL FROM A LADY TO THE GENTLEMAN.

To the Editor of the Chronicle—Sir:

MY curiosity, the curiosity of a woman, is aroused. Will you or some of your scientificially inclined readers try to satisfy it? I have sought in vain and must have help. I am recently from an interior city. There tobacco-juice and swearing were a never-ending source of trouble on the streets. In the house—whether that house was public or private—we were comparatively free from either nuisance. On coming here the infrequency of profane language and tobacco-juice on the street was a source of surprise and pleasure to me, but I find that no place of amusement or of instruction, not even a private parlor, is sacred from the invasion of tobacco, and ladies in public business have assured me they are obliged cover to the center of their carpets to save them from the greatest enemy of neatness and cleanliness known to woman. Why, a year-old baby with a cup of syrup and tea-spoon will not injure a parlor worse in half an hour than will a man with ten cents' worth of tobacco. Why can't they use it in their offices, work-rooms, saloons, etc., and keep it out of our way? That's what we want to know. If you must be dirty, gentleman, please don't make us suffer at home and abroad for your ill taste.

The soul clings in the midst of the infinity of worlds and planets to the little space that an eyelid covers—to a vanishing, a scarcely discerned glance; and upon the celestial nothing rests its earthly paradise, with all its perfumed flowers, with all its waving trees.

Truth, like roses, often blossoms upon a thorny stem.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, } EDITORS AND
M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - FEBRUARY 20, 1879.

BROTHER Hope writes encouragingly from Denmark. May the good cause continue to prosper.

GOOD manners necessarily belong to good morals, and good morals form an essential part of Christianity.

IF you desire an interesting book to read, send to this office for "Through the Bible Lands." Price $2.25.

BROTHER S. H. Bashor has been holding a series of meetings in the Meyersdale congregation, Pennsylvania.

BROTHER David E. Price started for the Central Illinois mission field the first of last week, expecting to remain about three weeks.

BROTHER Enoch Eby started to Clayton county, Iowa, last Thursday, for the purpose of assisting in organizing a new congregation.

BROTHER Peter S. Myers, of McVeytown, Pa., we learn, expects to start for Kansas with another excursion party about the 4th of March.

BROTHER Daniel Vaniman writes: "Count me one dollar for the Moomaw proposition. I can see some of the Apostolic ring in that, and want to see it tried thoroughly." Who comes next?

FROM E. W. Knouff we learn that sister Hannah Knouff died at Elkville, Ill., the 2nd inst. Sister K. had long toiled in the vineyard of the Lord, and many will remember her kindness, and her devotion to Gospel truths.

PEOPLE who are themselves full of faults have very little business talking about the faults of others. He who attends to his own faults will have but little time left to look after the faults of his neighbors.

THE Brethren in the Bear Creek church are circulating a subscription to raise money to purchase the Campbellite meeting-house in Palmer, four miles North-east of Morrisonville, Illinois.

BROTHER Daniel Vaniman has just closed a series of meetings in the Macoupin Creek Church with four additions. From there he goes to Montgomery county to hold a series of meetings at a new point. Success attend the work.

MOOMAW'S proposition is receiving a number of hearty approvals. We will soon open a column for the benefit of the move, and will publish from week to week such promises as may be sent. Let us hear from others.

WE are in receipt of advanced sheets of the Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book, published by the P. C. brethren at Huntingdon, Pa. The print is clear, and the paper good. We shall have something more to say about the book when it is ready for filling orders.

BROTHER Jesse Calvert, writing from Green Spring, Ohio, under date of Februnry 10th, says: "We closed our meetings here last night, having been here ten days. We had a pleasant meeting, good order, very large congregations, good interest. Fifteen were added by baptism, and a number said, at no distant day they will unite with the church. God help them to come soon. This was one of the most pleasant places we ever visited. We found some opposition, also a preacher was in the neighborhood teaching that baptizo meant to sprinkle, and that Jordan was only a little spouty rivulet, running through the sandy desert, some places could be seen and some places could not."

The Debate does not appear this week. Brother Stein being pressed with much business while at Mt. Morris could not get time to prepare his ninth address, and as we print two speeches at one time, and there not being two here, it must be delayed till next week.

WE desire the name and address of every Sunday-school Superintendent in the country, as we have something interesting to send them. Our readers will please send us the address of all they know, especially those who were Superintendents last year.

BROTHER N. T. Brubaker informs us that the Brethren of the Wabash church, Indiana, have been holding a series of very interesting meetings, in which they were assisted by Brethren A. Miller, A. Leedy, D. Shively, and D. Bowser. There were no additions at the time of the meeting, but the church was much edified and built up.

THE world glories in the sword, and speaks of it in the highest terms, while it looks down on the plow with disdain. But to the plow the sword must one day yield, for the sword itself shall be beaten into plowshares. He who uses the sword will perish by it, but he who stands by the plow will confer blessings, not only on himself, but others.

THE Brethren at Bolivia, Westmoreland county, Pa., have been holding a series of meetings. Seven were baptized and four other applicants await baptism. Among those who united with the church was one Catholic. Brother George Hannwalt, from Spring Run was with them and preached the sound doctrine.

THE Christian Index, published at Atlanta, Ga., deals some heavy blows against church fairs, and church gambling. The writer says:

"We have always thought that the best way to raise money for religious purposes, is to appeal to none but religious motives. A small amount raised in this way, will do more good than a large amount raised in any other way. Does a fair, or a picnic, or a strawberry festival appeal to religious motives only? Is not the love of amusement, or the love of something else besides the love of God, appealed to?

IN No. 6 was published a story of a most extraordinary death reported to have taken place in Fountain county Indiana, whereby a man was killed by a falling meteor, which fell through the roof of a house in which he was sleeping. The notice was sent us by Brother Hiel Hamilton, who clipped it from the Indianapolis State Journal. The report is found to be untrue, and has proved the most successful "sell" of the period, as a large portion of the press of the country has been caught by it. Meteoric stones frequently fall, but this was a "sell."

ONE of our exchanges says: "To escape conscription, fifteen thousand Mennonites will emigrate from Russia this Winter and settle in several of the North-western States of this Union. They are an honest and industrious people. Like the Quakers they are opposed to war. Their religious tenets are peculiar. They believe that the terms "Person" and "Trinity" ought not to be applied to the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. They believe that the New Testament is the only rule of faith; that there is no original sin; that infants should not be baptized; and that Christians ought not to take oath, hold office, or use physical force."

CHRISTIAN women should learn to be "keepers at home," Titus 2: 5, "that the name of God be not blasphemed." Home should be the holiest place on earth, and every lawful effort should be put forth to make it a little paradise. The wife and mother should be treated with great kindness for she is the moulder of characters. She who thinks that the woman's mission is not a noble one, has a poor conception of what it takes to constitute a Christian mother. The education of the soul for eternity begins at the fireside, and mothers who study to be keepers at home, and train their children for usefulness will be amply rewarded in the coming future. What the world most stands in need of at this time is Christian mothers, praying mothers who will take pleasure in training children for the Lord.

BROTHER Daniel Miller seems to be meeting with good success on his Wisconsin mission. Up to February the 9th fourteen were baptized, and three applicants for baptism the next day. He was then preaching at Woodstock with crowded houses and great interest. Brother D. F. Eby, who has returned, reports excellent prospects for a big work there if the mission is rightly managed. We are pleased with Brother Miller's method of staying in one place till something can be accomplished. This thing of scattering meetings all over the country, and thereby not establishing the doctrine as you go is neither apostolic nor reasonable.

THE ELDERS AND YOUNGER.

"The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."—1 Pet. 5: 1-5.

PETER was amply qualified to properly instruct the elders in relation to all their duties. He was an elder himself and could therefore speak from experience. Yea, he was more than elder; he was a divinely appointed apostle of the Lord, and inspired by the Holy Ghost to preach and write, and therefore his writing should be regarded as the words of the Holy Ghost.

He instructs the elders to "feed the flock of God" over which they have been appointed, and to take the oversight of the church willingly, and to do the work with a ready mind. But while doing so they should not become "lords over God's heritage," for it was not only becoming, but a special duty that they should be "ensamples to the flock." The younger is instructed to submit himself to the elder of the congregation, as his "teacher," "pastor," "shepherd," "overseer," "housekeeper," and "bishop."

To the church has been given the authority to set apart certain persons, who are to take the oversight of the congregation; to watch over it as a shepherd careth for his flock; to feed it, that the members may grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth. If he is the kind of a man the Holy Ghost wants, and possesses the qualifications the Scriptures require, he will be a fit "ensample to the flock," hence those who submit to his government will be doing that which is well pleasing to the Lord.

Properly there can be no church government without officers, whose duty it is to take charge of, and look after the wants of the church. In one sense elders are rulers, but not lords. They are to lead the flock, not drive it. As "ensamples to the flock" they are to labor to keep in advance of the congregation in every good word and work, not for the purpose of excelling, but in order to lead the flock to higher and nobler plains of Christian virtue. He who seeks to elevate the affections, and purify the morals of his congregation, by setting them good examples, will, by the grace of God, succeed; and long after he has closed his labors on earth, his name will be mentioned with respect and he regarded as a father. But he who stands behind his congregation and commands them to do this, and to do that, thus lording it over God's heritage will soon find very little piety in either himself or his congregation. Christians, like sheep, will follow much better than drive.

When it comes to Christian piety and true holiness the elder should lead—he should be a man who stands in advance of his congregation, otherwise he cannot be an ensample to the flock. Sad is the condition of that congregation whose housekeeper is looked down upon by the church and the world: lamentable the condition when the elder's light is eclipsed by the surrounding darkness. "If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!" Matt. 6: 23. But when it comes to authority the wants of the congregation should be consulted; every member should have a voice. Care should be taken to instruct them properly regarding their duties that their voice may be governed by the Scriptures.

Not only the younger should submit themselves unto the elder, but says Peter, "All of you be subject one to another." This includes every member in the congregation. Each one should consult the welfare of his brother or sister, for all belong to one family, and their interest in the great salvation, is a common one. If your brother and sister are weak and disheartened, encourage and help them along. If your ministers should err, or do that which is not a credit to the cause, go to them, and admonish them gently; this do for the good of the cause which they are laboring to vindicate. It is the duty of your housekeeper to watch over you with a tender care; it is your duty to watch over him as an assistant. He is to care for your interest and it is your duty to assist him in that work. His watchfulness is for good, not for his own glory, but the glory of God, and the salvation of souls. Every member should aid him; (1) by living as Christians should live, and (2) by assisting others to live right. Each one should labor to cause no trouble, and assist in settling the troubles others cause. No one should be "self-willed," especially elders, but let each one labor for the good of the cause, constantly keeping the welfare of the church in view. Every member should feel free to talk with the elder about that which pertains to the good of the church, and offer such suggestions as they may think prudent. Their advice will often come good, and serve as a great help in church government. And any elder, who has the meek spirit of his Master will gladly entertain well-meant suggestions from any member of his flock. Brethren, help one another.

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER VIII.

TO forcibly impress the idea that God has a Will—a written Plan by which men must come to Him, is the business of every Gospel minister. What is sounded out, becomes a serious question when we know that so much depends on hearing. That God has a Will, is evident. That He gave this to us by His Son is also evident. That it is written—put in form of words—is accepted by all who believe in Jesus. Being so much of one mind we pass to the further consideration of the conditions of that Will.

Let us suppose that there resides in a beautiful part of the country, a very rich nobleman. He is surrounded with all that can make him comfortable and happy. He knows no want; no poverty ever pinched him, and unpaid bills never came dunning into his spacious mansion. He has no relatives, none upon which to bestow his vast possessions. But in his vicinity there are five poor orphan girls. He sees their poverty. There is no eye to pity, none to offer a helping hand. No words of sympathy are ever given them. They are considered "outcasts," and no kind hand is open to their griefs and sorrows. The nobleman sees them, and resolves to help them. They have not merited his sympathy, but he concludes to do them good. He begins to supply their wants, with or without conditions, as he sees fit. Being sole owner of all that he possesses, he can do as he pleases. While alive he can give conditionally or unconditionally as he chooses. Finally he concludes that he should make his last will or testament. He understands the language he uses. He is of sound mind, and has a clear title to all his possessions. He then proceeds to bequeath his possessions to the five orphan girls on the following conditions. 1. All shall marry. 2. All shall marry farmers. 3. Each must be married by a preacher. 4. They must continue to live with their husbands. He then adds, "She that complies with said conditions shall inherit; but she that complies not, shall disinherit."

The testator dies. His will is read. The legatees come forward to be examined. The first is asked: "Are you married?" "No," she replies. The will reads, "1. All shall marry." You are not married, therefore are disinherited. The decision is just; the will cannot be set aside. The Infidel says, "I do not believe." The Will of God says, "Believe." "He that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 16. This is the doom of the unbeliever.

The second orphan comes forward. "Are you married?" "I am," she answers. Then you have complied with condition first. Condition second reads: "All shall marry farmers." Have you married a farmer?" "No; I married a lawyer." Then you are disinherited. "Repent ye, and believe the Gospel," Mark 1: 15. Do not think you can inherit by simply complying to that part of the Will which says, "believe." Repentance is also a condition of salvation.

Orphan third stands up. Are you married? "I am." Are you married to a farmer? "I am." Were you married by a preacher? "No; I was married by a Justice of the Peace." Condition third reads, "Each must be married by a preacher." You have not complied with this. You cannot inherit. So it will be with those who try to inherit the kingdom by simply complying with faith and repentance. The believing Pentecostians were commanded "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of ...s and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy ...ost." Acts 2: 38. Condition third. "be bap... ...ed" must be complied with. The Will so ...mands.

Orphan fourth comes forward. Are you mar...ied? "I am." This is according to condition first, which reads, "All shall marry." Are you married to a farmer? "Yes." This is according to condition second, "All shall marry farmers." Condition third reads, "Each must be married by a preacher." Did a preacher marry you? "Yes; I was married by a preacher." Condition fourth reads, "They must continue to live with their husbands." Are you living with your husband? "I am not." You cannot inherit. So it will be with all those who have complied with the conditions, faith, repentance and baptism, but turn again to the beggarly elements of the world: "For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them." But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, "The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." 2 Pet. 2: 21, 22. Such have forgotten that they "were purged from their old sins."

The fifth and last orphan now appears. Are you married? "I am married." You have complied with the first condition which reads, "All shall marry." Did you marry a farmer? "I did." Condition second reads, "All shall marry farmers. You have complied with this. Were you married by a preacher? "I was." This is according to condition third which reads, "Each must be married by a preacher." Condition fourth reads, "They must continue to live with their husbands." Are you living with your husband? "I am," she kindly replies. Then you have complied with all the conditions of the will, hence shall inherit all that has been bequeathed to you. So it will be with those who have believed, repented and been baptized. "Repent ye and believe the Gospel." Mark 1: 15. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark 16: 16. "Repent and be baptized every one of you." Acts 2: 38. "Continue in the things which thou hast learned." 2 Tim. 3: 14. "Continue ye in my love." John 15: 9. "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed." John 8: 31. "If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye shall continue in the Son, and in the Father." 1 John 2: 24.

M. M. E.

THE "LOVE OF."

THERE are some things which all men like and some things which all dislike. All the good which we can hope to do is based upon this truth. If this were not universally so, by what means could we expect to stimulate and encourage men to do right? It is by virtue of this, that we can have confidence in the claims of heaven's law. From a misapprehension of a few passages of Scripture, bearing on this point, some very gross errors have grown.

"The LOVE OF money is the root of all evil." 1 Tim. 6: 10. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but MADE HIMSELF of no reputation." Phil. 2: 5, 6, 7.

From these passages some have concluded that it is wrong to possess either money or reputation. Indeed, there are so many who believe this that I have often pitied those who had to endure their rebukes and bitter persecution. A man possessing means, is made a target at which the deadly arrows of denunciation and disapprobation are shot, with the full assurance that it is the will of Heaven's Almighty King. All this is the effect of ignorance. Ignorance betrayed, condemned, spit upon, buffeted and scourged the Savior of the world. Had it stopped here, however, we might apologize for what was done, and, with patience, endure it to the end, but it never stops at half-way—it always pushes its measures to the last extreme. In this case the work was not completed until Jesus was nailed to the cross, suspended between heaven and earth, and the barbarous and wicked yell pierced the air, "Hail, King of the Jews!" "But, hold on sir, you are going too far—you are putting your picture in too strong colors," says my friend. "How do you know ignorance was the instrument by which this horrible deed was committed?" How do I know it? What a question for a Bible reader to ask! The last words of our blessed Master as he is expiring upon the cross, "Father forgive them, they KNOW NOT what they do," is how I know it.

It is not the possession of wealth, honor, glory, fame or reputation that is condemned, but the ever lusting, longing after them. The penniless widow may be as much a subject of condemnation in view of the Scripture, "The love of money is the root of all evil," as the Rothschilds. What a man has is a very uncertain criterion by which to decide whether he is "born of the spirit" or not. It is what he does that decides the question. We have known persons to rise from want and penury to wealth and opulence, by some unlooked for circumstance, who were actually the most cruel and oppressive people we ever knew. They always had the will to be so, but lacked the opportunity. Such persons are no better in want and penury, in the sight of God, than if they had millions. A great many poor console themselves with the thought, "I am poor, therefore I am safe so far as the money question is concerned." Nothing can be a greater delusion. You are no better than if you had billions. Without one cent you can love money as much as though you had oceans of it; and it is the "love" of it that is condemned.

In reference to glory, honor, fame, popularity and reputation, the same is true.—It is not the possession, but the irrepressible, incessant desire for them that is condemned.

Christ "made himself of no reputation." How different from men now! "Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Just so; and are we not all witnesses to the truth of it? What is more disgusting to sensible people than self-praise, self-laudation. Oh, how odious a person becomes who occupies our attention by talking about himself! "I did, I saw, I heard, I said, I preached, I wrote, I, I, I own, I control, I support." Do we not abase those who exalt themselves, and exalt those who humble themselves? Certainly it is not wrong to be exalted,—to have reputation, glory, honor, and fame, or Christ would not have taught us the means by which we can be exalted.—He would certainly not teach us how we might obtain a thing if he did not want us to have it. "He that humbleth himself SHALL BE EXALTED."

S. J. HARRISON.

FROM MONTICELLO, INDIANA.

WE are having a beautiful Winter in this part of God's creation. We are very thankful for these continued blessings. We notice that death is still among us as both old and young are called from this world of sin to try the realities of another. The church in this arm of the brotherhood is in a flourishing condition, as all the brethren and sisters seem to be laboring for their soul's salvation, and the welfare of the cause of Christ.

On Jan. 15th we commenced a series of meetings at the Carson and Shady Green schoolhouses, continuing a week. The teachings of our blessed Savior were held forth unto a sin-sick audience who manifested a great desire to learn what was necessary for them to obtain eternal life, by our home ministers who preached the words of eternal truth unto them with great power and feeling, causing sinners to cry out, "What shall we do to be saved?" Praise be to our Father in heaven, for nine precious souls were made to say, "I will arise and go to Jesus." They were received into the church by baptism.

From the above named places we further continued our labors by beginning a series of meetings at our church, where we had the pleasure of hearing the voice of our beloved brother Daniel P. Shively, of Peru, Ind., who preached five sermons for us. He labored earnestly in the cause of Christ. We were all made to feel that it was good to be there, and hear him portray unto us the beauties of heaven, also the terrible punishment that awaited those who would not heed the teachings laid down in the Book of divine Truth. Being afflicted he could not remain any longer with us, but had to return to his home. However, we are happy to say that his labors were not fruitless, as souls were made to feel that all was not well between them and their God. Also Brother Miller, of Wolcott, Ind., was with us two days. He is an able ambassador of Christ, impressing upon us our duty to God. Making us all feel that there is a great work for the Christian people to perform while upon this earth. Our meeting continued seven days, only having meeting at night except on Sundays when we had it twice. By the active labors of our ministering brethren, and the united help of the members, especially the young members who worked earnestly for the cause of their Master, (my dear young brethren and sisters, let us continue to do more for Jesus than we ever have done before, for great will be our reward in heaven), much good was done in the name of the holy child Jesus, for ten souls were made willing to repent of their sins, and be baptized in the name of Jesus, and many more are thinking seriously about their soul's salvation. Our prayer is that they may be able to choose that good part which many choose while they have life and health.

Our meetings closed with a good feeling prevailing among all. The members were made stronger in the faith, and sinners caused to feel that all was not well between them and their God.

RETURN OF THE JEWS.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURG MAGAZINE is noted for its superior collection of interesting reading matter. It deals with living subjects. A late number contains an ably prepared article on "The Haven of Carmel" from which the following interesting extract, in regard to the return of the Jews to Palestine, is made:

"There is another feature in the possible future of Palestine which is worthy of consideration—namely, the Jewish immigration, which may be said already to have commenced. Hitherto the insecurity of the country and the obstructiveness of Turkish officials have deterred Jewish capitalists from employing their money in the land; but the Jewish population of the poorer class has for several years been increasing in Jerusalem at the rate of over a thousand souls per annum.

The number of Jews in the Holy City is now probably not far short of 10,000, or nearly half the total of inhabitants.

Many reasons have been suggested for this influx of Jews into Palestine. The terror of the conscription has driven away a number of Polish and Russian Jews from those countries, and the Hallukah or alms distributed to the poor in Jerusalem has also proved an attraction to many. Religious attachment to the Holy City has also been in many cases the reason of the return of the poor and more pious, and no one can visit the Wailing place on a Friday without being impressed with the reality of Jewish devotion, and the vitality of their belief in the future, and of their sorrow for the past and present.

It would appear, also, that an interest in Palestine is gradually growing up among the more influential class of European Jews; and among the wonderful changes which are so rapidly developing in the East, we may perhaps be destined to witness an extensive movement in Palestine, by which the Jews would become the owners of the country and the chief employers of native labor.

In such a case the town of Haifa would certainly rise to a position of importance as the only good port within the limits of the Holy Land. From the Christian era downwards, it has been a favorite abode of the Jews. In the twelfth century it is specially noted as having a large Jewish population; and at the present time, its trade, which is growing steadily, is principally in the hands of the Jewish inhabitants, who number 1,000 souls, or about a quarter of the population.

Christian information with regard to the Jews, is, as a rule, so imperfect, that it is not easy to estimate the influence of such organization as is represented by the "Universal Israelites Alliance;" but it is indisputable that the Jews have taken and are taking measures to promote industrial education and the employment of Jewish capital in Palestine, and it can scarcely be doubted that they are well fitted by character and by linguistic attainments to deal with the native population of Syria.

The subject of colonization in Palestine excites much interest in certain classes of English society. Colonies have already been started in the country, and a society has been formed for the promotion of agriculture in the land.

The Germans who live at Haifa and Jaffa are, however, the only colonists who have practically succeeded in establishing themselves in the country. Impelled by a mystic sense of the importance of giving to the world the example of a community living on the model of the apostolic society—building a "spiritual temple" of faith and good works in the very country where the actual Temple once stood, and raising a sacrifice of prayer where the ancient sacrifices were offered—these humble settlers have gathered from Germany, England, and America, and have established a society which in some respects resembles the well known American sects, Bible Communists, etc., but which is not distinguished from the rest of the world by any peculiar ideas on domestic matters."

COVETOUSNESS.

COVETOUSNESS is undue desire of gain. The New Testament calls it idolatry. By referring to Deut. 13: 17, we learn that idolaters were to be stoned to death. The witnesses were to throw the first stones and afterwards the whole congregation to continue to stone them till they were stoned to death. If a town went into idolatry, every man and every beast was to be killed and the property of the town was to be burned to ashes.

It makes a man dishonest. He is a robber, for he robs God and robs society.

It prevents the spread of the Gospel.

It destroys natural affection. A man has no sympathy for the salvation of his children or of his neighborhood. Neither a covetous deacon nor a covetous minister is to be ordained. The covetous man is not to enter into heaven. (1 Cor. 6.) Says a minister, we are the poorest people in the world and we can't give a cent to missions of any kind. A wicked circus comes along and raises $1,000 in a few hours.—The Baptist.

HOUSE BURNED DOWN.

BROTHER Daniel Miller, writing from the Wisconsin mission field, under date of February 9th, says: "Last night, when I was about half through with my sermon, the alarm of fire was given. Robert Norman's house was on fire, and burned down. We had no more preaching that night. Some furniture was saved. We want you to send us $50 at once." The money was borrowed here and forwarded to Brother Miller that the suffering family might be relieved, as they are poor and have no home of their own. Brother Miller said he and Brother Martin Meyer would stand good for the money, but it is too much for two men to pay, and we take this method of asking the members of Northern Illinois to bear the burden. Send to, or hand in your donations at this office and they will be paid over to Brethren Miller and Meyer. Brethren, remember the poor, and do them good as you have opportunity.

AN EXPLANATION.

IN the last number of the Gospel Preacher, under the head of "Consolidation," is published an article calculated to make a wrong impression. It is not prudent for firms to publish confidential business letters. If the readers understood all the attending circumstances it would not make so much difference.

As an explanation we will here say, that there being quite a feeling for less papers in the Brotherhood, a business correspondence was entered into between the Primitive Christian editors, Brother Sharp and ourselves, to see if we could not hit upon a plan to have less juvenile papers, and thus concentrate forces, believing it would be for the good of the general Brotherhood. The idea seemed plausible, and we were very favorable to it. But Brother Sharp having written us that he intended to start a youths' paper at Ashland, thus increasing instead of diminishing papers, we fear the project is not feasible, however much it may be desired.

The publishing of business correspondence, relating to projects of this kind, has a tendency to produce an uncalled for sensation which does not always leave the best of feelings.

When we conclude to leave Lanark and locate elsewhere, due notice will be given in the BRETHREN AT WORK. There is such a thing as letting good enough alone.

BROTHER J. W. Stein returned home from Mt. Morris last Thursday.

BROTHER Lemuel Hillery has been holding a series of meetings in Lanark. He is making preparations to go West in the Spring.

BROTHER Samuel Peck and wife returned last week from their trip to Ohio, expressing themselves as highly pleased with their visit.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL PENROD.

Some one will please compare and explain Acts 1: 18, and Matt. 27: 5.

Also Ex. 21: 10 11, and John 1: 18. H. H. R.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22: 2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5: 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc.

S. A. FLECKINGER.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE REDDY.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8: 33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

GOD A CONSUMING FIRE.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

THE apostle is not alone in saying that "Our God is a consuming fire;" for it had been already announced through Moses: "For the Lord thy God is a consuming fire; even a jealous God." Deut. 4: 24. Even the best men, like Moses, are in their finiteness so very much inferior to infinite, divine perfection, that God, in His glory (Ex. 33: 18–23), and in His holiness (Deut. 3: 5), would utterly destroy them. But in His condescending love of "God with us" (Matt. 1: 21, 23; John 3: 16; Rev. 3: 20), He is not consuming as a destroyer of men, but of sin and that in man which is opposed to His glory and holiness. No person can be so good as to be able to receive God in His purity, for this would require him to be equal with God; hence He can only come to man, as a man, or God with man. J. R. HOTTEL.

SIGNS FOLLOW THEM.

Some one will please explain Mark 16: 17, 18: "And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Who is referred to?

J. L. BROWN.

WHO is referred to? Those who believed on Christ in the setting up, or establishing the system of Christianity. God saw proper to accompany His works of grace with signs and wonders, while He was establishing it on earth, as He did the Mosaic dispensation. Moses and Aaron wrought wonders until it was proven beyond doubt that they were appointed of God to deliver the Israelites, and then when the design of the miracle was fully accomplished they ceased. We learn a lesson here: that God gave power to His believers to do those signs and wonders in order to convince the people that Christ was the Messiah. Paul terms it a witness. In speaking of the preaching of the Word he says, that "God bore them witness with signs and wonders and divers miracles, by the gift of the Holy Ghost." This makes it plain, and shows clearly the purpose of these signs, &c. God does not hold the witness in the stand always, but when he has fully testified to the truth he is freed from his services, as with Moses, so also with the early Christians; the witness retired, the miracles ceased when they had fully accomplished their work.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DETHICK.

JUDAS evidently was present when feet-washing, and the Lord's Supper were instituted, as it was while they were at supper that Jesus gave him the sop, and bade him do quickly what he had to do. See John 13: 26. Feet-washing had certainly taken place before the supper, as we learn by the reading of the former part of this chapter. It is equally certain that Judas was not present at the Communion, for we read in verse 30, "He then, having received the sop, went immediately out: and it was night." Now if we turn to Luke 22: 20, we find that the holy Communion was instituted after supper. The above is my understanding of the matter; nevertheless there are some difficulties, for in verse 21 we read, "But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." From this last quotation many take it for certain that Judas was present at the Communion.

We read in Gen. 1: 26, "Let us make man in our own image after our likeness." Did God make man in the form of himself, or was the image spiritual?

A. HOLLINGER.

"An image is an imitation, representation, or similitude of any person or thing, drawn, painted, or otherwise made perceptible to the sight." Webster. We read in John 1: 24, "God is a spirit," and in Luke 24: 39, our Lord informed His disciples that a spirit hath not flesh and bones. A spirit, then, is without parts, and without dimensions. Man could not have been made in the image of God; as to form, the image must have consisted in a spiritual imitation or similitude. The prophet Habakkuk informs us that God is of purer eyes than to behold evil, and that He cannot look on iniquity. The purity and perfections of Jehovah are every-where taught in the sacred Records. Solomon informs us that he had found that God made man upright; but he had sought out many inventions. Man was originally a representation of his Maker, in moral and spiritual perfections.

Please give an explanation on 1 Cor. 5: 5: "To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." M. W. KEIM.

The apostle here refers to one who was a member of the church, but who had been guilty of a most heinous misdemeanor, namely, having his father's wife. The pure soul of the apostle revolts at such gross conduct, and he denounced against it the severest punishment known in the apostolic church. The species of punishment here referred to was wholly confined to that age of the church. It was unknown in the Jewish church, and discontinued in the Christian church after the age of the apostles. It was a kind of punishment administered in extraordinary cases, in which the body and the mind of an incorrigible transgressor were delivered by the command of God, into the power of Satan, to be tortured with diseases and terrors; but while the body and mind were thus tormented, the spirit was in the hands of a merciful God, who was waiting to be gracious. This affliction was generally, in all probability, only for a season, though sometimes it was evidently unto death, as the phrase, "destruction of the flesh" seems to imply. A person thus given over by the power of God into the hands, or under the influence of Satan, could not help but experience the deepest contrition, remorse and humility of spirit, so that in the end this dire punishment would be for his good. Though it was for the destruction of the flesh, yet it was for salvation of the spirit. It was this species of punishment that was meted out to Ananias and Sapphira, and to Elymas the Sorcerer.

A SMALL AUDIENCE.

ONE of the Savior's most delightful discourses, second only to the Sermon on the Mount, is that delivered at Jacob's Well to but one listener, and that one a poor, despised Samaritan woman. It encourages the heart of a minister, of course, to be able to preach to multitudes—often it fosters vanity and pride. But let him not count it condescension, when the occasion calls for it, to speak the truths of the Gospel to solitary listeners, or to "two or three" gathered together in the name of Jesus.—Selected.

MAKE CHILDHOOD SWEET.

Wait not till the little hands are at rest
Ere you fill them full of flowers;
Wait not for the crowning tuberose
To make sweet last sad hours;
But while in the busy household band,
Your darlings still need your guiding hand,
Oh, fill their lives with sweetness!

Wait not till the little hearts are still
For the loving look and phrase;
But while you gently chide a fault
The good deed kindly praise.
The word you would speak beside the bier
Falls sweeter far on the living ear;
Oh, fill your lives with sweetness!
Let never a worldly bauble keep
Your heart from the joy each day should reap.
Circling your lives with sweetness.

Give thanks each morn for the sturdy boys,
Give thanks for the fairy girls;
With a dower of wealth like this at home,
Could you rifle the earth for pearls?
Wait not for death to gem love's crown,
But daily shower life's blessings down,
And fill your hearts with sweetness.

Remember the homes where the light has fled,
Where the rose has faded away;
And the love that glows in youthful hearts,
Oh, cherish it while you may!
And make your home a garden of flowers,
Where joy shall bloom through childhood's hours,
And fill your lives with sweetness.

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS.

BY JAMES WIRT.

"I am the light of the world."—John 8: 12.

AS man needs a guide, it is surely wisdom in him to follow the instructions of a Teacher sent from heaven. Christ is such a teacher and His written Word, in connection with the experience of His devoted followers, as His Spirit accompanies these, guiding them into all truth, are sufficient to enlighten the world's moral atmosphere, and all that follow in the footsteps of the blessed Savior enjoy that spiritual light which will illumine their pathway from earth to glory.

The teachings of the Gospel make the future all radiant with life, light and immortality, when in simplicity they are obeyed. Christ is to the spiritual or moral world what the material sun is to the natural world, and the analogy is so perfect as to be termed in the sacred Record the Sun of Righteousness. Mal. 4: 2.

The truths of the Gospel are beams of light and love which radiate from one common centre—the cross of Christ. And as far as their rays extend a cheerful and benign influence is felt, dispelling the thick gloom of sin and iniquity that would otherwise remain; for while men are in a natural state they love darkness rather than light, and the reason is obvious; their deeds are evil. They are not yet enlightened by that true light, the Redeemer of mankind. Jesus taught His disciples to let their light shine before men, and that they should not keep it hidden or concealed so that others beholding the virtue of doing good works might also be constrained to glorify our Father who is in heaven, by yielding implicit obedience to all the requirements of the Gospel. Christ is the light of the present world, and will be the light of the eternal or celestial world, and in that great city, the New Jerusalem, the Lamb is the light thereof. By following Him the saints have the promise of the light of life. John 9: 5. The true believer, like the prophet of old, may look confidingly to God and say, Thou shalt guide me with thy counsels and afterwards receive me home to glory. If we are faithful here on earth, dwelling with fallen and benighted beings like ourselves, we may soon be ushered into that world of light, to enter upon employments suited to our increased powers of mind and soul. Heaven is the abode of bright beings of ceaseless activities, who are continually engaged in the performance of missions received from their Creator. Earth is the abode of fallen man, but Christ has given unto us a perfect Law, and if we wish to enjoy eternal life in the future state we must be willing to be governed by this Law. Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh to the Father but by me." The Scripture sets Christ before us as our model, our exampler; His life we should imitate to be Christians; His actions are for us to copy, and if we love Him, we will keep His commandments. He is our elder brother, hence joint heirs with Him to that incorruptible estate that has through Him been so graciously bequeathed to all the elect of God. This estate consists in a blissful immortality of light and love near the Throne.

WERE it not for the clouds that darken us, there would be no rainbow in our lives.

And yet they are actually losing faith in it. No people can always retain an active faith in a religion the facts and experiences of which are all of ages long past.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR church news for the Winter so far, is not so prolific and gratifying as we could wish, yet we have some encouraging things to relate.

Brother W. J. H. Bauman entered our field as a missionary on the 14th of December, and after five weeks of ardent labor at three different places within the limits of our congregation, we have eight applicants for admission into the body. Proceeding from here, in his course he entered the limits of Solomon Valley congregation, on the night of the 21st of January. Here, up to the last account, seven sermons were preached, and rewarded with five additions into to the church, and an apparent good feeling and revivifying of the spiritual powers of the beloved there. It would not be doing justice to pass silently by the superior singing and earnest warm-hearted hospitality and brotherly love that prevails among the Brethren of Solomon Valley. Another noticeable feature among the Brethren here, is their zealous non-conformity, plainness and order. Is not their peace and harmony and brotherly love and spiritual prosperity attributable to this in a measure?

With regard to the character and power of brother Bauman's labor in the ministry, we were more than gratified. Well filled houses, with tender hearts and flowing tears characterized the series every-where, especially at the close: yet the weather was severe and unfavorable much of the time he was here.

Spiritual labor upon the frontier is, in some respects, similar to the agricultural progress here—the sod has to be broken up and left rot awhile in many cases, before it is prepared to germinate and sustain the growing crop. Yet it is my opinion, that not a single Gospel sermon is ever entirely lost. Let us thank God and take courage. JAMES L. SWITZER.

From Republic Co., Kansas.

I LEFT Andrew county, Missouri, January 17th, and arrived at this place on the 18th. Met our brother-in-law at the depot, also met elder W. J. H. Bauman, of Iowa, and brother Fadely, of Burr Oak, this State. We were conveyed to the house of N. K. Williams, three miles south-east of Scandia. We were very glad to meet with the loved ones. It has been five years since we bade our brother and sister farewell; then to meet again after so many days it is a source of much pleasure. A few hours of social conversation, brother Bauman returned to his appointment three miles west of town, where he has been holding meeting. Brother Fadely and myself remained to fill an appointment at the school-house in this neighborhood, where we met at the usual hour for night meeting. Had a full house of attentive listeners. Next morning we were taken to the place where brother Bauman was holding forth the word of life to the people, where I tried to preach as God gave ability. After a hearty exhortation by brother Bauman, three arose, and said by their actions that they were tired of sin. On the night previous three more came out on the Lord's side, which makes six at that place. Thus you see that brother Bauman labors are not in vain. After remaining with brother a few hours conversing about things past, present and future, we bade him farewell, and returned to our appointment at the school-house, where we have been laboring one week. It seems that the people are well pleased with the doctrine of the Bible as preached and practiced by the Brethren. What will be the result of our effort, God only knows. We will continue the meeting a few days longer, then visit our Brethren in Jewell county. Will say that brother Fadely is a young minister, well read in Scripture, and fluent in doctrine. We divided the burden, but the work of the Lord is easy when we work for His glory.

So far I am very well pleased with this county, and can recommend it as a good farming country. Scandia is a thrifty little village. It is growing very rapidly. My sister is the only member that lives in this neighborhood. Our prayer is that ere long she may have the privilege of meeting regularly with God's people. Brethren preached a few times here, but to the most of the people the doctrine is new, but as far as I am able to judge, success will be the result, provided the Brethren continue regular meetings.

JANUARY 26. Preached the funeral of Samuel Snider, aged three years and three days. Congregations large and apparently interested.

Jan. 27. Two meetings to-day. Congregations large.

Jan. 28. Two meetings to-day, much interest, one baptized.

Jan. 29. Two meetings to-day. Visited the sick. Had pleasant interviews with them in regard to their future condition.

Jan. 30. Very interesting meetings, one baptized, making five in this church at this meeting and a few more applicants, and I hope many more will come. We now bid farewell and go away to meet no more on earth but hope to meet the loved ones above.

Jan. 31. Arrived at Green Spring church in time for evening meeting.

Feb. 1. Preached the funeral sermon of sister Melissa Shafer to a very large congregation of sympathizing friends. Disease, lung fever. Aged 29 years, 11 months and 16 days. She was one of those tender, loving, motherly sisters—was loved by all both in and out of the church—was a faithful Sunday-school worker, and a faithful Christian. O, how great the loss to father, mother, brothers and sisters, and to the church and to a dear companion, but your loss is her gain. She said, after talking to all kindly and bidding farewell, "I am now tired and wish to sleep. Darken the windows." Turning over on her side she died, or went to sleep in the arms of Jesus. Now, dear father and mother, prepare to meet your daughter in a better world. Husband continue faithful; it will not be long until you can take her by the hand again. May we all prepare to meet beyond the river of death.

From F. P. Lœhr.

I CAME here with my wife to our former home, where we had lived twenty years, being connected with the church called Turkey Creek. Brother John Leatherman being housekeeper then. The church was then composed of less than one hundred members. The territory embraced sixty miles east and west, and about twenty-five or thirty north and south. Now at this time composes ten churches, averaging not less than two hundred members. For about twenty years harmony and union prevailed, but, as is always the case, Satan, the Adversary of God and man disturbed the fold, but thanks be to God. He heard the command "Get thee behind me Satan."

I attended a council meeting last Saturday in our "Big Church," which was conducted, not by the officials only, but by the church, both male and female members used the liberty to express their minds freely just as they did at a council meeting at Waddam's Grove, in Illinois, where I was present. If our members are made to feel not only at liberty to speak their mind, but really their duty to speak then love and good will doth prevail. I felt to make this remark because there is a lack in this respect here and there. The official brethren transact business among themselves that properly belongs to the body, which causes a coldness and indifference among the private members, hence the meagre attendance at church meetings.

I preach in the Disciple church, at Milford this week. I then go from church to church, to do what I can. We have very attentive hearers, and large congregations.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL give you a short sketch of our meetings in the Black River church, Medina county, Ohio.

Brethren P. J. Brown and Henry Jacobs, of Congress, Ohio, came to us, by invitation, on the 14th of January, and commenced a series of meetings, and continued to the 20th, when brother Brown started for home. Brother Jacobs continued up to this date. Three had been received into the church, and on the 21st, one more was baptized, and on that evening when invitation was given, eleven more arose. Oh what rejoicing in the camp of the believers, to see Satan's ranks thinned and the believers strengthened by young volunteers. On the 22nd, these eleven were received into the church by baptism, making, in all, fifteen during these meetings. On the night of the 22nd was our last meeting. The house was filled to its utmost capacity, and the best of attention and order were given. The brethren preached the Gospel with power. Our prayers is, the Lord renew them abundantly.

Some of those received during these meetings, are quite young, but they are not too young to give their hearts to the Savior, and to flee the Satanic allurements.

On the evening of the 24th, brother Jacobs commenced meeting and closed on the night of the 27th. These meetings were held in a schoolroom in Friendsville. The Winbrenarians held meeting in the Reformed church at the same time, in the same place, but the people crowded into the school-room, while the Winebrenarians had scarcely any hearers. Six were baptized by brother Jacobs, and one made application. D. J. MYERS.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL give a short sketch of our meetings here in the Licking Creek church. Brother Buckalew, of Clifton Mill, Virginia, came to us on the 7th of December. Commenced a series of meetings, which lasted until the 11th. He preached nine sermons, holding forth the Word with power, and encouraging the church to press onward, and warning sinners to flee the wrath to come. May the Lord reward him for his labors of love. Three precious souls were made to feel the need of a Savior, and came out on the Lord's side and were buried in the rolling stream, and arose to walk in newness of life. Afterward two more.

On the 18th of January, brethren James R. Lane and W. L. Spanogle, of Hill Valley, Huntingdon, county, Penn., came and labored until the evening of the 22nd. On the morning of the 23nd, two were made willing to come and take passage on the old Ship of Zion. After preaching and the Gospel rules were laid before them, we repaired to a place where the ice was removed and baptism was administered. Hope that all these lambs may be nourished in a proper manner. May they become as a city set upon a hill, that others seeing their good works might glorify their Father which is in heaven, and be constrained to do His will. How precious it is for Brethren to dwell together; and often we were made to feel if not like, yet similar to a Peter of old "It was good to be there. W. R. TRUAX.

Dear Brethren:—

LAST September, myself and family were visiting the brethren and sisters and friends in Christian county, in the neighborhood where we had lived for fifteen years, and where, as I verily believe, I heard the the first Gospel sermon. It was preached by brother A. S. Leer and brother Henry Brubaker, many years ago. When we came here there was but one member except my wife. We now number eight members, and if we could have preaching regularly, we would soon have many more. When I was in Christian county, I had the pleasure of hearing brother A. S. Leer proclaim the truth of the Gospel in its purity. I requested him to visit us in our isolated condition, which he responded to on the 15th of Nov. last, in company with brother Daniel Vaniman and Jacob Whitehead. Had eleven discourses. The result of which was, four were added to the church by baptism, and one more applicant. The applicant was taken suddenly ill about the close of the meeting, but she is still strong in the faith, and wishes to be baptized when it is convenient. May the Lord help her to hold out faithful, and not put it off too long. We had a good meeting, and I think many were almost persuaded to come out on the Lord's side. JAMES F. DAVIS.

Dear Brethren:—

PERHAPS a little news from this part of Union county would be of some interest to you. The few brethren and sisters living here are still trying to serve our Redeemer as best they can under the circumstances. Our much beloved brethren M. Meyers and old father Sink gave us a monthly call until Winter set in, then we had no more preaching by brethren until the 15th or 16th of January brother Samuel Garber, of Decatur Co., Iowa, came to us and preached one week in the Methodist church, and it might be well to say that the best of order prevailed throughout the meeting. Our Platt friends showed the best respect to the elder. He gave all good advice, which if obeyed, will make our vicinity much better in the way of piety and true holiness. Though our Platt friends are noted for their Christian conduct, however plenty room for improvement. One Methodist friend remarked that if they could only have more such preaching, our community would be better off.

Sunday-School Convention.

INASMUCH as the Brethren of the Middle District of Indiana, deem it necessary for the general advancement of the Sunday-school cause, and in order to come to a more successful action and unanimity of sentiment, it is, therefore, proposed to hold a Convention in connection with the Missionary Convention, (which has been announced) at the Spring Creek church, Kosciusko Co., Ind., beginning at 2 o'clock P. M., April 21st, and continuing with an evening session. A programme will be published in due time.

It will be remembered that the Missionary Convention is to be held April 22nd, the day previous to District Meeting. Those coming by rail will stop at Coltamer, on Detroit, Eel River & Illinois R. R., or Pierceton, on Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago R. R., where they will be met with conveyances, by giving proper notice. A general invitation is given.

ACCORDING to promise, I have now visited the Owl Creek and Danville churches. Brother Calvert was to accompany me but sickness prevented. I then called on brother A. M. Dickey, who at once responded to the call, and drew the Gospel sword, and made deadly strokes at the enemy. Our meetings were very pleasant, and seemed to be enjoyed by almost all that attended them. The most of the brethren and sisters in these churches, seem to be very active in their Master's work. In the Owl Creek church there were five additions, and in the Danville there were twenty. So you can see, dear brethren and sisters, that the labors of these churches are not in vain in the Lord. We commenced the meeting Jan. 4th, and closed them on Jan. 28th. Now may the Lord bless and keep us all, is my prayer.

From Central Illinois.

HAVING been requested to come and preach a funeral for sister Himes' sister's child, and to labor with them a while; and after consulting with some of our Brethren here, we gave consent, to go as the Master has said, "Go preach my Gospel." So we started, accompanied by brother G. W. Dale. Reached the place of meeting Saturday evening the 18th. Had good order and attention. So we continued meeting Sunday and every night until Wednesday night. Interest continued to grow better, and after we had talked to the people, we gave an invitation, and three persons came out on the Lord's side, to go with the people of God. So we announced another meeting for the following night and the next day at brother John Fikes. After services we went to the waterside, where prayer was wont to be made; the brethren having cut the ice open, which was about fifteen inches thick, and were buried with Christ in baptism. May the good Lord bless them and enable them to hold out faithful to the end.

At night we went back again to give them a farewell discourse, which resulted in the best of order and attention. Many good impressions were made. We felt as though we could not leave them, feeling the value of their precious souls, and so near the kingdom. Hope the seed sown will be as bread cast upon the waters, to be gathered not many days hence.

Next day, at 10 A. M., preached the funeral of sister Susan Garrison's child; then took our leave for Woodford county, where the Brethren had a meeting in progress. Met with them in their meeting-house, where we were kindly received. The next day, went to meet with the Brethren in Pike Creek congregation. Met with our dear brethren, Menno Stauffer and Henry Kuntz, of Piatt county, Illinois, who were laboring with the Brethren for the Master. May God bless their labors, is our prayer. Staid with them until Saturday afternoon; then went to our social meeting, to meet with our dear Brethren at home. The next day attended regular meeting, and after services we started home.

Will say to to the brethren and sisters, that we met with in our travels, and especially those that live in Lacon, that they have our best thanks and well wishes for their kindness shown to us while with them. We arrived home Sunday evening the 26th. Found all well. K. HECKMAN.

Cornell, Ill., Jan. 27th, 1879.

From Pike Creek Church, Illinois.

WE have had meetings twice almost every day for over one week; brother Stauffer and Kuntz having volunteered to sow the good seed among us. It has taken root, indeed much more so than they are probably aware of; two were baptized, and others were only deterred through fear of the cold snow water. In justice to the Brethren, I beg leave to state, that without one single exception, all those who were fortunate enough to hear brother Stauffer speak, cannot find words proper, to express their satisfaction, and unbounded admiration, for his talent as a spiritual speaker; and let me add further, that your humble servant has seen the world in times gone by; has heard ever so many of the so much ranked eminent speakers, of almost every other denomination known; and during a residence of five years at Rome, while an officer in the French army, I have had occasion daily to listen to the sermons of the highest and most talented dignitaries of the Roman church, not excepting Pope Pius IX; but never, no, never before, have I heard words as beautiful, and arguments more convincing than those of our beloved brother Stauffer. Every syllable of which, the listener could trace from his lips to the very bottom of his heart. Many a time during his sermons, a desire arose within me, that I might be able to launch as I have in times past, the soldiers under my command, this plain servant of our Lord, against those modern theatrical performers of certain sects, whose high-toned, studied sentences are but calculated to confuse, instead of enlighten the mind of their hearers. Verily, verily, our Lord Jesus from over there, not from Rome, appoints his fisherman here below.

Brother Kuntz's remarks were short, convincing and to the point. He is also an excellent vocalist.

Once more, beloved Brethren, accept the most heartfelt thanks from your brethren and sisters here; and rest assured that we shall ever remember you, and the good time we enjoyed with you, while in our midst.

WISE.—In Dunkirk, Ohio, on the 5th inst., at the residence of his brother, Mr. George, son of elder Christian Wise, of Mansfield, Ohio. Funeral services in the U. B. church, by the writer, from Psalms 39: 4 to a large audience. S. T. BOSSERMAN.

WYSONG.—In Elkhart county, Ind., Feb. 4th, of membranous fever, Alvin, son of brother Daniel and Mary Wysong, aged 1 year, 9 months and 8 days. Funeral services by J. Auglmyer and the writer, from the words, "Weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and your children." J. H. MILLER.

SHONTS.—In the borders of Mill Creek church, Adams Co., Ill., brother Robert Shonts, aged 70 years, 11 months and 1 day.

Brother Robert was blind for about twenty-seven years, during which time he could not do any work, but had to be waited on as a child. He died in the hope of the Savior; and we trust he will come forth with eyes to behold the glories of a better world.

SHONTS.—In the same family, Jan. 1st, 1879, friend Winfield Shonts, aged 28 years, 10 months and 18 days.

He, like many others, put off the one thing needful until it was too late.

SHONTS.—Sister Polly Shonts, wife of brother Robert Shonts (deceased), was born May 30th, 1813, and died January 22nd, 1879, aged 65 years, 7 months and 23 days.

She was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, after which she expressed a desire to be absent from the body and present with the Lord. May the blessings of God rest upon the bereaved family who mourn the loss of their friends. H. W. STRICKLER.

BUCK.—In the bounds of the Big Grove church, Benton county, Iowa, November 24th, 1878, brother Thomas Buck, aged 88 years, 8 months and 16 days.

Brother Buck was born March 8th, 1790, in Bedford county, Pennsylvania. Was raised in and about Stoystown, Somerset county, Pa. Was married November 26th, 1816 to Catherine Williams. She died in Stark county, Ohio, March 27th, 1862. About two years after he was married again to sister Elizabeth Wintrode. One year after he was received into the church, and was a consistent member till his last. On the 3rd of June, 1877, he was struck with palsy, that he could not move his left arm and leg, and finally could move nothing but his right hand and head. In the meantime he called for the elders, and was anointed in the name of the Lord.

WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT.

BY F. P. LEHR.

Dear Brethren:

I CANNOT withhold from you the emotion of my heart produced by my late sojourn among you in Northern Ill., not only because of the general good will and kindness shown me far beyond my deserving, but much more because of the zeal of the Lord—the cause of suffering humanity, with which every heart seemed to be filled, and the readiness to do and to act, as well as to submit to one another in love. Oh! that all our beloved Fraternity could realize the bliss enjoyed by those who live not for themselves only, but for him who lived and died for a rebellious race, and left a pattern to be imitated by all that are born anew by a spiritual birth. Yes, if it were only possible that all such could see and understand that all they are and have, is the Lord's, whether they be intellectual or temporal gifts, and that all the members of that mystical body—the church of Jesus Christ—are in duty bound to serve one another, even as the members of our natural body, without reluctance, serve each other. There is no question asked if the foot is to be clothed, the hand will readily do it. This seemed to be so largely exhibited among you that it cheered me up and gave me new impulse to devote all remaining powers within me to the cause of my Master.

My heart was often thrilled with joyful emotions in looking over the attentive congregations composed of so many young and bright looking children, who had already submitted themselves under the banner of King Emmanuel, despising the gay follies of a wicked and perverse world. I wish to say to them in particular, be encouraged, be firm, be steadfast, be immovable; you are doing a great—a noble work; your meek and modest appearance speaks volumes in favor of a self-denying Savior. It is easy preaching and talking about humility to a mixed congregation when the samples of humility are before the eyes. Let me repeat the words of encouragement, my dear young brethren and sisters: if you stand firm and true, and walk consistent with your profession, you will not only gain to yourselves the esteem and love of all the children of God, but also that of the children of the world, and thereby create an influence in favor of the much despised religion of Jesus Christ. If your daily walk and conduct is in harmony, then you are an epistle known and read by all around you.

Now while I addressed myself particularly to the members of Illinois, I wish whatever encouragement is given them may be appropriated to every one deserving in all our wide-spread Fraternity. Wherever true merit is lacking, I pray you, my brethren and sisters in the Lord, resolve with me to double our diligence, and devote more of our time, if possible, more of our means, which God has blessed us with, to the alleviation of human misery and depravity.

"Can we whose souls are lighted,
By wisdom from on high?
Can we, to men benighted,
The Lamp of light deny?

Salvation, O salvation!
The joyful sound proclaim,
Till earth's remotest nation
Has learned the Messiah's name."

Now a word to the old and feeble—those who have borne the ark of the Lord along: be of good cheer, entrust the work of the Lord into the hands of those whom the Lord has raised by our side to occupy when we are gone; put into their hearts the trust which he had entrusted into our hands. We all have made many blunders. The Lord has borne with us, therefore let us bear with our young brethren also.

And ye young, in the prime of manhood, don't loite by the way; go forward while the Macedonian call is made. And ye Joshuas and Calebs, lead the host along. Blow the trumpet loud and long.

A FEW PROVERBS.

BITTER go round than fall in the ditch.
Better go alone than go in bad company.
Be slow to promise, but quick to perform.
Bitter go to bed supperless than to get up in debt.
Cut your coat according to the cloth.
Catch the hare before you sell his skin.
Charity begins at home, but does not end there.
Do not rip up old sores.
Doing nothing, is doing ill.
Diligence commands success.
Debt is the worst kind of poverty.
Dependence is a poor trade to follow.
Deeds are fruits; works are but leaves.
Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.
Every couple is not a pair.
Everything is good in its season.
Everybody's business is nobody's business.
False friends are worse than open enemies.
Fortune knocks once at least at every man's door.
Fire and water are good servants, but bad masters.
Great barkers are not biters.
Great gain and little pain makes a man weary.
Give a rogue rope enough and he will hang himself.—Sel.

FAITH.

BY M. MYERS.

Now, faith, the substance is of gain,
We hope beyond this life t'obtain:
The witness, though unseen we know,
That Christ doth dwell with us below.

By faith the world and all was made,
And heaven with beauties overlaid;
By faith the saints of old did walk
With God, and of his truth did talk.

By faith we quit our sin and shame,
And own our Savior's gracious name;
By faith we live and praise our God,
And pass beneath the chastening rod.

By faith we strive to walk the way
That leads from darkness unto day:
By faith the way is clear and bright
And lit with rays of blissful light.

By faith we seek a home above,
And dwell below in Jesus love;
By faith his Word we do obey,
And travel in the narrow way.

By faith we find the mercy seat,
And ever sit at Jesus' feet;
By faith we keep the word he spoke,
And gladly bear his easy yoke.

And now more faithful should we prove,
While dwelling in this world below;
And then a crown of life he'll give,
And take us home with him to live.

A WARNING AND INVITATION.

BY W. H. MILLER.

THOUGH I am young in years, and in the service of my blessed Master, yet I feel it my duty to give you, my dear unconverted friends, a little advice and warning. Every true man and woman know that they have a soul to save, or to be forever lost. I hope that all who read this article, are Bible readers.

There lived about 1800 years ago a man whose name is above every name, and that was Jesus. When everything was ruined and undone by reason of sin and folly, God sent this man, Jesus, down into this lower world of sorrow to suffer and die, that you and I might have everlasting life. He left the shining courts of heaven, where all is love, joy and peace to be the sacrifice for our salvation. He spent his time in teaching the people the way to eternal glory. He was rejected, betrayed and delivered into the hands of wicked men, a crown of thorns was put on his head; he was led away to Golgotha, was nailed to the rugged Cross, expanded between heaven and earth and suffered the ignominious death upon the Cross; was buried and after three days was raised again from the dead, and after forty days was received up into glory, and is now seated at the right hand of God, the Father, there interceding for you and for me, that we may be spared a little longer and return to the great Redeemer.

"To-day, if you hear his voice, harden not your hearts." I have no doubt in my mind but that you have heard that still, small voice whispering, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." A precious rest—glory to God for such a rest. Come, sinner, and enjoy that rest; it is prepared for you by that same Jesus who died for your sins. Why will you not come when he has done so much for you? To-day is the day of salvation; come, now, let us reason together.

Suppose that great and notable day of the Lord should come while you are engaged in all revellings and abominable sports of the wicked, what do you think your condition would be? Do you not think it would be critical? I think you would call for the rocks and mountains to fall on you and hide you from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the Lamb forever. There will be a trying time for you if you are not prepared to meet God. You will have to be cast into outer darkness, where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth, where Satan and the false prophets are. That will be a sorrowful separation. Parents will be separated from their children; brother from sister; wife from husband. Some will be thrust out into darkness, and others will go away into life everlasting.

The apostle John says, "He that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." All those who can distinguish good from evil, know what it is to do good. If you know how to do good, why not do it? It will be no disgrace. That same Jesus that we have been talking about, says, "He that is ashamed of me, and of my words of him will my Father also be ashamed."

"O turn ye, O turn ye, for why will ye die,
When God in great mercy is coming so nigh?"

Now I entreat you, as one that wishes your soul's well, to come to the Lord Jesus Christ; embrace the truth, hold to the truth and stand firm in it. Do not put it off till to-morrow, or next day, or some other time in the future, but come now. "The spirit and the bride say, come;" Christ says, come; the church says, come; and he that is athirst let him come and drink of the water of life freely. Come and go along with us, and hand in hand, we will go Zionward, "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." We will go onward and upward to the city of the New Jerusalem. There is plenty of room to spare; there are thousands and multiplied thousands of the heavenly hosts praising God, but there is room for thousands more. "There is more rejoicing over one sinner that repenteth, than over ninety-nine just persons that need no repentance." Come to Jesus just now. Would to God that every one would accept of Jesus Christ. Your time may not be long on earth"—you may be called away in a moment of time. We do not know when, but make yourself a soldier in the army of the Lord. "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

Morrisonville, Ill.

A POPE.

FROM the following it would seem that it is not a very nice thing to be a pope after all:

"A German correspondent says that the pope is an object of universal pity at Rome; that he weeps piteously and has aged much; that he frequently packs up to go to Perugia, but at the last moment changes his mind; that he is in deadly fear of poison, and only eats food brought to him by his brother, making his own coffee, and keeping his wine under lock and key. Two attempts, the correspondent says, have already been made to poison him. When he took ill after drinking a glass of wormwood, some of the cardinals tried to dissuade his brother from bringing any other than the Vatican doctors; but he called an outside physician, who administered a powerful antidote.

BROTHER David Wolfe, of the Yellow Creek church, Marshall county, Ind., says: "We had a series of meetings in January last, resulting in eighteen additions by baptism, and others who have made up their minds to be baptized. Those who conducted the meetings were J. H. Swihart, and David Swihart, his brother, from Wabash county, Ind., with the brethren here."

LONGFELLOW aptly says: "The little I have seen of the world teaches me to look upon the errors of others in sorrow, not in anger. When I take the history of one poor heart that has sinned and suffered, and represent to myself the struggles and temptations it has passed through, the brief pulsations of joy, the feverish inquietude of hope and fear, the pressure of want, the desertion of friends, I would fain leave the erring soul of my fellow-man with Him from whose hand it came."

Prayer is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God, and a scourge to Satan.

WHAT CHRIST TAUGHT.

BY W. E. MCWILLIAMS.

REPENT, believe, and be baptized,
All my commands obey.
Is what Christ taught his people here,
Before he went away.

If words have any meaning, this
Is what the Scriptures teach;
But there are those, who in this day,
A different doctrine preach.

They preach that faith, and faith alone,
Is all that is essential:
Have faith and then you are assured,
Your heart is penitential.

Obedience then is not required;
Oh, how they do dissemble!
For we are told the devils, do
Also believe and tremble.

Tremble, but why, if they believe?
Because we find it given,
The Lord's commands they disobeyed,
While they were yet in heaven.

Angels they were, in heaven once,
But disobedient grew;
God spared them not, but cast them down,
Into hell's darkness threw.

If angels, they who dwelt with God,
Were from his presence driven,
For not obeying the commands,
That unto them were given.

How can his servants here on earth,
Expect to enter there,
If Christ's commands they fail to keep
He gave to them while here?

The advocates of "faith alone,"
Perchance too late will learn,
Faith with good works they must possess,
The heavenly crown to earn.

Dear friends, if you a home would gain
With Christ beyond the sky,
All his commands you should obey,
As far as in you lie.

For we are on probation here,
To us a Law is given,
By Christ, to guide us in the way,
That leads from earth to heaven.

But if we fail this Law to keep,
And from its teachings stray;
Christ will not claim us as his own,
In that great judgment day.

Oh, may we be of those who shall,
The welcome plaudit hear,
"Well done thou faithful servant, come,
With me my kingdom share."

You have proved faithful in this life,
My statutes did obey;
Into the joy now of thy Lord,
Enter you now this day.

CHRISTOPHER SOWER.

BY ABRAM H. CASSEL.

Dear Editors:

IN No. 3, page 7 of the BRETHREN AT WORK, I noticed a short sketch of Christopher Sower, which is but another instance of somebody's attempt to write what he did not know. I will therefore try to rectify the errors of it, and perhaps add a few particulars to it.

1. Christopher Sower was not born in Hesse Darmstadt as the author asserts; for he says in his manuscript journal, (which I have) that he was born on the 26th of September, 1721, in Laasphe, a small town six miles from Marpurg in the Province Witgenstein, in the north of Prussia, and emigrated with his father in the Autumn of 1724, instead of 1726.

2. He never settled in Philadelphia, either as printer and book-seller, or private citizen, for at that early day, very few if any, Germans settled in Philadelphia, as it was considered the "English's town." But about the same time that Wm. Penn founded the city of Brotherly Love, Daniel Francis Pastorious founded Germantown, or the "German's town," as it was then called, about six miles North west from the city where most of the Germans settled as they landed. And there also the little band of Brethren settled, who came over five years before, in 1719. And there Christopher Sower also settled on his arrival in America, and lived there till in the Spring of 1726, he says they moved to Lancaster Co., Pa., and settled on what was then called the Muhlbach or (Mill Creek) where they lived till sometime in April 1731. He says they moved back again to Germantown and bought a six acre town lot of Mr. G. A. Gruber (the writer has the original title of it), there he built for himself an unusually large, fine house for that time. His object in building it so large, was to accommodate the Brethren with a place to hold their meetings, as they had no church house then, and the most of their dwelling houses were too small to have meetings in; for they being, with a few exceptions, all poor Here they lived, and here both of the old people died, and were buried in a corner of their lot, as they had no graveyard at that time. The mother died in December 1752, and the Father in September 1758. And as Christopher junior was the only child, he inherited everything they had, and continued the various trades and occupations just as the old man had left them, until the Revolution broke out. When Germantown became so disturbed that for the sake of peace and safety, he took refuge in Philadelphia where he staid from the 9th of October 1777, till the 23rd of May 1778, he came back, and the next night he was taken prisoner and marched bareheaded and barefooted towards Valley Forge. But the night being so dark that they could not get along, so they crept into a farmer's barn till next morning, and arrived at the camp on the 26th. Was a prisoner there till the 29th when General Washington ordered his release, and General Gillespie gave him a permit or pass to go to his brethren in Methatchy, but not to Germantown as he would still be unsafe there. So he did not return home till the 23rd of June, and on the 28th he was warned out of his own house by lawless marauders who began to sell his goods.

He then took refuge with his father-in-law, Brother Henry Sharpneck, where he staid till the 7th of April 1780, he moved to Methatchy with three of his children to Brother Conrad Stem's, where he also died on the 26th of August 1784, and not in Philadelphia, as erroneously asserted. He is also buried there in the old Mennonite graveyard. The following Epitaph, said to be composed by himself, is on his tombstone:

"Death, thou hast conquered me,
'Twas by thy dart I was slain.
But Christ will conquer thee,
And I shall rise again."

3. It is asserted that he was a printer and book-seller before he came to this country, and had settled as such in Philadelphia. But the fact is, he never was, either a printer or book-seller; but a clock and mathematical instrument maker, which he followed until about 1735 or 36. Then the little printing press which the Brethren had in the old Country, was sent after them to Germantown, and as nobody seemed to have any room for it, Christopher Sower took it in custody. And as he was a natural genius, he experimented in the art of setting up type, in which he soon succeeded so well, that he printed a number of small hymns and other religious broadsides, which he distributed gratuitously.

While there was no German printing in America, there was such a lack for school books and other printing that necessity prevailed on him to open a little printing office in a part of his dwelling, which he did in the Summer of 1738, and printed, beside other matter, a German A B C book, and an almanac for 1739, the first in America.

The following year he printed a neat hymn book for the Fraternity at Ephrata, of 818 pages. But as soon as the office was established, he was earnestly solicited to print a newspaper, but he refused on the plea that the press had been procured by the Brethren for the glory of God, and he would therefore not profane it by publishing a newspaper. But he changed his mind and agreed to publish a paper about four times in a year. The first number of which was issued on the 20th of August 1739, under the title of "The Pennsylvania Historigrapher" or Reporter of events in the kingdom of nature and of the church. It was so well patronized that he soon issued it monthly, then semi-monthly, then weekly, and in size more than twice as large.

From the above, it is seen that the assertion of printing a magazine in 1735, is also an error, as the press had not yet arrived, and did not attempt printing a magazine until 1764, he published one under the title of "Das Geisthiche Magazine." i. e., The Spiritual Magazine, or Things New and Old from the treasure of the scribes instructed unto the kingdom of heaven. And instead of printing the second Bible as asserted, he did actually print the first ever attempted in any European language; and considering the circumstances under which it was brought forth, it may well be regarded as the work of Providence, as well as a monument to his ingenuity. For let it be considered that the German Colonies were yet almost in their infancy, and that there was no paper-mill, no type foundry, and no printer's ink manufactory in America; and himself no practical printer. But he saw the great necessity of Bibles, and the untold difficulty of getting them from abroad; as there were at that time no facilities for importing them. The few that were imported had to come by way of England, where the boxes containing them were weighed, and sixpence per pound duty was charged. Besides, at least one hundred per cent to the Captain or newlander as commission for their transport, consignment, etc., which brought them to a price that poor people could not afford. Consequently the Bible Society of Halle, founded by Carl Hildebrandt a noble Baron of Costein, was appealed to; who very generously favored our colonies with a number of copies. So did also that of Budingen. But the supply was far short of the demand, which led him to consider the propriety of printing an edition of it himself. He communicated his intention to a few of his friends in Germany, who encouraged him in the hope that with God's help he might succeed. Upon which he issued a circular with a specimen page on the back of it and commenced making preparations. A Mr. Fleckenstein of Germantown assisted him in making the matrees to cast the type. The old anvil upon which they were forged, is still preserved. But while thus engaged, a Mr. Henrich Ehenfried Luther,—who was connected with a type foundry in Frankfort on the Main kindly presented him with a small font of type for the purpose. Sower regarded this as providential and was so much encouraged by it that he immediately commenced on it with an edition of one thousand copies, the last form of which was struck off in Agust 1743, a large quarto of 1284 pages.

Much more might be said about this, and the subsequent editions of it, that no doubt would be interesting to some of your readers. And also about his cast iron stoves, his philanthropy and other matters referred to in said article. But as this is already a great deal longer than intended, and the latter not being so suitable for a religious journal; I will close by asking the readers' patience with what I have written. But as the field is so large, it would have been easier to write a volume than to condense it in a nut shell.

EVANGELIZING THE CITIES.

BY D. C. MOOMAW.

IT should be gratifying to every lover of apostolical religion, embellished with apostolical usages, to see that the embryo proposition to include the cities in our work, of evangelism soon meets with such practical and substantial responses as are indicated in No. 4, of the current volume of the BRETHREN AT WORK. This is as it should be. When we consider the fact that the morals and tastes and religion of a country, are powerfully influenced by adjoining cities, we have the key to the fact that the evangelizing of the cities was the most prominent feature in the apostolic system of missions.

An attentive review of the labors of the primitive missionaries, shows that the cities were the centres of their operations, and that the rural districts received their knowledge of the new religion from the cities.

Our church has reversed the programme, hence the enquiries are frequently propounded us. "Why do you not preach in the towns and cities?" The fact is, to our mortification, we write it, we have culpably neglected them, and if there should be anything in the future like "rising in judgment to condemn us," we may have some difficulties of a serious nature to adjust in the interminable future.

As the work has been inaugurated, it remains for us to see that it is executed in the most effective style.

1. The operations of the apostolical missionaries should be studied and copied as models, with those variations and modifications that will correspond with the variations and mutations of the times and customs. The genius of the Gospel is pliant, with reference to harmless usuages, and habits, but rigid with respect to ordinances and commandments.

It would have been another impossibility, and also an absurdity for the apostles and primitive Christians to have perpetuated the incidental or accidental usuages of that age.

Had that been essential to the purity of the faith, we would to-day, be an exact copy of the Asiatic churches in dress, manners, habits, occupations, etc. I do not think the apostles embarrassed the progress of the new religion by an interminable and uncompromising controversy concerning things that were not essentially sinful, or that would not affect the salvation of souls.

That the apostle Paul recognized the importance of adopting his acts to harmless circumstances, is evident from his circumcision of Timothy to conciliate the Jews, and his withstanding Peter, who withdrew from the Gentile Christians for the same purpose when he (Peter) should not have done it. A careful perusal of the fourteenth chapter of Romans will show how Christians should conduct themselves toward each other. Had we the doctrines of that chapter ingrained into our hearts, I verily believe nine-tenths of the troubles that afflict our own congregations would never escape the brain of Satan.

2. There should be no fears of failure in the ultimate success of the work, either as to the building up of churches in the cities, or the support of the workers. I do not think the first missionaries expended large sums in their operations. They did not disdain to work with their own hands, for their own support, when they had the opportunity to do it, neither should our missionaries. Behold St. Paul assisting Aquilla, the banished Roman to fill a large contract for tents, at a reasonable compensation.

Now how would that suit a modern missionary? I presume our missionaries would not disdain to copy the course of that eminent apostle under similar circumstances, but a proper discharge of the duties incumbent on them would have little leisure for secular work. As to the funds necessary for the work, it occurs to me the church ought surely comprehend the responsibility of contributing promptly to it.

I think I do not over-estimate the financial status of the brethren when I compute the number of brethren whose annual income is $500 and upward, at 2,000; and of that number, do not 700 realize an income of from $1,000 to $5,000 annually?

If there are two thousand members with an income of $500, are there not 100 (one twentieth) who would contribute one fiftieth (the Jews used to consecrate one-tenth to the Lord), to the conversion of the cities? If we do not, remember the following propheey: Wickedness will continue to increase in proportion to the increase of population as two is to one, that is, as the population is doubled, sin will be quadrupled, and the money we withhold from the Lord's work will be used by Satan to corrupt the church and to destroy the souls of our children. The ministers who should either be in the vineyard themselves or working up the cause and interests of missions in their own congregations, will fritter the precious moments away, either biting and devouring one another, or selling their own souls and the souls of their fellow-members for the poor "pottage" of men's flatteries and official advaneements, etc.

And the seqnel of such a state of affairs will be, an outpouring of divine vengeance on our country, in pestilence or war or famine. Woe be unto us then when God begins to make inquisition for sin.

Let the names and vouchers continue to pour into the office of the BRETHREN AT WORK until one hundred are on the Lord's register, and then we will proceed to elect two of the Lord's messengers and send them out into the whited harvest field, to gather the ripened sheaves. If it would not be premature I would suggest that brethren should be chosen who are unencumbered by large families, and who have been found valiant in defence of our doctrine. Could we transfer Brother J. W. Stein to that field? The interests of Christ's kingdom could be safely entrusted to his hands. Brother A. Hutchinson of Mo., has been found faithful. What do you think of the following as the plan of election? Let each contributor signify his or her choice in a private vote addressed to Brother J. H. Moore, and the two brethren receiving the highest number of votes be declared elected, and if either could not accept, then let the next highest take his place, etc.

Let a brother at some central point, say Brother Moore, of Lanark, Ill., be chosen for treasurer and disburser and secretary, and let the prayers of the churches serve as canvassing agents to keep the treasury supplied.

Now brethren, don't fight against this work, lest you be found fighting against the Lord, and his mighty millstone fall on you and mash you to powder. If it be not of the Lord, it will fail. Just wait and see, in the meantime send along your X and your prayers, and if only one soul is converted, you have a one hundredth share therein, the value of which will be estimated and paid at the office of the Secretary of the treasury in the kingdom of God, when your souls is summoned up there to enter into that rest prepared for his people.

Let us hear what the brethren have to say. We don't want much discussion. The command is, "Go into the vineyard and work," not discuss.

THE CEMETERY.

BY ELIZABETH TRUAX.

I'VE been in sight of the city here,
I mean the place of rest,
Where many mouldering millions lie,
Returning into dust.

But at the resurrection day,
The first one and the best,
Who know which ones will then arise.
And be forever blest.

Who knows who will lie silent still,
Till the last trump shall sound:
No mortal here, but God can know,
And no one under ground.

For God has said that silence reigns,
In that last resting-place,
Until they meet their Savior here,
And see him face to face.

Oh, then how we poor mortals here
On earth should spend our breath,
So we vith Jesus may arise,
And 'scape the second death.

God only knows the day and hour,
Whn all must come to die;
So hewill give us all our dues,
In hll or in the sky.

HOV I REFUSED THE OATH.

BY H. W. LANDES.

"But bove all things, my brethren, swear not." Jaes 5: 12.

WHEN the apostles said this, they were more of one mind than we are no'. There was then one Lord, one fau, one baptism, and it made a vast differere what believers practiced. By their ractice they were distinguished from te world. They then believed what ames said, "swear not;" and Jamesys just what the Master had said soetime before, that they should not swar by heaven, not by the earth, not byhe head. Matt 5: 33. It is therefe right not to swear, which is to be pub an oath, or cause to take an oath, d James says, "neither by any other th." But to affirm is right, to assert ositively, or to tell with confidence? aul wants Titus to affirm some thingonstantly. It is also said that Paul firmed that Jesus was alive. Rhodwas sure that it was Peter who knock at the door, therefore she constantl affirmed that it was even so.

Th are many good-meaning professonow who can see no difference in thi They even say that they believe ; same that we do, only they have nother form of doing it—"It does ; make so much difference what we dwhat we believe. This outer worknot the necessary work."

A few years ago some school bonds were forged on some school districts in this State. The suit came off a few weeks ago, when I was summoned several hundred miles from home as a witness for the State. When many witnesses had given their testimony before me, one by one, they would march toward the witness-stand, lift up their hands, and say after the one who qualifies them, "so help me God." When I was called, I came forward and approached the clerk and said that I would affirm. He was so bothered that he hardly knew the affirmation. Then he lifted up his hand and requested me to do so too, which, of course I refused, and answered him, "yea, yea, instead of" so help me God." After I got through, I was asked, why I did not take an oath, I answered, that the Master said we should not, and so also did the apostle James. The answer was, "yes that is right, I believe the same as you do, only I believe in my form which our church believes in, that is the church of the United Brethren." We had quite an interesting talk, when another made this remark, "well, what would you do if that affirming was also against your belief?" I answered that to affirm was not against the Scriptures, and therefore I could comply with it. Now if this practice don't make a distinction, why was I asked, afterward, the reason that I would not take an oath? The fact is, the one that swears is known; the one that swears not is also known. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Brethren, swear not, and the Judge of the quick and the dead will reward us according to that which we have done.

NATURE AND REVELATION.

BY M. C. MILLER.

WE talk of born poets, which is all right. But sometimes we are inclined to talk of born Christians and born ministers. Is this right? When I hear a man preach a good sermon, I always think he has been a worker, and not only a worker, but that he is, to a greater or less degree, an inspired man. A man may speak fluently, he may speak learnedly, but he cannot speak with that power, or God cannot speak through him, unless he is a man in whom the Holy Ghost abides. Ministers must be born of the Holy Ghost if they would instruct their listners in the right way. It is God's work and not man's. A man may be well informed, he may be considered a wise man by the world, yet he must count it all as nothing in comparison with Christ. Again, a man may know but little, he may be considered ignoraot, yet be very wise, be very learned.

His education may have been received from that great Teacher. "Verily, verily I say unto you, he that believeth on me the works that I do, shall he do also." John 14: 12. To be born a Christian, or be a natural speaker, I think is a wrong idea. All have to become believers, to be Christians, and no matter how easy it may be for some to speak they have necessarily got to learn what to say and how to say it. Some have more talents than others, but then more will be required of them. So there is no excuse for any.

Sometimes the church calls a brother to the work of the ministry, who thinks he has no talent for serving in this direction. He never should think so; never. He may have no taste for it, but if we turn to the Old Testament, we will find, sometimes the prophets had no taste for speaking either. Sometimes they did not wish to go when they were called upon to go and preach to the people. Perhaps Christ would rather not have come into this world and suffered persecution and death; but he nobly said to his Father, "not my will, but thine be done." Then if we wish to be Christians, we must work the works of Christ. Please read the adventure of Jonah. He was fleeing from the presence of the Lord. He did not wish to go where he was sent, but after all his delay, see with what success his labors were blessed; yet it seems even with that, he was not pleased. Success could not lift him up. He was a true man—a true prophet. He honestly told the shipmen, that he was fleeing from the Lord, and also that because of him the storm was upon the waters, and he told them to throw him out into the sea, and he was three days and three nights in deep water, because he tried to run away from duty. The success of Jonah may teach us a good lesson. He did, simply what he was told to do. His sermon was a very short and easy one. No high education was required to tell the tidings. Any one with the right spirit could have done the same work, he had been sent to do. His tidings were ready, and he went and delivered them, with the success that was to be his.

BETTER BEEN BURIED.

THE well-known anti-tobacco man, George Trask, tells the following of himself:

"About fifteen years ago we gave a lecture in which we aimed to show that, as the common use of tobacco takes away desire for food, blood, muscle, health and strength, it must, without fail, shorten life, and if so, the habit would at last lead to the person killing himself, hence a breaking of the command of God, 'Thou shalt not kill.'

"As we closed, the preacher rose and said: 'I believe the argument in this lecture is final; I believe thousands who use tobacco are poisoned to death and cut short their lives. But I have a hard case to solve, and I wish Mr. Trask to solve it. I know a man within ten miles of this place who smoked his pipe to the day of his death; and he lived to be 104 years of age.'

"We confess we were puzzled. The question was to the point, and the people laughed at our expense. At last we hit upon the Socratic style of reasoning, and questions helped us out of the trouble. 'Sir,' I asked, 'are you sure the old man lived and smoked till he was 104?' 'Yes,' he replied. 'How did he look?' 'He looked like an Egyptian mummy.' 'Had he moral feelings?' 'O no; he seemed to have no sense of God or religion whatever.' 'Did he manifest any public spirit? Did he like good schools, good roads, good order and the like?' 'O no; no more than a mud turtle or oyster.' 'Had he a family?' 'Yes, a large one and a mean one—altogether too large.' 'Did he love his family?' 'No, I think not.' 'Did he hate his family?' 'No, I think not.' All in a word—did he love anybody or hate anybody, dead or alive, in this world or any world? 'No, I think not.' Well, well, brother, the conclusion of the whole matter is simply this,—the old man was dead fifty years ago, only you did not bury him"—Selected.

He that loses his conscience has nothing left worth keeping.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

I. H. MOORE, } EDITORS AND
M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1 50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent, which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly address ed, will be at our risk. When sending drafts, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1 00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - FEBRUARY 27, 1879.

BROTHER R. H. Miller informs us that he is improving slowly, but is not able to do much yet.

IF Simon Harshman will forward his address, we will cheerfully forward his paper. We cannot send the paper unless we know the parties' address.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson's address is changed from Perrin, Clinton county, Mo., to Norborne, Carroll county, same State. His correspondents will please take notice.

FROM the Primitive Christian we learn that Brother J. P. Hetzel has resigned his charge of the church at Philadelphia, Pa. It is not said where he purposes to locate.

BROTHER Allen Boyer, of Leon, Ill., says: "We have had six weeks' meetings in the Waddam's Grove Church this Winter, principally conducted by the home ministers; the interest was good all through."

THE unsolicited article from Brother R. H. Miller, published in this issue, is highly appreciated by us. It is timely, and to the point. He shows the matter up in its true light.

THE Maple Grove colony, locating in Kansas, is meeting with good success, as about 75 church members have already signified their intentions to take up claims and become members of the colony. This is an excellent way of establishing healthy congregations in the West.

FROM D. C. Renner we learn that Brethren Krider and Cotterman lately held a series of meetings in the Bear Creek church, Indiana. None were added during the meeting. The brother also states that they are much in need of more help in the ministry, and desires ministering brethren to call and help them.

FROM S. L. Showalter, of the Station Church, Green county, Pa., we have the following: "We have recently closed a series of meetings, which commenced the fourth day of January, and closed the nineteenth, which resulted in eight accessions to the church, four by baptism and four reclaimed; and we think deep impressions were made on others who are probably counting the cost. The preaching was done by our home ministers, Adam Wise, James A. Murray, C. J. Showalter and Henry Wise. Meetings well attended and order good."

BROTHER Abram H. Cassel's article about Christopher Sower, in this issue, is interesting and well worth preserving. We invite Brother Cassel to write again. Our readers would be pleased to hear from him quite frequently, and as the brother is getting old, will not likely be here much longer. He has collected a vast amount of matter that would be valuable to our readers, and we suggest that he make an effort to get as much of it as possible before the public, that it may be preserved after he has gone to his long home.

ON another page, Brother D. C. Moomaw makes a few suggestions regarding missionary work in cities. While the brethren are sending in their names, and offering suggestions we will give the matter special attention, and in course of time may have some remarks to offer about the managing department of the project. Every step taken should be with care, that the glory of God and the salvation of sinners may be kept in view. Nothing should be done out of vain glory or for self-interest. Great care should be taken to respect the rights of others of the same body. The distinctive features of our people must be adhered to in the work, for towns are the very places where they are so much needed. Brethren and sisters, pray for the success of the missionary work.

BROTHER Silas Hoover, who has been laboring for some time among the Brethren in Ohio, has returned to his home in Somerset county, Pa. Hope he may soon be prepared to enter the field again, for there is much need of live, energetic preaching.

THE "DEACON'S" MISTAKE.

THROUGH the kindness of a brother, who lives in Ohio, we are in receipt of a copy of the January number of The Deacon, containing the objectional article referred to a few weeks ago. Referring to the BRETHREN AT WORK it says:

"One of our weekly papers now has a subscription list of over ten thousand names, we are told, the net profits on which makes a yearly income of clear profit of full four thousand dollars."

In reply to the above we state: It is self-evident that we know more about the business and condition of this office than any body else, and therefore what we say ought to be regarded as correct beyond doubt.

Regarding our circulation, it is likely that the BRETHREN AT WORK has as large a subscription list as any paper in the Brotherhood, but it is not ten thousand, though we hope it soon will be.

The assertion about our net profits being yearly full four thousand dollars is false from beginning to end. Our income is not half that amount. We think that we are doing reasonably well in business, but to say that we are making "lots of money" is incorrect. Brethren should not publish things they know nothing about, and thus set us in a false light before the Brotherhood. As the Vindicator copied a part of said article from the Deacon, and in substance endorsed what was said, we respectfully suggest to the editors of both of these papers the propriety of taking back what they have said about the BRETHREN AT WORK as referred to above, on the ground that we deny it being true.

As to the circulation and profits of other papers, or the profits arising from the lawful business in which any brother is engaged, we are not concerned, are not prying into, for we have all we can do to attend to our own business, and the calling of the Lord. And more: we have neither time nor disposition to look after and publish the private affairs of other men, nor to be "busy bodies in other men's matters." 1 Pet. 4: 5. Our mission is, to "sound out" the Word of the Lord, and to be about our Master's business. This is quite enough for the saints of God.

The following from our book-keeper and mailing clerk is respectfully submitted to our readers:

OFFICE BRETHREN AT WORK, }
LANARK, ILL., FEB. 21, 1879. }

To Whom it May Concern:—

This is to certify that the statements of the Deacon relative to the circulation and the proceeds of the BRETHREN AT WORK, are false. Having charge of the business of the office, I know the exact amount received and paid out, and the net proceeds lack very much of being $4,000. S. J. HARRISON, Clerk.

OFFICE BRETHREN AT WORK, }
LANARK, ILL., FEB. 21, 1879. }

Having been in the employ of brethren Moore & Eshelman as mailing clerk since April 1st, 1878, I hereby certify that at no one time have ten thousand copies of the BRETHREN AT WORK been mailed. However, the paper being a good and truthful evangelist, I would have no regrets were the list ten times ten thousand.

S. M. ESHELMAN, Mailing Clerk.

THE OLD ORDER.

NUMBER IX.

The Church of God.

THE church of God is composed of members. These members, both male and female, are heirs of God — joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ. They all come to the Lord in the same way. All are baptized into Christ. One did not repent into Christ, another believe into Christ, while a third was baptized into Christ, but each was baptized into the "one body," put on Christ according to the prescribed Rules. The privileges, honors and enjoyments belong to every citizen of Christ's kingdom. As a body, they are called "the elect of God;" "children of God;" "chosen generation;" "pillar and ground of the truth;" "peculiar people;" "holy nation;" "temple of the Holy Spirit;" "house of God;" "family of God." If one member is a child of God, another is no less so. If the "one body" is a "peculiar people," then each member in that body is peculiar. The rights of one member are not superior to the rights of another. There is no "high and low" in the family of God. The right arm is no more of an arm than the left arm. The left hand is no more than a hand. The rights and privileges of the left hand are not superior to those of the right hand. Both draw nourishment from the same source—both are alike honored. The eyes are not troubled and annoyed because the ears are in the same head. Neither are they sad, sorrowful, envious, or spiteful because they are not the feet.

"Well, since all are members of the 'one body,' there must be one set of Rules for their government; otherwise there would be confusion and discord." Very true; and since this "one body," this "holy nation" is to continue through all ages until Christ comes again, the "one Lord" gave them a set of Rules that are perfect, complete, powerful, as their law in faith and practice. They were made for the government of His people in Asia, Africa, Europe, America and the Islands. "In every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." Acts 10: 35.

Climate has no effect on the Rules. Age cannot change them; neither can sex, race or color change them one whit. Not a part of them were designed for an old man, and a part for a young man; the whole of them were designed for man, whether old or young. Not a part were set forth for Africa and another part for America. The Chinese who submit to these Rules in their native land are just as much the "children of God" as the men who were born and raised in Kansas and who obey the Divine Rules. Their being born in Kansas does not make them children of God, nor give them superior privileges, rights and enjoyments in the "house of God." These Rules have the same governing power over a Dane as over a Frenchman. The winters of Minnesota and the sand storms of Africa have no effect on these perfect Rules. Heat, cold, rain, snow, sunshine and darkness cannot overthrow them. Strife, envies, loves, hates, judgments, walks and talks cannot set aside the Divine Rules. Opinions, thoughts, tastes, wishes and feelings cannot, in the least, affect the Rules. They are fixed. Courts, assemblies, conventions, councils cannot change them.

Words and sentences not found in the Bible, cannot be brought forward and substituted for those in the Bible. Some words and sentences found in the Bible, cannot be taken out and formed into a creed or discipline. If they are fit for a creed or discipline out of the Bible, then they are fit for one in the Bible. And more; they are better arranged in the Bible than they possibly can be when taken out of the Bible.

The Bible does not exact more of a man in France than it does of one in New York. The Book that reveals God to the man in Europe, reveals Him to the man in America. And the man who yields obedience to the Divine Rules in Switzerland, will talk and act like the one who has yielded obedience to them in Michigan. Better still; the man who is governed by these Rules in America will be the same in Ireland, in Germany, in Arabia, in Egypt. If submission to these Rules in America will make him a peculiar man, he will be peculiar in Japan, in Hindoostan, in Palestine, if he continues to yield obedience. If a man in Illinois submit to these Rules, and thereby be known as a Christian, will not the man, who submits to them in Spain, also be known as a Christian? If full submission to the Divine Rules, and to them only, on the part of a Greek, is all that is required of him, will not a full submission to the Rules, and to them only, on the part of a citizen of Virginia be all that God will require in order to eternal salvation? If those who lived in Palestine complied with these Rules, and thee only, and were saved, then those in America who comply with the same Rules, and to them only, will also be saved. If those Rules were all that were required of believers eighteen hundred years ago, will any more be required of believers now?

Had God seen fit to make something not in the Bible a condition of obedience, He would have put it in the Bible, for the Bible tells us what we are and what we ought to be, morally and religiously. Hence that which is not in the Bible cannot be proven by the Bible. I go further: that which is in the Bible needs not to be proven by the Bible. The mere fact that it is in the Bible is proof sufficient that it is right. If it be not in the Bible it is proof that the thing is not essential to obedience to God. The Rules of faith and practice being perfect, there is no need of proof from the imperfect. Imperfection cannot equal, much less surpass, perfection. The Rules of God being perfect, more than they, cannot be required. Less than the Bible Rules is not worth seeking after. God will not condemn the man who believes and obeys the Bible, and nothing but the Bible. Reader, what think you?

M. M. E.

THE WAY YOU SAY IT.

EVERYTHING which we do is either right or wrong; if it be not wrong, then it is right; if it be not right, then it is wrong; if it be right, then it is not wrong; and if it be wrong, then it cannot be right. Right and wrong are opposite in meaning, therefore what is the one cannot be the other.

There is just one thing in the world and that is power. This is either positive or negative. We decide which of these two it is by its application. Whenever it is applied to promote truth, piety, virtue, peace, prosperity, it is positive, but when opposed to these, it is negative.

God is positive; the devil, negative. Christians are positive; sinners, negative. God does good; the devil, evil. Christians are kind and merciful; sinners, rough and abusive. The positive builds up, the negative tears down. Whatever is not positive is of the devil, whatever is positive is of God.

A man is more excusable for doing what, in itself—according to the letter of the law—is wrong, under some circumstances than others. It is even right to violate the letter of the law when necessity demands it. We learn this from what Christ said to the Pharisees when they found fault with his disciples for doing "that which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath day." Christ calls attention (1) to what David had done, which was in open violation to the letter of the law, and yet no one had ever suspected he did any wrong. (2) "The priests * * * profane the Sabbath, and are blameless." We regard this as conclusive proof that circumstances of necessity make it right to violate the letter of the law. But circumstances never make it right to do wrong. If circumstances make it right to violate law, then it is right to violate, and wrong not to do it.

The Scripture is profitable for doctrine, reproof and correction. It is, not only the privilege, but the duty, of the minister, with the Scriptures, to reprove his hearers of any sins of which they are guilty, and correct any errors which they commit. So with the contributors to our religious journals—in short, so we ought to do with each other; but it is very important that it be done in a proper way—that a good spirit pervade the work.

We are all human and prone to evil — all come short of perfection. We ought, therefore, to bear in mind, that those with whom we deal and associate, are made better or worse by our conduct. If some of our friends do wrong, we can only prove that we are better than they by doing right. If our friends do wrong by us it is our duty, as Christians, to tell them of it, but not to abuse them. If we think our friends neglect their duty towards us we should inform them of it in a kind and affectionate way, then if there is any good principle in them, they will do better; but if we abuse a man it is calculated to excite his evil and base nature causing him to treat us worse than before. We would further observe, that we are often mistaken when we think our friends are neglecting us and that they are to blame for it, and it is certainly very uncharitable to censure any one for a wrong of which he is not guilty.

Attention to the business of this office and the different impressions which the different letters, that have been received, have made, has caused me to publish these thoughts for your consideration. Acting in the the capacity which I do my opportunities are unsurpassingly good, from which to make observations. On the one hand are those doing business with the office, on the other is the office doing business with them. A DANGEROUS COURSE.

AMONG the papers published in our brotherhood, we fear a spirit of contention will ... ring up, tending to make division and discord. ... one of the greatest dangers is that of misrepresentation. If one of the papers misrepresent another, in its objects and purposes, there ... soon unpleasant feeling arise. To avoid ..., the true position and purpose of each paper should be accepted in its own avowed object ... given by itself. There are some good things ... all of our papers, and if we were able to afford the expenses we would take them all, and ... are thankful to some of the editors for sending us their paper free.

The reason for writing this article at this ..., is this: An editorial in the Deacon and ...ied in the Vindicator, will be taken, generally, to put the BRETHREN AT WORK and Primitive Christian in a false light before the reader. ... cannot speak so positive of the Primitive ...tian as I had nothing to do in forming the ...racter of that paper, but I judge from the ...se it pursues. With the BRETHREN AT ... I did have something to do, and I believe ... something once, setting forth the course, ...thought should be taken in the paper. The ... editorial comes in conflict with that, there... I speak again that all may see the true ...ition taken in our paper. We here give part ... the extract taken from the February number ... the Vindicator, page 57:

"The Deacon thinks it 'pays well' to be non-committal on 'vital church issues.' Guess he ... to get and keep a fair paying patronage, it ... best for an editor to talk and write so as to ... all and hurt no one."

We presume the right of our brethren to ... with us should be granted freely, and that, ... without any hard feeling, but we want the ...der to see the precise point about which we ... We take the position that these vital ... (on which we are censured for being non-committal) have been, and ought to be settled ... our Annual Meeting. They have all been ...ussed there and decisions made upon them, ... may be again). In these discussions at A. ..., we have been as free and outspoken as any ... Brother Quinter, too, of P. C., has been ... free at A. M. to discuss all the vital issues ... come up. I think it likely that none in ... brotherhood have been more outspoken on ... issues at A. M., than some of the editors of ... P. C., and B. AT W.

Now here is the point of difference with that editorial: We believe the A. M. is the proper place to discuss these vital issues, not in our papers. The editors believe it right to discuss them in their papers, as well as at A. M., only with this difference: at A. M. both sides are discussed while in their papers they would discuss only one side, and continue the discussion from year to year just as done at A. M., only they have but one side of it in the paper. To get the idea clearly before you, suppose at our common church meeting some matters of difference come up, and are investigated, discussed and settled, the best that can be done by the church. But one party says, we will not let that decision of the church alone, but publicly write and speak against the decision of the church, just as they did at church meeting: they will be governed by their own opinion, not by the decision of the church, either publicly or privately, in the church or before the world. Now, suppose that course is continued, from year to year, when would the church have peace? Never while time lasts. But in that church is another party, who say, we will accept the decision of the church as the best that can be done now; we will not write or speak publicly against it before the world, but wait till another meeting, if there be anything wrong, then bring it up in a legal manner and try and get it better, and not be all the time fussing from week to week about the vital issues, or any other issues.

Now we belong to this latter party, who believe our differences should be discussed at church meetings, District meetings and Annual Meetings. We believe when these vital issues are discussed it should be a free discussion for both sides. A discussion of one side only, in any case, will be more likely to produce prejudice and hard feeling, than it will of wisdom and knowledge; a continual discussion of both sides may be a source of knowledge, but it would produce division in some of its forms. Then we think our position is clear in this matter, when we advise the B. AT W. to go to A. M., discuss and argue all these vital issues, as much as you choose, get the best decision you can, then accept that decision for the time being, and wait till another year, then better it if you know how. But for the good of the church, for the peace of the brotherhood, don't be continually discussing these differences on vital issues in your paper. Be settled and fixed in the work for peace and union, and love in the church; do not be led into this contention among brethren, or moved from your purpose by these insinuations that you work to please all and hurt none. Let the brotherhood decide this matter, let them decide whether they want this continual debating in our papers, let them decide if they want these questions discussed at A. M, and there stop the contending among brethren. If the brotherhood wants the discussion to continue, from year to year, especially on one side of the question, if they want a paper to keep up a continual warfare on somebody, even on the A. M., I hope they will not find it in the B. AT W. But I am confident the brotherhood wants and needs papers that respect and accept the decisions of A. M. on all vital issues. They will support such papers, and they will be a great means to keep union and harmony in the church.

We have tried to make our views plain in this matter, and have done so with due respect to the Deacon and Vindicator. Justice required of us to set this matter plainly before the brotherhood, that the plain difference, and the different courses taken by the papers referred to, may be clearly seen, for our only object is to get the true position of our paper before the brethren, and in making the contrast with their position, if we have not done them justice we are ready to correct.

There are three positions that may be taken by the papers published in our brotherhood: First, a paper may take one side of all vital issues, and publish nothing but that side, rejecting all that may be said on the other side. Second, a paper may discuss both sides, and open its columns to all that may be said on either side; each of these can have continual discussion, but on very different principles. The third is our position, that these discussions be confined to A. M., and not continued or permitted in our papers.

But let us look at these vital issues a little further if we can find them. We suppose they are such questions as the Missionaries, the Sabbath School, Education, Non-conformity, &c. Now if we have guessed the meaning, all of these questions have been before A. M., and decided by it. And we advise the B. AT W. not to fight against the decision of A. M. on these subjects, not to publish anything against them in the paper, not that we believe the A. M. infallible, but there is a right way—a legal way, to bring all of them up again and discuss them at A. M., and have them changed. But further the B. AT W., and all other brethren have a right to carry out and advocate publicly and in the church all the decisions of A. M., but no brother has a right to oppose them publicly, except in their discussion at church, District, or A. M. To grant the right of every brother to oppose publicly every decision of the church and A. M., would be virtually destroying the A. M. itself, and setting up not only congregationalism, but individualism, and destroy all the union and oneness of the church.

Here another matter is brought up incidentally. That is, the nature of the decisions of A. M. Some brethren have held the A. M. as a legislative body—that is not correct. They might just as well call a church meeting a law making body. The A. M., and all church meetings are judiciary, merely as a court to decide upon all questions brought before it. The A. M. has no power to originate bills, and pass them as a law; but hear the case brought up from a lower court, or District Meeting, and decide it, as a Supreme Court would do. Its decisions are to our brotherhood, as the decisions of the Supreme Court to the citizens of the United States, not as the Congress, to make laws, but to decide the case according to the laws already made. So our A. M. decides the case brought before it, according to the Gospel—the law God has made for the government of his church. All these cases that come up must be decided by some body, either each individual must decide for himself—that would be individualism; or the church must decide it — that would be congregationalism; or each District Meeting must decide for itself—that would be division at once on the principle of State rights or secession; or the A. M. must decide it according to the 15th of Acts. That is union and Gospel, and the order of our brotherhood—the only safe ground there is for us. Tried and proven for more than a century, it has held our church together as one body, and we shall sustain it as our fathers have done, and our papers should walk in their footsteps. Search the old paths—support the way we know gives peace, union and strength, and oppose any course that brings division, weakness and discord. While we have so many papers multiplying in our brotherhood, it requires more caution to guard against hard feeling, and division. We have no right to blame brethren for starting a paper, we can only have a right to blame them when they run their papers so as to do harm. But when we get too many, and I think we have that now, some must go down or consolidate, but while they do last, we hope they will do good if possible, not be trying to bite and devour one another, for generally persecution turns back with coals of fire to burn the fingers of the aggressor. I have spoken plainly, apologies are not needed because we are brethren. R. H. MILLER.

MOOMAW'S PROPOSITION.

HAVING for its object the preaching of the Gospel by the Brethren in the different cities of the United States. Those wishing to contribute to this fund will send in their names on a card, or otherwise, but do not send the money till further notice is given. When $200. is promised then two men should be selected and put to work. These men to be selected by the vote of the donors. They should be men sound in the faith, and able to teach others also—men who are willing to labor with those in the common walks of life. Search the Scriptures carefully and see to what extent the Apostles labored in cities.

The following amounts have been subscribed, and other names will be entered as they come in:

D. C. Moomaw, McDonalds, Va.	$10.00
S. T. Bosserman, Dunkirk, Ohio,	10.00
Franklin Anglemyer, Leeke, Ind.	1.00
Wm. R. Clark, Bellaire, Mo.	1.00
E. B. Winslow, Hamlin, Kan.	1.00
Catharine R. Sopher, 1307 Olive St. Philadelphia	.50
Daniel Stump, Medle, Kan.	1.00
Arthur Brubaker, Wabash, Ind.	1.00
Minnie Christopher, Helena, Mo.	1.00
Catharine and Henry Tinkel, Marion, Ind.	1.00
J. G. Harley, Port Providence, Pa.	10.00
Tobias Kimmel, Elderton, Pa.	1.00
Daniel Vanbuskirk, Violet, Ill.	1.00
James L. Switzer, White Rock, Kan.	1.00
J. A. Kepner, Johnsville, Ohio.	1.00
Wm. Peebler, Atchison, Kan.	10.00
John D. Shearer, Atchison, Kan.	10.00
Wm. T. and Mary A. Hamlin, Hebron, Neb.	1.00
Total to February 18	$92.50

We would be pleased to publish all the encouraging letters received at this office, but can spare room for a few extracts only:

Arthur Brubaker: "I am poor, but thank the Lord, I can work with my hands and earn enough to help the proposition one dollar."

Catharine Suplee: "O, that such may be sent who are willing to preach to the lowly, and the outcast in the highways and hedges, and if possible, 'compel' them to come in while time and opportunity are offered."

James L. Switzer: "I think our little membership here of 40, will put at least one thousand cents into the work. Brethren, every-where, rouse up! Put your shoulders to the wheel."

J. A. Kepner: "The subject of spreading the Gospel has been much handled, pro and con, and is, perhaps, not well understood by some. We are inclined to think that it depends on several things. In the first place, it depends largely on the motives. If the proper motive be kept in view, the blessing of the Lord will follow. I am fully persuaded, in my mind, that if the church, as one man, would unite in the cause of spreading the Gospel, that the Lord would be pleased, and his blessing would surely follow. Some of us, who are quite well advanced in years, and have been thinking over these things for a number of years, are so firmly convinced that the Brotherhood has been somewhat slack in that respect, that it needs no comment at this time. But when I think back over the past history of the church, think what has been done, and what might have been done, and even what the church is doing now, and then think what the church might do, I am made to tremble, to think of the responsibility that rests upon us, especially so when I look around and see how the Lord has blessed us. So, Brethren, go on in the work of spreading the Gospel, and be assured that the Lord will bless you for all the good work you do, and when our labors are over with us here, then we shall hear the welcome invitation, 'come up hither.'"

J. G. Harley: "I see Brother Moomaw makes a proposition to have the Gospel preached throughout the large cities of the United States. I fully indorse that move. I think that is according to the Scriptures, for the Master said, that the Gospel should be preached throughout the whole world, to every creature; but then we want to send men who are sound in the faith—men who will preach the cross of Christ, fearless of what men shall do unto them; who will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God—men who are filled with the love of God in their hearts, who will know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified. Men like Samuel Hillery or John Stein or Alexander Reese or hundreds of others like them. We don't want money seekers, or men pleasers in this work. They would be of no use; now, if you send men like those, I will give my order for ten dollars. I know the Lord will bless the work."

The following letter from Atchison, Kansas, also approves of the missionary move. The writer says:

Dear Brethren:—

In Vol. 4, No. 2, of BRETHREN AT WORK, we think the right step has been taken, in the right direction, by Brethren Moomaw and Sharp, on the missionary question. The cities are neglected too much. The old order was to go from city to city." Titus 1: 5. We number about ten members here; four in the city of Atchison and six within nine miles. We have no preaching. Now Brethren, who will be sent to preach for us? Brother Wm. Peebler authorizes me to give his name for ten dollars when the work is commenced here. The humble writer will give the same. Brethren, come, we will see to your wants as well as we can. Don't forget us when passing through here. This is a railroad centre; railroads running in every direction. Will some of the Brethren stop off and drop a few seeds? We hope there will be more missionaries sent out until every soul that is groping in darkness comes to the light of the Gospel.

Yours in love of the Truth,

JOHN D. SHEARER.

Atchison, Kan.

It will be noticed that these two brethren promise ten dollars each when the work commences in the city of Atchison. As they intend their money to apply to work done in Atchison, it might not be amiss for them to secure the services of some good evangelist and work up the interest in that place. We suggest that they either do this or else let their amounts go into the fund without any reservation. Atchison would be an excellent point at which to build up a church.

BROTHER Daniel Miller, writing from the Wisconsin mission field, says that eighteen have been received into the church by baptism, and one reclaimed, with increasing prospects of good yet to be accomplished.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL PENROD.

Some one will please compare and explain Acts 1:18, and Matt. 27:5.

Also Ex. 21:10 11, and John 1:18. H. H. B.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24:17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE RUBEY.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2:47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8:33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2:10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19:11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

JUDAS AND FEET-WASHING.

Was Judas present when feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion were instituted? Some one will please explain. J. M. DETRICK.

MY opinion is that he was present at the first two only. John 13. "After that, he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash his disciple's feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded." Jesus saith to him, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all. For he know who should betray him; therefore he said, Ye are not all clean." Verses 10, 11. "Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon." Verse 26. "He then, having received the sop, went immediately out; and it was night." Verse 30. From the above we would conclude that he was present during feet-washing and part of the supper, but went out before it was over. Neither would we suppose that after he had conceived to betray his Lord he would be a fit subject to partake of the Communion.

THE FOUR BIRTHS.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

HERE are four births named, but only one with promise. 1. "Of blood"—such as the Jews claimed from Abraham, being blood kindred and descendants of the line of Abraham. Upon this pretext, John the Baptist rejected many of them who came to his baptism.

2. "Of the will of the flesh." Choosing a way religiously, in which there is the least cross, or self-denial, and in which the flesh can be most gratified, and where the carnal mind keeps the ascendency; whatever the form or pretensions may be.

3. "Of the will of man." Following the multitude; being led by popular opinion, or taking up such a kind of religion as will please the most people, and by which you may secure the most friends and honors. All these are without promise.

4. "But of God." Those who repent of their sins, renounce everything the Word of God forbids, submit to all the Lord's commands, take up the cross, deny themselves of all sinful lusts, obey the Lord in preference to the nearest friends in the world, and thereby declare that they love Him most; thus being born of the Spirit, led by the Spirit, and sanctified by the Spirit, the promise is everlasting life.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Please give an explanation of Rev. 22:2. It reads thus: "In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." A BROTHER.

THE prophet Ezekiel describes the scene thus: "And by the river, upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for ment, and the leaf thereof for medicine." The prophet gives the plural number trees, as tree in the singular is here used, it must be what is called an enallage of the singular for the plural number. The trees of life were distributed througout the city, along the streets, and along the banks of the river. Street is also an enallage or substitution of the singular for the plural number.

Manner is an interpolation, it does not belong to the text, it is simply twelve fruits, that is, fruit twelve times in the year, as is explained by the clause, "yielded her fruit every month." By the leaves of the tree are perhaps meant the truths of God's Word, which are the only antidotes to sin. But thank God, these leaves are a sufficient antidote; if properly applied, they will heal the nations of that terrible leprosy of sin.

Will some one be so kind as to explain Matt. 5: 29, 30: "And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off," etc.

S. A. FLICKINGER.

"Causes thee to offend," Bible Union Translation. The word "offend" is skandabethra in the original, and appears to be compounded of skandalon a stumbling-block, and lathra, private or hidden. It is then something concealed, and placed in one's pathway, over which he may stumble and fall.

If the right hand or right eye, which, no doubt, means the profitable, or honorable employment, or the darling idol, be the occasion of this stumbling, pluck it out, or cut it off. Leave the employment, tear the idol from you. Whatever loss the one may occasion, whatever pain the other, better, far better suffer in this world, than to suffer eternally.

MATTIE A. LEAR.

THE RIVER OF DEATH.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

'Tis over the river I'm going,
The river so icy and cold;
To dwell in that city of glory,
Whose streets are all covered with gold.

Assist me, dear Savior, to ever
Be faithful my duty to do;
In word and in deed and in action,
My daily vocation pursue.

So when my last breath I am breathing,
And my days on earth are all o'er;
I'll meet Thee in peace up in heaven,
To dwell on that beautiful shore.

Help me to be instant in praying,
And faithful to every trust;
So when from this earth I'm departing
I'll pass to the home of the just.

The river of death is so chilly,
That many its waters do fear;
But all must pass over that river,
No matter how gloomy and drear.

I should that all now were preparing
To cross the cold river of death,
Before the dark stream they are nearing—
Before they must draw their last breath.

So when they come down to this river,
There Jesus will be their best friend,
And with Him to rest up in heaven,
They then shall in triumph ascend.

Come brother, come sister, come sinner;
Come great, and come small, and come all,
This river of death you're approaching
Then do hear the Savior's kind call.

INFLUENCE OF THE STUDY AND OBSERVATION OF NATURAL OBJECTS UPON THE MIND.

BY B. STUYER.

HOW few, how very few indeed, there are who can appreciate the great soul culture that is derived from a careful study and observation of the natural objects which surround us in such great profusion on every side! or have any adequate idea of the tender and elevated emotions experienced when surrounded by these mute, though instructive, teachers which proclaim in the most unequivocal and irrefutable manner the power, wisdom, grandeur, sublimity, love and beneficence of the Ruler of the universe. Who can stand on a starry night, —gaze up into the clear canopy of heaven, and behold the glittering stars, countless in number, illuminating, by their pale and mellow light, the earth below, without having created within him an indelible impression of the greatness and wisdom of their Creator? Who can gaze upon the ocean, now one boiling, seething mass of water, threatening destruction to everything within the range of its power, now a calm and placid surface on which the smallest boat could float with impunity, and not be filled with awe at the manifestations of the laws of nature and the unbounded power of their Author? Who, I say, can penetrate the bowels of the earth and there behold the beauties and wonders hidden from external view, and the various minerals for the use and comfort of mankind, without acknowledging the design of their Creator? Who can gaze upon the majestic forest, composed, as it is, of stately monarchs, the growth of which was only accomplished in centuries, and of smaller growths covered with verdant foliage, and many with the most delicious fruits, and from whose foliage issue forth strains of delightful music, and not feel that their Creator has most wisely and bounteously provided for man's comfort and pleasure? Look at the orchard now covered with beauteous blossoms which exhale delightful perfumes succeeded by fruits. Look at the field and meadow now clothed with vernal foliage interspersed with flowers, whose beauteous colors and delightful exhalations make a most pleasing scene; see these grasses grow up changing their color from a green, to a golden hue and bearing upon their stalks the grain which forms the nutrient materials that sustain our beings, we are almost instinctively led to exclaim, truly the Author and Bestower of all these blessings is a powerful, benevolent and loving Being, whom to honor and serve should be the delight of our lives.

In view of these facts, I would say to every young person, and all indeed, observe and contemplate the objects which God has given for our study; let all the objects of His creation with which you come in contact, be an open book from which you can learn a lesson of trust and humility, and by conjoining with this, a careful study and practice of His Word, you will be truly enabled "to look from Nature, up to Nature's God."

THOUGHTS AGAINST INFIDELITY—ITS CURE.

BY H. C. LUCAS.

THERE is a remedy for unbelief of the authenticity and truthfulness of the Sacred Oracles. Men who deny the inspiration of the Word of God, are wilfully ignorant of Bible language, and facts connected with the fulfillment of prophecies of the Bible.

Ask them concerning the destruction of Babylon, Tyre, Damascus, Egypt, &c., and the seemingly singular fulfillment of the words of the prophet in every instance, and they are not informed on those things at all, or but very imperfectly.

If suitable works on the subject of the cause of unbelief and means of rescue, could be placed in their hands, and they could be induced to read them carefully and investigate the subject with fairness and fulness, we could have abundant reason to hope for their full recovery from their terrible thralldom in the darkness of unbelief.

For some time I have thought it would be well for followers of the Master, and friends of His Word, to keep a small library of suitable books in their respective neighborhoods, and circulate these wherever they could induce their neighbors to read them, no difference whether they were avowed disbelievers or not; for many times there are serious doubts that are not expressed. And it would doubtless be beneficial to all to read these works, having a tendency to strengthen and establish more firmly the faith of believers.

THERE IS A LAND OF PURE DELIGHT.

WE learn from an American writer that the author of this familiar hymn (Isaac Watts) wrote it at South Hampton, his native town, while sitting at the window of a parlor which overlooked the river Itshen, and in full view of the Isle of Wight, "beyond the swelling flood," representing "the land of pure delight."

"Where everlasting spring abides,
And never withering flowers."

And then we suppose, as the poet looked upon the waters then before him, he thought of the final passage of the Christian,—

"Death like a narrow sea divides,
That heavenly land from ours."

Wayside Notes.

Visit to the White Oak Church, Highland County, Ohio: to the Stone Lick Church, Clermont County; the Beaver Creek Church, Green County.

WE left our home on Tuesday, Dec. 31st, and at Belfost, Highland county, met Brother James A. Ridenour, of West Virginia, who preached in our vicinity for some weeks, till we could get ready to go on with him in the same work. By night we got to the house of brother Jonathan Moser, near Hollowtown, in which is the house of the body, known as the White Oak church. This body of Brethren should not be forgotten, for they are but few in number; have no minister, and at present only one deacon. However they need not to give up, for two adjoining churches supply preaching twice a month. They, also, have an interesting Sunday-school, with good attendance, and kept up throughout the Winter, which we regard as being a most favorable indication that the truth is still loved, and may yet prosper. At this place we had three meetings, with good attendance, and very good interest; and felt when we left that we had stopped our meetings too soon. One made application for membership, and others, no doubt, would have done so, had we staid longer; but our word had gone ahead, and we had to go. We trust that others will go soon endeavoring to build up the cause at this place.

We staid with brother Moser, whose health is still quite poor, but is thought to be improving. From his home we drove west eighteen miles, to Clermont county. This was the coldest ride we have ever had; nor do we desire any more such. We had to face the wind all day, and that too with the mercury several degrees below zero; but we came through all right. At night got to brother Pringles, where we remained; and from there sent word to the church, that we had come.

On Friday, the 3rd, and with the mercury ranging from 20° to 28° below zero, we came to the church at STONE LICK.

Here is another body of Brethren, who are not so highly favored as they might be, and as they should be. There is none other near them, and they also feel that they are neglected. They have now two ministers, and some forty members. They, like most others, feel that they are neglected, but still they have one rare blessing, and that is, they all seem to be at peace with themselves.

At this place we had, with one exception, meeting twice a day until February the 10th, when the writer drove to Green county. Brother Ridenour however remained, and preached four times more, and closed on Sunday night, with three applicants, and others almost persuaded; hence as before, the meeting had to close when it should have gone on, for the applications for membership were made at the last meeting, and the feeling amongst all classes was such as it had not been before. But the meeting had to close, and on Monday brother James came to Green county. We then came through to Salem church, of the Disciples, and there met brother B. F. Darst, from the Beaver Creek church. The meeting here was not large, but it was thought to be because of a supposed case of small-pox in the neighborhood. The sexton of this church is one, E. Rogers, a native of Bedford county, Pa. With this pleasant family we staid till Saturday night, when we, with friend Rogers, went forth to Sugar Creek church, used by the Christians, (Newlights), at which place we met the parson, Mr. Rush, of Dayton, Ohio; at the request we spoke to this very attentive people, upon the thought that God not only calls for our worship, but calls for it to be given in the right way. John 4:24.

From this place we went to the home of one, Swift, and there lodged. They had never before met any of our people, and were very anxious to learn of our faith and practice. These, as many others that we meet, seem very much dissatisfied with the many systems of religion; and they all lament the fact, that there is so much of the world in all the churches, and more especially the fact that the little truth that is preached must cost so much. There is, we believe, a great demand now for a better class of preaching, and that too with less cost, than can be under the present system. In other business, the best wages are paid those who do the best work, and the most of them in this, those who get most, or require most as a general rule, do the least work.

A more kind "farewell," we have never heard, than was given us as we left this pleasant home.

From this place we went north, and by 10 A. M., on the 12th, we had reached the Brethren's church, at

ZIMMERMAN.

Here we spoke on Sunday and Sunday night. Brother James came on Monday noon. Here we remained for two weeks. Had preaching twice each day, with a few exceptions; and mostly large and attentive audiences.

We visited elder Moses Shoup, now in his eighty-sixth year; and found this old father, a pioneer in the State and church, to be in better health, than for months past, and feels much interest in the final success of the Word. Were also to the house of brother Daniel Shoup, when it was thought that his family of twelve children, and as yet unbroken, must give up one of their number. The disease was diphtheria, and very bad, but it is now thought that the little daughter will recover. We also visited the school of brother William Shoup, and as well that of a Miss Darst, and find in both, every faculty for making the tender plant both, wise and good. These teachers seem to prize their calling, and both seem well qualified to fill it.

We left the meeting on Sunday the 26, and came over to Lower Miami, elder George Holler's charge, and brother James staid at Zimmerman till Monday, 27th, when the meeting closed, with thirteen additions and three applicants. May the Lord's blessing attend this body of believers, and as well all others who love the name of Jesus. LANDON WEST.

From Brother Hope.

M. M. Eshelman; Beloved Brother:—

WILL you receive some hints from your old Danish friend, and heed them?

1. As a work in the press, use your pen only as a recreation. 2. Leave the Sunday-school in the hands of others. Do not imitate God in being every-where; and do not the work that others should do for their own good. As a rule, be in your bed at ten o'clock, and rise not before five. 3. Let your usefulness be known by preparing and fitting and pushing others into work, who shall come after you, but who, too often, are crowded out, and even forbidden to come forward, that others may see their own name as a seal to everything. 4. Be ever so eager on this point, that you spare none, not even old sisters, but get them to work in the vineyard. If the work be divided in each church as it ought to be, none will have it too hard and none will be idle. 5. Remember you are called on to work as a minister until all come to the unity in faith, and to a ripe old age, and the fullness of Christ. If you do this, and that is the only Gospel order, then you will have many helpers, and get time to rest and live long, and never fall into the snare, to let the devil cheat you out of your life, by working yourself into an untimely grave. 6. Let your office work be as short and as little as possible. Let the Brethren be at work as much as possible. The paper will be more edifying and answer better to its name. 7. Better no editorials at all than one run out in haste. Better have your readers look disappointed for an editorial, than have them carelessly pass it by, because they get tired of the never-failing mannas.

If you have room, dear brother for all these rules, you will get a little time to rest now and then. If you have only room for some, then take freely, and use what you can; but please look at them on all sides before you turn them out. You know they come from one who loves you a little, if not much. Finally, remember I have no fault to find, only at a glance have seen no need to kill yourself, if you take care, and use prudence. Let the Brethren do the main work in your papers, that your editorials may be as salt grains in the whole mass. Use brevity in word and in work.

If you will adopt these rules you will feel somewhat better, and live longer. You have often wrote similarly to me, and wrote so in the paper. Please, physician, take your own pills and you will be cured.

Meetings in town are more and more attended, and increased in interest. Hope some good may come from them. Two have applied to be baptized, and Eskildsen has gone to see and baptize one if she is ready.

Hjorring, Jan. 18, 1879.

Why Not Go South?

I FEEL glad to see the spirit that is in the Brethren for the speeding of the Gospel by sending missionaries, tracts, and the Brethren's papers. They are all doing a noble work, and I hope there will still be a greater effort than has yet been made, for we see that in every country where we get our papers circulated, that the result is good. Seeing this, I am induced to work for the Brethren's papers in every section I visit, hence there are many names sent in by others that do not come on our list. I hope all the Brethren will work in this way, and thereby we will get a wider circulation for our papers, and if we can't get those who don't belong to us, to subscribe, just hand them your papers, and you will in that way, preach some telling sermons, sowing some seed that will after while bring forth much good fruit. May the Lord continue to bless our dear editors in their great and noble enterprise. But while I am thinking over the good that is, and can be done by preaching and sending our papers and tracts out, it does appear to me that our efforts are confined too much in one direction, that is north and north-west, and the south too much neglected. Why is this? The cry is, "go west." Yes, the cry comes hurling back, "come west," and why? "Here you can get great gain." I do not see any wrong in this, but why is there so little said about going South? It is not because the people in the South are not as precious in the sight of the Lord as any where else, no, the blessed Lord shed as much blood for them as for any other people: and for them He says, "go ye," and now who will go? There are States having no preacher of the Brethren. The dear Brethren of the South are doing all they can. I know their zeal for the cause, for that is my native home. They have too much to do; they need help; the territory is too large for them to cultivate. Now who will go to some place down there, where there are no Brethren, and help to spread the Gospel farther South? I feel confident that there are many places where much good could be done, if some Brethren would settle there, and preach the Gospel as taught and practiced by our people. Oh, I think so much about it, that if I were able to go, and had means to sustain my family, I would go and spend the remainder of my days in preaching the Gospel of our blessed Lord to those people. But I am poor, and cannot do as I would wish in this respect. Should I ever be blessed with the means to enable me to preach the Gospel where it has not yet been preached, I certainly would go South. May the Lord speed on the time that large churches may be planted all over the Southern States, is my earnest prayer.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR series of meetings began at the Freeburg meeting-house, on the 27th of January, and continued until the evening of the 1st of February. Brother Silas Hoover, of Somerset, Pennsylvania, was with us, and labored earnestly for the salvation of souls. I am sorry to say there were no additions to the church at this place, although there was a good interest manifested in attendance and in giving attention to the word preached. We hope the seed sown may bring forth fruit, some thirty, some sixty, and some a hundred fold, in due time.

From here the meetings were moved to the Reading meeting house, on the evening of the 1st, where brother Hoover, accompanied by others, labored earnestly in the Master's cause, pointing sinners to the Lamb of God, and warning them to flee from the wrath to come. Here we were made to rejoice in seeing eight precious souls leave the ranks of Satan, and come out on the Lord's side. They have enlisted under the blood-stained banner of King Immanel, to go forth as soldiers of the cross, and to fight the battles of the Lord.

Brethren, here we can see the benefit of Sunday-school, and are trying to obey Christ, when He says, "Feed my lambs."

Our meetings closed on the evening of the 9th. Brother Hoover bade us farewell, and started for his home in Pennsylvania. May the good Lord bless him, and crown his efforts, is our prayer. D. S. BUSH.

From Jewell Co., Kansas.

THE White Rock congregation, I believe is in a prosperous condition. Although a cold Winter, we find love and zeal will cause it to bud and bring forth fruit at all seasons of the year. It has been well nourished and warmed this Winter with Gospel truths, by able and talented brethren. Brethren Lemuel Hillery, William Bowman and S. Bashor, have all been sowing the good seed broadcast among us, and it is springing forth, as there is quite a number soon to be engrafted into to this branch of the Vine, and others, I am convinced, are digging deep for the hidden treasures of the Gospel, which, when found, we hope will cause them to turn their eyes upon Calvary, and behold a crucified Redeemer. Elder James L. Switzer and brother Lawrence Garman, are still working for the cause of Christ, and we hope to see rich clusters of fruit growing out of their labors. We have had several persons from other branches engrafted into this. They seem to be doing fine; and we hope the winds and storms of sin may never tear them loose, that they as well as the rest of this little congregation, may prove faithful, is the earnest prayer of your humble brother in Christ.

Burned to Death.

BURNED to death on Christmas' day, little Cora Hunter, aged nearly six years. Just after returning from a visit to grandfather and grandmother, little Cora was taking care of her two younger brothers in the house, while her mother was doing the evening milking, a few paces from the door. Suddenly the door opened, and Cora ran out into the wind with her clothes all ablaze, crying, "O, mamma! mamma! I am burning." The strong wind made the blaze burn fiercer, and her mother in trying to put out the fire, came very near burning herself. All the clothes were burned off of the child in three minutes. She was then carried into the house, and after midnight, breathed her last. What seems remarkable, is that after the first fierce heat she did not appear to suffer much pain, and passed quietly and peacefully away.

Brother Bauman preached the funeral sermon on the 27th, from Solomon's language, "Boast not thyself of to-morrow." Many will remember the strong appeals and telling applications he made. We laid little Cora in the grave, and turned sadly away, thinking of her last agonizing and prophetic cry, "O mamma! mamma! I am burning."

A Minister Wanted.

WILL you please state in the BRETHREN AT WORK, that we are in need of a minister. Brother Jonathan Swihart, who has been our minister, has gone to Indiana, and left us without a shepherd, and I fear his flock will doubtless more or less go astray. This is a good farming country; good for fruit, and a good railroad point. I hope that this may come to the eyes of some minister who will come and preach for us. Our church is rather small, but there is a chance for an increase.

Communications from any minister will receive prompt attention. GEORGE DALE.

A Visit among the Churches of Upper East Tennessee.

Dear Brethren:—

AS I had a pleasant and profitable visit among the Brethren of Upper East Tennessee, I hope a little account of it with a few observations may be of some interest to the readers in general, and as we are glad to have people move among us from the North and East, I hope a little description by the way of the hill country, will not be amiss. East Tennessee is a valley of valleys, lying between the Cumberland Mountains, on the West, and the Alleghanies on the East. It is all divided into long and narrow valleys between low ridges, running in the same general directions with the mountains.

Besides its productiveness in coal, iron and many other useful minerals, it presents a great variety of soil. Though much of it is well worn by the systemless farming of slavery times. It has some very good and productive lands, and a people who are kind and hospitable, and show a steady tendency to more progressiveness than there was found here in days gone by.

From this place (eleven miles west of Knoxville), we have almost a straight road up through Beaver Creek and Richland valleys to Meadow Branch church, a distance of fifty-four miles, and from there twenty-three miles to Cedar Grove.

The church at Meadow Branch had not been very prosperous for some time. Its minister and some of its members had moved away several years ago, and being a new church, and alone without a minister, and too far from other churches to receive much help, soon began to decline, and certain parties in the neighborhood talked of wiping out "that little Dunkard church." But the Brethren, not being quite ready to be wiped out, and having yet a little strength, and having kept His word and not denied His name, went to work and built a meeting-house. Last Fall the Brethren went and held a series of meetings there. The Lord revived them, and confirmed them in their faith; and fifteen were added to their number. The members of this church live mostly among the hills and knobs. Some of these hills are quite rich to the top, while others are thin and slaty.

After meeting with the Brethren here four days and three nights, I took my journey up the country, accompanied by brethren Bartly Harris and Jacob Isenberg, the latter being a minister in the second degree since last October.

On the night of the 16th we preached to a goodly congregation, at the house of brother Samuel Wells, in the bounds of the Cedar Grove church. This sub-congregation was also built up since the close of the war.

On the night of the 15th, we stayed with a family in which the mother is the only member of the church, while her husband, though kind and hospitable, is not quite favorable to the strict discipline and doctrines of the church. Here the family is growing up, the oldest daughter about grown, and I think about ready to side with her mother, on whose brow are traces of sorrow and struggles that can be better imagined than described. May the Lord strengthen and sustain her, that by a chaste walk, she may win those to the cross of Christ, who are endeared to her by the strongest ties of nature. May she realize in the future the full fruition of Psalms 126: 6, "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

From brother Wells we went to Cedar Grove, where we stayed four days and nights, and had eight meetings. Here, as at the other places, we met warm hearts and hands. Among them, a young sister, seeming strong in the faith and only twelve years old, having joined the church over a year ago. There are other precious sheaves there, which I think are almost ready to be gathered. This church extends over a large territory, and they have a number of ministering brethren, three of whom are yet young in the ministry.

On the 21st we went to White Horn, sixteen miles south of Cedar Grove, and fifteen miles east of Meadow Branch. Brethren Thomas Berry and Perry Beckner are the ministers. Here we had three meetings, and got just well enough acquainted with the brethren and sisters to be sorry to leave, but the time was set when I would try to be at home, and I began to feel that, "be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

What I yet wish to say for the church at White Horn, is that the sisters, young and old, were not ashamed to take off their bonnets in the house of God. May the Lord bless them for it. C. F. DEGWILER.

Dear Brethren:—

ON Monday evening, January 27th, elder Henry Brubaker and brother Uriah Shick, of Beatrice, commenced a series of meetings three miles north-west of this place. The meetings continued until Sunday evening, February 2nd. The Word was preached with such convincing power that four souls were convinced of the duty they owe to their Lord and Master, and solemn impressions were made upon others. If the brethren could have remained with us a while longer others would have enlisted under the banner of King Emmanuel.

We felt sorry and lost when the two dear brethren and sister who was with them, left us, but we will put our trust in the Lord, and live in hopes that some dear ministering brother will come over and help us to labor in the Master's Vineyard.

I will say to readers of your paper, that this is a good country, and I am not afraid to advise Brethren to locate here. There are now sixteen members here, earnestly praying for a minister to settle among them. I will gladly give any information desired concerning the country, to any one that wishes to address me at the above named place. JOHN J. JORDAN.

Dear Brethren:—

BROTHER William Deeter came to Locust Grove, Nettle Creek church, on the 27th of December, and held forth the doctrine for nine or ten days. The immediate result was three additions. Many deep and we hope, lasting impressions were made; some of which are likely to bear fruit in the immediate future.

Brother Deeter is a zealous defender of the Truth, and has his heart in the work; and as he intends devoting all his time to preaching, the Brethren would do well to keep him in the field. Give willing hands a chance to work.

Nettle Creek church is in a prosperous condition, numerically, yet much room for spiritual improvement. It numbers over four hundred, including eight ministers.

Notice to the Brethren of the Maple Grove Colony.

WE hope all our members will secure their certificates of membership before leaving the church in which they are living, as it is much easier to obtain a letter while present in person, than to get one by writing back for it, and more especially if there should be some little difficulty in the way, which had to be settled before a letter could be obtained. We have had some experience in matters of this kind, and we have a case now in this arm of church, wherein the members failed or neglected to get their letter before leaving. There now seems to be some difficulty in the way, which will require considerable writing between the parties before the matter will be settled. We therefore advise all our members that expect to locate with the colony this Spring, or at any future time, to secure their letters before leaving. There is a number of families in this neighborhood that will start in a few weeks for Norton county, Kansas, the location of the colony, and will organize a church as soon as located, or they will, rather, take their organization with them. But the majority of the colony members will not go until September or October next.

There is a strong probability that there will be a railroad through the colony in less than twelve months. We insist, therefore, on all that want claims in that locality, to go immediately and secure them without delay. Our agent, J. R. Hamilton, writes under date of Jan. 30th, that emigration had already begun to flow into that part of the country. We have now belonging to the colony, enough to give us about seventy-five church members, many of these have already secured their claims, and others will go soon to secure theirs.

Dear Brethren:—

ACCORDING to previous arrangements by the counsel of the church, a series of meetings was begun Jan. 25th, at Fairview meeting-house, in the George's Creek branch, Fayette county, Pa., under the care of brethren William and Solomon Buckalew, both of Salem congregation, Preston county, West Virginia. They came in the cause and service of Jesus, and were in the hands of the council and of the Holy Spirit, preaching peace and reconciliation to the church and to sinners, sparing no human energy on their part to do souls good. Five souls were induced by the strong holds of the Gospel Truth, and demonstration of the spirit, to leave the world of folly, sin and crime, and like new born babes to the lowly meek Jesus, to come to the cross and be baptized into the fold of Christ, thereby showing fruit into the holiness, and be obedient to the heavenly call. We think we have reasons to be thankful to the Lord for what he is ever willing to do for his church and people.

Many strange things have been reported of this branch since the labors of the committee of the A. M., but truth is stronger than fiction, and must prevail. So dear Brethren, opposers to the church of the living God will have to bear their own reward.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

STONER.—Mr. Daniel Stoner died at his residence, near Union Bridge, on the 28th Ult., aged 92 years, two months and 16 days. The deceased was a member of the Brethren church for sixty-five years, and the last of eleven brothers and sisters.

PLANK.—In English Prairie church, Woolcottsville, Ind., January 17th, 1879, brother Eli Plank, aged 62 years, 4 months and 22 days. Funeral Services by David M. Truby. N. U. SHUTT.

FADELY.—In the Long Branch congregation, Harrison, Co., Mo., Feb. 8th, 1879, Sarah Ann, infant daughter of friend Jacob and sister Susan Fadely, aged 1 year 4 months and 22 days. Funeral by William B. Sell.

BROWN.—In Sugar Creek church, Allen county, Ohio, sister Lydia Jane Brown, daughter of brother Solomon Miller, aged 21 years, 11 months and 21 days. Funeral by the Brethren.

VINCENT.—In the same church, infant son of William and Hattie Vincent, aged 7 months.

DANIEL BROWER.

WENDT.—In Huron Co., Ohio, February 5th, 1879, Clara Mabel, daughter of Frederick and sister Wendt, aged 3 years, 4 months and 27 days. Funeral services in the Methodist church in New Haven, by the writer.

GEORGE W. ELLIOT.

SNOWBERGER.—Near Waynesboro, Pa., Dec. 15th, sister Mary Snowberger, aged 96 years, 7 months and 4 days.

She was a member of the Brethren church for eighty years. Her walk and uprightness of life corresponded with the profession she made. Her kind and charitable heart always remembered the saying of Jesus, "The poor ye have always with you." Yes the poor never went away hungry or cold. Many brethren and sisters shared her hospitality. She survived her husband thirty-three years. She had twelve children. Her oldest son is in his seventy-eighth year. She has seen her descendants down to the fifth generation, having two grand-daughters that have grand-children. Her funeral sermon was preached by the writer and Jacob Snider to a very large audience of relatives and friends.

J. F. OLLER.

ERY.—In the Cedar Lake church, Dekalb Co., Ind., Jan. 31st, of typhoid pneumonia, brother John Ery, aged 50 years, 7 months and 25 days. He leaves a dear companion, a sister, and six children to mourn their loss.

PARNEL.—In the same church and on the same day, and same disease, brother John Parnel, aged 52 years, 8 months and 25 days.

He leaves a dear wife and seven children to mourn their loss. The funeral of these two brethren was preached at one time at the same house, by the writer.

JEREMIAH GUMP.

P. C., please copy.

EMMERT.—In the Arnold's Grove district, Carroll Co., Ill., of dropsy of the heart, brother George Emmert, aged 70 years and 2 days.

The deceased was an exemplary member of the Brethren church from his youth up. His sufferings was at times most extreme, but he bore all patiently, always desiring the will of the Lord to be done, whether it be to live or to die. Wishing to be obedient in all things, he called for the elders of the church to administer the rite required in James 5: 14. May the Lord bless the bereaved family. Funeral services from Rev. 14: 12, 13, by the brethren, to a large assembly of relatives and friends.

J. J. EMMERT.

ROOT.—In Wabash church, Indiana, sister Nancy Root, wife of brother Jacob Root, aged over eighty-one years. Funeral services by brethren J. Crumley and W. Minnich.

OGAN.—In the same church, Dec. 19th, of consumption, brother George Ogan, aged 41 years.

He united with the church during his sickness. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by brother D. S. Caylor.

N. F. BNOBAKER

CLARK.—In the Bachelor Run church, Carroll Co., Ind., Feb. 1st, 1879, brother John Clark, aged about 43 years.

He leaves a kind wife and six children to mourn their loss, which we hope is his great gain. He was once more willing to renew his covenant with God, by being anointed according to James. Funeral discourse by the Brethren. JOHN F. KINSEY.

ACTION IN BAPTISM.

BY JOHN FUNK.

HOW often is the mind of the conscientious, innocent, unassuming "seeker after truth" made to wonder why so many of the learned "divines" and "theologians" of the present age, are so loth to acknowledge the forward action in baptism? With all their education in the classics, and all their knowledge of sacred literature; with the English, Greek and Latin lexicons in one hand, and the Bible in the other, they almost invariably practice the backward action in baptism. While all the evidences, that can be produced from the Holy Scriptures, are in favor of the forward action.

In the Mosaic baptism of the Israelites, the Lord said, "speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." Exodus 14: 15. Paul says we should not be ignorant of this circumstance—Jesus' baptism of sufferings in the God-honored, heaven-blessed "Garden of Gethsemane," was a triune action by a forward action; and who dare deny it? His ignominious death upon the Cross, in the "likeness" of which penitent believers are "planted," was by a forward action. And in fact the whole plan of salvation in God's economy of grace, has a forward tendency. "Press towards the mark for the prize," was Paul's example, and he says we should be followers of him as he was of Christ. Suppose ye, he went backward? If so, how could he see the "mark?" Jesus says, "Come unto me," and Paul says, "ever looking unto Jesus the Author of our faith. What is the influence? Can we go unto Jesus and ever be looking unto him as "the author of our faith, if we have a backward faith (or faith in backward action)? Is Christ the author of it? I think not. We cannot look to Jesus as the author of backward action. If we go backward to Jesus, how can we look to him? For the Father who sent him to save us, has created us with our eyes in the forepart of our heads, and in close connection with our reasoning faculties, (and use your eyes and reason together), designed for the use of the body, in a forward action—a going forward and upward. There is no backward action or backward tending in all the duties enjoined upon the Christian.

The commission as given by the Lord to his disciples, (see Matt. 28: 19), is the acknowledged formula for baptism, by all the professed Christian churches; so far as my knowledge extends, and what does it teach? It teaches that the believer must be baptized "into the name of the Father, and into the name of the Son, and into the name of the Holy Ghost." Now in order to get into each of the names of the Godhead, it requires a forward action for each of the divine names. Into implies a forward motion. To illustrate: When you enter into a contract with neighbor B., you make a forward move, in order to meet his propositions. But if you draw back, or out, your contract will not be consummated, hence there will be no contract.

The forward action in this case, means contract, or in other words compliance. The backward action, means, no contract; so also is it the case with baptism. The forward action, means obedience, or baptism. The backward action disobedience, hence no baptism. The forward action is caused by attraction, or a drawing spirit, and is always connected with obedience. But the backward action is produced by a repulsive spirit, or spirit of disobedience, with which it is connected. For example: When Christ said unto his disciples, "no man can come unto me, except the Father draw him, or it were given him of my Father." "From that time many of his disciples went back and walked no more with him." John 6: 65, 66. Why did they go back? Because they had a spirit of disobedience, John 6: 60, 61; they resorted to the backward action.

I will also refer you to the case of the "sow that was washed, who returned to her wallowing in the mire." Now of whom was this spoken? Doth God care for swine? Paul saith, "doth God care for oxen?" "Doubtless for you it was written." So; also, in reference to the "sow," it was written for our instruction and warning, that we who claim to be believers in Christ should not resort to backward action. 2 Peter 2.

There is the case of the soldiers, who came to the Savior to arrest him. When Jesus said, "whom seek ye?" They answered him, "Jesus of Nazareth." Jesus saith unto him, "I am he," and as soon as he said that, "they all went backward and fell to the ground." Naaman, the leper, learned that the backward action meant disobedience, and the forward action, obedience; which is clearly demonstrated by the result of his action. There is the case of Eli, who "fell backward and broke his neck;" another example of backward action. Why does Luke tell us to "remember lot's wife?" Because she was an example of disobedience; for she looked back and became a pillar of salt, and the Lord had commanded her not to look back. Now, let us hear what the prophets say on the subject. Isaiah says, "Ah, sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers, children that are corrupters. They have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they have gone away backward." Isa. 1: 5. Also, "in transgressing and lying against the Lord, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering from the heart, words of falsehood. And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter." Isaiah 59: 13, 14. And again, "But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imaginations of their evil hearts, and went backward and not forward." Jeremiah 7: 24. "Thou hast forsaken me, saith the Lord, thou art gone backward; therefore I will stretch out my hand against thee and destroy thee." Jeremiah 15: 6. So much for backward action.

A few remarks in reference to the Greek word eis, (into). Elder L. B. Wilks, of the Christian church, of Lexington, Kentucky, while engaged in a debate with Mr. Jacob Ditzler, of the M. E. church, South of Lewisville, Kentucky, held in Weisiger hall, Lewisville, Kentucky, from the 13th to the 23rd of December, made the following very penitent remarks: "Eis has a forward tendency, looking forward, and is never rendered back or backward; eis is the strongest word in the Greek language to express the word into." See the book of the Lewisville Debate, page 580, Wilks ninth reply.

In conclusion: Who would desire to enter into heaven backward? I think none would desire that posture, for they would not be able to see the Lord's face, in that position. If you start for heaven backward, will you not enter there backward, (if you enter there at all) except you turn about?

"O turn ye, turn ye, for why will you die,
When God in great mercy is coming so nigh."

Ripon, California.

POOR IN THE SPIRIT.

BY DANIEL BRIGHT.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Matthew 5: 3.

THERE are two ways of being poor; poor in the spirit, and poor financially. There can no better definition be given of typified spiritual, as well as financial poverty, than the instance of the prodigal son, given by our Savior. Being far away from father, kindred and friends, and having wasted all his substance with riotous living, in the midst of a mighty famine, he could no more make a livelihood for himself. He, therefore, joined himself to a citizen of the country,—being altogether done with himself. He gives himself unto a man of means, in the humble submission of gladly being clothed with just such garments as he may give him, and to eat just such food as may be given him. This is a true picture of real poverty. But such poverty has no blessing connected with it.

To be in like manner, poor in the spirit, has the promise of a rich blessing. "For theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

This being "poor in spirit" consists in thorough knowledge of one's self. The more we learn to know ourselves, the poorer we become in spirit; and the more helpless we find ourselves to be. Naturally inclined to that which is evil, enslaved by the power of darkness, hampered with evil propensities, burdened with the heavy weight of guilt,—the fruit of his sinful nature, man finds himself altogether undone. But such conviction being caused by the operations of the Spirit of God, as soon as man comes to such a degree of being "poor in spirit," he, with his gentle wooings, invites him to come to Jesus. "Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And man, knowing his degradation, feeling his weighty burden, and seeing his extreme poverty, will call and beg for help, and seek for aid and succor, and will find the promise of God verified unto him, "He that seeketh shall find; he that asketh shall receive; and he that knocketh, unto him shall be opened." Thus, seeking he shall find the kingdom of heaven; thus, asking he shall receive a gracious entrance and admittance thereinto; and thus knocking, unto him shall be opened the rich bounties of its treasures, to the comfort and consolation of his poor and panting spirit. Ah! truly, "Blessed are the poor in spirit," for possessing the sublime principles, and inhaling the love-inspiring, peace-restoring atmosphere of the heavenly kingdom, theirs are its comforts and consolations—"Peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." Though they are poor yet are they rich. Though they mourn, yet are they comforted. Though they weep, yet can they rejoice. For "whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things to come," all are theirs. But though all things are theirs, they are not their own, for they are bought with a great price. The Lord having purchased them through his own precious blood, and they having humbly submitted their all unto him, and surrendered themselves unconditionally to his sovereignty, they are his. Whether they live or die, they are nevertheless the Lord's. Thus to know the depravity of one's own heart, the inability of pleasing God according to our sinful nature, and at the same time having the blessed assurance of being adopted into the family of God, finally to be heirs and joint heirs with Christ, we experience the promised blessing, "Theirs is the kingdom of heaven." The promise is not theirs shall be the kingdom of heaven, in some future time; but theirs is the kingdom of heaven, though not in its personally manifested state, in its immortalized power and glory, but in its heavenly principles which mold and prepare us to be legal subjects for the inheritance of it in its manifested power and glory of immortalized bodies; in its comforts and consolations of living in "righteousness," having "peace with God and towards all men, and under all circumstances, "joy in the Holy Ghost."

But there is another state of being poor in spirit, but with which no promise is connected. We sometimes find persons who have much to say about the poverty of their spirits; but when we search into the secrets of their lives, and find the fruits of having their hearts filled with jealousy, envy and malice towards their fellow-beings; we wonder no more at their complaining about the poorness of their spirits.

Nothing renders man more miserable than cruel jealousy; nothing embitters his spirit more than malice; and nothing wounds his soul more than hatred and envy. The person whose heart and spirit is in such a condition, is truly poor. Of such, it cannot be said, "I know thy poverty, but thou art rich." But, thou art poor indeed. Such a heart and spirit must first be purged by the operation of the Spirit of God, and assume the principles of the kingdom of heaven, before it can realize the promise, "Theirs is the kingdom of heaven." "Theirs is peace and joy in the Holy Ghost." Oh, that all those "which hear," Luke 6: 27, may be regenerated and renewed through the Holy Spirit, so as to fulfill the injunction of our Savior, "Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father is also merciful." Oh, that they may be so humble, so "poor in spirit," as to obey Jesus in this: "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged;" condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; and O! may they all experience the peaceful reality, the sublime sweetness, the heaven and earth full of joy, in fulfilling his most endearing command, "FORGIVE, and YE SHALL BE FORGIVES;" theirs shall be the kingdom of heaven, with its comforts and consolations, here in this vale of tears, and in its consummated glory and power in the world to come.

WHILE one mind may be able to grasp sublime ideas, another may be capable of lofty flight; yet both are from God: which should teach us that whatever talents or fame we possess, to Him alone belongs the praise.

THE MONEYLESS MAN.

[This beautiful poem was composed years ago by Henry Stanton, Marysville, Ky. Such gems of poetry are not often met with, written by authors whose names are never known in history].

IS there no place on the face of the earth,
Where charity dwelleth, where virtue has birth?
Where bosoms in kindness and mercy will heave,
And the poor and the wretched shall ask and receive?
Is there no place on earth where a knock from the poor
Will bring some bright angel to open the door?
Ah! search the wide world wherever you can,
There is no open door for the moneyless man.

Go look in the hall where the chandelier light
Drives off with splendor the darkness of night;
Where the rich hanging velvet in shadowy fold
Sweeps gracefully down with its trimming of gold
And mirrors of silver take up and renew,
In long lighted vistas, the 'wildering view;
Go there in your patches and find if you can,
A welcoming smile for the moneyless man.

Go look in your church of the cloud reaching spire,
Which gives back to the sun the same look of fire,
Where the arches and columns are gorgeous within,
And the walls seem as pure as a soul without sin;
Go down the long aisles—see the rich and the great,
In the pomp and the pride of their worldly estate.
Walk down in your patches, and find if you can,
Who opens a pew for the moneyless man.

Go look to your judges, in dark flowing gown,
With the scales wherein law weigheth quietly down;
Where he frowns on the weak and smiles on the strong,
And punishes right and justifies wrong;
Where jurors their hands on the Bible have laid,
To read a verdict they've already made;
Go there, in the court-room, and find if you can,
Any law for the case of a moneyless man.

Go, look in the banks, where mammon does hold
His hundreds of thousands of silver and gold;
Where, safe from the hands of the starving and poor,
Lies, pile upon pile, of the glittering ore;
Walk up to the counter, ah, there you may stay,
Till your limbs have grown old and your hair turns gray,
And you'll find at the bank, not one of his clan,
With money to lend to a moneyless man.

Then go to your hovel—no raven has fed
The wife who has suffered so long for her bread;
Kneel down by her pillow and kiss the death
From the lips of the angel your poverty loss—
Then turn in your agony upward to God,
And bless while it smites you, the chastening rod
And you'll find at the end of life's little span,
There's a welcome above for the moneyless man.

A home in heaven! what a joyful thought,
As the poor man toils in his weary lot!
His heart oppress'd, and with anguish driv'n
From his home below to his home in heaven.

OF PRAYER.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

"I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men." 1 Tim. 2: 1.

BY this, we learn that it is meet and right to pray and give thanks for all men, and the reason why. Proceeding in his charge to Timothy, the apostle exhorted and enjoined that, "first of all" as a matter of the highest importance: "Supplications, prayers, and intercessions" suited to every emergency, and accompanied with thanksgiving, should be made in behalf of themselves, each other, and for all men without distinction, and without exception of their enemies and persecutors, in the spirit of genuine philanthrophy.

Prayer is an expression of our desires to God, with an humble confidence that we shall obtain them through the mediation of Christ. The object of prayer is God alone through Jesus Christ as the Mediator. All supplications, therefore, to saints or angels, and all worship of the creature, however exalted, is useless and idolatrous; but we should address the Father through the Son, depending on the Spirit to help our infirmities. Rom. 8: 26; Eph. 2: 18.

The different kinds of prayer may be public or private, in the family or closet, consisting of invocations or intercessions, ejaculatory or occasional.

Public prayer is proper and useful, is an imperative duty, and a glorious privilege, enjoined by the highest authority, and encouraged by the most illustrious examples, and precious promises, especially when practiced with becoming sincerity, when mainly intended for the ear of God, with a pure desire for the benefit of the audience, without any desire for self-aggrandizement or intention of pandering to the partialities of the hearers, but with an eye single to the glory of God and the good of souls. The surest guarantee for success in the service, is a clear conscience with which we can bring ourselves into immediate presence of God, and talk to him as a man would talk, face to face, with his friend, and feel as if we were present with God alone, "the spirit helping our infirmities" there will be no such thing as vain repetitions, multiplying synonymous words to express an idea, as though God did not "know the same we mean before the thought is formed within." There will be then no humming and hawing to fill up time between sentences; but with a knowledge or our own sincerity and honesty of purpose, and that God is present with us, and a knowledge of our wants, we can tell him all in the most plain and simple language, and "we know that he heareth us, if we ask according to his will."

Private or closet prayer consists in the secret breathings of our soul—the holy aspirations of our minds, the spontaneous promptings of the Holy Spirit within us, never influenced or induced by outward circumstances, as may be the case in public prayer. This kind of prayer may be either ejaculatory or occasional; thus the Christian prays always, as exhorted by the Master, Luke 18: 1, and may be performed either mentally of vocally.

In our calm and undisturbed moments, while musing upon the mercies of God, and contemplating our dependence upon him, the uncertainty of life, the dangers attending us, and the temptations to which we are exposed, we may silently invoke God's carefulness over us by his supervising and protective providence, and to grant us the exercise of wisdom and prudence, so that we may in no way dishonor the profession of his name, or provoke his displeasure. But when exposed to sudden danger or taken by surprise by accident, or the approach of an enemy, in the hour of trial or temptation, in our social, political, religious or commercial intercourse, we may ask God to suggest, control and overrule all for our advantage and for the glorifying of his name; this may be done mentally or vocally. Besides this, occasional seasons should be set apart for private or closet prayer, to retire from the outside world for secret and solemn devotion. This is the native element in which the true Christian lives, the atmosphere he loves to breathe. This sentiment is beautifully expressed in the 124th hymn:

"I love to steal awhile away
From every cumbering care,
And spend the hour of setting day
In humble grateful prayer.

I love in solitude to shed
The penitential tear
And all his promises to plead
Where none but God can hear.

Family prayer, though not positively commanded in the Scriptures, yet it is doubtless entirely proper and beneficial in its effects. We are commanded to be found, not only always, but every-where praying, and as the places are not especially mentioned, we are at liberty to make our own appointments, and we cannot think of any place more suitable, than in the family circle, and in no way better calculated to benefit ourselves by thus securing the continual presence of God with us, his Spirit permeating our whole being, a continual growth in grace, and a means by which we may bring up our children in the fear, nurture and admonition of the Lord, the result of which is, when other things in the family regulations are in harmony, with the sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit, the children are at an early day brought into the fold of Christ. This is true, as the rule demonstrates by many examples, anything to the contrary is the exception.

To illustrate: I recently had a conversation with a young brother on this subject, whose father kept up this service in the family. He says to me, that, "once in the days of my youth, father was away from home to be absent for a season, and one evening after dark I was returning home, being out a little late on duty, and the thought occurred to me, that now there will be no gathering of the family around the altar; no prayer going up to God from that altar until father returns. This thought so distressed me in that dark lonely night, that my heart was filled with emotion, and the big unbidden tear rolled down over my cheeks." How sad the thought that at that great day, when the books are opened and the nations are judged, that there will be, then and there, parents whose lost children, will approach them for a dereliction of this important duty.

The quotation at the head of this article, enjoins that intercessions be made for all men, especially for the rulers of the nations. Oh, how earnestly ought we to be engaged in this exercise! Seeing that the prosperity, happiness and religious liberty, of the people are so much dependent upon the character of those who are in authority; seeing that the blessings of heaven have always attended the nations over which righteous sovereigns presided, and the indignation and wrath over those that were otherwise, and in this, as well as other things, ought we not watch as well as pray, and to do all that we can do to secure such, without sacrificing our Christian principles? "God save the commonwealth."

Under this section of our subject, we may present our duty to pray or intercede for our enemies. This is a duty most positively commanded by the great Author of our blessed Christianity, to pray for them that "hate and despitefully treat us," and I opine comes as much in collision with our nature and requires more humility and more grace than any duty required at our hands. How, then, shall we commence this arduous work? It occurs to me that the only way that we will be likely to succeed for good, is first to take the beam out of our own eye, and by returning good for evil, where it can be safely done, without the risk of having them trampled underfoot, and being turned upon and rent, and then we may consistently pray for such interposition on the part of God, and such blessings from his hand as will result in our mutual good and to the glorifying of his name. And when we would propose to engage in this service, it should by no means be in the public assembly, in the presence of our supposed enemy; but in our private or secret devotions "where none but God can hear."

It is sometimes the case, that men, through the mediation of the spirit of jealousy or envy, and other of the worst of passions belonging to our poor, frail and fallen human nature, that we may be guilty of instituting and waging a relentless warfare against the object that we have selected and prosecuted so vigorously, and continually, until patience and forbearance ceases to be a virtue on their part, and they are driven away from us; confidence is totally destroyed and they are compelled for self protection to withdraw their fellowship from us, and because in all this we fail to accomplish our object, and if they are, or are not provoked to expose our deformity, we are likely to construe every act of theirs into an intention against our interest, or our designs. We therefore count them our enemies, and by soft words and fair speeches, induce the unwarry to believe and sympathize with us. Such is human nature or human depravity, and has been exemplified in many instances, and abounds upon the page of history, both sacred and profane, and has been the fruitful cause of the destruction of kingdoms and empires, and the flowing of rivers of the vital fluid of human existence.

I sometime since heard a lecture upon this subject, and the speaker dwelt at considerable length on the point of praying for enemies, and assuming that it was a powerful instrument in the accomplishment of a reconciliation, and doubtless it is so if properly applied. The preliminaries as stated above, having been attended to, but while listening to the lecture my mind was led to enquire in the circle of my acquaintance for examples to which the lecture might be applied, and they were found,—cases of various forms, and among them, some of the peculiarities of which I thought I understood, and was led to believe that if the aggressor would cease to be an enemy, and so to act as to restore lost confidence, it would not require much prayer to secure an amicable adjustment and a perfect reconciliation.

ECHOES FROM THE WEST.

A Short Lecture By D. B. Gibson, in the Falls City Church—Winter.

MY dear young friends, you have now made up your minds to follow Christ your Savior, and I will remark that it is impossible to follow him and at the same time follow the world. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Ye cannot serve God acceptably and follow Baal too. God's people are a separate people—always were and always will be. When we see a people claiming to be Christians and following the world—its maxims and fashions, we have an absurdity and impossibility.

I shall ask nothing of you that is not required by the Word of God. Notice Paul's instruction to Timothy—a bishop. "I will that men pray every-where, lifting up holy hands without wrath or doubting." "In like manner, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array." 1 Tim. 2: 8, 9. This is the requirement of God's Law, not man's law. This is God's order; not our order. If it was our order, we could change it to please ourselves; but it is God's Law, and "the law of God is perfect;" hence unchangeable, and must remain forever.

The Scriptures require plainness and non-conformity to the world. 1 Pet. 3: 2, 3; 1 Tim. 2: 8, 9; Rom. 12: 1, 2. Our people require plainness and non-conformity to the world; therefore our people are God's people.

Again Paul says, "every woman praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head." 2 Cor. 11. Therefore we require of our sisters that they cover their heads at time of worship with a plain covering, and thereby prove their subjection to the Gospel. Again, we read in God's Law—not from human discipline—"Swear not at all." Matt. 5: 34. Again, James says, "Above all things, my brethren, swear not. Our Brethren do not swear because God's Word forbids it. A church that allows oath-taking contrary to God's Word, is not God's church.

Again, we read, "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath; for it is written, vengeance is mine and I will repay saith the Lord." Rom. 12: 19–21. Christ's sermon on the Mount, Matt. 5: 6, 7, also forbids war and retaliatiation. God's Word does not allow fighting. See John 18: 36. "My kingdom is not of this world," * * * or else "my servants would fight." Our members are not allowed to avenge themselves, nor go to war, because God's Word forbids it. God, for a wise purpose, reserved for himself, the right of dealing out vengeance. We would be poor objects to deal out vengeance; we would not know when to stop. We see men will sometimes undertake to deal out, who do not know, when to stop, but kill their fellow-man; become murderers, and "we know that no murderer shall inherit the kingdom of God." Our church is opposed to secret societies. We read in God's Book, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6: 14–18. This passage of Scripture, with a number of others, forbids secret societies. Our church is opposed to secret societies; therefore, we are the church of Christ.

We regard these passages of Scripture as an essential first teaching to our applicants, in order that you, as well as all our applicants, may know what will be required of you before you unite with the church of God—"the ground and pillar of the truth."

The 18th of Matt. was referred to and read as usual, and such questions were asked, and remarks made as were appropriate for the occasion.

WINTER

is upon us. We sensibly feel its icy grasp. Like the revolutions of the earth, it comes in its turn. Sometimes it may seem to be delayed by Autumn's chilling wind, but at last it must come. After the waters were assuaged from the earth, God did not only say, "I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth." Gen. 9: 13, but also said, "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, and Summer and Winter, and day and night shall not cease." Gen. 8: 22. Winter comes because God has ordered it so, and it continues to come because God said it should not cease. Winter, like all other seasons of the year, has its advantages and disadvantages: its joys and its sorrows. While we may suffer much under the hammer of frost and piercing winds, it makes enjoyable the home and fireside. At no season of the year can home be more fully appreciated than when we are driven together by the howling storms of Winter to enjoy the genial warmth of a comfortable stove in some humble cottage. It is then that we can realize how pleasantly we are situated, and more especially when the temperature of the weather sinks mercury down to twenty degrees below zero.

Such as have plenty of everything necessary to render themselves comfortable and happy in cold weather, no doubt, wish at times that Winter was here already. While others, less favored with the comforts of life, dread its return.

Reader, this season of the year affords an excellent opportunity to do good to suffering humanity. It is now, that a poor lad and his suffering sister, would duly appreciate a comfortable home,—a warm and comfortable garment. Few of us, comparatively speaking, know anything of the amount of suffering for the want of sufficient clothing and shelter from the chilly winds of icy Winter. "I was naked and ye clothed me," Matt. 25. Again, Winter seems to be the time employed for acquiring knowledge. It affords a time for study and meditation, not only to the rising generation as they are making preparation for future usefulness, but it also affords much useful time for ministerial work.

The work of evangelism seems to be more energetically carried on in the Winter than any other season of the year. This is fully verified by the work that is being done, of which we have a report in almost every paper. We do not know as people are more likely to die in the Winter than in the Summer, but it seems sometimes as if the Lord had to wait a little with his work for a more convenient season. This season, if ever it comes, must be in the Winter.

Religious work always seems to prosper better in Winter than Summer. This is not so because God favors this season of the year more, but because any cause dependent upon human agency, prospers in proportion to the time and energy employed in the cause.

God's work claims our attention at all seasons of the year alike. Let us pray for more universal energy at all times.

C. FORNEY.

Falls City, Neb.

At Folkestone, England, an extraordinary person calling himself "Elijah, the prophet," has been astonishing the people of that town. He goes about dressed in sheepskins, and carries above his head a placard bearing the words, "I am Elijah, the Prophet," and quoting from Malachi as his authority, "Behold I will send you Elijah, the Prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." He has addressed several gatherings, and has a notion that England has some connection with the Ten Lost Tribes. An attempt has been made to punish him for causing an obstruction in the streets, but the magistrate dismissed the charge.

OUR HEAVENLY KING.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

OUR heavenly King
To Him we sing
Our songs of grateful praise;
While here we stay
We'll Him obey,—
Thus spend our earthly days.

So when we die
With Him on high
We'll reign forevermore;
And sing His praise
Through endless days,
On heaven's golden shore.

For there's sweet rest
For all the blest,
And none shall weary be,
Who dwell in love
With those above,
And Christ their Savior see.

Then let us strive
While we're alive
To gain that happy land;
Unceasing pray
Both night and day
For His protecting hand.

For Christ is all
And those who call
On Him shall live in peace,
Where love is pure,
And friendship sure,
And pleasures never cease.

Then let us try
To live on high,
With Christ who's all in all,
Which we can do
If we'll be true,
And heed His gracious call.

THE INFIDEL AND THE BIBLE.

A VIRGINIA banker, who was chairman of a noted infidel club, was once traveling on horseback through Kentucky, having with him bank-bills to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars, when he came to a lonely forest, where robberies and murders were said to be frequent, he was soon lost through taking a wrong road. The darkness of night came quickly over him, and how to escape the threatened danger he knew not. In his alarm he suddenly espied in the distance a dim light, and urging his horse forward, he at length came to a wretched looking cabin. He knocked, and the door was opened by a woman who said that her husband was out hunting, but would shortly return, and she was sure that he would cheerfully give him shelter for the night. The banker tied up his horse and entered the cabin, but with feelings that could better be imagined than described.

There he was with a large sum of money, and perhaps in the house of one of the robbers whose name was terror to the country. In a short time the man of the house returned; he had a deer skin cap, seemed much fatigued, and in no talkative mood; all this foreboded the infidel no good. He felt for his pistols in his pockets, and placed them so as to be ready for instant use.

The man asked the stranger to retire to bed, but this he declined, saying that he would sit by the fire all night. The man urged, but the more he urged, the infidel was alarmed; he felt sure that this was his last night, but he was determined to sell his life as dearly as possible; his infidel principles gave him no comfort. His fears grew into perfect agony. What was to be done? At length the backwoodsman rose, and reaching to a wooden shelf he took down an old book and said, "Well, stranger, if you won't go to bed I will, but it is my custom always to read a chapter of holy Scripture before going to bed." What a change did these words produce! Alarm was at once removed from the skeptic's mind. Though avowing himself an infidel, he now had confidence in the Bible. He felt safe; he felt that the man who kept an old Bible in the house and read it, and bent his knees in prayer, was no robber or murderer.

He listened to the simple prayer of the good man, and at once dismissed all his fears, and lay down in that rude cabin and slept as calmly as ever he had under his father's roof. From that night he ceased to revile the good old Bible. He became a sincere Christian, and often related the story of his eventful journey to prove the folly of infidelity.—Sel.

A DIALOGUE ON MASONRY.

THE following conversation is said to have taken place between two neigbors—P. and D.:

P.—Good morning, Mr. D. What seems to be the matter? You look so downcast.

D.—It is no wonder. I suppose you have heard that my son John has joined the Free Masons.

P.—Yes, but that is nothing strange. I rather looked for it before this.

D.—Why so, Mr. P.?

P.—Because he has been taught from his childhood that Masonry is both profitable and popular.

D.—Mr. P., are you trying to insult me more than my son did? From a child I have taught him that Masonry is both selfish and sinful. I have also been to the expense of getting for him all the anti-masonic books I could hear of, even the Christian Cynosure. I have done all in my power to get his mind fixed against Masonry.

P.—Mr. D., let me explain the matter to you more clearly, and then see if we cannot find where you have taught your boy contrary to what you think you did. There are some things stranger than either words or books. Are there not in our town produce merchants who are Christians, and at the same time anti-masons? Are there not in our town all kinds of merchants who are anti masons?

D.—Yes, but what has that to do with the case?

P.—A good deal. Have you not for the last twenty years sold all your grain to Mr. A., a rank Mason? Do you not buy all your groceries of Mr. W., and your dry goods of Mr. B., and are they not both Masons? It is not only you, but nearly every pretended anti-mason will deal with Masons in preference to men of their own minds. Your son is ambitious, just going into business, and is not blind about such things. He knows that the Masons are sworn to support one another, and also have the patronage of most all anti-masons. If all the anti-masons would stop supporting Masons, the thing would not stand two years. Were I a young man, just going into business, and had nothing in view but making money, I would join the Masons. Now Mr. D., I presume you can see why I was not surprised when your son joined the Masons.

D.—I see the point. I have done wrong, and many others are doing the same and do not know it.

Many have yielded to go a mile with Satan, who never intended to go with him twain; but, when once on the way with him, have been inveigled further and further, until they know not how to leave him. Thus he leads poor creatures down into the depth of sin, by winding stairs, and they see not the end of that to which they are going.—Worthington.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, } EDITORS AND
M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the eight names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - MARCH 6, 1879.

IF Simon Harshman will send us his address, his order shall be cheerfully attended to.

THERE is a bill before the Legislature of Illinois, to prohibit first, second and third cousins marrying.

BROTHER J. W. Southwood's address is changed from Monument City, Indiana, to Lincoln, Wabash county, Indiana.

THE address of Brother Daniel Fry is now changed from Mt. Carroll, Illinois, to Kent, Stephenson county, Illinois.

LOTTIE Kelring writes that the Woodbury church, Pennsylvania, is prospering. Four have been added to the church since the first of January.

IF the person from North Liberty, Ind., will send us his name, we can give him credit on subscription, and send the book ordered, viz.: "Bible vs Materialism."

THE price of the BRETHREN AT WORK, from the first of April to the end of the year is $1.10. A number of new subscribers might be obtained on these terms.

Two more have been baptized in Denmark: one of them a young man of promising usefulness. Brother Hope writes encouragingly of the prospects of the mission.

BROTHER David E. Price, writing from the Central Mission field, says that he is having very pleasant meetings—well attended by attentive hearers. Two were added to the church at Lacon.

BROTHER Lemuel Hillery has gone to Woodford county to hold a series of meetings. From there he goes to Carthage, Missouri, and thence to Kansas, to spend considerable time preaching in that State.

A GENTLEMAN, writing from Jerusalem, gives a lamentable picture of the distress prevailing in the Holy City. The Winter rains have been very scarce, and the land throughout is scourged by swarms of locusts.

SOME of our readers wish to know whether we will keep the Brethren's Hymn and Tune Book for sale. As yet, we have made no arrangement to that effect. When the book is completed, and ready for delivery, further notice will be given.

BROTHER C. H. Balsbaugh says: "I have often been profoundly grateful that the Lord gave us our beloved Brother Stein. * * * * Never did the commission receive a more thorough analysis. Poor Ray, writhes and groans and foams as if in the embrace of a Boa Constrictor."

PERSONS subscribing, or sending subscribers, for either of our papers, should always state distinctly whether the subscription is to extend for one year from date, or only to the end of the present year. The price of the BRETHREN AT WORK to the end of 1879 is only $1.30.

BROTHER Henry Landis, one of our hard-working agents, living in Carroll county, Indiana, has been confined to his bed for some time with the lung fever, but when heard from, February 17, was improving. May the Lord spare him for still greater usefulness.

THE Mouth of Gold. A series of dramatic sketches illustrating the life and times of Chrysostom is an interesting volume, and cannot fail to edify any one who is fond of poetry. Price $1.00. Published by A. S. Barnes & Co., 111 and 113 William St., New York.

BROTHER T. N. Basset says: "My address is Tehama, Cherokee county, Kansas. We have a fine country. The church, here, consists of twenty members, one speaker and three deacons. We would be much pleased if more help in the ministry would move here, and help carry on the work."

THERE has been many a dog-fight over a bone that did not have one particle of meat on it, and so have people often fallen out about things that were of no earthly value whatever. They who quarrel and fight are sure to lose more than they gain. Better give up the love of contention and keep peace in the family.

WRITING from May Hill, Adam's county, Ohio, W. Q. Calvert says: "We (the home ministers) closed our series of meetings here to-day, Feb. 16th, it having been in progress two weeks. Five young men of good character and standing made application to be received into the church. The brethren and sisters are very much encouraged. Thank God for the blessings which he adds to our labors."

OUR aged Brother, John Metzger, is in the field, and hard at work again. It seems that nothing but death will stop him. He always says, "It is better to wear out than to rust out." If some of those, who are rusting out for the want of a systematic plan to carry on missionary work, would follow this old brother's example they would have but little time left to grumble about plans or any thing else.

THE FREE DISCUSSION is the title of a monthly, published by Brother L. O. Hummer, of Topeka, Kansas. Our impression is that the paper is a little too "free" for the good of our humble and self-denial religion. It is enough that we be as our Master, whose kingdom is not of this world. Care should be taken to avoid the mixing of the church and world. The paper is edited with ability, and contains some solid thought.

BROTHER Jesse Calvert, writing from Herring, Ohio, under date of February 21st, says: "I came here Saturday the 15th, and on the 16th, dedicated the new church, a very good building, 40x53. It was filled to overflowing, and good attention given to the preaching, which continued till to-day with good interest. Nine were added to the church by baptism, one restored, and another to be restored to-morrow. I left the meeting in the hands of Brother D. Brower, as I was compelled to leave for other fields."

BROTHER John Metzger, under date of February 22nd, says: "On the 30th of January, myself and wife left home for Indiana, where I have lived for a number of years, and on the 31st met with the Brethren in church meeting in the old meeting-house. An election was held for three speakers, resulting in the choice of Samuel Saylor, Joseph Neher and Solomon Blickenstaff. I left my home yesterday morning, and came here to Adams county, Illinois. Had meeting near Lorraine last evening; good congregation. I will likely remain here one week. Hope the Lord will prosper our work."

BROTHER John Nicholson, writing from Bristoville, Ohio, says: "Our Toledo meeting was a success. Our meeting in the Maumee church, Defiance county, Ohio, closed with ten accessions. Brother R. K. Berkeybile, from Toledo, assisted me part of the time. The meeting in Poplar Ridge church closed with four additions, and two others made application. These two were members of the United Brethren church. In the meeting I held here Brother A. Berkeybile preached two discourses. At the meeting on the south side of the Maumee River, I preached five discourses, and baptized one, a young man of considerable talent. Arrived home safely on the 17th of February."

WM. C. THURMAN was in Lanark last week, and preached a few times in the Advent church. He called on us a few times while here, and explained his new views of the prophecies. He is still working away on the prophecies of Daniel, but has learned a lesson from his past mistakes, and now sets no definite time for the coming of Christ. His present theory is that Daniel, as it reads in the Hebrew, says nothing about the coming of the Lord, but speaks more particularly of the breaking of the Arab power, and the opening up of Palestine to the return of the Jews. He has another new theory about baptism, but we did not learn what that is. During the last year he has been living in Chicago, where he has a small congregation. His home is in Boston, but he now goes to Virginia. We give the above as a matter of news, thinking that some of our readers would like to know what the man is doing.

BRETHREN David Frantz, Wagoner and Miller lately held four meetings at the Urbana church, in Champaign county, Illinois. That congregation stands in need of more ministerial aid. It would do well by some good, energetic minister who will settle among them. Address A. J. Bowers, St. Joseph, Ill.

BROTHER J. G Royer, writing from Monticello, Indiana, says: "Our meetings held at three different places in our district of church, were well attended, and the preaching of the Word attended with encouraging results. The church has been warmed up. Nineteen sinners made willing to take up the cross of Jesus; many others set to counting the cost, and we believe much good done in the name of Jesus. Brethren Daniel Shively and Daniel Bowser from Peru, Indiana, Samuel Myers from Adamsboro, and Abraham Miller from Wolcott, visited us during our meetings, and held forth the Word of Life. May the Lord bless them and us all, and keep us faithful to the end."

THE editor of the Woodbury (Md.) News says: "We attended a church in Baltimore not long since, when the preacher prayed earnestly that God would bless him in his sermon and direct him what to say, that he would dictate every word that he should utter. When the time came for him to preach, he pulled a manuscript out of his pocket and read a sermon that he had written months ago and preached a dozen times. We should pronounce actions of this kind sacrilegious, hypocritical, and mockery of God of the worst type. This thing is often done and we think calls loudly for a reform in our fashionable pulpits."

THE following shows whether it does any good to send out tracts and pamphlets: "I do not belong to your church, still I am a faithful reader of your papers and books. I read all the pamphlets and tracts I can get hold of, and some of them have made lasting impressions on my mind. I wish I had more of them; they are the very thing to do good. Send them out all over the land, into places where they do not have preaching. You know not what good they do. There is one brother living in my neighborhood, and we like to hear your people preach. I am almost a believer of your doctrine. I am trying to learn more of your church, and what I know, I believe to be right. I wish I had the tract, called the "Railroad Sermon;" I think I will send and get a lot of them.—REBECCA J. ROBERTS."

THIS is the way a boy writes: "I have been a reader of your paper, and was beginning to get quite interested in it, and the principles that it advocates, but I have not seen its columns in my parents' house this year. I am a boy thirteen years of age, and my parents are members of the church, and we are poor. I know there is a poor fund containing money to be used for sending the paper to those who are not able to pay for it, but I have a dollar, and I will send it in this letter, so send the paper along for eight months." We wish every poor family had a boy in it like that. That boy has pluck, and the world is in need of thousands of just such boys. Hope, when he grows up to be a man, that he will always keep a religious paper in the family. God, bless the poor boys.

ANOTHER CHANCE TO DO GOOD.

AS there are a number of churches and Sunday-schools desiring copies of the BRETHREN AT WORK, for free distribution among the outsiders who attend the services, we conclude to make them a special offer, for we believe this is one method of doing a great deal of good. The Children at Work may be distributed among the children and young people, while the BRETHREN AT WORK should be placed in the hands of those who are older. In answer to inquiry already made, we make the following liberal offer:

BRETHREN AT WORK	For 4 months.	For 6 months	For 1 year.
10 Copies to one address	$1 70	$ 2 60	$ 5 10
15 " " "	2 50	3 60	7 50
25 " " "	3 50	7 25	14 10
50 " " "	5 50	11 25	22 00

Here is a chance for doing missionary work in every congregation in the Brotherhood, especially those congregations that are somewhat isolated, and where the doctrine of our people is not so generally known. Congregations feeling disposed to do this much of spreading the truth in their localities, among their neighbors, should raise the money, and order a number of papers for three or six months, to be sent to some one whom they may appoint to take care of and distribute them after the close of services. If you are holding meetings at some isolated points, send for copies of the paper and distribute them among the people. If it is found out that you have good papers to distribute after meeting, you will have no trouble about holding the congregations. The reading of the paper will awaken an interest for preaching, thus causing the people to search more diligently for the truth.

Much, however, depends on the contents of the paper. Our people are generally very cautious about what they distribute, and we thank God for it. The world is too full of pernicious literature already. We shall do our utmost to keep the columns of the BRETHREN AT WORK clear of objectionable matter, and aim to publish only such articles as may be a credit to the cause, so that no one need feel ashamed to hand the paper to either his neighbor or a stranger. Our object is to preach the Gospel, earnestly contending for the faith once delivered unto the saints.

If this method of spreading the truth suits you, and you think it will accomplish good, lay the matter before the members and see what can be done.

FUTURE RECOGNITION.

Please give us your views on future recognition. Will we know each other in the future? By answering you will oblige many brethren.

A BROTHER.

WE have much faith in the doctrine of future recognition, believing it clearly taught in the Scriptures. The following, spoken by the Savior to the Jews, is satisfactory evidence to that effect:

"Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are: Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." Luke 13: 24–28.

Here, we are taught that the disobedient Jews, who rejected the Savior, shall weep and gnash their teeth when they see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom, and they themselves thrust out. As they shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, it follows that they will be able to recognize them, either by former acquaintance, or by their being pointed out to them. This is one proof of future recognition.

The transfiguration is our next point of evidence:

"And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." Matt. 17: 1–4.

Long before this time Moses had died and was buried, while Elias, who was translated, never saw death, yet they were known by the three apostles, who were with the Savior on the Mount. It makes no difference how they found out one was Moses and the other Elias, the point proven, is that these two men were recognized after death, and it is but reasonable to suppose that they also knew each other. Peter's language in the fourth verse shows that he knew them.

Our next reference is the case of the rich man and Lazarus:

"There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: and there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom." Luke 16: 19–23.

Lazarus lay at the rich man's gate—they learned to know each other in this world, and when they reached the unseen world, or the abode of disembodied spirits, they at once recognized each other, though far apart, for the rich man saw Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

It is not likely that we will know any less after the resurrection than now. It is safer to presume that our knowledge will increase rather than diminish. If this be true, we certainly will recognize each other, and even if we do not just happen to know each other when we first meet, there will be plenty of opportunities for finding out who this, that one, and the other is. We shall, in some way, become acquainted with Abrahmu, Isaac, Jacob and all the prophets. They, as well as others, will be pointed out to us and in this way we may become acquainted with thousands who walk and talk in the land of the redeemed. Let us labor to meet each other beyond the river. J. H. M.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

I would like to ask you a few questions, to be answered through the paper; (1) Was Christ himself a carpenter by trade? (2) In what did the Master mean the disciples had followed him in Matt. 19: 28? (3) Why do the elders break the bread the same as the brethren? (4) Did Christ drink the contents of the cup, when he said, "But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom?" Matt. 26: 29. Your brother in Christ,

H. W. Landis.

CHRIST was a carpenter by trade, for Mark 6: 3 says: "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him." This is decisive proof that he, who made the world did not think himself too exalted to work at a useful employment the greater part of his life on earth, thus setting a good example before his followers who should come after him. Idle ministers, and idle professors, are not true Christians. They are of but little benefit to either the church or the world.

2. Matt. 19: 28 reads as follows: "And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

The rendering of this passage, as it stands in the common version, is not good. Christ himself was not regenerated, hence no one can follow him in the regeneration. Below we give a few renderings, which will likely throw some light on the passage:

Anderson's Translation. "Jesus said to them Verily I say to you, That, in the restoration, when the Son of man shall sit on his glorious throne, you also who have followed me shall sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

Wilson's Translation. "And Jesus said to them, Indeed, I say to you, That in the renovation, when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory, you, my followers, shall sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

The language doubtless refers to that great resolution, or change in the universe when the dead shall rise, and there shall be a general change and a new order of things start up. The meaning of the passage would seem to be about this: "Verily, I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel, in the day of renovation when the Son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory."

3. This question is puzzling many minds, and we discover that quite a difference of sentiment prevails. We have on hand an article, written by Brother Wm. B. Sell, of Missouri, giving some of the reasons why the sisters do not break the bread of communion. The article will be published soon. But with all due respect for the practice of the general Brotherhood we must say, that we have never been able to see it just as they practice it. After having carefully examined the reasons usually given, and compared them with our understanding of the Scriptures, we are confirmed in our conclusions, that there should be no distinction between the brethren and sisters regarding the breaking of the bread, or passing the cup. Our idea would be to make no more distinction in the breaking of bread than in feet-washing or the Lord's supper, but that in all these things there be neither male nor female, neither bond nor free, but that we all be one in Christ. We might present a number of reasons for our views on this question, but think that the Brethren at Work is not the place to discuss matters of this kind.

4. We think not; for the Savior took the cup, gave thanks, and gave it to the disciples, telling them to drink all of it. Matt. 26: 29. A careful reading of the narative, as recorded in Mutthew, Mark and Luke would seem to indicate that he did not partake of either the bread or cup after the giving of thanks. J. H. M.

CHILDREN'S MEETINGS.

ONE evening after meeting in Lanark, some little boys and girls came to the writer and wanted a children's meeting just as soon as possible. Well, the brethren thought it "possible" to name Monday evening, Feb. 17th, for such a meeting; so when the time came there were about fifty little boys and girls present, and quite a number who were not so little. After singing a few good hymns, Brother D. F. Eby spoke to them about singing with the spirit. Some hymns teach joy, hence should be sung in a joyful spirit; some are solemn, hence should be sung in a solemn spirit. Brother Moore then told them something about the life and times of the Savior. Brother M. V. Sword followed with some Bible incidents with which the little boys and girls seemed quite familiar. The course was a short review of Bible stories taught the Infant Class. This class is composed of about thirty little boys and girls who are not supplied with books, but who are taught Bible facts by Brother Sword, in a plain conversational way. The writer then spoke to them a few minutes, closing with the following: Two men went from Jerusalem to tell king David what Absalom intended doing; after they had gone a little ways, a boy saw them and went and told Absalom, who sent men after them to arrest them. The two friends of David went to a man's house in Bahurim. This man had a well in his yard, so the two friends went down into the well, and the woman "took and spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon;" and the men who were after them could not find them. Question: Who were the two men who hid in the well?

Before the meeting closed, the children requested another meeting, hence an appointment was made for Monday evening, Feb. 24th. This was a pleasant meeting; about seventy-five children were present, besides many older people. One thing which forcibly impressed my mind was this: Brother Harrison was at meeting about ten or twelve minutes before the time, and many children being there also, he said, "Let us sing." All were ready at once, and joined in singing a hymn. Another hymn was selected (the children doing that part promptly), and Brother H. asked how many were brave enough to start it. A few hands went up. "All right, ready, sing," said he. A few voices were heard at first, but before a line was sung, all were quiet. Then said he, "How many are willing, not only to start, but to sing the piece through? How many are, not only willing to do it, but how many are brave enough to go through?" More hands went up now than before. "All right, ready, sing," said he, and nearly all tried. At first it seemed they would fail, for they had neither the same key nor the same time; but before they were through with the first verse, all had the same key and the same time. "Now," said he, "this is what we want. You will have this work to do sometime, and we want you to be able, not only to start, but to go through. And when you start, you will likely make more or less blunders; but don't stop for them, — go on, press forward, and you will be sure to succeed." Yes, verily: for the man who will stop because he blundered is not wise. Go on and do better is far more sensible.

After prayer the little folks were addressed by S. J. Harrison, M. V. Sword, Lyman Eby and the writer. The question about the two men in the well was answered, and another one given them. The talks were brief, interspersed with singing. Care must be taken at such meetings that the children be not wearied. We began promptly at seven and closed at eight; and all seemed happy and joyful. May the Lord help all of us to be more concerned for our children, and try to do them all the good we can. Oh, what a blessing to have good children, and if they are not good, whose fault is it? Let parents answer this. M. M. E.

FIRST ANNUAL MEETING.

Will some one be so kind as to explain, through the Brethren at Work, when and where the first Annual Meeting was held? A Brother.

ANNUAL Meetings, among the Brethren, are but a little over a hundred years old, they having been introduced, or rather came into use, gradually.

Soon after the Brethren commenced settling in this country, and organizing churches, they found it necessary to hold church meetings for the purpose of attending to such business as pertained to the good of the cause. They were remarkable students of the Bible, it being their only rule of faith and practice. They were humble, and had a disposition to learn from each other. At their church meetings, they were free to talk over the points of difference between them, in order that they might come to a greater unanimity of practice. Questions of importance were introduced and talked over in a Christian spirit. Sometimes grave difficulties came up, and were disposed of according to the best light and knowledge they possessed, always pointing to the Bible as their standard of truth, and their only bond of union.

At first, the churches were confined to a small portion of territory, and held their yearly Feasts, which seem to have been preceded by council meetings, which were attended by members and ministers from every church. This method was found sufficient for every purpose for the first thirty or forty years, but as the churches multiplied and spread into other States, thus rendering it impracticable for all the churches to be represented at every feast, it became necessary to set apart every year a certain time and place for this general council meeting. In this way our Annual Meetings were introduced among the Brethren, but just when we are not able to tell. We know of no history giving the date of the first Annual Meeting among us, save what we gather from the Brethren's Encyclopedia, page 10. Brother Kurtz gives the date of the First Love-feast in Germantown, Pa., on Christmas day, December 25th, 1723, but says nothing definitely about when and where the first Annual Meeting was held. Likely brother Abram Cassel can supply our lack of information on this point. As the Brethren first settled in the vicinity of Germantown, Pa., it would seem reasonable that their first Annual Meeting was also held in that vicinity.

In those early days these meetings were held in a very simple manner; very much like our present council meetings. They had no clerk, nor were any minutes kept. Every thing was asked and answered by the word of mouth. Important cases were frequently answered by letters, which were sent to the churches where such difficulties existed, or from where the case came. The object of these yearly meetings was not to legislate, or make laws, but to ascertain what the Scriptures taught on all questions that came before the meeting. With them every thing was settled by the Bible—they referred to chapter and verse, if it were possible to do so. They did their best to reproduce the Apostolic order of church government, and conformed, as best they knew, to the exact teachings of the Scriptures.

This is what we are pleased to call the old order, or rather the Apostolic order. It is the original ground occupied by our ancient Brethren one hundred years ago, and by the apostles more than eighteen hundred years ago, and is the only ground that is infallibly safe.

TO BE ENLARGED.

LAST June the Children at Work was first issued from this office as a semi-monthly, exclusively designed for children and young people generally. On the third of October we began to issue it weekly in order to meet the demand of Bible-schools, and many of our subscribers. Improvements in contents and appearance have been made from time to time, as circumstances would permit. The hearts of many dear children have been made glad, and, we trust, brought nearer to Jesus who died and arose for them. Perhaps not a few of us who are older in years, have been fed also, and thus added to our faith and comfort in divine things. To us the privilege of talking to the children, is highly appreciated. From them will come the future church, or rather by them will the house of God be perpetuated. They will constitute a link in God's great chain which he is making for his own glory.

These children are living in a reading age, and it is important what they read. It is by reading that many minds will be moulded, hence great care should be taken to give them the right material with which to shape and polish their minds. The Bible is the only Book that can do this work right; all other works are only helps to get to the Bible.

Up to the present we have been laboring under some disadvantages in publishing the Children at Work, and the income barely paid expenses. These things, however, are of little weight when compared to the benefits accruing to the youth. We are still willing "to spend and be spent" for the good of the youth. And in order more fully to reach their minds, and to give room for much good matter that has been sent to us, we some time ago concluded to enlarge the paper; hence shall soon send the readers of the Children at Work a larger paper at the same price — fifty cents a year. We hope our readers will do what they can to extend its circulation. Send for sample copies, and for price list to those who want to distribute the paper free. Do not think to go into the business to make money, for there is not "lots of money" in it, but if you want to work, looking to Jesus for your reward, come and help us. There is plenty of vexation and labor in the publication of a paper, but the consciousness of doing good, and leading souls to Christ, is sufficient incentive to overcome all the trials. Come, then, and help in the great work of leading souls to Christ.

THE TRACT WORK.

BROTHER G. W. Hoxie, of Applegate, Jackson county, Oregon, says: "According to offers made for sending pamphlets free for distribution, I request you to send some to me, for I am the only brother here in the ministry. I tell you I need all the help I can get to make the doctrine known. As fast as I read your papers I send them forth for others to read, and when they tell me that they have read them, and re-read them three or four times, it does me good. My soul does bless the Lord for the kind offers made by the Tract Association. I sent you money for tracts before, but my money is about out, and I am poor, but still I am willing to work for the salvation of souls. Oh! brethren, if you could only send some one to labor with me in the Gospel, how glad I would feel."

The money appropriated by the Association for the free distribution of tracts was all used before this brother's order reached us, yet his call was too urgent to be refused, so we sent him a package of pamphlets at our expense. May God bless him in his efforts at doing good.

THE BRAZIL CALAMITY.

THE sufferings in Brazil baffle description. It seems that the worst of calamities are reserved for our day. But as the end draweth nigh we may look for such things:

New York, Feb. 14. — The Herald's letter from Brazil gives a frightful picture of the drought, famine, and pestilence raging in the northern portion of that country for more than a year past. It is said to be the greatest calamity known in two hundred years. Half a million people have been swept away by starvation and disease. The small-pox and black plague carried off victims in appalling numbers, and thousands of bodies are rotting on the open trenches at Ladoga, Funda. Thousands of other corpses are torn and devoured by wild animals. The starving peasants eat up their own offspring. Some places, including the city of Corea, are depopulated. There are terrible struggles for life. The children are abandoned, and the young souls sold for bread. Thousands of living skeletons were to be seen. Government aid is tardy. The letter presents a picture of woe such as can hardly be paralleled in history, except by the siege of Jerusalem and the black death which desolated Europe in the fourteenth century.

BUSINESS NOTICE.

If any of our subscribers do not receive their papers regularly they will please inform us at once, giving their name and address in full, always stating by whom the subscription was sent and when. Do not write abusive letters, but explain yourself fully. We do not send the paper to any address unless the party has subscribed for it, or some one has subscribed and paid for him. We send no dons to parties who have not ordered the paper, and if the paper should chance, by mistake, to go a few weeks over the time of subscription we are responsible.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Some one will please compare and explain Acts 1: 18, and Matt. 27: 5.

Also Ex. 21: 10 11, and John 1: 18. H. H. R.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE REEDY.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8: 33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

NOAH'S ARK.

Will some one tell me how long Noah was building the ark? ISRAEL PENROD.

THIS is a question I doubt whether a person now living can answer correctly, as I know of no history, either sacred or profane, that tells us the amount of time used in its construction. If Brother Penrod would have asked the question, How long do you suppose Noah was building the ark? I would answer thus:

According to the dimensions and specifications of that building, as laid down in the Bible, I would presume it would take four men about seven years to construct it. And as the number "seven" seems to be sacred throughout the sacred writings of the Bible, I suppose Noah was engaged seven years in building the ark. We often hear it said from the pulpit, that Noah was preaching to the Antideluvians one hundred and twenty years, and that the ark was under construction the same length of time. I find no such Scripture, and ministers should be careful, and not make Scriptures of their own.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

THE relative pronoun which refers, as its antecedent, to them in the preceding verse, who had received Christ, and to whom he gave power to become the sons of God. Persons who become the sons of God are born of the spirit. The Jews set great value on their natural descent from Abraham. And perhaps no people ever had more to be proud of, in the matter of ancestry, than had the Jews. Some of the noblest and grandest characters that grace the pages of history are numbered in Abraham's line. But much as they valued this, this birth of blood, this royal, noble blood, or much as they valued their legal rites, their births of the will of the flesh, the apostle informs them, that these births will avail them nothing, but if they will be saved they must be born of God, and they could only thus be born through faith in Jesus Christ.

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 3: 12, 13? 1. Who is the builder? 2. What the material? 3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire? 4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire?" B. B. WHITMAN.

As to the first question, the apostle himself has answered that, any man, an indefinite number, whoever wishes to use the material, may do so.

2. What the material? It is optional with the builder to use good or bad material, if he select the gold, silver, precious stones, meaning good, sound doctrine and practices, such as are provided in God's great storehouse, the precious Scriptures, he can, with these, erect a building that will abide the test of any fiery ordeal. But if he select the wood, hay, or stubble, representing the false and pernicious doctrine and practices that prevailed then in the Corinthian church and which have since prevailed, to the detriment of this holy building, then when the fiery test comes these human creeds, human opinions, false glosses, no matter what they may be, how venerable they may be, will be consumed by the devouring fire.

3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire? It is not literal fire here spoken of, but the fire of God's judgments. Fire being the most penetrating and searching thing known in nature, the metaphor is frequently employed in Scripture to denote the penetrating nature of God's tests, as gold, silver, and precious stones can endure the fire, they can stand the ordeal, wood, hay, or stubble will be consumed. Just what the judgments are to which the apostle alludes, cannot perhaps be determined. Some think that the day, he speaks of, is the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, and the sweeping away of the Jewish polity; if so, then we may know what the apostle means by the term fire. The term points out the extreme rigor, and totally destructive nature of those judgments.

If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved so as by fire? If the material used were wood, hay, or stubble, meaning doctrines not drawn from God's holy Word, then, of course, they must perish in the fiery test, but the builder, what of him? First, he shall suffer loss; great indeed will be his loss. He may have preached with great earnestness, he may have endured many hardships, he may have labored very diligently, no matter, if his teachings were not pure, unadulterated truth, all his labor will be in vain, all his work, no matter how much labor they may have cost him, must and will be burned up.

"Yet he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." His personal salvation will be a hair's breadth deliverance if he be saved, a mere escape. If his false teaching be the result of ignorance, God, in his mercy, will extend salvation to him, but it will be barely salvation, if, however, there be a portion of willful and obstinate ignorance in him his case is far more critical. The above is certainly a solemn warning against error. The man who teaches or practices an error is exposed to imminent danger. Unless his misconceptions be the result of sheer ignorance, and he be very sincere, he has not one particle of ground for hope. Oh, let us, by God's grace, disabuse our minds of error.

MATTIE A. LEAR.

THE CHARACTER OF HAPPY LIFE.

How happy is he, born and taught,
That serveth not another's will;
Whose armor is his honest thought,
And simple truth his utmost skill!

Whose passions not his masters are,
Whose soul is still prepared for death,
Untied unto the worldly care
Of public fame, or private breath:

Who envies none that chance doth raise,
Or vice; who never understood
How deepest wounds are given by praise;
Nor rules of state, but rules of good:

Who hath his life from rumors freed,
Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
Whose state can neither flatterers feed,
Nor ruin make oppressors great:

Who God doth late and early pray
More of his grace than gifts to lend;
And entertains the harmless day
With a religious book or friend:

This man is freed from servile bands,
Of hope to rise, or fear to fall:
Lord of himself, though not of lands;
And having nothing, yet hath all.

PEACE.

BY W. J. H. BAUMAN.

PEACE is something that ought to be cherished by every Christian; peace with all men is what we should strive for. To establish peace was the object of the Savior's mission on earth. Peace means to be quiet, free from war or disturbance. But peace, like everything else, may be abused; and a good thing turned into a curse will invariably prove the worst kind of a curse. To illustrate: A certain man having business away from home for several weeks, employed a man to take care of his things while he was absent, and told his neighbor what a good, steady hand he had employed. "Yes," said his neighbor, "if he were a little steadier he would stand still entirely." Thus it is with many people. If they were a little more peaceable they would stand still entirely, and let everything go to destruction for fear of hurting somebody.

Often members in the church will sacrifice principle (unwittingly) for fear somebody will think hard of them. This looks like healing the outside of a wound while the inside is getting worse all the time.

Gospel peace implies the removal of cause. It is healing in its nature and permanent in its cure. Instead of being deceptive and smuggling in disposition it is open-hearted and frank. It seeks the good of all, and hence when it sees any one jumping over the precipice of sin, it will lift the warning voice, though it may be spurned and repulsed harshly. It will keep on laboring for the good of others whether their labor is appreciated or repulsed. They will tell the people their sins and the house of Jacob its transgressions whether the people or the house of Jacob like it or not. Their object is peace on a permanent basis. They recognize the correctness of Solomon's saying: "Open rebuke is better than secret love." O, brethren, let us labor for this kind of peace. It may hurt for the time being, but will most assuredly afterwards yield the peaceable fruit of righteousness. If we make enemies by telling men the truth, we have Jesus in our company; he did the same.

Peaceful men, according to the Gospel, are men of principle, and instead of seeking their own praise, honor, and applause, they seek the glory of God, and find honor only in the principle of truth and love. They seek not their own, but the good of others; and as no one's good consisteth in being wrong, they will not flatter the wrong doer. Their speech will be seasoned with Gospel salt. They will be controlled by the serpent's wisdom, and the dove's harmlessness. We should always labor for peace of this kind. In our lives should be exemplified the song of the heavenly choir at the time of our Savior's birth: "Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth and good will toward men." God should be glorified in our bodies and our spirits for they are his. "Hallowed be thy name" should shine forth conspicuously in our character. That peace is our object—should be exemplified in all our intercourse with our fellow-men. Our speech, our conduct, our all, should exemplify the fact that good will towards all men reigns in our hearts.

If Gospel power reigns in our hearts, we will have no pleasure in the destruction of any; not even of our enemies. Such peace never kicks the falling, but does all in its power to reach forth the helping hand to the needy. This kind of peace is taught by Christ, in example and precept. When he addressed the scribes and Pharisees as hypocrites, &c., he aimed to do them good. When he told the sellers and buyers in the temple, that they had made the Lord's house a den of thieves, he intended their good, though he brought upon himself their displeasure. He sought not his own, but the good of others. In the severe reproofs of the martyr, Stephen, as well as in his humble resignation to the treatment he received, and in the prayer he offered, the principles of true peace are exemplified.

May God help all to follow after peace and holiness, without which no man shall see (enjoy) the Lord.

THE HEART.

THROB, throb, throb. Never sleeping, but often tired, loaded with care, chilled by despair, bleeding with wounds, often inflicted by those who do not understand it, or burdened with affection, it must beat on for a lifetime. Nothing finds a lodgment in its chambers that does not add to its labors. Every thought that the mind generates steps upon the heart before it wings its way into the outer world. The memory of the dead loved ones are mountains of weight upon its sensitiveness; the anxieties of the soul stream to the heart and bank themselves upon it, as the early snowdrifts cover the tender plant; love, if it loves, fires it with feverish warmth and makes it the more sensitive; hate, if it hates, beats it to desperation and fills it with conflicts. Still it works on. When slumber closes the eyelids the heart is beating—beating beneath all its burdens; it works while we sleep; it works while we play; it aches when we laugh. Do not unnecessarily wound it; do not add to its bleeding wounds. Speak a kind word to cheer it; warm it when it is cold; encourage it when it despairs.—Selected.

WEBSTER once beautifully said: "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time affects it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; if we work upon our immortal minds—if we imbue them with the just fear of God and love of our fellow-men—we engrave upon those tables something which will brighten for all eternity."

"I AM a home missionary," once observed a Christian mother; "six pairs of little eyes are daily watching my looks, as well as listening to my words; and I wish my children never to see in me that which they may not imitate."

These things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.—John.

From David A. Norcross.

I ACCEPT and heartily endorse brother D. C. Moomaw's proposition in No. 6, present tense. I am ready to lend a helping hand. I have but very little of this world's goods, and only one arm to work with, and a wife and five children to support, and now out of employment; but when I meditate upon the goodness of God and his blessed and consoling promises, and that his word stands sure, I am led to believe that he will never leave nor forsake his children. The word is, "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Mark 16: 15. How can you, who have plenty and to spare of this world's goods, draw your purse strings against such a divine utterance? Are we following the footsteps of our Savior and the apostles, in this matter? See Matt. 11: 1 and Acts 8: 40. Faith says amen to everything that Christ says. The word is, "Go teach," and all that cannot say amen, would better "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith." We have brethren that are mighty in the Scriptures, and are running over with zeal, but are not able to carry on the work themselves. They are waiting for the church to say "go." They know no cause to obtain but the Lord's, and are able to turn many from the doctrines of men, and espouse them to Christ. They have no other leader but Jesus, and for him and his cause they are ready to do battle. By engaging in work of this kind, I have faith to believe that the church would be blessed, and that God will sustain and strengthen the hands of the evangelist who would enlist in the great work of restoring the true worship and teaching of our blessed Lord. We who are young in the cause, and are not able to do much in teaching others, must hold up and support those brethren that are able, by our prayers and liberal donations. May God bless dear brother Moomaw and others in getting the cause of our blessed Lord preached and established over our land. I am weak, and can't do much, but you will always find me ready to say amen to all lawful and Gospel means to hurl forth the teaching of Christ.

Shoals, Ind., Feb. 7th, 1879.

From Millersburg, Indiana.

ELDER Daniel Shively and myself commenced a series of meetings on the evening of January 29th, and closed on Sunday evening, Feb. 9th, in the little town of Millersburg, Elkhart county Indiana. Brother Issaac Berkey assisted as much as possible; he having other calls which prevented his regular attendance. On Saturday and Sunday nights brother Davis Younce held forth the word with power and spirit.

Millersburg has four organized churches, German Reformed, Methodist, Lutheran and Presbyterian, with members of the Christian, Catholic, Baptist and Brethren churches. The interest, manifested, exceeded anything of the kind I ever beheld. Large gatherings and attentive hearers. Doctors, merchants and even the saloon-keeper, with others who never attended meetings before, were, with an exception of a night or two, regular attendants.

The result of the meeting, was, one took up the cross, while the foundation of many was shaken. We have reason to believe that good was cast upon the waters, which will be gathered not many days hence.

On Saturday, the 8th, while attending council meeting at the Rock Run meeting-house, brother one made application and was baptized by brother Shively.

On Friday, the 7th, brethren Shively and Berkey went to the Rock Run meeting-house, to preach the funerals of sister Horn and Benjamin Kauffman. About two years ago, during a severe storm, a tree was blown out by the roots; about the first of February friend Kauffman chopped it off, and standing upon the stump part, which flew back, was thrown about twelve feet high, and when he fell he struck the roots of another tree, which injured the spinal cord, paralyzing the lower half of his body, and about a week after, he departed this life from the effects of it.

While the brethren were gone to preach these funerals, I remained in town to attend the funeral of Miss Robinson, aged fourteen years and nine months, who committed suicide by taking at one time thirty-six doses of morphine. She died in the house of strangers, not being able to reach the house of her uncle, with whom she had her home, she being an orphan. Being young and healthy, she had the appearance in death of one asleep. J. H. WAMSTLER.

In Memoriam.

WILLIS Lyon Sager, son of John and Emily Sager, of the Hudson congregation, was born May 16th, 1877, and died January 20th, 1879.

This darling boy was one of remarkable brightness and sweetness of disposition. The indescribable and irresistable charm which attached to his every act, and his intelligence so far beyond one of his years, rendered him the idol of the neighborhood. Before his spirit caught one taint from earth, it spread its light wings and soared to God. The bud in which so many fond hopes centered, must bloom in eternity. Although he was the object of much love and affection while with us, yet we bless the hand which has taken him from us, because it is the hand of a Father, whose providences may often be mysterious, but are ever kind.

Since the first wild burst of grief is over, and we are able to think more calmly of our loss, we are becoming gradually persuaded that his removal at this time is but an exhibition of that perfect propriety and fitness of things which (could we but intelligently observe it) is never violated in the disposition of events.

Death, which introduced him to heaven, to its Savior and to its sinless angels, at no other period would have found him so allied to them in character,—so fitted for their society. Unable to speak, one of his latest acts was to pull away, with evident effort, his mother's hands from her face, accompanying the act with a look, which coming, as it did, almost from the other shore, spoke infinitely more than could have been expressed in words, implying a perfect conciousness of the nature of the change already taking place, and more, a look, remarked by all present, which is a source of inexhaustible comfort to the good mother.

The funeral services were conducted by brother Lemuel Hillery on the 21st, from Mark 10: 14, after which the remains were followed by the whole community, to the Hudson cemetery, where they were interred near those of half brother and other relatives. Side by side they sleep in the city of the dead.

"We have a son, a darling son;
His age we cannot tell;
For they reckon not by months and years,
Where he has gone to dwell.
To us for twenty anxious months,
His infant smiles were given;
And then he bade farewell to earth,
And went to live in heaven.

We cannot tell what form is his,
What looks he weareth now,
Nor guess how bright a glory
Crowns his shining seraph brow;
The thoughts that fill his sinless soul,
The bliss that he doth feel,
Are numbered with the secret things,
Which God will not reveal.

But we know, for God hath told us this,
That he is now at rest,
Where other blessed infants be,
On their Savior's loving breast.
We know his spirit feels no more
This weary load of flesh,
But his sleep is blessed
With endless dreams of joy forever fresh.

We know the angels fold him
Close beneath their shining wings,
And soothe him with a song
That breathes of heaven's divinest things.
We know that we shall meet him,
(His mother dear and I),
Where God, for aye, shall wipe away,
All tears from every eye.

What e'er befalls his parents twain,
His bliss can never cease:
Their lot may here be grief and fear,
But his is certain peace.
It may be that the Tempter's wiles
Loved souls from bliss may sever,
But if our own poor faith fail not,
He must be ours forever.

When we think of what our darling is,
And what we still must be:
When we muse on that world's perfect bliss,
And this world's misery:
When we grow beneath this load of sin,
And feel this grief and pain,
Oh! we'd rather die and go to him,
Than have him here again."

NUMBER IX.

The Tomb—In the Mission Field—A Telegram—Comforting the Bereft—Incentives to Holiness—Home Meeting—Lord's Day.

LIFE, however sweet, is short. Our stay upon earth is but momentary. This is the experience of the past. Since my last, I again stood by the side of weeping friends, mourning the loss of a departed saint. Our dear sister King, of whom I made mention of in my last missive, is no more in the flesh. She has been stripped of mortality and clothed from that house in heaven, made by hands unseen.

Was just about to board the train for the mission field, when a messenger approached me, requesting my services in the last act of kindness towards the departed, and to give words of consolation to the bereft.

The dear sister suffered long and oft expressed a desire to depart but waited patiently until the angel of peace beckoned her to come, when quietly and calmly, she departed for the Elysian fields, obscured from mortal sight. About two years ago, we led her down in the liquid stream, where, in accordance to the divine command, she put on Christ, and now she has died, as we believe, a faithful Christian.

Mother, may God bless you in your widowhood. Be joyous amidst your sorrow; all your children have entered the church militant, and three, the church triumphant. With your two remaining lambs, oh, live faithful to Christ! Cleave close to his bleeding side; it will not be long until He will relieve you of earth, and say, "It is enough, come up higher." Then a happy and unending reunion will be yours to enjoy within the frescoed alabaster walls of the New Jerusalem.

My contemplated trip being thus delayed, I started for the mission field on the 1st inst., near Sydney, Ohio. Met our dear brother, O. F. Yount, at the depot. He boarded the train for his home. From a hasty conversation with him, learned he had labored with the Brethren here for a few days, already, and that the meetings were growing in interest. We continued them until the 4th, when I received a dispatch to return home next day. Our meetings continued to grow in interest, and the waters were troubled. One expressed his desire to join the church at last meeting, and more were counting the cost. Having to leave the meeting so abruptly, I hope some soldier of the cross will drop in soon and revive and carry on the good work.

In compliance to the message, returned next day and visited the house of mourning, and found Mr. George W. Wise had departed this life. Funeral services in the U. B. church, by the writer, assisted by Mr. Johnston, pastor of said church.

The deceased was the son of elder Christian Wise, of Mansfield, Ohio. He was visiting his brother, Dr. Wise, of our village and while here took sick and died. A sister and aged mother, from Mansfield, were present at the funeral. Thus other hearts are pained and mourn the loss of dear ones. Ah, who has not stood by the bedside of a dying friend? Who has not stood by the gaping tomb, where loved ones were hidden from mortal view? In this, humanity stands on one common basis, all have their sorrows, all have tears to shed, all have an interest in the spirit world. This should be to us an incentive to greater holiness, greater love and greater piety.

The Brethren commenced a series of meetings in the Eagle Creek church, on the evening of the 8th inst., expecting foreign aid. But as is the case with the many Macedonian calls, we were disappointed. We, by the grace of God, held the fort until the 11th, when our dear brother Jesse Calvert came to our relief. Remaining with us three days only, having engagements ahead, he had to leave. The interest is growing and we purpose, God willing, to continue a few days yet, and see what the Lord will do for us. We expect, ere the meeting closes, that some will be willing to take up the cross, and then to the waterside we go to take them into the church through the initiatory of holy baptism.

This is another beautiful Lord's day, and the labor is divided again. Brother E. Bosserman continued the meeting in the Old church today. Brother W. C. Teeter at Pleasant Ridge and the writer at the Disciple church. We met a large audience and entertained them in the light of the Gospel as God gave ability. In the evening we concentrated our forces to the Old church, and our meeting continues with increased interest. Oh, may God bless the mourners in Zion! How the poor souls struggle! The tears are falling, the groans are heard, and we hope that every hindering cause will be removed, that many will cast their burden down and flee to Christ. May God bless the success of Zion every-where, and save the purchase of His blood, is my prayer.

Dunkirk, Ohio, Feb. 17th, 1879.

From Exeter, Nebraska.

BRETHREN Henry Brubaker and Urias Shick, from Beatrice, Gage county, came on the 27th of Jan., to hold a few meetings with us. Brother Brubaker preached in the evening of the above named day. The attendance was fair. The meetings were continued for seven succeeding evenings. Four souls were made to see their condition, and came over on the Lord's side. They were baptized, and rose, we hope, to walk in newness of life. We think there is a good prospect for more. One made application who could not be received on account of domestic troubles. We hope the difficulty will soon be removed and the dear soul become a shining light in the church militant. Two were received by letter. This makes us a flock of sixteen with no shepherd. We pray that some ministering brother will move here and help build up a church.

We, the brethren and sisters here are very thankful to those who came and preached to us. We hope we shall not be forgotten in their prayers and intercessions to God.

Since they departed, we have been holding social meeting each Sunday evening. We sing and pray and encourage each other in the way leading from earth to heaven.

Brethren in the East, do not forget us Western people. We have souls to save as well as you. You have generally plenty of help, but we have not and cannot get it. Other denominations send preachers wherever they are wanted. Think of this, Brethren, and see if you cannot devise a plan by which we can have meetings. We cannot take our money beyond the grave, and there is danger of its standing against us in the day of judgment.

Your Brother in Christ,

D. R. KELLY.

To the Brethren and Friends in Ohio.

WE left Akron Feb. 3rd, and arrived in the evening of the same day at Ashland. Here we visited brethren and friends until the evening of the 12th inst. We also had a look at the college building. It is firm in structure and plain in appearance. We hope righteousness may dwell in its gigantic. The Brethren will be blessed if they train the rising generation in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

Evenening of the 12th, we left Ashland and arrived at Lanark the 14th. Found all well. God bless all the Brethren, sisters and friends to whom these lines may come.

S. J. PECK & WIFE.

Ten Days at Naperville.

ON the 10th of January I left my home to visit Naperville church, arriving in the evening at brother John Hollinger's, where they had arranged for a night meeting, and quite a number of the neighbors attended. I found this family well; had an enjoyable night with brother John and family, but had to leave early next morning, in company with brother John, who gave me a seat in his sleigh, for Naperville. Passing through Joliet, Lockport, and other places of interest, we finally arrived in Naperville, stopped at the house of brother Burkdoll till meeting time, when we went to the meeting-house, two miles in the country, where we found the people assembling for worship. At this place we met twelve times, also held one meeting at Batavia, ten miles away.

I must confess that I was encouraged and strengthened, by the interview with the brethren and sisters in Naperville. They surely give unmistakable signs of being living branches in the true vine. O, it does me good to read those living epistles that are known and read of all men. As one man said to me while there, "Your people are the best people that we have." He, too, had been reading. Oh, brethren and sisters, just think of the thousands looking over the wall, reading, reading, READING; and not only this, but their conclusions are formed by what they read; and our children perhaps stand at the head of this class of readers; we are writing, they are reading. Children, remember that you should run as you read—the race is before you, and you must run it. Oh! start now!

But the time came at last to return home, then came the trying time. To leave such kind friends and such lovely children, is more than I can describe; but I had to start. A telegram from home was received by one of the Brethren for me; but the train was gone and I was with it. I came home with a lighter heart than if I had received the telegram. I arrived only to find my family in deep mourning over the death of a dear little grandson, Willis L. Sager. We found brother Lemuel Hillery, as a God-send, had fallen in at this time of our need, who comforted us by pointing us to Willis' good home in heaven. Brother Hillery spoke to a crowded house, from the words "Suffer little children to come unto me," etc. Many were the tears shed upon this occasion. Thus we have it, joy and trouble, tears and smiles by littles. I had to recollect the tears I saw in Naperville, when the mere mention of brethren Mourer and Hollinger's removal to Kansas was referred to: surely they keenly feel it, and will more keenly feel it when the time comes to say "farewell." Take courage, brethren, we are nearing the shores where no farewell tears are shed. Be faithful a few more days—it will not be long, we'll anchor by and by. THOMAS D. LYON.

From a Methodist Lady.

PERMIT me to say a few words. I have been reading the BRETHREN AT WORK for over a year, and am highly pleased with it, and think it brings many useful instructions, if we are willing to put them in practice, which we all should do.

I am a Methodist lady. When I joined the church, I thought the Methodist church was the only true church there was, but since I have read the BRETHREN AT WORK, and studied the Scriptures more, I find that they leave out a great many things that are in the Holy Book, and since I became acquainted with the Brethren church, I feel well convinced that it is the most strict and true church I ever saw or heard of. I guess they do everything (according to my theology) that the Lord has commanded us to do, while the Methodists are far from it.

I am quite young, but there never was a person too young to follow Jesus, and I feel as though I wanted more of the love of Jesus in my heart. I do not feel near enough to my blessed Savior, I want to get nearer.

Rest for my soul I long to find:
Savior of all, if mine Thou art,
Give me thy meek and lowly mind,
And stamp Thine image on my heart.

I have heard people say, "I am too young to become a Christian, I will wait until I get older." Sinners, you are mistaken, the sooner you lay away all your foolish habits and strive to do the commandments of the One that sees every thought or move you make, the better off you will be; for we know not the hour when our Lord will come, to take us to His home above, where all is love and happiness, if we are only ready; and if we are not prepared, what a thought it is to think of being put in that cold grave! But we have all got to go there sooner or later; and so let us all strive to do what is right. Pray for me, Christian friends, that I may live a life so that when my hour comes, I will be prepared to meet you all in that beautiful home above.

EFFIE SNYDER.

Memoriam.

BY HESTER A. BRUBAKER.

SISTER Emeline Brubaker was born June 5th, 1855, and died November 29th, 1878, aged 23 years, 5 months and 24 days.

Her disease was consumption. Her suffering was long, and, at times, very painful, though she bore it with Christian fortitude and without a murmur. Her mother had suffered with the same disease for several years; and when she saw that she must cross the cold stream of death, she requested a dear aunt and uncle, to take her two little girls that were so dear to her and train them to be good and useful, in the fear of the Lord, that they might meet her in heaven. Her request being granted, father and mother took the solemn charge upon them to do all they could for the little orphans.

All seemed to go well for awhile. By and by Emma grew to be a woman, and in Dec., 1872, was married to Joseph Brubaker. Soon after, our dear mother's health began to fail. We all saw that we must give her up. One day she called all of us to her bed, and told us that she wanted to bid us farewell. She said, "You have been dear to me but I will have to leave you. Be good children; be kind to father, Emma and Mary; prepare to meet me in a better world." This we are all trying to do.

After mother's death, (1873), Emma, in company with her husband and several others, united with the church. She took little Mary with her, but it was not long till Mary took the brain fever, and was called from her side. This was hard for Emma. She was the only one of the family that was left. Her father, mother, brother and sisters were encircled in the cold arms of death. But still, with a sweet loving smile, she said "The Lord does all things well."

In a short time Emma's health began to fail. We saw the grim monster coming closer and closer until he had fastened his cold icy hands upon her. Physician after physician was consulted, but none did any good. Still, she thought her health would be restored. She desired so much to live for the sake of her husband and little son. Before her death, she called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil in the name of our Lord.

For awhile, she seemed to be better, and we thought, perhaps, she might be spared, but not so. She began to grow worse. She set her house in order, bade farewell to all that were dear to her. She desired to be absent from the body and present with the Lord.

We feel to sympathize with brother Joseph in his sad bereavement, but we sorrow, not as others do that have no hope, for we feel that Emma has gone to rest. Oh, brethren and sisters, think of the loved ones over there. We know not what hour, soon it may be, some of us may be called away. Oh, may we be prepared to meet it like those loved ones that have gone before us.

Emma's grandfather and great-grandfather still survive her. Her great-grandfather is in his ninety-sixth year; he has a good mind, and reasonable health. He belongs to the church, and is waiting, patiently, for the Master's call.

Emma has several uncles and aunts still living. Some of them belong to the church and some do not. But we hope all will take Emma's advice and follow the footsteps of Jesus.

Oh, may we all do right that we shall meet in that heavenly land, where there will be no more sorrow, where the Savior will impel tears from our eyes.

Funeral exercises were conducted by brethren Haywood and Younce and others, to a large congregation of sympathizing friends. Text, 2 Cor. 5: 1. Hymn was selected, "Dear friends, farewell, I go to dwell."

Dearest Emma, thou hast left us;
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us:
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

From Brush College, Indiana.

SO far as I know we are trying to serve God according to his appointed way, being in union and fellowship. While traveling through this unfriendly world, we all have our trials and difficulties to encounter.

In the past week death visited our corner and called one of our neighbors from time to eternity. Prepared or unprepared, she was a kind and affectionate mother; and we trust she sleeps in Jesus. She leaves a husband and two small children to mourn their loss. Funeral services were held at Brush College meeting-house, by Brethren Bear and Swihart, from 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22.

So we see, we are passing off the stage of action, and as death finds us, so will judgment. Oh, how careful we should be not to wound each other's feelings. We should pray for each other, that we enter not into temptation. Sometimes a harsh word, coming from a brother or sister, cuts deeper than ten would from non-professors. Then as laborers in the vineyard, let us bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. JOHN H. CREWE.

Dear Brethren:—

ENCLOSED find a mite for the traveling ministers. Please say through your paper, that I wish some of the ministering brethren, while on their preaching tours, would visit us. We would like to have some meetings. We have not had any since last harvest. We think it is time for some one to come to us. We hope they will not slight us any longer. Come to Princeton and one mile south and two miles west is our house. I will accomodate all the Brethren.

I am the only member near Princeton. Hope you will not forget me and think it is not worth while to look after one sinner. We should remember that there is more rejoicing in heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over the ninety and nine that needeth no repentance.

I love to read the BRETHREN AT WORK to see how the Brethren are working in building up churches over the country.

MARY MCARTHUR.

From South Bend, Indiana.

WE have just had a series of meeting in our district, by our home ministers, and a good meeting it was. The members attending were much built up in the truth, as it is in Jesus, and a number were added to the church, and one reclaimed. Although I was sick and could not attend, yet the glorious news of the Ark moving, so restored my soul, that I was made happy though sick, poor and weak physically, yet I felt strong in my Master's cause, and like taking those dear lambs by the hand and saying, God bless you; we will journey together, and soon be at home. While sick I have been frequently, like Moses, up on the mountain top, and looked over into the promised land, and felt I heard the music there. But my work is not yet finished, and am left to complete it. May God lead me to do it right.

P. R. WRIGHTSMAN.

Feb. 5th, 1879.

From Modesto, Stanislaus Co., Cal.

Dear Brethren:—

WE do not often see letters from this part of the moral vineyard. I will say that this branch of the church is in a healthy condition—all in peace and prosperity. Our housekeeper has appointments four times in each month, and occasionally leaves a new one on the fifth Sunday. Nearly four months ago there was an interesting meeting held in our church; and after being under conviction for over one year, I felt it my duty to come out on the Lord's side. On the 22nd of October last, I enlisted in the cause, and on the 27th was baptized, and now marching under the banner of King Immanuel; my companion, going with me. All I have to regret, is that I did not enlist sooner. I long to see the season come when sinners shall come flocking home.

Yours in brotherly love,

B. G. FREDERICK.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money, received subscribed for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor members, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the Poor Fund. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

Lyman Irby, Carroll Co., Ill.	$1 75
C. C. Gibson, Macoupin Co., Ill.	25
Maple Grove Church, Ia.	2 10

OUTSIDERS FUND.

THERE are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefited by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer: Send us the names of such outsiders as you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them on a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as fast as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar a year. Hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thus enable us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded us. When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the OUTSIDERS' FUND.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, all donations received and papers sent out:

I. L. Tomlaugh, Pa.	$ 50
D. Whitmer, St. Joseph, Ind.	1 00
Previously reported	104 17
Total to date	$106 67

PAPERS SENT TO OUTSIDERS.—The following names have been placed on our list, and paid for out of the above fund:

A. L. Leatherman, Licking Co., O.	$ 25
G. G. [illegible]	50
Previously reported	104 00
Total to date	$104 75

Forward us the names of those only who will appreciate the paper and do not forget to donate something to the fund.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

HELMAN.—In the Maple Grove church Montgomery Co., Iowa, Jan. 24th, George W., son of brother Noah and sister Martie Helman aged 7 months and 8 days. Funeral thoughts from Matt. 19: 14, by the writer.

N. C. WORKMAN.

MCCHESNEY.—Feb. 3rd, 1879, old mother Charlotte McChesney, aged 78 years, 5 months and 6 days.

The subject of this notice was a member of the Campbellite church. Their minister failing to come to preach her funeral, the writer was called upon to fill her place, which he did to the best of his ability, from Numbers 23: 10.

N. C. WORKMAN.

KNIPORTS.—At the residence of her son-in-law Dr. E. Brallier, in Cherry Tree, Grant P. O., Pa., Feb. 10th 1879, Mrs. Mary Kniports, in the 81st year of her age. She was esteemed, revered and loved by all who knew her. Her death leaves a sad vacancy in the church, home and community.

E. STEVER.

MUSSELMAN.—In the Lower Deer Creek congregation, Carroll Co., Ind., Feb. 13th, Daniel Musselman, aged 52 years, 5 months and 11 days. Funeral by the writer, from John 11: 25.

SAMUEL MURRAY.

EPPERSON.—On the 7th of Jan. 1879, Mary Epperson, wife of our young friend, George H. Epperson, and daughter of Elder Allen Ives, of Burr Oak congregation, Jewell County, Kan., aged 18 years and 26 days. Funeral sermon by brother W. J. H. Bauman, from the text, "Man is of few days and full of trouble," in connection with "Teach us to apply our hearts unto wisdom."

JAMES L. SWITZER.

GARBER.—In the Libertyville church, Jefferson county, Iowa, Jan. 11th, 1879, sister Sarah Garber, aged 77 years, 11 months and 3 days. She was a member of the church for over forty years. She moved from Bedford county, Pa., to Iowa, in the year 1841. For a little over three years she was deprived of any enjoyment in this life whatever, having received a stroke of the palsy, thereby lost the use of one whole side, and also her speech. Tongue cannot describe her sufferings the few days that life remained in her clay tenement. Funeral improved by brethren Peter Lutz, Daniel Hostler and James Glotfelty, from Heb. 4: 10, 11.

HOW HE CURED THEM.

BY MAGDALENA FRANTZ.

MANY of the congregations made it a part of their religion to twist their necks out of joint to witness the entrance of every person, who passed up the aisle of the church. Being worried of this turning practice, Mr. Dean stopped in his sermon and said, "Now you listen to me, and I'll tell you the names of the people as they enter." He then went on with his discourse, until a gentleman entered, when he bowled out like an usher: "Deacon A., who keeps a shop over the way." He then went on with his sermon, when presently another man passed into the aisle, and he gave his name, residence and occupation; so he continued for some time. At length some one opened the door, who was unknown to Mr. Dean, when he cried out: "A little old man with a drab coat and an old white hat; do not know him—look for yourselves." The congregation was cured.—Cleveland Leader.

REMARKS. We were at a protracted meeting held by the Brethren in our town a few days ago, and when any one would enter the house it seemed that half the audience would turn around to see who it was, after being reproved by the minister several times.

Now these things should not be so. It shows a lack of training. The minister loses confidence in his audience, and the meeting closes with but few additions. But when we go to church we should go there with a pure motive, look at the preacher, and let others come when they will.

NO TIME FOR HATING.

Begone with feud! away with strife,
Our human hearts unmating:
Let us be friends again! This life
Is all too short for hating:
So dull the day, so dark the way,
So rough the road we're faring—
Far better weal with faithful friend,
Than talk along unearing.

Away with scorn! Since die we must—
And rest on one low pillow:
There are no rivals in the dust—
No face beneath the willow.
So dry the bowers, so few the flowers,
Our earthly way discloses,
Far better stoop where daisies droop,
Than trample o'er broken roses!

Of what are all the joys we hold,
Compared to joys above us,
And what are rank, and power, and gold,
Compared to hearts that love us?
So fleet our years, so full of tears,
So closely death is waiting,
God gives us space for loving grace,
But leaves no time for hating.

EAST OF THE JORDAN.

BY SELAH MERRILL, D. D.,

Archæologist of American Palestine Exploration Society.

THE ruins in the country east of the Jordan, and especially those in the Hauran are frequently spoken of by travelers and writers as "giant cities." But to one who has never visited this region, this phrase is somewhat misleading. Indeed, the ruins, with the exception of those at Palmyra, Baalbec, Gerash, Kunawat and the Castle at Salchad, are neither massive nor very imposing; still, they are on the account none the less remarkable and interesting in their way. But the phrase "Syrian Desert" which is much more frequently used than the one just referred to, is also much more misleading: for the country from Mount Hermon and Damascus on the north almost to the Arabian desert on the south, and from the Jordan eastward as far as men have explored, is for the most part, one of great natural fertility, and skillful husbandry under the protection of a good government could make it one of the gardens of the world.

Two Thousand Years Before Christ

this region was occupied by a people who had reached such a condition of prosperity and wealth as to become an enviable object of conquest to a distant Elamite king to whom, after his successful campaign here, they were subject for a series of years. Five and a half centuries later in the time of Moses and Joshua, these people, although spoken of as a remnant, are still prosperous and powerful, and make a formidable resistance to the hosts of the invading Hebrews. We learn from the Cuneiform records that several times between the sixth and the ninth centuries before Christ this region was invaded by Assyrian armies, who returned thence laden with immense spoil, or with gold and silver and costly articles that had been paid as tribute or ransom to the conquering king. All of which shows the great wealth of those cities and towns whose sites are covered now with the ruins of a later but still ancient civilization.

If we come down to the Roman and Christian Times,

we find that this land is dotted with cities and villages, some of which are important centers of political and religious influence; that substantial roads, the great thoroughfares of travel and commerce, cross and recross it in various directions; and that besides the many temples of the old religion, the churches of the new faith are numbered here by the hundreds. The resources of the soil must have been immense to have supported the dense population which flourished here in the early centuries of the Christian era, to say nothing of the multitudes that had flourished and passed away previous to that time.

The remains show that this population was not only vast in numbers, but that it was also one of wealth and intelligence. And as to

The Fertility of This Region,

it is probably true that the soil can never be exhausted. A prairie may be in time, unless it is kept up by fertilizers; but the Hauran plains and hillsides are kept fertile by the perpetual decay of the lava, rock and ashes, from which source the waste of the soil by cultivation is constantly replenished. (Even under the wretched system of husbandry which prevails at present, the productions of the country east of the Jordan, are surprising, and the wheat of the Hauran plains is by far the finest that is raised in Syria). The principal market for the Hauran wheat, is Acre, and during the shipping season three thousand to five thousand camels arrive there in a single week, loaded with grain, six to eight bushels forming a camel load. Onions also are raised in great quantities, and are universally used as an article of diet. Besides the large home consumption, the surplus amount of products that are shipped from Syrian ports every year, is really surprising when compared with the popular idea of the barrenness and poverty of the country. Take, for instance, such as apricots, raisins, wine, nuts, olives and olive oil, barley, wheat, tobacco, potash, wool, and hides, and the surplus amount shipped yearly from the country reaches as high as several million pounds for each of the products named. To these should be added the thousands of cattle and sheep that are shipped to Egypt (although the Turkish government tries to prevent this as far as possible), and the vast quantity of raw silk that is sent to Europe. (This old Syria, torn and ruined and fought over as it has been for four thousand years, with all its wild mountains, and deep gorges, and square miles of solid rock, and deserts and desolation and wretched husbandry, is still comparatively a fertile and productive land, as its yearly products abundantly show).

General Articles

It is one of the marvels of the age that the Turkish Government

does not see that it is for its interest in every respect to encourage the agriculturist instead of throwing obstacles in his way and then robbing him of the little that he is able to produce under the most disadvantageous and disheartening circumstances.

The Soil of Syria

is rich, and it might be made to yield a vast revenue, that which nothing would be more welcome to the depleted public treasury at Constantinople. Roads might be built and guarded, if necessary, so that communication between the interior and the sea coast would be easy and safe.

The roads in Syria are at present only paths or trails full of rocks and stones, along which it is difficult for loaded animals to pass.

A Railroad

connecting some of the Moabite and Hauran cities (that is sites of ancient cities) with Damascus, following perhaps the line of ancient Roman roads which were generally built both straight and level, and running thence to the sea-board, provided the present ruinous system of boxing the farmers could at the same time be remedied, would do much toward redeeming the country to a condition of prosperity, and as a measure of political economy, it would be a step toward a true and permanent reform which everywhere in this empire is so badly needed. [Here is an opportunity for the English Protectorate to show its practical benefit].

At Present

it is hardly an exaggeration to say that the government does all in its power to crush out agriculture. For instance, the tax-gatherer will take the best year in five as the basis of his estimate of the yearly production of a given farmer. It is as well known to him as it is to the farmer that the production seldom reaches that amount. But that fact is not considered. The farmer is obliged to pay taxes for that amount every year, even though his crops fall far below it, or, as sometimes happens, if they have failed altogether. The result is, that a year seldom passes when the farmer is not in distress.

Take as another instance, the

Olive Trees,

which do not begin to bear until long after they are planted; but every tree is taxed yearly, whether it bears or not. The consequence is, that no new olive orchards are planted. The man who should do it, would be made bankrupt by the taxes he must pay on the trees long before they had begun to produce any fruit at all. If the crops are poor and the farmer cannot pay his tax, soldiers are sent and the man's goods are taken and sold, and his family left thereby, perhaps, in destitution. The whole system of Turkish taxation, including their custom-house regulations, is one of bribery, robbery, and extortion, oppressive to the people, and ruinous to the government.

BE KIND, BOYS

YOU are made to be kind, boys—generous, magnanimous. If there is a boy in school who has a club-foot, don't let him know you ever saw it. If there is a poor boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags in his hearing. If there is a lame boy, assign him some part of the game which does not require running. If there is a hungry one, give him a part of your dinner. If there is a dull one, help him to get his lesson. If there is a bright one, be not envious of him; for if one boy is proud of his talents, and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs, and no more talent than before. If a larger or stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school will show, by their countenances, how much better it is than to have a great fist.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Ray's ninth negative, continued from supplement.

From the facts thus developed, we are able to make out the following order of events:

1. Jesus came to Bethany six days before the passover.

2. Jesus was invited to a "supper" prepared for him in the house of Simon the leper two days before the passover.

3. Martha, Mary and Lazarus were present with other Jews, at his supper.

4. Mary anointed the feet of Jesus while at this supper

5. At the close of this supper in Simon's house in Bethany, Jesus arose and washed his disciples feet.

6. At the close of this Bethany supper, the devil put it into the heart of Judas to betray Jesus, and he went to the chief priests and made the bargain to betray him. And from that time he sought opportunity to deliver him up.

7. About two days after the Bethany supper Jesus, with the twelve, entered the upper room at Jerusalem, to eat the passover.

8. At the close of the passover Jesus instituted the communion or Lord's supper. Therefore, the feet-washing has no connection either in time, place or circumstances with the communion.

The real church ordinances may be identified by the following characteristics:

1. A church ordinance is a solemn religious rite or ceremony enjoined by Christ or the apostles upon the churches as organizations.

2. A church ordinance must be performed by the church in her organized capacity, or through her ordained officers

3. A church ordinance must be observed as a prescribed form of solemn worship, including invocation and prayer.

4. A church ordinance must commemorate, as a sacred monument, some great fundamental fact of christianity.

5. A church ordinance must be continued by revealed law of perpetuity.

6. The church ordinances were observed by the apostolic churches.

Feet-washing is wanting in all the above particulars, and therefore is not a church ordinance. The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they have established feet-washing as a saving church ordinance.

THE FLOWER OF HEAVEN.

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

ALMIGHTY God, at whose right hand.
The multitude of angels stand,
Behold how, in the courts above,
Where all was harmony and love,
Until an adversary stood
Was raised against His mighty hand,
When Lucifer with foul revolt,
Proposed his standard to exalt.

Ambition, pride and selfishness,
The adversary did possess:
Both great in power and great in might,
He mixed his darkness with his light—
The seraphs saw and understood—
He mixed his evil with the good:
And thus, by fraud and stratagem,
He sought the Triune diadem.

The Father, Son and Holy Ghost,
The Cabinet of heaven composed;
And in their councils high and grand,
The Cherubim at His right hand,
They had a plan, its purpose sealed,
To angels not in full revealed,
How Satan and his rebel host,
Would find at last their glory lost.

The Son, the image of His Sire,
Whom all the shining hosts admire,
The Flower of heaven, the Morning Star,
Who then had neither wound nor scar,
Arose before the heavenly host,
The Father and the Holy Ghost,
And spake in accents, mild and true,
"I go, thy will, O God, to do!"

The Hierarchs and Cherubim,
In reverence bowed to worship Him;
They raised their harps and drew the strings,
While circling on their shining wings,
With incense-odors round His throne,
In all that pure, celestial zone,
Until the dome of heaven rung,
As when the stars of morning sung.

In the eternal ages great,
The Godhead did this earth create:
And in the period of a span,
His filial part exalted man,
Whom He endued with strength and power
To serve his Maker and adore;
And in obedience to His will,
To keep his hand from doing ill.

When man was made with glory bright,
God told him how to keep aright:
Of danger him, He did acquaint,
And gave him only one restraint;
For in the garden, seeming stood,
The tree of knowledge, ill and good,
A tree defiled by Satan's hand,
Which Adam did not understand.

But Adam fell with all his race—
Astonished angels received his case,
But still they saw no help for him
In heaven among the Cherubim;
And yet from what they saw and heard,
They knew that man should be restored.
They witnessed in the courts above,
Some tokens of redeeming love.

The Serpent-bruiser, woman's seed,
Was promised to requite the deed:
But then His chariot waited long,
Until he came enduring wrong:—
Meanwhile, the figures, types and signs,
In shadows dark reflected lines
Of unmistaken evidence,
That peace and pardon would command.

The Star appeared in Bethlehem,
To gain the Royal diadem:
But then his mission did begin
By reprimanding vice and sin:
And therefore, He was not inclined
To flatter up the carnal mind,
But rather to reprove the ill,
To worship God and do his will.

Not like the potentates of earth,
Went he in worldly splendor forth:
He taught the will of God to man,
And laid the great salvation-plan:
He made a way from earth to heaven,
That man may have his sins forgiven:—
Submissive to the will of God,
He purchased life with His own blood.

His foe, the adversary power,
Brought out his forces in that hour—
And marshalled them in proud array,
When Judas did the Lord betray.
He, seeming raised the powers of hell,
To bring his forces to prevail;
The conflict raged with power divine,
Like David and the Philistine.

Archangels from their thrones on high,
Beheld the Lord of glory die.
The devil thought his rival slain,
In hopes, the victory to gain;
But how defeated was he left,
When his pretentions all were lost!
The hosts of hell were captivated,
Their guilt rebounding on his head.

The Seraphim in higher sphere,
Were looking down four thousand years,
Upon this world in mortal night,
Beholding dawn, the morning light—
Saw hell defeated when He rose,
Triumphant over all His foes,
The Conqueror of death and hell,
Did o'er His enemies prevail.

The way of life on earth was made;
The debt for guilty man was paid,
And pardon offered by His blood,
To those who do the will of God.
The time that prophets wished to see,
Was gained with joy and victory—
That man was free from Adam's fall,
And grace was offered unto all.

He next ascended up on high,
And rode triumphant through the sky:
The heavenly armies followed Him,
The shining hosts of Cherubim:
Attending angels swelled the train,
When he returned to heaven again:
They saw His trophies far and wide,
His wounded hands and open side.

The rebel angels down were driven
Forever from the courts of heaven,
To dwell in anguish, woe and pain,
In chains of darkness to remain,
Reserved against the day of God,
To make them know and feel His rod,
When He will execute His ire,
With judgments and with torments dire

The captive saints of ages past,
Were kept in Sheol's fetters fast,
Until He vanquished death and hell,
And as a Conq'ror did prevail.
He took those captives by the hand,
And led them to His Fatherland;
And there before the throne of God,
They realized His precious blood.

The patriarchs of olden time,
The saints of every land and clime,
The prophets and the martyr-band,
Went home to their Fatherland,
To see their Savior and adore,
And worship Him forevermore;
To sing before the great I AM,
The song of Moses and the Lamb.

Suspended o'er the throne of God,
A triune-colored rainbow stood:—
The elders sat around the throne,
In dazzling white their garments shone;
And many thousand angels bright,
Came hovering round in shining white,
With golden harps and silver strings,
To crown the Conq'ror King of kings,

His coronation, great and grand,
Was witnessed by the angel band,
While shouts of the hallelujah rang,
And thunders spake, and voices sang:—
The Hierarchs and princes bowed;
And as the voice of waters loud,
Their praises made the welkin ring
With honor to the victor King.

The Conqueror, the Flower of heaven,
To whom all power supreme is given,
Is Lord of lords, and King of kings,
The Head of all created things:
He is the Sovereign Monarch now,
And every knee to Him shall bow,
For He must work and He must reign,
Till all things are restored again.

A LOOK AT OUR HOUSE.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

Don't pull other people's house down. Build a better one by the side of theirs and invite them over. "Preach the word."

WHEN I first began to preach, a venerable old deacon said to me, "Brother Daniel, I want to tell you something: when you go out to preach, don't pull other people's house down, or they will fight you. You first build a better one by the side of theirs and invite them over." This is a good idea, and may be done after the following plan:

The Brethren preach the Gospel. 1. Because the Savior commanded, not only to preach the Gospel, but to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. 2. Because the "Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." 3. Because the preaching of the Gospel improves society, by elevating, and ennobling the race. It makes the drunkard sober, the rogue honest, the liar truthful, the cruel kind, the vain modest, the licentious virtuous, encourages the poor, strengthens the weak, heals the broken-hearted, comforts the sick and the dying; and thus elevates, ennobles, and comforts the race.

After the Gospel, which is composed of facts to be believed, commands to be obeyed, and promises to be received, and enjoyed, has been preached and believed; that is, after the sinner believes with all his heart that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; changes his heart and repents—changes his life from a life of disobedience to a life of obedience—demanding baptism into the body of Christ; after a proper understanding is had between the candidates and the saints—we go to a certain water: after we get there, and after a word of prayer, we make another advance from this point, and like Philip and the eunuch, go down into the water, both the administrator and the candidate; there, while bowed upon his knees, the candidate is immersed face forward, and is thus buried in baptism, in the likeness of Christ's death. Face forward, because this is the * primitive practice as instituted by the Savior, and handed down to us through the apostles, as is the united testimony of all the ancient writers who describe the practice. There being not one case of single backward immersion recorded beyond the reformation, which shows this practice to be a † human invention, less than 400 years old.

2. Because the face forward action is in the likeness of Christ's death. He bowed his head in death, and Paul says, "we are planted together in the likeness of his death," not in the likeness of his burial.

The Brethren baptize by trine immersion, because this is the ‡ primitive practice, as commanded by Christ and handed down to us through the apostles. Christ, in Matthew 28: 19, commands to baptize "them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," which we cannot see how to do without doing just as commanded. Had he commanded to baptize them in the name of the Father only, it would require an action to obey the command. Had he commanded to baptize them in the name of the Son only, it would also require an action to obey the command. Had he commanded to baptize them in the name of the Holy Ghost, it would in like manner require an action to obey the command. Now, inasmuch as the Lord did not command to baptize them in the name of either of these alone; but in the name of each—in the name of "the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," therefore, we do just as commanded. If I would tell the boy to dip my pencil into the water, and into the milk, and into the wine, he could not not possibly obey the command, short of dipping the pencil three times—once in each substance. Again, if I command the boy to write his name in the book of Matthew, and of Mark, and of Luke, he will at once see that he must write his name three times to do as commanded—once in each book.

This, the Brethren do not regard as three baptisms, but three actions required to complete the one baptism, or as the Greek has it, the "dipping" spoken of by Paul in Ephesians, 4: 5. The candidate, who has believed, repented, and been thus baptized, has complied with the Lord's conditions of pardon. As the Lord placed Naaman's cure on the other side of the seven dips in Jordan, and the blind man's ability to see, on the other side of his washing in the Pool of Siloam: and they must come to where the Lord placed the blessing, or do without it—just so the Lord placed salvation or pardon on the other side of faith, repentance, and baptism, and the sinner must come to where it is, or do without it. "Without faith, it is impossible to please God." "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved." And to the Pentecostians, who had already believed, Peter said, "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." And to Saul, who believed and was penitent, Ananias said, "Why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized and wash away your sins." "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven."

The penitent believer, who is the only proper subject for Christian baptism, being thus baptized—born again, born into the family of God, pardoned—is a child of God, and has the promise of the Holy Spirit, for which the brethren pray and lay hands on every one they baptize, as did the apostles." "And they prayed, and laid their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Acts 8: 15, 17. And when Paul had laid his hands on them, the Holy Ghost came upon them. Acts 19: 6. And in Heb. 6: 2, the laying on of hands, is by Paul, classed among the first principles of the doctrine of Christ, along with "faith toward God, and repentance from dead works, and the doctrine of baptisms etc."

Now he belongs to the saints, is one of them, and must now walk in newness of life: must now, in common with all the saints, both give and take counsel when necessary. The Brethren never go to war with carnal weapons, against any one: they never learn the art of war, because Jesus says, "love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you." "Resist not evil." "Return good for evil," Paul taught. "If thine enemy hunger, feed him, if he thirst, give him drink." "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

The Brethren never go to law, one against another in civil courts, but settle their own troubles according to Matt. 18. "If thy brother trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone," etc. Paul says, 1 Cor. 6: 6, "Brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers: now there is utterly a fault among you; because you go to law one with another." The Brethren do not join secret, oath-bound societies. 1. Because in doing so, they would violate the Law of God to begin with, in taking an oath. Jesus says, "swear not at all, neither by heaven, for it is God's throne, neither by the earth, for it is his footstool, neither by Jerusalem, for it is the City of the great King: neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black: but let your communications be yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than these, cometh evil." Jesus says, "above all things my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath, but let your yea, be yea, and your nay, nay, lest ye fall into condemnation." Because the Bible being a perfect Law, contains every obligation to God and man; and the Christian having already come under every obligation in the Bible, therefore, whatever other obligation the secret order enjoins upon the Christian, is necessarily human, schismatical, and dangerous; for we may neither add to, nor diminish from the Bible. 3. Because we have already pledged our fidelity to Christ's Law, which embraces the whole duty of man; and it is therefore, impossible for us to pledge our fidelity to another institution differing from the church of Christ, and enjoining duties not found in the Bible, and maintain our fidelity to both. 4. Because, whatever time or money is spent by the Christian to do good, through the badge, is credited to this worldly institution, instead of to the church. "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

The Brethren refuse to raise their hand and swear like the world does when called before magistrates or civil courts, they simply affirm without raising their hand, as our laws allow. Jesus says whatsoever is more than yea, yea, and nay, nay, cometh of evil; simply raising the hand, on such occasions, would be that much more than yea and nay, and therefore cometh of evil. The saints are under the deepest and most profound obligation to God, to tell the truth without an oath; and Jesus desiring that they should at all times, feel and realize, that oaths are therefore useless to them; forbade them taking oaths under any circumstances.

The Brethren and sisters adorn themselves in plain and modest apparel, and utterly repudiate the vain and ever changing fashions of the world, comprehending "the plaiting of hair, the wearing of gold, and of pearls, and of costly array." Because so taught by the Holy Spirit, both through Peter and Paul. 1 Peter 3: 3; 1 Tim. 2: 8. Here the Holy Spirit says, "I will that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety." The shamefacedness and sobriety, must not be forgotten, but must go with the modest apparel. Braided hair, gold, pearls, and costly array, we are forbidden by the Holy Spirit to wear, therefore, the saints, governed by the Holy Spirit, will not wear them, but will adorn themselves in modest apparel. Whatever in our apparrel, is neither for our comfort, convenience, or health, is both useless and wrong, costing more than it is worth, and should at once be rejected. Our apparel, should be modest, plain, neat, comfortable, convenient, and as healthful as possible. And whatever can be agreeably adopted in our apparel that will make it cheaper, neater, more convenient, comfortable, healthful, or modest, should be hailed with joy, by every child of God, because all this brings us toward the point where the poor can meet us in these commendable points, and feel at home in the assemblies of the saints.

In the worship of God, the brethren appear before the Lord with their heads uncovered, and the sisters with their heads covered, in honor to God: because the Holy Spirit teaches, in 1 Cor. 11: 4: 5, "Every man praying or prophesying, (preaching) with his head covered, dishonoreth his head. But every woman praying or prophesying, (preaching) with her head uncoverd, dishonoreth her head, for that is even all one as if she were shorn." This covering spoken of, cannot mean the hair, for then if the hair were shorn or shaven off, she would be uncovered, and that would not be even all one as if she were shaven; there would then be no "as if" about it; it would be the thing itself. The hair cannot mean the covering spoken of on the man, for then must he take his hair off every time he prays or prophesies, (preaches), which would be impossible. Hence the brethren, uncover their heads in time of worship, that is, they remove from their heads the covering usually worn for protection, and the sisters wear a covering on their heads during the time of worship, usually a plain, white cap. A cap, because this was considered, by the brethren and sisters, to be as suitable as anything they could adopt. Plain, because then there would be no superfluity about it. All adopting the same, shows the "same mind, perfectly joined together in the same judgment," as commanded by the apostles, and exhibits that oneness which is so commendable among the children of God.

The Brethren, in the evening, or close of the day, in connection with the Lord's Supper and the Communion, wash one another's feet, as the Lord commanded. Good, substantial food is brought together by the members, in sufficient quantity to make a good, substantial meal for all the members present, and placed on tables, around which the members are seated as one family. Before eating this Supper, one brother rises from Supper, girds himself with a towl, and both washes and wipes the feet of another, who then rises and takes the towel, and girds himself with it, and both washes and wipes the feet of the next, and so on until each member has followed both the example and command given by the Master to each one of his disciples, as is couched in the following language: "If I then your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you." John 13: 14, 15 The sisters, in like manner, wash one another's feet at the same time the brethren do. The example the Master had given to the first one of his apostles after he had washed and wiped his feet, he repeated eleven times, and thus gave the same example practically to each, and the command to them all, that ye should do as I have done to you, meant one as much as another. Each one being under the deepest obligation to the Master, not only to do as the Lord had done to him, but to teach the baptized converts to observe all things whatsoever the Lord had commanded them.

After every brother and sister has followed both the example and command of the Master, and all are seated to the table again, and after giving thanks to the Lord for the meal before them, they ate together as one family, the supper instituted by the Lord in that upper room in Jerusalem in the same night in which he was betrayed, and which is, by Paul, called the Lord's Supper, in 1 Cor. 11, and carries the mind forward to the marriage supper of the Lamb, which is yet in the future. Jesus said, "I will no more eat thereof until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." Luke 22: 16.

In immediate connection with this supper, the Lord instituted the bread and cup, commemorative of his death, as the following Scriptures clearly show: "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it, and brake it, and said, take eat; this is my body, etc." Matt. 26: 26. "And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed and brake it, and said, take eat: this is my body, etc." Mark 14: 22. Luke says, "likewise also the cup after supper." Luke 22: 20. Paul says, 1 Cor. 11: 23. "I have received it of the Lord, that which I also delivered unto you, that the Lord Jesus, in the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, take eat; this is my body, which is broken for you." "After the same manner he took the cup, etc." "As oft as you eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he comes; this do in remembrance of me."

The Brethren never could see how a bit of bread and a sip of wine, taken before dinner, could constitute any supper, much less the Lord's Supper, hence they practice the Feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion, all in connection, and in the night, as the Lord instituted them, and as Paul received it of the Lord, and delivered it to the Corinthians.

The Brethren practice the salutation of the holy kiss; because, five times commanded by the apostles in their letters to the saints—three times by Paul, and twice by Peter. From all the various salutations practiced among the various nations of the earth, the Lord chose this to be the manner in which his followers should salute one another. It contains, in it, the tenderest expression of love known among men. The tenderest mother, in every nation, kisses her little darling. It is an outward expression of an inward feeling of love for the little one. So the Lord knew, that in every nation, his true followers would have an inward love one for another, that would willingly find an outward expression one to another, in the dearest token of love known to the race, and he has, therefore, not only granted them the privilege of expressing their love, one to another, but five times commanded it.

The elders of the Brethren church, anoint sick members with oil in the name of the Lord, when they call for them to do so: because, so commanded by the Holy Spirit. James 5: 14. "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up: and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Here are three things required, and three things promised. 1. To call for the elders of the church. 2. To pray over him. 3. To anoint him with oil in the name of the Lord. The three things promised are, 1. To be saved. 2. To be raised up. 3. If he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him. "They anointed many with oil that were sick; and healed them." Mark 6: 13.

It stands every one in hand desiring to be saved, to do the best he knows, and the Brethren cannot see any safer course to pursue than simply to obey all the requirements of the New Testament, in all their simplicity; believing that the better we succeed in doing this, the better we will grow in grace, and the knowledge of the truth, and the greater will be our power for good.

Here is where we live. Examine our house carefully; compare it with yours; and if you are convinced that it is safer, come over. Thousands have come, and yet there is room for more.

* That the forward action in baptism is the primitive method, see Writings of the Hipolitus, 1 p. 83. Judson on Baptism, 114. Bingham's Antiquities 1 p. 537. Monuments of Antiquity represent John with his right hand bowing the head of Jesus forward into the water to baptize him. Rob. History of Baptism, 500, 501. Judson on Baptism, 774.

That the trine action, is the ancient practice, see in the writings of the following Ancient Greeks:

† The single backward immersion of the present day, being nowhere found, until invented by the English Baptists, since the reformation, and therefore not 400 years old.

‡ (a) Theodoret, says, "Bingham charges Eunomius with making an innovation upon the original institution of baptism, delivered by Christ and the apostles, in that he made a contrary law that men should not be baptized by three immersions, nor with an invocation of the Trinity. Antiquities of the Chr. Ch. 1 p. 540. (b) Pelagius condemns the single immersion of Eunomius as contrary to the Gospel given by Christ, who appointed every one to be baptized with three immersions, saying to his disciples, Go, baptize all nations in the name of the Father. Ibid. (c) Gregory Nyssa, says, "Eunomius permitted the law of Christ * * * * and taught that baptism was not to be given in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Ibid. p. 487. (d) Chrysostom says, "Christ delivered to his disciples one baptism in three immersions of the body, when he said to them, Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. Ibid. 1 p. 540 (e) Jerome, commenting on Eph. 4: 5., says, "We are thrice dipped in water, that the mystery of the Trinity may appear to be but one, and therefore, though we be thrice put under water to represent the mystery of the Trinity, yet it is reputed but one baptism. Chrystal's Modes of Baptism, 72 73. Jerome understood Paul's one baptism to be triune. (f) Monulus, about A. D. 256 says, "The doctrine of our holy mother, the Catholic church, has always by brethren, been with us, and doth still abide with us, and especially the article of baptism, and the trine immersion wherewith it is celebrated: our Lord having said, Go ye and baptize the Gentiles in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. Work of Cyprian, 1 p. 210. These distinguished Greeks of the third, fourth and fifth centuries, read the Greek commision in their native tongue as it first stood in the sacred canon. They tell us it requires baptism into each name of the Trinity. If my friend will adduce just one ancient Greek, who says, it don't teach trine immersion, I will give up these six witnesses for his one.—J. W. Stein, in Stein and Ray Debate.

The single immersion invented by Eunomius and condemned by the above ancient writers, was simple forward immersion, and was not administered in then one of the Lord Jesus.

WHY DO THE SISTERS NOT BREAK THE BREAD OF COMMUNION?

BY W. B. SELL.

THE above is a question often asked by brethren and sisters. I will say, that I am perfectly satisfied with the practice of the Brethren; I believe it is in harmony with the Word of God. By the breaking of the bread, is represented the broken body and crucified Savior, and since the Savior was crucified by man alone, and not by the woman, it looks consistent with the Word of God, for the brethren to break the bread. The Savior says, "as oft as ye eat this bread, ye do show the Lord's death till he come." All take part in eating, hence all shew his death.

There is some testimony in Paul's first letter to Timothy, 2: 14, I wish to bring to bear in favor of the above. Paul says, "Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression." Adam was not deceived, but because he loved his wife, he partook of that which was given him by her, hence the way to the tree of life, was opened to him by his wife. Christ was born of a woman the very part that brought the evil upon mankind.

Man has nothing to do in this matter, yet he needed a Savior, and the benefits of divine favor as much as the woman. Brethren, I submit the above to your judgment, if you think that there might be any nourishment for the pure mind to digest, and would afford good and wholesome thoughts, you can give it a place in the paper.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name over and above the nine names the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1 00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - MARCH 13, 1879.

WE have on hand, for sale, four copies of the Quinter and McConnell Debate. Price, $1.25.

BROTHER Daniel M. Miller and wife start for Pennsylvania this week, expecting to remain several weeks.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson says: "I am called to Southern Iowa. Your paper is endorsed everywhere I travel."

THE closing part of Mr. Ray's ninth negative will be found on the first page instead of the fifth, as announced in the Supplement.

BROTHER Enoch Eby is to be in Lanark, March 20th, at Cherry Grove the 19th and 21st, and then goes to Arnold's Grove to remain over Sunday.

BROTHER Jesse Calvert commenced a series of meetings at Huntington, Indiana, Feb. 22nd, and up to last reports, thirty had been received into the church.

IN many respects the church resembles a crew crossing the ocean in a large vessel. The vessel is aiming for the other shore, and every movement should be subservient to that end.

THERE is a movement on foot, in Germany, to increase the number of colonists in the Holy Land. There are a number of Germans in Palestine at present, chiefly Roman Catholics, however.

BROTHER G. W. Gibson, writing from Girard, Illinois, says: "During the month of February four were received into the church by baptism, and one expelled from the fellowship of the church."

A CARD, just received from Brother Isaac Price, informs us that Elder John R. Price, of North Coventry, Chester county, Pennsylvania, died on Saturday morning, March 1st, in the sixty ninth year of his age.

THE Pacific Christian Messenger, published at Monmouth, Oregon, says: "While other countries are suffering from famine, war and plagues, we of Oregon, are the highly favored of the Lord, blessed with health, peace and plenty."

BROTHER Jacob Kindig, of Woodford county, Illinois, has been preaching among the Brethren in Augusta county, Virginia. Hope he is enjoying himself among friends and relatives in his old home State, and yet be about his "Father's business."

MANY thanks to our readers for sending us the names of so many Sunday-school Superintendents. We have something important to send them, hence we want all the addresses that can be procured of such. Do not be afraid of sending us the addresses of too many.

THERE is a movement on foot, in the Middle District of Pennsylvania, to secure a home, or provide a place where the poor members of that district can be more comfortably cared for. The institution is to be called the "Brethren's Home of Charity." The move is a good one. The poor ought not to be neglected.

IN Asia Minor, where the apostles preached and built up congregations, there are said to be nearly one hundred Protestant churches. The missionaries are pushing their work with energy, though they shun to teach some things taught by the apostles. May the time speedily roll on when the pure Gospel, as it was preached eighteen hundred years ago, will be re-echoed from one end of the land to the other.

A BROTHER writes that where he lives the market is full of infidel seed, and there is a large sale for it, yet the people are so poor that many of them cannot pay their taxes. Let infidelity get possession of our country, and times will be still worse. Remove the Bible, and all of our influence for good is gone.

BROTHER John B. Lehman, of Oregon, says: "So far as I have heard, your readers are well pleased with Brother Stein's arguments. We think they are sound as Gospel—rightly dividing the word of truth as a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. We bid him God speed. Always cast the net on the right side of the ship."

WE have on hand an interesting article entitled "The Roaring Lion," by Brother D. A. Lichty, of Hamlin, Kansas. The article reached us a couple of months ago, and should have appeared at once, but it was unintentionally placed on the wrong hook. Hence its delay. It will appear next week. We very much regret that it did not find its way before the public sooner.

BROTHER J. S. Buckley, of Macoupin county, says: "We like your paper very much. My wife has been raised up in the Christian church, but since reading your paper, and also the Stein and Ray Debate, has become very much dissatisfied with her church, and has made application for membership in our church, and will be baptized as soon as health will permit."

SOME of our Brethren, whom we esteem very highly for their works' sake, and the repeated good advice they have given us, think we slightly erred in publishing the names of some who were proposed to work in cities, not that they are opposed to sending such men, but they think it best not to nominate that publicly. We cheerfully accept their suggestions, hoping to profit by them in the future.

OUR people must not forget the importance of contributing to the support of the Danish Mission. The mission is now in a prosperous condition and should be well sustained. It would be well to bring the matter before the different District Meetings, through which the various congregations could be urged to do their part towards defraying the expenses of the mission. Brethren and sisters, let us keep the work moving.

IT took over fifteen hundred years to write the Bible. From Moses, who wrote the first book, to John, who wrote the Revelation, was a long period of time. More than thirty-five persons helped to write it. Some were shepherds, some farmers, some fishermen, one a tent-maker, some kings, some judges, some princes; some were learned, some were unlearned; and yet all agree in what they wrote, because guided by the same Spirit.

BROTHER Hope, writing from Denmark, under date of February 9th, says: "This morning, before going to meeting, I will tell you that one dear brother, twenty years old, and two sisters were added to the church by baptism. Every thing seems bright; the Lord bless his little band. Those three who were baptized, were from town. While we were engaged in prayer at the water, a little bird came down and rested awhile on Brother Eskildsen's head. I keep two meetings every day where I go now."

BROTHER Daniel Miller and Martin Meyer have returned from the mission field in Wisconsin. They report thirty-two baptized, and twelve other applicants. Two were also reclaimed. They held three council meetings: One at Sugar Tree, where one deacon was elected. One at Woodstock and elected two deacons. The other council meeting was held at Basswood, and every thing satisfactorily adjusted at all points where meetings were held. At present the mission is in an excellent condition, and needs to be looked after with care.

SOME of our contributors, when writing articles for the press, will take the common sized letter paper, spread it out and write clear across, from one side to the other. Manuscript put up after this manner is generally rejected, the lines being too long, and the sheets of paper too wide. To rewrite it requires more time than we can spare. Where sheets are so wide they cover up too much of the type case, thus retarding the work. Manuscript paper should be narrow, say not over five or six inches wide. Contributors wishing instructions on "How to Write for the Press," can obtain them on a neatly printed sheet by asking for them. We have collected and printed a valuable set of rules for the benefit of those not accustomed to writing for the press.

RECENTLY, a minister in Virginia delivered a discourse on the importance of reading the Brethren's papers, and keeping posted on the doings of the church. As a result, that church sent in eight new subscribers, who will now be kept interested in the work and movements of the body. If ministers will also mention the importance of circulating our papers among outsiders, and have the congregation examine our special offer, likely a bundle of papers would soon be going to hundreds of congregations who could do a good work by distributing them among the outsiders who attend meeting.

BROTHER Adam Hock, of Union county, Illinois, writes: "I have read, in the BRETHREN AT WORK, of some who were destitute of the Bread of Life, but not as long as we were, for we did not get to hear the pure Word preached for twelve years, till last Summer, when a brother came down from the North and preached for us, and baptized three. Now there are nine of us, and no shepherd. We pray the Lord that he may hear our prayer, and bless us like he did in hearing the prayer of Cornelius. Now brethren, come and seek that which is lost. Here is a great field in which to work."

BROTHER H. H. Miller's article on Sunday-schools, published in this issue, deserves a careful reading. After reading it do not set up the cry, "something new," for the method of instructing children, as advocated by him, is as old as the church itself. It is time the Brethren were turning their attention more in that direction. Brother Miller promises other articles on this subject, and we trust to see a general awakening up among our people. Of late, we have made children's meetings a speciality, and it is encouraging to see how the little folks enjoy the preaching, and we tell you it makes some of the older ones feel good. That which the young people can understand, because of its simplicity, can be understood by those who are older. We need more Bible-schools adapted to the wants of the young — schools in which the Bible is taught in all its original purity.

THE temple, which stood on Mt. Moriah when the Savior was on earth, was not the temple built by Solomon. Solomon's temple was destroyed about five hundred and eighty-eight years before Christ, and the nation itself carried into captivity. Fifty-two years after this, the rebuilding of the temple was commenced, and was completed five hundred and fifteen years before Christ, or about seventy-three years after the destruction of the former temple. In breadth and height it was twice the size of Solomon's. In the time of Herod this temple had become much decayed, and he undertook the repairing of it, which work occupied forty-six years. John 11: 20. Strictly speaking, it was not a new edifice, but rather a complete repairing of the second temple. In this temple Judas threw down the pieces of silver, and not in Solomon's temple, as has been supposed.

THERE is going the newspaper rounds, an article, stating that in Pennsylvania a sick woman was taken into ice cold water, immersed three times after the custom of the German Baptists, then fainted and was supposed dead. She was then wrapped in blankets, carried to a house, and after several hours' work, was brought to consciousness, though it took much longer to thaw out her hair, which was a mass of ice. Now, we have no faith in such glaring assertions. They are published for mere effect, and when once investigated, are usually found to be without foundation. When our readers see such in secular, or any other kind of papers, it is best to pay no regard to them, for our people generally have sense enough to know how to handle and care for sick persons who are baptized. Knowing this, we can rest assured that they will do their work right, and to the credit of the cause.

To many of our correspondents we owe a word of apology for not answering their letters. We have now on hand not less than fifty letters that ought to be answered. Some of them can be answered briefly, while to answer others will require several hours' writing. Not a few contain questions involving important issues, while many others ask for information on doctrinal points and church government which will require a special effort in answering. We also have on hand scores of queries that we have not time to answer at present, but hope to reach them before long. We would like to do more work if we could, and would take pleasure in doing it, but are now straining every nerve. Therefore we hope our correspondents, who have written us, as well as those who have sent us queries, will pardon us if their requests are not responded to as soon as they would desire. Gladly would we answer all your letters if we only had time to do so.

FORWARD IMMERSION.

MR. Isaac Errett, of Cincinnatti, one of the most able writers and preachers among the Campbellites, and editor of the Christian Standard, the leading paper in that church, in answer to a query involving the manner of putting a person into the water when he is baptized, gives the following answer upon that subject:

"As to the mode of the immersion, whether forward or backward, we have no certain knowledge. But we incline to the opinion that the backward motion in immersion is modern and western—that in the East the candidates knelt in the water and were immersed face foremost." See Primitive Christian, Vol. 1, page 400.

This, coming from a backward, single immersionist gives it double weight in controversy. But Mr. Errett is not alone in this conclusion; with him agree the best historians of ancient and modern times, and we very much doubt if there can be found a single historian of acknowledged ability, who would venture to write otherwise.

Mr. Judson, a learned Baptist historian, says:

"Immersion, however, maintained its ground, until the middle of the seventeenth century, when the Westminster Assembly of Divines voted, by a majority of one, that immersion and sprinkling were indifferent. Previously to that period, the Baptists had formed churches in different parts of the country; and having always seen infants, when baptized, taken in the hands of the administrator, and laid under water, in the baptismal font, and not having much, if any, communication with the Baptists on the continent, they thought, of course, that a candidate for baptism, though a grown person, should be treated in the same manner, and laid backward under the water. They were probably confirmed in this idea, by the phrase, 'buried in baptism.' The consequence has been, that all the Baptists in the world, who have sprung from the English Baptists, have practiced the backward posture.

"But from the beginning it was not so. In the apostolic times, the administrator placed his right hand on the head of the candidate, who then, under the pressure of the administrator's hand, bowed forward, aided by that genuflection, which instinctively comes to one's aid, when attempting to bow in the practice, until his head was submerged, and rose by his own effort." [Judson on Baptism, p. 112.]

OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

Much good can be accomplished in most any locality by distributing the BRETHREN AT WORK regularly among well-disposed outsiders. They will take great pleasure in reading it, become interested in its contents, and therefore form a strong attachment for the church and its doctrine. Congregations wishing to try this method of spreading the truth among their neighbors should proceed to raise the money, order a number of papers sent to the address of some brother or sister, who is to care for and distribute them at the close of services. This method of doing missionary work will be found especially serviceable in localities where new congregations are building up.

TOO MANY IDLERS.

THERE are many idlers in the world. Many of them don't know how to work; some know how, but don't want to work. They have not the first principle of success—begin to work. And those who never begin, cannot persevere, unless it be in idleness. Twist and turn as you may, you will always find this one fact ever staring you in the face: they idle, and keep at it. There they are, constantly before you, a vast army of incompetent fellows, full of excuses. They tell of their fall, their bad luck, just as if failures were a recommendation to everybody's sympathies. Sometimes one of them will get his ambition stirred up a little, and then he goes to work with a mighty rush, but he soon finds thorns here and there, and then he falls back into the old mire. Now why all this? Simply because they did not sow good seed in their youth. How can they expect to reap a grand harvest in their old age? Boys, you have but one youth. How can you expect ease and comfort in old age, if you spend your youthful days in sin, folly and wastings? The only way to get the thing better, is to educate. Boys and girls must be taught to work. Not only should they work, but the principles of saving should be taught them. It is easier to earn than to save; and there is a vast difference between saving and hoarding. There is such a thing as saving by giving; but to hoard for selfish purposes, is not saving in a Bible sense. Do not permit your boys to loaf in town. If you live in the country, keep them at work, and when they go to town, give them business to attend to. Let them begin early to do business for you, and learn valuable lessons. Be manly towards your boys, if you would have them to be manly men. M. M. E.

ANOINTING THE SICK.

IN a late number of the Battle Flag, Mr. Webber, speaking against the anointing of the sick with oil in the name of the Lord, says:

"When the miraculous healings ceased, the custom of 'anointing with oil,' connected with it, ceased also. The Roman Catholics practice the oil anointing, and call it 'extreme unction.' The Mormons, Advents, and Tunkers keep up a similar superstition. However, we think that it is eminently proper to pray for the recovery of the sick, through the use of the means. Many persons, doubtless, are now living in answer to prayer."

If "miraculous healings" have entirely "ceased," how does it happen that "many persons, doubtless, are now living in answer to prayer?" If there are persons "now living in answer to prayer," why reject the apostolic order of anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord?

James says: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Jas. 5: 14, 15. Why have confidence in "the prayer of faith," and yet reject the anointing, which was commanded in connection with it? If we must do away with the anointing because "miraculous healings ceased," why not do away with "the prayer of faith?" Why should it be "eminently proper to pray for the recovery of the sick, through the use of means" and yet reject what the Lord has prescribed?

Why call it a "superstition?" Did James teach superstitions?" Was it a "superstition" when James wrote? if not, when did it become a "superstition?" Is the anointing with oil, in the name of the Lord, any more of a "superstition" than to "pray for the recovery of the sick, through the use of the means?" If so, why? Is it not safe always to do just as the Master has commanded, leaving the consequences with the Lord? J. H. M.

SOMETHING ABOUT SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

THEIR effect on the church is a matter of no little importance. It may be good or it may be evil. The popular Sunday-school is an institution half way between the church and the world. It is a kind of separate or distinct institution to itself. Though professing to teach Scriptural truth, it does that with so much latitude, so much liberty, and on such general terms, that the church is considered a very different institution from it.

The popular Sabbath-school, to be acceptable with all, must leave out, or keep silent on many things the Scriptures teach and the church holds sacred. How could such a school be a benefit to the church? Would it not rather be an injury? For if any truth be left out in Sabbath-school teaching, the children are then learned to consider that truth of but little, if any, importance. Every truth of the Gospel, everything held sacred by the church, must be taught in the Sabbath-school to make it a benefit to the church. We say this because it is a growing evil in Sabbath-schools to give latitude enough to please all. What is taught in Sabbath-school is of as much importance, if not more, than what is taught in the church; for the way children are taught when young, they will likely go when they are old. If all the truths of the Gospel, as held by the church, were strictly taught in the Sabbath-school, it would be difficult to get a well-founded objection; but when the school is different from the church, that many of the leading features of the Gospel and the church are left out of the Sabbath-school teaching, it gives good ground for objection, and no doubt is one cause why some of our brethren oppose it.

The popular Sabbath-school is too far from the church to do it much good: it is too near the world. If children are brought up and taught in the Sabbath-school just like the world, they will then require a church to be like the world before they will accept it; for the tendency evidently is that the church becomes like the Sabbath-school that teaches its children. If the Sabbath-school has picnics, festivals, and all the vanities of the world, it will train the children to them, and they will want a church of the same kind. Such a Sabbath-school will tend to pull the church over to the world, and it has seldom failed to do so; for the training of the children is making the church, whether in the Sabbath-school or out of it.

To benefit the church the Sabbath-school must be brought nearer to it. The primitive order in the church was to make the teaching of children a church work. That is the best plan ever known, though it has been sadly neglected. The Sabbath-school, as a separate institution from the church, will fail in doing what is needed to be done for our children, unless it is brought nearer the church than often is done. What we mean here, is this: that in the Sabbath-school, as we have often seen, the teaching is only a kind of morality the world can accept as readily as the church. The singing, a kind of glee music as well, if not better, suited to the world than the church. The school, a kind of pastime with nothing more solemn or sacred than worldly people fully enjoy. Such a Sabbath-school is too far from the church to be of much benefit to it. For such a school will generally take the back seats and take but little, if any part in singing in church; in fact, they feel like the church is a very different institution from the Sabbath-school, and no connection between them; hence they have as little thought or interest in the church as if there was no Sabbath-school at all.

When we say we want a Sabbath-school nearer the church, we mean one that teaches the same things; one that sings the same; one that not only reads and studies the Scriptures, but with the same sacred object and feeling of reverence; one that would teach the children to feel that the church, like all the truths of the Gospel, was for them; one that would teach them to love the church as well as the Sabbath-school, or even better; to love its songs, its prayer, its teaching, and feel such interest in the church that they would want the front seats there as well as in the Sabbath-school; one that would teach them to love the church and all its sacred truths, — more than the vanities and pleasures of the world.

We will notice some things further that tends to make the Sabbath-school too much like the world. One is the use of other books beside the Bible. This separates it more from the church, and brings it more under the influence of popular sentiment. It should use the same books the church uses; that would bring it nearer the church. Another thing is the music, and probably there is nothing else has more tendency to separate the Sabbath-school from the church than its music. Singing is a part of divine worship and has been much abused and turned from its sacred use. The importance of it is not fully appreciated by the church The singing in the church is almost a matter of chance, every one selecting such tunes, and singing as it suits them. We have taken much pains in selecting hymns, three revisions probably, to have the best of hymns, but almost nothing in selecting suitable tunes. On account of this neglect on our part, others have given us our music, and often such as seem to be of the world is chosen—one class for the church, another for the Sabbath-school.

Our church should have its music as it has its hymns. The tunes are as important as the hymns, and should be selected with as much care, and suited to all the wants of the church. Why be so careful about the hymn and so careless about the tune? If we have hymns for certain occasions we should have tunes suited to the same occasion.

We should do more than we have in the matter of working for the wants of our children spiritually. Our preaching should be more adapted to their wants and their capacity; more to their interest; more suited to their feelings, then they would feel more interest in the church. The same is true of our hymns. We hardly have any suited specially to the young. We should have nearly half our preaching, our hymns, and our tunes suited to them. As they are suited to almost every condition of the old, so should they suit every condition of the young. Our music should be varied and suited to the young as well if not even more than the old. In fact, the young should be taught and depended upon to do nearly all our singing in church. Often the singing is done by a few of the old, the young take no part in it, no preaching suited to them, no hymns for them, they sit as strangers in the farther end of the church, because it seems little is intended for them to do until they get old. It is not a wonder, that under such circumstances, some of the Brethren's children should go to other churches, or the world. When their spiritual instruction and wants are not supplied in our own church, they will often go some where else.

Though we have been talking about Sabbath-schools, we are not as strong in favor of them as some, because we believe there is a better thing than they are; that is the primitive practice of the church, where the children and the young were taught in the church in their regular meetings for worship. It was then a church work to teach the children, and it was the first work in their meeting; the children did the singing. They were not neglected then, every thing in the first service was suited to them; it was their meeting, their preaching, their singing, and the prayer was for them, That is the reason why so many came to the church in its primitive days; the church used all the means of grace God has given to save their children. Their training was not a separate institution from the church, but one of the main features of its work.

Let those who cannot well consent to Sunday-school, accept a better way, an older and more successful way, observed in the primitive church. We are commanded to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and how could there be a better way, or a better place than in the church? We do not mean to baptize them first, that is not the command, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. First, how can that be done in the church, or any where else without the work is adapted to their condition and wants? The Savior talks about children; he talks to the young man, and the damsel. The apostles talk to young men, and damsels, they talk about Jesus when he was twelve years old. Paul talks to Timothy when a young man, about him knowing the Scriptures from a child, about his mother and his grandmother teaching a child. If these inspired men would thus talk about these children publicly, talk to these young people about what their mother and grandmother did, and about their childhood, cannot you, brethren, with the same spirit come down to the young, find something suited to their condition? And further, if these inspired apostles could do so publicly, — tell of Jesus when a child, tell of the damsel as well as the woman, of the young man and the child, as well as the old,—can you not publicly speak to them? Teach them in the church as well as the apostles in the Gospel, publicly, when he says, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord?" If David could say publicly, "Come ye children, hearken unto me," can you not in the same spirit, and in the same public manner in the church, teach the children, too? We believe it is your duty as it was theirs. If David, in his old age, would call the children around him, and teach them publicly the fear of the Lord, may you not call them around you in the church, and teach them there with as much or even more special care than you would teach the old.

Two things are indispensable in teaching the young. One is kindness toward them; without that you cannot draw them to you or the church. Friendship and kindness have an influence over them lasting and deep. Coldness and rigid indifference toward the young drive them from you, and from the church. Scolding for every little fault, will soon discourage children, and destroy your influence over them. Kindness and friendship can cure their faults much better, and win them over to you, to the church, and the Gospel.

Another thing essential in teaching the young is to make your subject interesting to them. Explain it so they can understand it. If you get them to take an interest in your subject, you must show an interest in them. You study to illustrate and prove your doctrine to old people, turn your effort a little, study to prove, illustrate and adapt it to the young, you can soon see a change in them. If you will adapt every thing in your meeting to the wants of the young, the singing, the preaching, the praying, and even the place where they sit, giving them the nearest front seats, you will see a change soon; you will have good order without trouble, you will soon have the young taking an interest in the church, in the meeting, in the preaching, and in the Gospel. That will give prosperity as in the primitive days of the church, because that was the primitive order.

One reason why so many of our young people take so little interest in religion, and so much interest in the world, is because the church just lets them alone, or rather tries but little to suit any thing in the church to them, while the world suits every thing to them. We have often heard members complain that their children were so much inclined to run after the world. One reason for that is, the church has not gone after your children as it should. It has just let them alone, or nearly so; sometimes it has given them a little reproof or scolding for being so much after the world, which often has a tendency to make them worse. If you want to save your children, persuade the whole church to go after them with all the means of grace turned to work on the young, all adapted to their condition. The church can do more than your individual efforts. Often the mother weeps because her children do not come to Christ; she would give them every inducement in her power, and turn all her labors in that direction, but how feeble they are, compared with the work of the whole church. And more feeble still, when the church shows little concern for the young, and sometimes a rigid coldness instead of love and kindness.

This idea of letting children run with the world, and in all the ways of the world till they are grown, then convert them back to the church, though common now, was not the course of the primitive church, and should not be now. The remedy is not in the hands of the individual member, but in the church, and its whole service must be turned; all its means used to win the young to Christ. We don't mean that any truth in the Gospel be changed, but all the means of conversion, and salvation be used by the church, in such a way that they reach the young. That the young be made the special object of all the means of salvation. This will give the church an influence over them, and keep them under its control instead of the world leading them.

To show that we are not alone in the sentiments here offered we will give part of the decision of A. M., in 1789. "Inasmuch as the Word can be brought nearer to the hearts of children in a simple conversation or catechization, or however it may be called, than otherwise in a long sermon, so that they apprehend the Word of divine truth, * * * * hence we admonish in heartfelt and humble love all our in God much beloved fellow members, dear fathers and mothers of families, as also pastors and teachers, our in God much beloved fellow laborers, * * * * that they would use all possible diligence, that our dear youth might be provoked to love God, and to appreciate his word from their childhood. Do not spare any labor and toil to convince them by our teaching, and by our life, not after the manner, which is almost too common now-a-days, where the young are made to learn something by heart, and then rehearse it in a light (thoughtless) manner, then are permitted to go on in a life as thoughtless as before—but that they may give themselves up to God in an earnest life."

Here we have the old brethren, nearly a hundred years ago, in A. M., giving the true principle of teaching our children; making it the duty of the pastors and teachers, as well as others, that they teach the children not in long sermons, but in a manner suited to them. They say, "use all possible diligence not to spare any toil and labor to convince them by our teaching," that the teaching should not be done in a light and thoughtless manner. To fully carry out this decision of 1789, would be to adopt the primitive practice of the church in the day of Clement, Chrysostom, Bassil, and others of the Greek fathers who made it their first great work to teach the children.

R. H. MILLER.

PRICE of the BRETHREN AT WORK from the first of April to the end of the year, $1.10.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Some one will please compare and explain Acts 1: 18, and Matt. 27: 5.

Also Ex. 21: 10, 11, and John 1: 18. B. H. R.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE RUDY.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8: 33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

OUR GOD A CONSUMING FIRE.

Please give your views of Heb. 12: 29: "For our God is a consuming fire." J. W. WALL.

THE above Scripture, evidently, has reference to the wicked. In looking over the sacred pages of the Bible, we find on nearly every page, either directly or indirectly, that God is love to them that love him, and keep his commandments, and has prepared a place of bliss for such. But on the other hand, we find that "God is angry with the sinner every day," and has prepared a place of torment for the devil and his angels, and all those who live and die in their sins. "Upon the wicked he shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and a horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup." Psalm 11: 6. "Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord God." Ezekiel 22: 31. See also Mal. 4: 1; Jer. 21: 14; Isaiah 5: 24; 2 Sam. 23: 6, 7.

I might go on from Scripture to Scripture, to show that the text has reference to the final doom of the ungodly, but let the above suffice. May I impress upon the wicked sinner that if you persevere in your sins and iniquities, and die in that state, at the day of judgment, you must exclaim, "God is a consuming fire."

JOSIAH D. WISEY.

CULTIVATION OF THE MIND.

BY MARY J. STEES.

THE mind, (the intellectual faculty of man), is continually expanding. The more it knows, the more it is capable of knowing. There is no limit to its capacity. It can never be filled.

One object after another is presented to us through our senses, which sets us to thinking. What do we do when we think? Why, we consider the conditions of an object, or muse and meditate upon a subject. Thinking requires our continuous attention, and the power of distinguishing between what is seen and what is not seen. By trying to see, we learn to see. By placing truths before our minds and thinking closely, we often think out other truths. These truths existed, but the mind had not discovered them. Patience, study, observation, and listening, are effective means of thinking. Good-informing books and papers are aids to thinking. With these we can feed the mind as with food we feed the stomach. If we feed the stomach with healthy food, we keep the body in a healthy condition. So, also, if we feed the mind with good information, whether it be obtained through books, conversation, or observation, we shall find that its unbounded field can thoroughly be fitted for the great temple of our God. It is a responsibility of ours to plant in this field, seed which will yield a plenteous harvest, and to be laborers of that harvest. The mind should not be crammed with mere husks of knowledge—none but true and pure literature should be read.

We have the Bible with its divine commands and promises; literature with its prose, poetry, and song; and the promise of divine wisdom to avail by them. Being blessed with such fine opportunities, if we fail to receive them as aids by which to perform our duty, the lack is in us, and not in them. We are too inconsistent with our mind. We forget that all else we possess here is vanity, and that when this immortal part leaves the frail body, it goes into the spirit land, there to resume its existence as God appoints. Are we godly and righteous, or are we ungodly? Hear the sentence, "Come thou good and faithful servant;" or, "Away from me into everlasting fire."

Dear reader, are you a child of God? Do you love him? "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Is God in your every thought? God is every-where. There is safety no where, save in God, in the newness of life, in the spirit of all grace superabounding. We should ever follow on to know the Lord, adding to our faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity. Do envy, hatred, malice, revenge, covetousness abound in you? Cast them from you, for they are not of God. If these attributes are within, the tongue will tell, for "from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Hence let us take care how we speak.

"If wisdom's ways you'd wisely seek,
Five things observe with care:
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where."

This requires a constant cultivation of the mind. 'Tis only with patience and earnest labor that we may gather the ripe and golden grain. Then let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

CHRIST.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

Christ is the Way, the Scriptures say,
That leads to joys on high;
That Way is sure, so come be pure,
And travel to the sky.

Christ is the Truth, come age and youth
And search this Truth to find;
For it is true, and will renew
Your heart and strength and mind.

Christ is the Life, that knows no strife,
Nor pain nor death nor sin;
That Life will last when time is past—
Come now and you shall win.

Yes, Christ is all, come great and small
And learn of Him the way
To joys on high, where none ne'er die,
But live in endless day.

Come learn this Way and it obey,
Then in that Truth you'll live;
Since Christ is all, then heed His call,
And you He will forgive.

Christ is our King, then let us sing,
And praise His holy name;
Then we'll be blest, with peaceful rest,
And crowned with heavenly fame.

VALUE OF KIND WORDS.

BY LEAH T. CONDRY.

SOLOMON says, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Do we realize the power of kind words? We are sailing upon the vast ocean of time, gliding on toward death's portal, through which we must pass to the bourne whence no traveler returns.

We are all probationers; each day brings us nearer the end of our life's journey. To some, the journey is attended with pleasure — not a ripple to mar the peace and happiness of their lives, as they float along so quietly under the blue dome of heaven. By their side, in close proximity, are others, over the horizon of whose lives sorrow broods like a funeral pall. Their sky seems overcast with dark clouds. Not a star illuminates their solitary pathway. Rough storms and surging waves beat around them, until they are ready to cry out in their loneliness. Tears of penitence may alleviate the sting, but they never make amends for the wrongs done. How their sad hearts yearn for human sympathy.

A kind word costs nothing, yet has power to heal many a wound that indifference and neglect have made. Kind words, also, produce their own image on men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. They sooth and quiet and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his sour and unkind feeling. I am always made to feel sad when I hear people speak unkindly, and try to lessen the reputation of their fellow-beings. Go, look in the nearest open grave, you will not have to go far, and see what is the end of your enemy, and may you, from that moment, act wisely. Although your proud heart may say, "Am I not independent?" No; for the very air you breathe you are depending on God's mercy, and your future destiny is in his hands.

Then, let us strive, by every means in our power, to lighten the burdens of others. A warm clasp of the hand, accompanied by a word of encouragement, gives new vigor to many a weary traveler along life's rugged pathway, and rests like a halo of glory upon them as they journey to the end.

A little word in kindness spoken;
A motion or a tear,
Has often healed the heart that's broken,
And made a friend sincere.

THE POOR.

BY H. STECKMAN.

A BROTHER and I have been out trying to secure aid for some of our poor, and we are glad to report that the Brethren are so charitable and take such great interest in helping the needy.

It is often stated, and we heard it on our trip, that "we will not help because the man is a drunkard, or he is lazy, or he has some other bad habit." Such excuses will not do. It is not the man, alone, who suffers, but a mother and her children. Many of us have plenty and to spare. Let us remember the poor and help them. I believe that covetousness and pride will be the downfall of our church. We should make good use of what we have, for we may not need it long.

God is no respecter of persons, neither should we be. I have often noticed, when at church, that the members would come in flocks and clicks. The rich would, also, prefer to sit by themselves, causing the poor to have to assemble themselves together. I have, also, noticed that members would salute and invite their fellow-associates home and the poorer class would have to stand back and look on, and after this was over, start home a foot. And we hardly ever see a carriage stop to take in one of the poor, but if some of the rich should be unlucky enough to be a foot, he is taken in at once. I truly hope that none of our members are such, for how will they feel when it is said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

THE SETTING SUN.

BY M. CREES.

HOW oft when we gaze on the western horizon and see the beautiful colors of the setting sun, are we made to think of the setting sun of our lives! How, that after the toils and sorrows of this life, we lay our weary bodies down on our couch for the last time, and, if we have lived lives devoted to God, how serene and glorious does our latest sun set! We can then feel that our Savior is with us and that he will take us by the hand and gently lead us through the cold stream of death, and land us safe on Canaan's shore; for he has promised to all those who will love and serve him in this world, a home in heaven, which he himself has gone to prepare.

O how sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips, and with harps in our hands,
To meet one another again.

This is the hope of the Christian; but how different will it be with the sinner, when he draws nigh to the hour of death! What sorrows will burden his soul; his sun will not set in the beautiful, bright colors of peace and consolation, but thick clouds will gather around him, and oh, what remorse, for a life spent in sin! All the talents that God had given him wasted in the sinful pleasures of this world, and now, though his companions gather around him and sympathize with him, yet it gives him no comfort, for he feels that his life has been wasted, and that there is no hope for him now. He fain would turn to God in these his last moments, but it is too late; his sun is set, and his soul is lost forever.

Then, my dear reader, if you are a child of God, and are walking in the strait and narrow way, I say to you, press forward and you will get your reward; but, if you have not yet made your peace with God, I beseech you to do so to-day, for ere to-morrow's light may dawn upon you, your latest sun may set and you will have to share the fate of all sinners. May God help us all to live for him, is my prayer.

Correspondence.

From D. B. Gibson.

Dear Brethren:—

MY evangelistic labors, for the season, are now ended, and I am again at home, after an absence of about six weeks. I visited Macoupin county, Illinois, where I spent nearly two weeks visiting old friends and preaching. I held a short series of meetings in the West Otter Creek congregation, my old home church. Memory ran over a period of thirty-three years. When my father located in the neighborhood of the meeting-house, not a member but he and mother lived nearer than eight miles. Perhaps the number of members in Morgan, Sangamon and Macoupin counties were, in all, eighteen or twenty-five. Now, by imigration and conversion, there are not less than five hundred members. They are divided into four districts, if I mistake not. Here I used the Bible that was used by my father. Old brother George Beamblossom, J. Heckman and John Crist, are all now sleeping the long last sleep of death, where, sweet be their rest till this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and mortal shall put on immortality. I labored here during the holidays, and, although the weather was very cold, the congregations were large, and the interest, good. Some came out and were baptized, though the ice was thick, and the water, cold.

The ministers are elder D. R. C. Nead, Javan Gibson and David Vaniman.

On the second day of January, I left brother C. C. Gibson's, at Girard, Illinois, for South Bend, Indiana, where I arrived at noon at father Sturgis'. I spent a few days with them, holding meetings at the Wanger meeting-house, near the city. This district is very deficient in ministerial aid, the effects of which, are very apparent.

I then spent the remaining time in Indiana, preaching in the South Bend district. The Lord again blessed our labor here in a general revival. Saints were encouraged and sinners turned to God. The house was densely packed. The interest never diminished, but continually increased. Among the converts were representatives from four different denominations. Hitherto God has helped us. To his name be all the glory forevermore. The ministers here are elder D. B. Sturgis, Daniel Whitmer and Isaac Early.

I now withdraw from the field for the present. The many acts of kindness, the tearful farewell, the many hearty prayers for myself and family, and seasons of rejoicing together, will ever make a green spot in my memory, while life shall last—an oasis in life's desert waste. Brethren and sisters, where I have labored and whose hospitalities I have shared, may God bless and save you all. Amen.

From Samuel Murray.

THE following is a report of my work since December 20, 1878:—

Spent one week in the Squirrel Creek church, Wabash county, Indiana. Preached at several places; had large attendance and good attention, but no additions.

Next we spent nearly one week in the Mexico district, Miami county, Indiana. Preached at two different places; had large and attentive congregations, but no additions.

Brother J. Swihart was with us at both places. From here we went to Huntingdon, our home congregation. Preached a few times; arranged to have brother R. H. Miller preach a series of doctrinal sermons; was sorry I could not remain and hear them.

Jan. 10th, 1879, I started to Laport, in the Northern part of the State. Remained here over night, taking the train next morning for New Carlisle, where we were met by some friends.

Although the weather was very cold we had an enjoyable time visiting friends whom we had not seen for many years. We preached nearly every evening at different places. Some said if we would come next Summer and preach they would unite with us. There are only about half a dozen members living in this section of country. I think there is a grand opening here for the Brethren to do a good work.

From here we went to South Bend, where we met brother Gibson for the first time. Brother Whitmer took us out in the coutry to his home, which is near the meeting-house. We attended the meetings here with brother Gibson for five days and nights. We had a large attendance and the best of attention.

We, then, went to D. Ruple's district, and preached three discourses to large and attentive congregations.

Jan. 27th. Went to Plymouth, thence to Jno. Knisleys. Visited friends and preached here. On Saturday went home to my son-in-law in White county. On Monday left here for Camden, where I arrived at four o'clock P. M.

February 4th, commenced a series of meetings in Lower Deer Creek district. We continued over Sunday. Three precious souls made it their choice to follow Christ. Some others said they would come soon. Quit with a high and very much increased interest. This meeting was held by the request of the young people. Many insisted we should remain longer, but we thought, as it was the first meeting of the kind they had ever held, that we should quit. We expect to return to the same place on the fifth of March and stay awhile. We pray the Lord to be with and assist us in our labors.

Hard Times—What They Affect.

"HARD times!"—Yes the times are hard. We hear the cry of "hard times" daily. When we ask for subscribers to our periodicals, the cry is repeated. Let us see what is affected by the "hard times." We go to the people's (even Brethren's houses), and we look around, and find fine pictures upon the wall, fine furniture, tables loaded with luxuries, and many unnecessary things. Their clothing is as fine as ever. Surely this does not look like hard times. We look upon center tables, find political papers and magazines there, but the times are too hard to take a church paper! Ah! yes, here is what the hard times affect. They are too hard to afford spiritual food.

Not long since we heard a conversation like this: "We can't afford to have a series of extra meetings this Winter. We can't accomplish anything without strangers, and we can't afford to get them; and then our coal bills are to pay, as times are too hard." Upon hearing these remarks thoughts like these came to my mind: Do not sinners need salvation in hard times? Is the church justifiable in folding its arms and sitting at ease in hard times? Does not the prophet's language apply as well in hard times as good times, when he says, "woe to them that are at ease in Zion?" Did the apostle only labor in easy times? Did not Christ, our blessed Master, labor at all times, for the salvation of sinners whilst on earth? My Bible teaches me he did. Should not his professional followers do likewise? But the idea that seems prevalent, is the times are hard, and our carnality must be gratified first, and then if there is any thing left, we will devote a few pennies to the Lord's cause. Self requires all and the Lord takes care of his own cause, and sinners go to hell without any effort, on our part, for their salvation. My Brethren, these things ought not to be so. Let us not love sleep, but awake to righteousness.

OCCASIONAL.

From Manor Church, Indiana Co., Pa.

Dear Brethren:—

"MANOR" is the name of this district. It is situated in the center of Indiana Co., and has a territory of about thirty miles square, extending into Cambria county.

Daniel Ober, Levi Fry, Joseph Holsopple and Daniel Brallier are our ministers. Daniel Ober is the bishop. There is a large corps of deacons and a laity of about two hundred and twenty members.

We are all, so far as I know, in peace and union. We had a refreshing season last Fall and Winter. Jacob W. Smouse, of Armstrong county, Pensylvania, came to us about the middle of last September and preached for us. Ten were baptized. Brother Smouse returned to us again about two months after, and preached one week. Owing to bad weather, the meetings did not create the interest they would most likely otherwise have done. At one of these meetings a certain one murmured because brother Smouse made a distinction between repentance, conversion and regeneration. The murmurer claimed they were all the same thing. Brother Smouse asked him what reasons he had for so thinking; but he did not have any. Therefore, brother Smouse told him, that he hoped he would not interfere again unless he had more to say than he had at this time, and he held his peace.

Brother Smouse is now holding a series of meetings in the Manor school-house. What the success is I do not know, as I have not been there yet. Our church meeting is on the second Saturday in March. J. W. FRY.

Dear Brethren:—

IT being too cold and stormy to take the little ones out to meeting, I thought I might pass the time in a good cause by penning a few lines for the BRETHREN AT WORK. I do not know but what they will serve to fill the waste basket, if nothing else. Well, if they go there, I'll try again.

Now, a little about our Master's cause. We are, as far as I know, in union and fellowship. We had one addition on New Year's day, and two since then. As that is a good beginning, I hope the work may continue, thus bringing into the fold of Christ many that are now sporting on the barren mountains of sin and folly. The Master is doing his work; a great many has he lain low in the last four or five weeks. There has been considerable sickness this Winter. But the Lord does all for the best; so we must leave it all with him and be content.

Now, as I desire to see others occupy the space in your paper, that are more capable of writing than I am, I shall close, hoping to meet you all in heaven. The Lord bless those across the briny deep. Farewell.

IONA TROWBRIDGE.

From Covington, Ohio.

ON the sixth of February brother Isaac Rosenberger came to us and remained about two weeks. We held meetings at different places. We believe the apostolic doctrine was preached to the people. The houses were filled with anxious listeners.

The power of God was visibly manifested: several were baptized; sinners awakened; and brethren and sisters much encouraged. May God continue to bless the labors of our brother.

Brother Daniel Mohler, from Kansas, was with us during a part of our meetings. Their presence made glad many relatives and old acquaintances.

They visited their aged father for the last time, with the awful assurance of meeting him in the haven of eternal rest, by and by. It was, indeed, a sympathetic scene, to see relatives and parents together for the last time, exhorting one another to be faithful in their duties. There were five preachers of the same name and family present. I. HART.

From South Bend, Indiana.

ON the 20th of January, brother D. B. Gibson and Samuel Murray came and began a series of meetings, which continued fourteen days. Brother Murray remained with us but four days, delivering four telling discourses, which had a salutary effect upon the church and world present. Brother Gibson delivered seventeen sermons of good quality, drawn from the word of God. Brother David Rupel gave us one interesting discourse. Had intended to give the deductions of all sermons given by the Brethren, but concluded that unnecessary. Suffice it to say, they were good and powerful, resulting in the conversion of sixteen souls, which were added to the church by confession and baptism. One reclaimed, making in all seventeen. Those who came were from the Lutheran, Methodist, United Brethren and Baptist fraternities. "Bless the Lord, oh my soul," says the Psalmist.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have just closed a series of meetings. The results: Three baptized and one applicant, which could not be baptized on account of ill health. Hope the Lord may grant him strength so it can soon be done.

The meeting was conducted by brother Menno Stauffer and others. Elder Jacob Wagoner and John Arnold preached a funereal sermon on the last day of the meeting.

JUST closed a three and one half weeks' meeting in the Solomon Valley congregation. Results: Twenty-one baptized and many more near the kingdom, guilty of the common failing, we closed too soon. Was assisted nearly a week by brother Switzer, of White Rock, Kansas. I start to Peabody to-morrow morning. God bless all lawful efforts for the spread of the Gospel.

Dear Brethren:—

PERHAPS you would like to hear something of our Italy of America (Texas). People have their oats nearly all sown; some have corn planted. The plows have been going in every direction for over a month.

We have preaching regulary by Brethren. Elders Jacob Berkey and Gephart are preaching for us. We have the best order in our meetings that I have ever seen in any country from Pennsylvania to California, Illinois or any other country; and we have no cut-throats here, as many Northern people suppose, but a God-fearing people.

Yours truly,

J. S. LARUE.

Dear Brethren:—

I WAS alone about twelve years. There was another brother and sister here, but I could not get to see them often.

Over two years ago Northern Illinois sent out two missionaries to hunt up the scattered members here. Brethren Price and Newcomer were the first to come. After this two came till last Summer. Lemuel Hillery baptized my husband and oldest daughter. This Winter K. Heckman and George Dale came down and held a series of meetings, and two more of my daughters, and a sister came out on the Lord's side, and were baptized.

Dear Brethren:—

I NOTICED a small mistake about me in this week's number of the BRETHREN AT WORK. I have been able to be up all the while part of the time. I am still able to get up and walk to my chair, but I have been confined to my room over three months. Please correct. My complaint is catarrh consumption.

I am well satisfied with the old order of the Brethren, and with the way I was baptized, let others say what they may. Brethren and sisters, be strong in the faith, we have come to dangerous and critical times.

Special Notice.

I, S. A. Moore, author of what is called "The True Story," do hereby acknowledge that I misapplied the title; and that the charges, therein made, against the church and individual Brethren concerned, are unfounded and therefore withdrawn. S. A. MOORE.

To the Memory of Sister Hannah Knouff.

BY J. P. WOLFE.

THE subject of this notice, was born in the year 1805, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Her parents moved to Frederick county, Maryland, the same year. In 1827, she moved to Miami county, Ohio. Was baptized into Christ by elder Michael Etter. She lived in Ohio forty-four years. In 1871, moved to Ottumwa, Iowa, to live with an only daughter. She lived there and in Southern Illinois with her son, something over five years. Her husband died in Ottumwa, Iowa, in the year 1874. She came to California in the Fall of 1876, with an afflicted daughter. She remained in California until the Spring of 1878, when she returned to Iowa with her daughter, thence to her son's in Elkville, Illinois, at whose house she died, February 2nd, 1879. Her age was 74 years and 9 days. She was taken to Ottumwa, Iowa, and buried by the side of her husband. She was sick sixteen days. Cause of death was nervous prostration and heart disease. She was conscious to the last moment. She closed her own eyes, and kept them closed until the spirit took its flight from its earthly habitation into the presence of him whom she loved so well while here upon earth.

Thus another aged soldier of the cross has passed over the silent river, and we feel to apply the apostle's language to her: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." In those virtues which shine out so brightly in Christian churches, love to God, a true devotion to his cause, inflexibility of purpose, kindness to those around, none possessed in a greater degree than herself. Possessing a thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, she was able successfully to combat error and win souls to Christ.

While at the writer's house, the many letters she received from all parts of the brotherhood, fully attest the high esteem in which she was held by her fellow-members. Brethren and sisters, let us follow her godly life; children, remember thy dear mother's counsel. Sacred be her memory.

Dear Brethren:—

OFTEN has my soul been made to rejoice at the rich admonition of our dear brethren who are standing upon the walls of Zion, declaring the truth and the unsearchable riches of God to a dying world, through the columns of your devoted paper; often would my soul almost sink in despair and I be made to wish that I was back in the flesh pots of Egypt, for want of some brother or sister's admonition. At times I would feel as if all alone, and no one to cheer me. But the blessed thought, "not all alone." Jesus says God is faithful, who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able; but will, with the temptation, also make a way to escape, that we may be able to bear it.

I have been much strengthened in reading the experiences of our brethren and sisters in their trials and afflictions, and I have taken courage to go on, let assail me what may—I will still stand up and fight the enemy of our souls. Jesus has promised to be with us in the sixth trial and in seventh he would not forsake or leave us.

Within the last year, in this and adjoining neighborhoods, a great many persons, young and old, have passed from time to eternity. Most of these persons were near seventy years old, the time allotted to man, but few were prepared to meet death. Thus we see, when people put off Christ in youth that when they get old and are near the grave, their hearts have grown so hard that they seldom prepare for eternity. By this we can see that if we put off Christ while young, and when he calls, that he may put us off in old age and death. Sinner, if you read this, I say, do not procrastinate, but hasten to return, for the night will come, and may be near at hand, wherein no man worketh, that is the night of death; and if you are not prepared to meet the Bridegroom, you will have to hear that lamentable voice, "Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity, I never knew you."

My father has just returned from a journey over the Blue Ridge mountains. He has told me something very curious, which he learned while over there. He was told, that there is a divide in the mountains running from the Shenandoah river square across the mountains for about four or five miles, which at first was only visible, but now the space in the earth is about three feet wide and one side gradually sinking down. He was also informed that no bottom had been reached yet, that persons had taken ropes and chains and spliced them together but failed to reach the bottom of the crevice.

The prophesies are fast fulfilling, and it looks as if it would not be long until Christ would make his second advent into the world and to declare that time shall be no more.

I begin to see, from a scriptural standpoint, that things are beginning to be, and are already so in some things, like in the days of Noah, while the ark was building, that the people were marrying, buying and selling, and getting gain; so also shall it be in the days of the Son of Man. People do not heed the Gospel truth, but are running after sects, creeds and isms, trying to crowd out Gospel light.

In the eight months of which I have been a reader of the BRETHREN AT WORK, I have counted the accessions to the church, through the columns of your paper, which is about seventeen hundred and fifty. Thus we see that the Gospel truth is spreading. I like the way the Brethren out West are holding meetings. From what I can read in my paper, I think they are coming nearer the apostolic order.

I like D. C. Moomaw's move for preaching in cities. R. F. MOOMAW.

NUMBER XII.

Joy and Triumph in the Camp—By the Waterside—Lord's Day Labor—Baptism by Night—Visit to Lafayette Church.

BEAUTIFUL, for situation, is Mount Zion; and in her temple, we daily assemble. Our meeting continues, and the rock is breaking; tears are falling from the penitent, and the saints express joy. Prayers, deep with feeling, were offered in behalf of the struggling wanderer, and it was soon evident that a victory would be won. God heard our prayers. Cold orations were disdained; the burning lava ascended from that volcano of grief and sorrow within that pent up soul, and the victory was gained; a soul was free from the fetters of sin, and entered the camp of the saints, according to the divine plan, rejoicing in the God of his salvation. To the waterside, we repaired and lifted up our souls to God in behalf of one another—the penitent and the sinner. Saints shed tears of joy, and sinners, tears of sorrow and grief, over the returning ones. The meetings continued; renewed attacks were made along the line; another was relieved from the enemy's grasp; and, to-day, three more souls were received into the church by Christian baptism. This gave us renewed energy and sufficient momentum to press forward and continue the labors in the Master's cause.

To-day is Lord's day, and onward we go to our different stations of labor. Brethren W. C. Teeter and E. Bosserman continued the service at the Old church; brother Jacob Witmore, at Pleasant Ridge; the writer, at the Baptist church. We had a large audience and deliberated on the subject, "Jesus," Matt. 1: 21, —his advent and mission. Thus we endeavor to feed the hungry souls, and obey the command of our Master, in preaching the Gospel. In the evening we reassembled in the Old church to engage in the closing exercises of the present series of meetings. We preached the word, as best we could, to a large and interesting audience. At the close of the exercises we gave another invitation, and a dear sister came forward and requested baptism "in the same hour of the night." The preliminary arrangements were made, and then we went to prayer, and then repaired to the waterside. It was the most impressive scene I ever witnessed. The large audience assembled with us, and while we led the dear penitent down into the water, the most profound silence prevailed, and the twinkling stars from the upper deep looked down upon us like angelic sentinels, which added much to the solemnity of the baptismal scene. We then repaired to our homes, rejoicing in God for his goodness and for the successful efforts which he granted unto us. Would say to my dear brother, Jesse Calvert, our prayers were heard, and your labors were not in vain. Those two dear souls were reclaimed, the wheels of the church were unclogged, and the fruits of our labors, six accessions by baptism. Praise God for his goodness.

To-day I visited the Lafayette church, Allen county, Ohio. The Brethren thought it well to continue their meetings awhile longer. Brother Calvert labored for them one week, resulting in nine additions to the church. Brother D. Brower and the writer also labored a few days with them, with apparent good effect. In all, eleven accessions by baptism, one reclaimed and one more applicant. The church is much built up and having a commodious house of worship, they feel that labor in the Master's cause will be more pleasant, and, no doubt, will obtain better results. To insure success in the promotion of the cause, there must be union of sentiment. From observations, we see that holy Christian affection and fraternal love is measurably lost, among some Christians; and where this is the case, the power is lost, and the cause cannot prosper. Then, to insure success, the church must be in harmony and union, moving along in one solid body against the enemy—sin. Success will be ours, the cause will prosper, souls will be saved, and God will be glorified. Then, Christian, work; thy warfare will soon be over, when a crown of righteousness will be yours to wear through one bright, eternal day. S. T. BOSSERMAN.

February 28th, 1879.

From Rock Run, Goshen, Indiana.

THE ark of the Lord is moving on. On the 8th of February we met in council. One young sister came out from the world and was baptized. On the 17th inst., we had our meeting to send out the annual visit. It was a very pleasant meeting. Upward of ninety members assembled together in the name of the Lord. On the 22nd we met again, the report of the visit being brought in; nothing serious was presented, for which we thank God. I believe there was joy in heaven among the angels, to see a wanderer return home, as one has been convinced that she was on the way to everlasting destruction; so she came out and desired to be baptized. Also, one was reclaimed. May others follow their example before it is too late. We, also, had meeting to-day and this evening; brother Abraham Neff preached the word with power.

ANNIE RAFFENSPERGER.

February 23rd, 1879.

From George W. Cripe.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR meetings, of which you gave notice some time ago, closed with three additions by baptism, and one reclaimed. We had very good meetings, large congregations—many could not get in the large church; some one said eight wagons left Sunday evening, besides many of the town people. The best of order prevailed, and the church is much refreshed. There were not as many additions as we wished and prayed for; but, when we remember that this church has received nearly one hundred members within one year, we were satisfied. The brethren and sisters here are alive to the work, and are very desirous that brethren traveling over the Wabash R. R., should stop with them, as they can raise a good congregation in a few hours.

Pettit, Indiana, Feb. 11.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

CLEMMER.—In Mt. Carroll, Carroll county, Ill., February 23rd, 1879, Esther Brunner, youngest daughter of brother William N. and sister Mary A. Clemmer, aged 9 years, 2 months and 14 days.

Her disease was typhoid fever and spinal meningitis. She suffered intensely for three weeks. The dear parents and family can dry their tears, hopefully looking forward to the glorious resurrection morn. Her remains were interred at Hickory Grove, where the funeral services were held, and the occasion improved from 2 Sam. 12: 22, 23, by the brethren. JOHN J. EMMERT.

BIDDLE.—In Carroll Co., Ind., Feb. 28th, 1879, of scarlet fever, Amanda, daughter of friend Samuel and sister Malinda Biddle, aged 1 year, 5 months and 15 days. J. S. SNOWBERGER.

SUSTAFSON.—In Marshall Co., Iowa, September 7th, 1878, Lewis Francis, son of friend Frank and sister Nancy Sustafson, aged three months and seven days.

BARICH.—In the Upper Stillwater church, near Bradford, Miami Co., Ohio, Feb. 16th, 1879, sister Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Barich, aged 63 years, 5 months and 10 days. Funeral discourse by the Brethren, from 1 Cor. 15: 57.

She was ailing for many years, and had to suffer much, but bore all with much patience. Before she died she called for the elders, and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. We feel assured that the mourning friends can have good hope that she is gone to rest. EMANUEL HOOVER.

BAINTER.—In Pleasant Mound, Bond Co., Ill., February 13th, of membranous croup, Bertie E., son of friend Andrew and sister Nancy L. Bainter, aged 1 year and 8 months. Funeral services by Allen Taylor, from Matt. 18: 1–2. Little Bertie was too good for earth, in heaven he is gone. The parents deeply mourn their loss.

Primitive Christian, please copy.

BOCK.—In the Dry Creek church, Linn county, Iowa, Feb. 24th, 1879, of scarlet fever, David Bock, only son of brother Samuel and sister Catharine Bock, aged 1 year, 1 month and 22 days. Funeral services postponed on account of sickness in the family. JACOB BUCK.

RIEFF.—In White county, near Burnettsville, Indiana, Feb. 25th, of lung pneumonia, Effie May, daughter of brother Joseph T. and sister Elizabeth Rieff, aged 7 years 7 months and 11 days. Funeral services by the Brethren, from 1 Thess. 4: 13–18. Her sufferings were great, but now sleeping that blessed sleep in Jesus. JOSIAH AMICK.

GROVE.—In Washington Branch, Kosciusko Co., Ind., Feb. 11th, 1879 sister Susan, wife of brother Jacob Grove, aged 61 years, 11 months and 26 days.

She died of cancer. She suffered much, but bore her suffering without a murmur. She has been a member of the church for about twenty-five years. She was a noble woman, an amiable wife, a kind and affectionate mother. She is universally mourned by all who knew her. With her it can be truly said, God has recalled his own. She was the mother of eight children, three of whom are dead. Funeral services by brother A. H. Puterbaugh, from Micah 2: 10. A. K. LEEDY.

Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles.—Being a collection of historical quotations from modern and ancient authors, proving that a threefold immersion was the only method of baptizing ever practiced by the apostles and their immediate successors. By J. H. Moore. 64 pages. price, 15 cents; 10 copies, $1 00.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money, received to be used for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor members, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the POOR FUND. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good in the poor.

OUTSIDERS' FUND.

THERE are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefited by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer: Send us the names of such outsiders as you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them in a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as fast as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar a year. Hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thus enable us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded us. When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the OUTSIDERS' FUND.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, all donations received and papers sent out

GOD'S BUILDING.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 3: 12, 13,

1. Who is the builder?
2. What the material?
3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire?
4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire?

B. B. WHITMER.

THE first thing necessary, to the construction of a building, is its foundation. The solidity, and durability of a building depends largely upon that. The apostle says, 1 Cor. 3: 11, "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

A foundation necessarily implies a building. The building is doubtless the church. The apostle further says, 1 Cor. 3: 9, "Ye are God's building." Again, "In whom ye are also builders together for a habitation of God, through the spirit." Eph. 2: 22. Again, "Ye also as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house." 1 Peter 2: 5.

1. A building also implies builders. The builders are, doubtless, ministers of the Gospel. The apostle calls himself a "wise master-builder." 1 Cor. 3: 10. If Paul was a builder, so were the rest of the apostles, and their successors in all ages of the church, unto whom is committed the word of reconciliation. They, in a measure, stand in Christ's stead. Through their instrumentality sinners are brought into the church, and are nourished with the bread of life, (the Word of God). Says Christ to Peter, "Feed my lambs;" "Feed my sheep." John 21: 15, 16. Thus Christian character is formed, till our whole nature is changed into the image of God's dear Son, and we as lively stones are dressed and polished here, in the quarry, by skilled workman, (builders) till we fit an appropriate place in the heavenly building.

2. A building implies material. By material, we understand, is meant, the elements that form character. If the material be good, our character will be good, but if the material be bad, so will our character be.

Paul compares good material to gold, silver, precious stones, which will pass through the fire uninjured—rather purified: while bad character, or bad material, is compared to wood, hay, stubble; combustible matter, that is easily destroyed by fire. The material forming good character, might be summed up thus: honesty, truthfulness, temperance, charity, patience, prayerfulness, upright conversation, humility, and whatever things are lovely, and of good report; while the material forming bad character, is dishonesty, falsehood, slander, pride, intemperance, unthankfulness, adultery, fornication, profanity, etc.

3. Tried by fire. The word fire, is from Pur Puros, and by Greenfield, as applied to 1 Cor. 3: 13, 15, has a tropical, and emblematical meaning, signifying discord, dissension. This, in all probability is the meaning of the apostle; for the church whom he addressed the language to, had gotten into trouble, and divisions had obtained among them. One said, "I am of Paul; another, I am of Apollos; and another, of Cephas," and so on. The apostle meant to convey the idea, that the planting and care of churches, was the ministers work; and in this work, if the minister was not careful, material would, or might get in, that would in the end prove destructive to the church, and end like the church at Corinth, in divisions and contentions. The purity of God's Word will develop, or throw to the surface such corruption sooner, or later, like the corruptions in the Corinthian church; that the wood, hay and stubble, in the church, may be separated from the good material. In this way, churches have been tried ever since the introduction of Christianity. The churches having the most gold, silver, precious stones, having been tried, were found faithful, and remained like the Philadelphia Church; while those churches having mainly wood, hay, stubble, like the Laodicean church, have been destroyed—gone down in all ages of the church, and will to the end of time—were consumed by the fire of God's Word. The language of the apostle, may, however, also apply to the final judgment; but we know that churches are largely blessed already in this life, or forsaken, as the material is good or bad.

4. How are we saved by fire, if our works are burned?

This language, we think has direct reference to the ministry, i. e., building—building for the Lord. It is possible for a minister to be a good man—a converted man; and to plant a church, or churches, and care for them, yet error may be introduced, which at the time may pass unperceived, or things may be tolerated, and even encouraged, like the party spirit in the Corinthian Church, that in the end will prove its destruction. Not that ministers willed it so in the beginning, but almost imperceptibly error gained ground, till the whole church was leavened by it. In this way, a minister may be saved, and his work be lost, by the fire or test of God's Word

We do not mean that all of such minister's works would be lost. Some of the churches he planted might be saved. John, the revelator, planted the Laodicean Church, as well as the Philadelphia Church, yet his work on the Laodicean Church was lost, while he was saved, as well as the Philadelphia Church. In the Bible, the word of God is compared to fire, as well as to a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces. When the term fire, is used, it has reference to the penetrating, and purifying power of God's Word. In this figurative sense, we can understand the apostle's language to the church at Corinth.

A WARNING.

Sinners, the voice of God regard;
His mercy speaks to-day:
He calls you by His sov'reign Word,
From sin's destructive way.

Like the rough sea that cannot rest,
You live devoid of peace;
A thousand stings within your breast,
Deprive your souls of ease.

Your way is dark, and leads to hell,
Why will you persevere?
Can you in woe and darkness dwell,
Shut up in black despair?

Why will you in the crooked ways
Of sin and folly go?
In pain you travel all your days,
To reap eternal woe.

Reflect, thou hast a soul to save,
Thy sins, how high they mount;
What are thy hopes beyond the grave?
How stands that dark account?

Death enters and there's no defense;
His time there's none can tell.
He'll in a moment call thee hence,
To heaven or to hell.

Thy flesh, perhaps thy chiefest care,
Shall crawling worms consume;
But ah! destruction stops not there,
Sin kills beyond the tomb.

To-day the Gospel call, to-day,
Sinner, it speaks to you.
Let every one forsake his way,
And mercy will ensue.

TWO BAPTIST PREACHERS SILENCED

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

WHILE in the passenger room, waiting for the train at Toledo, Ohio, we fell into conversation with a Baptist minister, who was not long in holding asserting that he preached purely the doctrine of Christ and his apostles, to which we immediately replied, that we were under the impression, that he preached neither; referring him to the clear and undeniable scriptural texts on "anointing;" "the kiss of charity;" "laying on of hands etc." At that moment came up his brother minister, Mr. Eddy, whom I received, having met him before. He then remarked, "here is a man that believes in trine immersion alone as baptism." I replied that he was correct.

I then inquired, do you as ministers of the Gospel deny that the language of the commission, "baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," requires three actions?

Said they, "We do."

By them stood a bright boy of about ten summers. I inquired, "is that your boy?" "It is," said one of the ministers. Said I, "sonny please step this way; we want you to settle this question." The bright boy stepped up with alacrity. I then remarked; "sonny suppose your pa, having been up street, and made a purchase of goods, and on his return you would inquire and say; 'Papa where did you purchase those goods'? To which he would reply, 'I purchased them of Brown, and of Ray, and of Jones,' how many purchases would your papa have made? "Three" said the boy. "Very well sonny; now our Savior says that we should be baptized 'in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.' How many actions in that baptism?" "Three," said the boy.

Patting the boy on the shoulder, I remarked: "sonny you are all right on trine immersion,—stick to it." I, turning to the minister remarked, "you gather all the boys and girls eight and ten years old in Toledo, and I will guarantee that every one is a trine immersionist; but let them hear you men preach until they get twenty years old, and then they with you, cannot see how that language requires three actions."

Gilboa, Ohio.

CHARACTER.

BY E. STUVER.

CHARACTER may be defined as the resultant arising from the fusion of the various trains of thought and habits, which, through a longer or shorter time, have been followed.

Character, made up as it thus is of various and frequently heterogeneous traits is of different kinds, and between the upright and noble character which elicits our admiration and calls forth our respect, by the effulgence of its emanations, purity of purposes and the salutary effects which it exerts upon all who come within the range of its influences, and the sunken and depraved character which presents so many elements of hideousness, and so infects the surrounding atmosphere with the germs of moral death and degradation that those brought within the baneful range of its power, must possess the most undaunted fortitude, lest they likewise partake of and assimilate a portion of the noxious elements with which they are brought in contact. There are many phases, or in other words, characters in which commendable and non-commendable traits mingle and commingle in varying proportions and constitute the basis for the almost infinite variety of actions and purposes which are constantly impelling mankind.

When we thus view character, and consider the almost infinite influence it exerts on mankind, for weal and woe, both in time and the vast eternity beyond, we should consider the possession of a true, moral, Christian character, the most priceless boon that we could possibly obtain. Yet alas! how often is this great blessing regarded with levity and thrown aside with indifference, nay, even scorn. But while we may desire to possess a boon so commendable, the question may arise, how are we to obtain it? Can it be bought with money or position in life? No; none of those things can procure it for us, and it can only be obtained by long continued effort and mental discipline; it is only beginning early in life, and persistently and unremittingly adhering to true and noble purposes, forming good habits and clinging to them, that any excellence in this direction can be attained.

In view of these facts, (as facts I verily believe they are). I would say to all, and especially those entering upon life's journey, guard your thoughts and actions with a religious zeal, so that nothing impure and base may form a constituent of your intellectual and spiritual being, remembering that every thought, deed and action, no matter how insignificant, has a bearing on your present and eternal destiny.

CHOOSING HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

OF one thing girls may be sure, and that is, that the young men who make the best sons and brothers will also make the best husbands. And young men may be equally sure that those girls who are the best daughters and sisters will also as a rule, be the best wives. If a young man before he is married, is destitute of those affections and principles which come out in filial obedience, fraternal courtesy, and a controlling sense of duty, he will be equally destitute of them after he is married. The mere fact of wedlock will not change the fundamental principles of his nature. He will be essentially the same human being after marriage—or, at least after the honey-moon—that he was before. The same principles hold true with regard to women. The girl who is dutiful to her parents and industrious, unselfish and truthful, will be almost certain to be a blessing to him who gets her for a wife.

THE ROARING LION.

BY D. C. LICHTY.

ELDER Stephenson (Soul Sleeper) from Chicago, is now holding a series of meetings on Pony Creek, Brown county, Kansas, under pretense of reviewing the ground, covered by brother C. Forney, a few weeks since, on the doctrine of immersion, the Lord's Supper and feet-washing. It is a well authenticated fact that the result of brother Forney's efforts was not a mere tacit acquiescence on the part of the audience; but testimonies more tangible and powerful have spoken in behalf of the word of truth. The immediate consequence was, that at least four intelligent young men and women have boldly and fearlessly made the noble confession, and were forthwith "baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This was actually "bearding the lion in hisden" at a place where both Soul Sleeper and Infidel elements largely abound, and both these have recently assumed the more violent and ferocious part of the lion—hence this fearful roaring. There is evidently a cause for this, and what is it? manifestly because the Brethren still contend for the faith "once delivered unto the saints," and are willing to perpetuate (by precept and example) the immutable commandments of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. This is what hurts. This is the everlasting eyesore.

Does it hurt you, Mr. S., to see us walk in the simplicity of the Gospel? You cannot well get around the sharp points yourself, with your well-studied logic and barefaced sophistry, neither will your venomous slangs, vituperations and immendos redeem you nor the cause you have espoused.

We will now proceed to notice a few of his wild assertions on trine immerson. He quotes a little from Polycarp, Clement, Neander, Origen and Tertullian—lays them on the altar, passes judgment and condemns them in omnibus and brands them as heretical. The time was when our opponents were willing to test the issue entirely on the writings of the early Christian fathers, but lately they discover that it proves too much for them, therefore, now it is heresy. Mr. S., makes them as bad as the Apocrypha, and sums it up in these words, "I never read a more silly book in my life than the Apocrypha, and dear knows, I have read some pretty bad ones."

The only point he tried to make was from Tertullian; which reads something like the following: "We ask the candidate in the church, whether he will renounce the devil and his pomps (Mr. S., says he ought to say his pimp) and his angels. Then we go into the water and are three times immersed, answering somewhat more than the Lord commanded," and this "somewhat more," he placed under the most powerful magnifying glass, his indefatigable nature was susceptible of, then dared to assert that Tertullian referred to two of these dippings when he said, "somewhat more." But it was doomed to hang on the elder's bare testimony. It is much more reasonable to suppose he had reference to the questions asked the applicant while yet in the meeting-house, or in the ecclesia, church, as to the renunciations, and not to the mode of baptism. It is simply preposterous to dwarf that language to mean the mode of baptism.

Would Mr. S. dare to say that the applicant was asked by the administrator (as is customary among some sects) whether he would be immersed backward or forward? whether once, twice, or thrice? If so, then he might say with the greatest propriety, they are required to answer "more than the Lord commanded."

Any candid scholar will concede that he referred to the questions enumerated in the text, to-wit: Will you renounce the devil, &c.? This then is what was more than the Lord commanded. It must therefore be very bad to renounce the devil. It certainly is bad for the devil; but not for the individual. "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." The conclusion of the whole matter hinges on this point: If Tertullian proves anything, he proves trine immersion and nothing more, and there is no dodging the issue. And as he made no attempt, in his lengthy discussion, to disprove trine immersion, either by the writings of the early Christian fathers, nor by the writings and teaching of Christ and the apostles, we dismiss this subject by noticing a few of his quotations and remarks. To-wit: "Justin Martyr says nothing of trine immersion. Clement makes no mention in all his writings about baptism, much less trine immersion.

Origen spoke of infant baptism which is older than trine immersion. Tertullian is the first who ever introduced trine immersion. Then he comes down with the following clinches: "I hope that ignorance will screen the majority of the great Dunkard church, who number their membership by the hundred thousand, who hold to the blasphemous doctrine of trine immersion, because they do it through ignorance."

Not much ignorance Mr. S. We ask no favors, sympathies or intercessions from you. We know what we are doing, therefore we do it boldly and fearlessly, in the face of all the mockery and base vituperations you may bring to bear against the ordinance. We mean, furthermore, to perpetuate it as long as the world stands, unless we also apostatize. I have but few comments to offer on his proofs. If Justin Martyr and Clement are silent on trine immersion, please tell me how loudly they speak of Soul Sleeperism. You said when you sleep, your soul sleeps, therefore you are a Soul Sleeper. Do Justin Martyr or Clement say the soul sleeps? If not, then your doctrine is erroneous according to your conclusions. Probably Soul Sleeperism was not "enacted" (Tertullian) as early as that.

On the subject of the passover, he again exhausts all his resources, and labors with commendable assiduity to prove that Christ did eat the passover with his disciples in that upper chamber in Jerusalem. Here he made one good point, and that without sophistry, any misconstruction of language, and well may he do so, when Nemom Contradicente and the Bible on his side in the bargain. But here comes the trouble. Somebody must be abused anyway, and brother Forney, Moore, Miller, or Stein must be assailed. Now he makes the unqualified affirmation that "the Dunkard church denies that Christ did eat the passover with his disciples." It was disgusting and at times ridiculous to see him fighting an imaginary foe under a strange delusion. I imagined I could see his enemy whom he was hired to vanquish (Balaam) away up on yon mountain's heights, out of all harm's reach, from whence they could behold, with unbeclouded eyes, his manœuvering down in the joggy valley, banging away at the bush, behind which he supposed he had placed the Dunkard church, until the last twig was cut down, and when he approached the spot, to bag his game, behold it wasn't there. Just at this critical moment his monitor informed him that "they don't deny the passover, but deny it being on lawful time." This so disconcerted the speaker that he soon closed the meeting, and that rather abruptly, stating that he was getting cold &c.

On the following night he finished up the passover by reading various testimonies in reference to the preparation day. By this manipulation he tried to prove that Christ and his disciples celebrated the Jewish passover according to the law of Moses, at least as far as time was concerned: but as the weekly Sabbath, immediately followed the 14th or preparation day, therefore he insisted that the preparation had direct reference to the weekly Sabbath: without the most remote allusion to the paschal feast. But he made a complete failure, as well in this, as in all former attempts, to prove his assertion, and concluded by hanging it upon his own bare testimony.

FEET-WASHING.

The first point he aimed to make on this subject, was to rule it (unconditionally) out of "that upper chamber in Jerusalem, and drag it down to Bethany, to the house of Simon the leper—just two days before the Lord's Supper. Anybody (not half so talented as is Mr. S.,) can prove that a supper was served at the house of Simon in Bethany; but it requires the most indefatigable energies of a more talented logician than Mr. Stephenson to demonstrate the fact that Christ washed any one's feet on this occasion. But it is quite clear, by the concurrent testimonies of Matt. 26: Mark 14: Luke 22: and John 12: that there was such a supper served at Simon's house. Was this the Lord's Supper? Did Christ serve this supper? I say no. This was Simon's supper, and Martha served—and Lazarus also was a guest, and Mary was there; she came very nearly doing what you tried to prove that Christ did. She "anointed his feet with ointment and wiped them with her hair." This is the nearest allusion any of the authorities make of feet-washing on this occasion. Here then is the conclusion of the whole matter. This supper took place two days before the Lord's Supper, and not on the preparation day—in Bethany, not in Jerusalem; in the house of Simon the leper, and not in the upper chamber. At this supper Martha served, and not Christ. Lazarus and Mary also were present. Now, if Christ did wash the disciples' feet at Simon's supper, then he was more than a guest, and the questions of propriety and decorum would be involved, and it is left for Mr. S., to say when and where he was to stop: Can you prove that Simon the host, and Mary, Martha and Lazarus, were not disciples? We pass on with the narration, and would call your attention to the fact that Judas did not betray his Master on this occasion; but that he simply negotiated with the chief priests to betray him. "And from that time, he sought opportunity to betray him." Matt. 26: 16. Read the following verse, which shows plainly that the betrayal was yet in the future. Now read to the 46th verse, and tell me whether the contract was executed? Then read to the 49th verse, and can you conscientiously declare that Judas betrayed his Master at Simon's supper, over in Bethany, two days before the passover? I trow not.

Now this proves, again, too much for your cause; for it proves positively that after the paschal supper (which you conceded was in Jerusalem) and not before, did the betrayal take place. In Gethsemane's garden, and nowhere in or about Bethany.

It also proves that Judas not only betrayed his Master, but that he did not betray him at Simon's supper, but after the Lord's Supper, and that he (follows the narrative closely), betrayed him on the self-same night in which Christ served the paschal supper with the twelve, only, at least two days later than the time when he approached the chief priests—with "how much will ye give me" and about fifteen furlongs from the place where he gave the signal kiss, and that Christ washed the disciples' feet on the same night of his betrayal. These facts are plain to the sincere Bible student—the assertion of Mr. Stephenson that "feet-washing is anti-bible"—to the contrary notwithstanding. Christ says, "If I, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." This language is plain enough for the Brethren, and had he proven that he employed this language in Simon's house—it would in no wise invalidate the divine injunction. But Mr. S., (with others) think if they can crowd feet-washing out of Jerusalem, and place it in the house of Simon the leper, therefore it is no church ordinance. His conclusion is so insipid and wishy-washy that we are constrained to abandon it without further comment. But the Elder says that Christ did not mean that any one else should observe this injunction, save the apostles. He asks for testimony as to whether the apostles ever taught "feet-washing?" I will here ask him whether he can prove that they ever washed each other's feet? Then he says this was enjoined on the apostles on account of their aspirations, (because they asked him, "who should be greatest?") to teach them humility. Well, this is good logic, and what was good for them, may not come amiss to us. I will ask the Elder as to his aspirations. Does it ever occur to you, in your cogitations, and meditations, that, way over there, in the everlasting millennium, you shall be rewarded with scepter and diadem to reign as king or priest? Then take a practical and apostolic lesson on humility; then reasoning from that hypothesis, those who have no aspirations higher than that of door-keeper in the house of the Lord, can dispense with it as inappropriate.

I think, in the epistolary writings you will find one of the apostles making reference to feet-washing. But Mr. S. makes that of no consequence, because "it was an old widow sixty years old," and quotes from John 13, "He that is washed, needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit." Stephenson version is as follows: "He that is washed, needeth not save to wash his feet only, the rest is clean." Now whom shall we believe? It is quite sickening to follow his dissertation on the spirit and intent of this feet-washing; but as I have gone far beyond my limit, I will close with the following, as another specimen of his sweeping assertions: he says, "you haven't got a man in the United States, who believes that Christ meant for the apostles to teach feet-washing, therefore they never taught it." He further says, the great commission should read as follows: "Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you—to teach."

Prayer is the key of the morning and the bolt at night.

COME HOME, POOR SINNER.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

COME, for the gate is now open,
That beautiful gate that is straight,
The way is narrow, but sure,—
Come, why do you tarry and wait?

Come, for the Savior is calling,
He's calling you home to the sky;
He'll give you a home with the blest,
Then why will you tarry and die?

Come, for the Savior is pleading,
He's pleading for you up on high;
Come, for all things are now ready,
Oh! why will you tarry and die?

Come, for thy daylight is fading,
Soon darkness will cover thy sky,
And shut out thy chances for glory,—
Oh, why do you tarry and die?

Come and receive the salvation,
That Christ to His people will give;
Come and partake of it freely,
And you shall eternally live.

Come and accept of the Savior,
The Savior who reigns upon high;
Come, and He'll give you a mansion,
Then why do you tarry and die?

Come, while the Spirit is striving,
And with its kind wooing comply;
For it will not always thus strive,—
Oh? do not then tarry and die!

Come, while rich mercy is offered,
And unto the Savior draw nigh;
Come and accept of His Gospel,
And do not thus tarry and die.

Come, and obey its injunctions,
And with its kind teachings comply;
Then you shall in heaven be blest,
And dwell with your Savior on high.

WHERE OUR MINISTERS ARE.

BY CYRUS BUCHER.

AFTER a good deal of work, I have succeeded in getting out a list, from the Brethren's almanac, of the places where our ministers work, and I was surprised, and no doubt many of my brethren will be, of the amount of work on our hands. The large fields are to be cultivated. Some are ripe for the sickle—ready for the harvest. In the six New England States our faith and practice was preached but once by two of our Brethren who preached in the State of Maine, which, however, did not yield the fruits desired.

In the State of New York, we have no minister. None in Delaware, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi nor Louisiana. The Western States are all represented except Arkansas and Nevada. Thus we have 15 States out of the thirty-eight of the Union where the Brethren do not preach.

Beginning with our native State, where the doctrine of the Brethren was first held forth on this continent, at Germantown, near the city of Philadelphia, more than a century ago, we have 66 counties, of which 32 are represented, viz:

Adams	15	Indiana	9
Armstrong	5	Jefferson	1
Bedford	15	Juniatta	8
Berks	7	Lancaster	24
Blair	13	Lebanon	9
Bradford	1	Lehigh	2
Cambria	14	Mifflin	13
Chester	4	Montgomery	19
Clarion	1	Perry	5
Crawford	1	Philadelphia	2
Cumberland	15	Schuylkill	2
Dauphin	5	Somerset	39
Fayette	10	Union	5
Franklin	19	Westmoreland	13
Fulton	2	York	11
Greene	2
Huntingdon	15	Total	306

The largest number of ministers in any one county in the United States, is in Somerset. The State of New Jersy has 3 ministers in the county of Hunterdon. The remaining 19 counties, not represented. This gives us 309 ministers for the Middle States.

Next comes Maryland, with 23 counties; 7 being represented, viz:

Allegany	1	Frederick	9
Baltimore	1	Talbot	1
Carroll	8	Washington	12
Garrett	8
		Total	36

West Virginia, 25 counties are represented.

Barbour	12	Monroe	4
Braxton	1	Marion	2
Berkley	1	Mineral	7
Gilmer	1	Preston	13
Grant	7	Pocohontas	6
Hardy	4	Pendleton	5
Fayette	6	Randolph	1
Hampshire	1	Ritchie	1
Harrison	1	Raleigh	1
Lewis	4	Taylor	3
Marshall	2	Upshar	4
Monongalia	1	Wirt	1
Mercer	1
		Total	90

In this State we have 11 counties with but one minister in each. Virginia with 99 counties, has 16 represented, viz:

Alleghany	2	Lee	1
Augusta	19	Montgomery	4
Bedford	1	Orange	1
Berkley	1	Page	5
Botetourte	5	Roanoke	9
Floyd	13	Rockingham	33
Franklin	15	Shenandoah	13
Frederick	2
Lancaster	1	Total	125

North Carolina has 4 in Ashe county; Georgia, 1 in Morgan county, and Texas one in Kauffman county. This gives the Southern States 277 ministers.

Beginning with the Western States, we have Ohio with 88 counties, 46 of which are represented.

Adams	6	Lucas	1
Allen	2	Mahoning	1
Ashland	14	Medina	6
Athens	1	Miami	24
Clark	5	Montgomery	19
Clermont	3	Muskingham	1
Columbiana	4	Paulding	1
Crawford	2	Perry	1
Darke	11	Portage	1
Defiance	9	Preble	10
Fairfield	3	Putnam	2
Fulton	4	Richland	6
Greene	4	Ross	1
Hamilton	2	Sandusky	1
Hancock	1	Seneca	9
Hardin	7	Stark	13
Henry	1	Summit	3
Highland	8	Trumbull	1
Hocking	1	Tuscarawas	4
Holmes	2	Wayne	13
Huron	1	Williams	8
Knox	4	Wood	1
Licking	2	Wyandotte	1
Logan	3
		Total:	227

This gives Ohio 227 ministers with 15 counties represented by only one.

Indiana has 92 counties, 38 represented.

Allen	2	Laporte	2
Blackford	3	Madison	5
Carroll	17	Marshall	12
Cass	3	Miami	11
Clay	3	Montgomery	5
Clinton	4	Noble	8
Dearborn	1	Owen	2
DeKalb	2	Pulaski	6
Delaware	9	Putnam	2
Elkhart	23	Randolph	5
Franklin	2	St. Joseph	14
Fulton	1	Tippecanoe	5
Grant	3	Union	2
Hamilton	4	Wabash	20
Henry	5	Wayne	7
Howard	11	Wells	5
Huntington	15	White	7
Kosciusko	13	Whitly	7
LaGrange	3
		Total	248

Indiana has only two counties represented by one minister.

Illinois has 101 counties, with 34 represented, viz:

Adams	2	McDonough	5
Bond	4	McLean	4
Carroll	23	Macon	1
Champaign	4	Moultree	1
Christian	2	Ogle	12
Clark	1	Piatt	16
Crawford	1	Pike	1
Cumberland	1	Richland	3
DuPage	2	Sangamon	6
Edwards	1	Schuyler	1
Fulton	7	Stephenson	9
Jo Daviess	1	Tazewell	1
LaSalle	1	Wayne	1
Lee	5	Whitesde	4
Livingston	1	Will	2
Macoupin	8	Woodford	6
Marion	4
Morgan	1	Total	142

This gives Illinois 142, with 14 counties represented by only one minister.

Next comes Michigan, with 77 counties, 9 of which are represented, viz:

Barry	1	Montcalm	1
Berrien	3	St. Joseph	2
Eaton	3	Van Buren	5
Iona	1	Winona	3
Kent	2
		Total	21

This gives the State of Michigan 21, with three counties represented by only one minister.

Wisconsin has 8 ministers—Richland, 4; Dunn, 3; Pierce, 1.

Minnesota has 5 ministers—Filmore, 2; Rice, 1; Winona, 1; Berrien, 1.

Iowa has 99 counties, with 40 represented, viz:

Adams	2	Louisa	2
Appanoose	8	Lucas	1
Benton	3	Madison	1
Blackhawk	17	Muhaska	2
Butler	5	Marion	1
Cedar	4	Marshall	10
Clinton	3	Monroe	3
Cherokee	1	Montgomery	4
Dallas	3	Polk	7
Decatur	4	Poweshiek	6
Fremont	1	Ray	1
Guthrie	5	Shelby	1
Floyd	3	Story	3
Hardin	1	Tama	1
Harrison	1	Union	1
Howard	2	Van Buren	1
Jackson	1	Wapello	1
Jefferson	5	Washington	2
Johnson	1	Wayne	1
Keokuk	8
Linn	6	Total	133

This gives Iowa 133 ministers, with 16 counties represented by one.

Missouri has 114 counties, with 25 counties represented, viz:

Andrew	2	Jasper	1
Barton	1	Johnson	9
Boone	1	Mercer	1
Caldwell	4	Morgan	1
Carroll	2	Newton	5
Cedar	1	Nodaway	2
Clinton	4	Phelps	1
Data	1	Ray	2
Dallas	1	St. Claire	3
DeKalb	1	Saline	1
Harrison	2	Schuyler	3
Henry	3	Vernon	3
Holt	3
		Total	59

This gives Missouri 59, with 10 counties represented by 1 minister.

The State of Kentucky has 1 minister in Livingstone county.

Tennesee has 94 counties, with 8 represented, viz:

Greene	4	Cumberland	1
Hamblin	1	Washington	27
Hawkins	10	White	1
Johnson	1
Sullivan	1	Total	46

This gives the State of Tennessee 46, 5 counties represented by one.

Nebraska with 65 counties, is represented in 9, viz:

Burt	1	Richland	1
Colfax	2	Richardson	8
Dodge	2	Thayer	4
Gage	6	Washington	1
Pawnee	1
		Total	26

Kansas, with 84 counties, has 30 represented, viz:

Anderson	1	Marion	1
Bourbin	3	Montgomery	1
Brown	4	Ness	1
Cowley	2	Newton	1
Coffey	1	Neosho	1
Crawford	2	Osborne	3
Douglas	6	Republic	2
Elk	1	Russell	2
Cloud	1	Rice	1
Franklin	4	Howard	1
Jewel	5	Summer	1
Lawrence	1	Washington	1
Lyon	1	Woodson	1
Linn	1	Wilson	2
Miami	1
Jefferson	7	Total	60

Kansas has 60 ministers, 10 counties represented by one.

Colorado has 4 ministers—1 in Boulder, 1 in Lasitemas, 1 in St. Joaquin, and one in Stanilaus.

Oregon has 5 ministers—Coos, 1; Jackson 1, Linn 2, Marion 1.

California has 1 in Alameda and 1 in San Joaquin.

Thus we have 1578 ministers, distributed throughout 23 States.

By looking at these figures, we can readily see that some brethren have really too much on hands. Such as Brother Heyser, all alone in the State of Georgia, or Joseph R. Long, in the large State of Texas; and those of our ministers, living alone in a county throughout the different States. They need our prayers, and they need at least some, more than this, they need money to make them more free, and where the brethren are thickly settled, and well supplied with ministers, they should go over the borders, or send some where help is needed. For if you look over the list, you will find that where the ministers are so thickly settled, they are not kept busy, then they put their heads together and a paper, or a school or something of the kind is started; for all men must have work. At such places there are frequently from two to four or five ministers while others must struggle alone. In places of four or five being at one place, they could have meeting at four or five places. But we will just leave off and say that something should be done, for one soul is worth more than the whole world, and there are millions yet to save in our United States.

THE REST OF THE PIOUS DEAD.

BY GEORGE D. ZOLLERS.

To Sister Ella Price:—

He rests from his labors, dear father now sleeps,
In the quiet lone grave where no saint ever weeps,
Sweet is the refuge ne'er troubled by foes;
Nor sickness nor sorrow can break their repose
O, blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!
They rest from their labors, and gain their reward;
Their works live to witness while they waste in the grave,
And influence others their souls to save.

O, children, remember the counsels you heard—
Your father oft read from the Life giving Word,
His prayers of devotion at the family shrine,
When his soul was controlled by the Spirit divine;
As he slowly traversed the cold waters of death,
When the shadows were deep'ning and he gasped for his breath,
He cast on his family the last lingering look,
And referred you to God and His life-giving Book.

O how sweet it will be in that bright world to meet,
Where no storms ever blow and no surges shall beat;
They shall dwell with their God in that beautiful clime,
Where the health of his people shall never decline.
The Archangel's voice shall peal thro' the skies
And the bodies of saints shall awake and arise:
Then the soul and the body immortal shall be,
And reign with the Lord in eternity.

VALUE OF SPARE MINUTES

MADAME de Genlis composed several charming volumes while waiting in the school room for the tardy princes to whom she gave daily lessons.

Dagueseau, one of the chancellors of France, wrote an able and bulky work in the successive intervals of waiting for dinner.

Elihu Burritt, when earning his living as a blacksmith, learned eighteen languages and twenty-two dialects, by simply improving his "spare moments."

A celebrated physician in London translated Lucretius while riding in his carriage upon his daily rounds.

Dr. Darwin composed nearly all his works in the same way, writing down his thoughts in a memorandum book which he carried for the purpose.

Kirk White also learned Greek while walking to and fro from a lawyer's office. —Selected

Horace Greely never said a more truthful thing than when he declared "that the darkest hour in the history of any young man is when he sits down to study how to get money without honestly earning it."

No gift of God does or can contradict any other gift, except by misuse or misdirection.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

I. H. MOORE, } EDITORS AND
M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under $1 00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - MARCH 20, 1879.

Among those lately baptized in the Honey Creek Church, Ohio, were five Baptists. The good work is progressing.

Brother R. H. Miller writes that he is slowly improving in health, but is not yet able to do much traveling and preaching.

A report of the Mooreow Fund is crowded out this week; it will appear next issue. There is over $115 subscribed already. It will likely soon reach $200 or even more.

The District Meeting for Northern Indiana is one and a half miles south-west of New Paris, instead of three miles west as was published in the notice of meeting.

The Brethren have four meeting-houses within five miles of Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, in addition to the commodious church-house in the town. They are said to be in a prosperous condition.

Brother Landon W. t says: "In our 'Visit to Shaker Town,' and last paragraph, it should have been 'variety in worship' instead of 'vanity in worship.' Please correct as we wish to cast no reflection."

The Lutheran and Jewish Visitor comes to our table this week in a new dress, and otherwise greatly improved. The sheet is growing in interest and popularity, and enables us to keep posted on the Jewish movements generally.

Brother S. C. Keim, Elk Lick, Pennsylvania, writes: "My health is slowly, but steadily, improving. Hope the Lord may bless and inspire you with the Holy Ghost to enable you to fill the post you now occupy, with fidelity."

Brother Samuel Murray, writing from Huntington, Indiana, says that his health is now better, and that he is able to enter the field again. He expected to commence a series of meetings in the Lower Deer Creek District, March 15th.

Brother S. W. Landower, of the Carey Church, Wyandot county, Ohio, says: "We have a good, substantial, brick church, 40x70. The house was dedicated December 1, 1878. Since then, seventeen have been received into the church by baptism, and one reclaimed. There are others counting the cost and will come if the Lord spares them."

Ministers owe a special duty to all new converts, which is at times overlooked. Next to the Bible and hymn book every member, whether old or young, should be provided with a religious paper to keep up the interest till they become strong in the work. Ministers should suggest these things to those who come into the church, especially the daily reading of the Scriptures. Urge upon them the importance of making the Bible their life companion. No one who does not read the Bible should expect to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.

In its great haste to finish up business, Congress worked all day on Sunday, and through the night following. When the House was called to order the next morning a venerable man with a long beard arose in one of the galleries, and cried out with a thrilling voice: "Hear ye! Hear ye! The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God. This nation has forgotten God — this Congress has forgotten God, and will be cast into hell!" It remains to be seen what will become of a nation that forgets God by disregarding His Sabbath or Resurrection day.

There is an important question, in answer to which we would like to see a few well prepared articles. The question is this: Why were more people converted in the first century than now? There is a reason for it, and we would like to see it well explained for the benefit of the present generation.

We call special attention to the article headed, "Where Our Ministers Are," by Brother Cyrus Bucher. It contains valuable statistics well worth preserving. Examine the article carefully and report to us all errors you may find in it. We wish to preserve the article with all the corrections we can obtain. Write the corrections on a slip of paper separate from all other business.

We have now purchased of Brother H. J. Kurtz, the Children's Paper, the oldest juvenile paper in the Brotherhood. It will be moved to Lanark and merged into the Children at Work. This arrangement makes one paper less among us, leaving but two juvenile papers in the Brotherhood, one at Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, and the other at Lanark. No efforts will be spared to make the Children at Work interesting, useful and instructive.

The Bible Class department, on sixth page, is becoming quite interesting, and will doubtless prove profitable. Writers are permitted to express different views on questions presented so as to throw as much light as possible on the meaning of Scripture. This is done without any attempt to run into controversy. Several subjects have been quite well explained, and, no doubt, have proven edifying to Bible students generally.

CONSOLIDATION.

SINCE the beginning of the present year, much has been said about consolidating papers that are and papers that are to be. Personally I have not been unwilling to make considerable sacrifice in order to bring all the juvenile papers into one, believing that a greater unity could be maintained among the children. And I have the assurance of the publishers of the other juvenile papers that they think it would be well to do so, but the investments of each are such that considerable sacrifice would have to be made, and just how to unite so that no one might sustain too great loss, has been a subject of careful thought with us at least.

Propositions have been made to place all under my supervision, but on condition that I locate somewhere else. This I thought at one time I could do, hence the card that appeared in another paper to this effect; but circumstances, over which I had no control, prevented. To do good, was the only motive, but even in this we are sometimes hindered; perhaps all for the better. I am aware that if I possess qualifications to conduct a children's paper in the East, then I possess them to conduct one in the West. The place of publication is not what would make the paper good or bad, but its contents would show just what its editors are and wish others to be. Even children's papers must stand upon their own merits—not on some particular person or place. I have repeatedly assured my brethren that if the good of the cause demands my retirement from editorial labors and responsibilities, no one would rejoice in the retirement more than your unworthy servant. The position is full of vexation and trials, and these no man should covet. But some persons must fill these positions, however unpleasant the task, and I presume I may as well be a public mark as any other person. The Lord can and will sustain so long as the motives are right, and these we all should carefully guard. But more about consolidation.

After ascertaining that I could not, at this time, leave Lanark, we opened correspondence with Brother Kurtz relative to the purchase of the Children's Paper, and we are pleased to inform our readers that we have succeeded in purchasing, hence shall, on the first of April, begin the publication of a larger youth's paper without increasing the price. The Children's Paper was issued monthly. We have agreed to fill the unexpired subscriptions; but more of this in the future.

The contents of the enlarged paper will be greatly improved. Those who are engaged in Bible work, whether in the family, in the church or in Sunday-school, will find the Children at Work a valuable aid. The duties of children to parents, of parents to children, and of man to man, will be discussed. Our young brethren and sisters will find the Children at Work a useful medium through which to do good. Come and help us in teaching the young, and in so doing you will also grow stronger in love and in truth. A great field is open, and were there ten thousand instructors all would have abundant work. There are Bible facts, Bible commands, Bible promises to write about. The simple story of the Cross should be stamped upon the heart of every little boy and girl. Send for specimen copies and price list of enlarged paper. In large lots the Work will be sent to one address very cheap. Are you teaching children Bible truth? Then send for the Work. Are you trying to govern a Bible-school? Send for a lot of Works. Are you traveling, preaching the Gospel? Send for a bunch of Works to give to the children who come to meeting.

Please remember that we do not maintain that the Children at Work is the best, the largest, the nicest, the cheapest paper. No, not at all; for this would be about as absurd as to say that I am the best, the largest, the nicest editor in the church, which I am not. The paper must recommend itself. If it possesses inferior teaching, the people will find it out. If it does not look well, its readers will know it. If it is good in most points those who see it will learn that, too, so we are spared the absurdity of telling it. To talk about the best, the largest, the nicest, the cheapest, is to presume that our readers are too ignorant to find out such things for themselves. The Lord spare us from manifesting so much weakness.

Towards our contemporaries we shall endeavor to manifest just what we feel—a due respect, much love, and great desire for their prosperity. We have no lash to lay on them from week to week, no desire to meddle in their business, no defamation and misrepresentation to scatter over the land lest they succeed more than we; no, the Children at Work will not go into strife and vain glory to please the flesh and puff up the mind of any one. But it shall, if the Lord permit, work with others by love, by kindness, by long suffering, by gentleness and Christian courtesy. The peace of the church shall be kept in view. The love of God, the love of the truth, and the love of each other must be maintained whether unruly men are pleased or not. All lovers of children, all workers in the house of the Lord, all holy men and women are respectfully invited to join in directing the minds and hearts of the young from the vanities of this world to the glories of the world to come. There is no time to sleep; no time to quarrel; no time to sound out our own honor or praise; no time to be selfish and rebellious. Such things are from beneath, hence to be avoided. God will take care of the results if we only do our part.

I have now endeavored to present this matter to you without one bitter feeling towards any one. On the contrary I entertain the most kindly feelings towards all of my editorial brethren, hoping that no manifestations of self-laudation, jealousies, and bitterness may ever come to the surface, but if such should be felt, they may all be overcome at once. God bless us in all good work.

THE MT. MORRIS SCHOOL.

BROTHER J. W. Stein is making preparations to move to Mt. Morris, Ogle county, Illinois, to take charge of the Rock River Seminary and Collegiate Institute at that place. This is one of the oldest Educational Institutions in the State; surrounded by an excellent country and in the midst of a large settlement of Brethren. The location is beautiful, and commands a most extensive view of the surrounding country.

This Institution was founded by the Methodists some forty years ago, and for a long time remained their headquarters, but the church having selected another point for their educational work, the Institution at Mt. Morris fell into private hands, and was offered for sale. The Brethren in Mt. Morris, fearing it might fall into worse hands, and be used in a way that would prove injurious to the community, concluded to purchase it and re-establish a school under the exclusive control of Brethren.

The property consists of a large stone building, four stories high, and a well arranged boarding house three stories. The lot contains seven acres of ground well fenced, and in an excellent condition, situated on a lofty elevation in the midst of the town.

Brother Stein will issue a circular (letter) before long, explaining the character and aims of the Institution. We are not yet informed of the details in full, but give the following as some of the characteristics of the enterprise:

1. The Institution is to be an individual enterprise, owned by Brethren J. W. Stein and M. S. Newcomer, and is to remain under the exclusive control of Brethren.

2. It is to afford "educational facilities, extending from the preparatory department of an education, to a thorough collegiate course, with a provision that those who may prefer any select studies may have the privilege of doing so."

3. All students, as well as teachers, are to be restricted to plainness of dress. All who attend the school, members or no members, will be required to submit to this restriction.

The town of Mt. Morris, we learn, is very much in favor of the school going into the hands of Brethren, and will aid in supporting the Institution. They are highly pleased with the idea of restricting all the pupils to plain dressing. Mt. Morris is about twenty-five miles east of Lanark, and on a road running direct to Chicago. It is in what is known as the Silver Creek congregation, which church is under the oversight of Brother David E. Price. J. H. M.

THOSE FALSE REPORTS.

TO us it is a matter of painful regret, that editors among the Brethren will persist in publishing false reports about this office, after we have come out and publicly denied them, thus endeavoring to cast reflections, not only on us, but also on the church. When brethren come out and make a statement regarding their own business, that statement ought to be respected. This thing of accusing brethren of being dishonest is a bad feature, and makes a bad impression on the church and the world. Whenever people will learn to mind their own business and let other people attend to theirs the world will be much better off.

Had the editors, who are publishing these false reports, written us we would have taken pleasure in giving them the exact facts in the case, but instead of that they publish the reports before the church and the world; we came out and publicly denied them, and still they keep publishing them, and adding, yet, other charges equally false. Of course, we could produce the evidence, and show up wherein these reports are false, but do not wish to devote either time or place to that kind of work. It is not pleasant to our readers, nor is it profitable to the cause. Our motto is to attend to our own business and let others attend to theirs, and not be busy bodies about other men's matters. More than likely the time is not far distant when the Brotherhood will more fully understand the objects and motives prompting the publishing of these false reports. Let the above mild hints suffice to satisfy the minds of those who may have seen what is being reported in other papers about us. We have denied the correctness of the reports once, and think that sufficient.

HOW CAN WE?

"Brethren Editors:—

Please send to my address 'Bible vs Materialism,' by Elder Wm. Rowe. Find enclosed two dollars; fifty cents for the book, and the balance apply to my subscription. Address, North Liberty, St. Joseph county, Indiana."

THUS is a specimen of many letters that are received by publishing houses. How can they be attended to without the name of the sender? This kind of business produces much unpleasantness. Sometimes a writer will give his name, but omit the name of his post-office. Others will give name of post-office, but not the name of the State. And occasionally the name of the sender, post-office and State are not given. Now let us look at the result of this negligence.

A man orders a paper, book, map, or something that he feels he really needs. He wants it just as soon as he can get it. In fact he is in a great hurry about it, needs it badly. He hurriedly writes out his order, but fails to put in his name. By the next train it is carried to its destination, and in due time it is laid down at the proper place. On opening the letter, the receiver finds the money and address, but no name. He is very anxious to fill the order. He knows that the man will be looking for it. He feels that the man ought to have it at once, but how to get it to him is the question. What

OUR PALESTINE LETTERS.

IN this week's issue we commence publishing a series of articles, entitled "On the Way to Palestine," by Professor McGarvey, who is spending about six months traveling in England, France, Egypt and Palestine. Mr. McGarvey stands high as a writer and commentator, having been a close Bible student a number of years. His letters, especially from Egypt and Palestine will be read and sought after with interest. After reaching Egypt he will spend one time among the Pyramids and colossal ruins in the "land of the Pharaohs." Then he goes to the Land of Palestine — the Land of the Bible — to travel over the country and write up a description of the land and whatever may prove of interest to the Bible student.

We have made special arrangements with the Christian Standard and obtained permission to publish these letters in the BRETHREN AT WORK. They will doubtless be an interesting feature in the paper this season. Do not fail to read the one published this week. Tell your neighbors about these letters, likely they want to read them and will subscribe for the paper. The BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent from the first of April to the end of the present year for $1.10.

THE MISTAKE.

THE following, clipped from the Iowa Marshall Statesman, shows just about how much some people know:

"The Dunkers, who settled in Pennsylvania one hundred and sixty years ago, no longer hold their land in common, but divide it up like other people. Their language has become so completely a "patois" of Dutch, German and English as to be no longer intelligible to persons of those nationalities. They favor celibacy, but don't enforce it. Men, women and children all labor hard and long in the fields. They rise and retire very early, and eat five times a day. They keep the original Sabbath day, and celebrate the Lord's Supper at night. At such celebration they go through the form of washing each other's feet as an act of humiliation."

The people above referred to are not Brethren, but are known as the Euphrate Tunkers, a body of people who, under the leadership of Conrad Beisel, split off from the Brethren not far from the year 1726. Though they went out from us yet they are not of us. Their faith and practice are different in many respects.

And after all, it may be that we are to blame for not spreading the truth more, that people might be better acquainted with us. Before long we shall publish a tract giving a full account of our people — their faith and practice — and we want a couple of millions of these tracts distributed in America and England. We want every body to see the light, and then if we are misrepresented it will not be our fault.

A WIFE'S HOLY SACRIFICE.

THE following touching incident, which Bishop Peck relates of his own life, will well apply to the wives of hundreds of preachers in our own fraternity: he said that when it became probable that he would be made bishop, his wife, one of the loveliest of women, and a delicate invalid, came to him and remonstrated: "I need you. Your strength is not equal to the burdens. I cannot spare my husband. Others can do the work of the churches." But he replied that he did not feel at liberty to decline. When he went to Conference, and saw how affairs were tending, he wrote to his wife, saying that they must both pray over the subject, and receive the decision of the Conference as the decision of the Lord. "This," said the Bishop, "is the only serious letter I ever wrote my wife, to which she never replied." When he was elected, and husband and wife met, she fell at his feet and buried her face in her hands, exclaiming, "It is not right. I cannot endure it. I cannot give up my husband." After a time she looked up and said: "Go and take care of the churches, and the Lord will take care of me; but you are no longer my husband. You are my sacrifice."

"CHILDREN'S MEETING."

WHAT kind of a meeting is it? Is it different from other meetings?

B.—What is a meeting of any kind?

A.—It is the coming together of people—people meeting.

B.—Are children people?

A.—They are.

B.—Well, what would a "children's meeting" be, then?

A.—It would be a meeting of children.

B.—Well, then, we both understand what a children's meeting is.

A.—Yes; but I don't see any use in them.

B.—Do you see any use in any kind of meetings?

A.—Yes, sir.

B.—Well, what use do you see in them?

A.—(1) It is a command; (2) It gives opportunity to teach the Word of God; (3) It is a benefit to the child of God to enjoy the fellowship of the saints.

B.—(1) Should children not obey God's commands? (2) Do children not need to be taught the Word of God? (3) Is the company of saints no benefit to children?

A.—Oh, yes! children should obey God, should be taught the Word of God and should live in the society of God's people.

B.—Then, if children are benefitted just as other people, and other people are benefitted by meetings, do you not see there is just the same use in "children's meetings" that there is in other meetings?

A.—Yes; but what do you call them "children's meetings" for?

B.—Because the instruction is especially adapted to the wants of children—truth is told in such a way that even children can understand it. This is not the case in other meetings: therefore the propriety of the name.

A.—But we do not read the words "children's meetings" in the Bible.

B.—No; neither do we read the words "trine immersion" in the Bible.

A.—Well, I yield there is propriety in the name and the meeting; but there is yet one thing I don't like: You have the children sit in front, and the older people back of them—even the old brethren and sisters. Now, why do you do that?

B.—Are the front seats any better than the back ones?

A.—No; but it is easier to understand the speaker when you are near to him; and therefore, I think the old brethren who have borne the burdens of life and the cross of Christ, should sit on the front seats—should have every comfort which it is in the power of the church to give.

B.—Which should the church labor most for, the present comforts of the aged saints or the salvation of souls?

A.—The salvation of souls.

B.—Then, if those on front seats can be better and easier taught than those on back seats, who ought to sit there?

A.—Why, those who most need to be taught—whose present course will lead to eternal destruction.

B.—Well, then, who most need to be taught, the aged saints, or he who is on the way to eternal ruin?

A.—He who is on the way to ruin.

B.—Well, then, whom do you say should sit on the front seats?

A.—Why, those who have not made their peace, calling and election sure. But will children behave when they are altogether that way? Would it still not be better for children to sit by their parent? could not better order be had in this way than the other?

B.—If children are properly instructed they will be so interested that they will always be orderly. It would be better for parents to have their children, large or small, sit with them; but the church cannot bring about that order, so she should do the next best and that is to seat the young in front. With speaker before and parents in the rear, disorder would very seldom, if ever, exist. Very few children conduct themselves improperly when they know their parents see them, but if they can get in the back part of the house where neither their parents or the preacher can see them, and they have any disposition to be disorderly, they will then be so.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

Much good can be accomplished in most any locality by distributing the BRETHREN AT WORK regularly among well-disposed outsiders. They will take great pleasure in reading it, become interested in its contents, and therefore form a strong attachment for the church and its doctrine. Congregations wishing to try this method of spreading the truth among their neighbors should proceed to raise the money, order a number of papers sent to the address of some brother or sister, who is to call for and distribute them at the close of services. This method of doing missionary work will be found especially serviceable in localities where new congregations are building up.

ON THE WAY TO PALESTINE.

[From the CHRISTIAN STANDARD by special Arrangement.]

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.

Dear Brother Errett:—

ON Saturday last I completed the fiftieth year of my age. On Sunday I delivered a parting discourse before a joint meeting of the Broadway and Main street congregations, in the house of the latter, and on Monday, at 3 P. M., I started on my long voyage.

I have passed through no such ordeal as that of Sunday since I bade farewell to the church at Dover, Missouri, seventeen years ago. My friends there were as true and as devoted as here, but not so numerous, nor had I known them so long. To bid them a suitable farewell, was more than I could do. I did what I could. The tears of many, the good wishes of all, and the fervent prayers that were pledged for me and mine, made me feel ashamed that I am not more worthy of such love. But the fiery trial came on Monday, when the carriage drove to the door, and the moment came for bidding farewell to my own home and household. I had already been upstairs in my library, to take a last look there, and as I gazed upon the rows of familiar books, I said within myself, "Good by, my dear old friends; and if I never see you again, God bless you for the good you have done me, and the happy hours we have spent together." I next went to the kitchen to bid farewell to the servants. Faithful Jim had that morning expressed an earnest desire to go with me; and when I told him that a whale might swallow him as he did Jonah, he said, "If he do, I can't he'p it. I want to go anyhow. I aint never seen nothin' and I want to see somethin' before I die." He promised me that he will do all that he can for my wife while I am gone, and I know that he will. When I bade farewell to him and Fannie, the cook, I had to stop in the porch and lean against the post awhile before I approached my weeping family. If it had been the hearse at the door, waiting to take me to the cemetery, there could scarcely have been more grief.

But I must draw a vail over that scene. I left my grief-stricken wife in the hands of good, motherly Sister Herndon, and I know that she and other loving friends will give her all the comfort in their power.

When I had bidden farewell to some friends who had gathered at the depot, among them a large number of students, and had taken my seat in the coach, I was oppressed with such sadness as I have never felt before on leaving home. I gazed with dim vision on the good old town as it receded from my view, and the last object that caught my eye was the green pines and the white monuments of the cemetery, with the Clay monument rising high above the lofty forest trees. It struck me at once to ask myself, Is this an evil omen? Already our first-born lies sleeping there, and shall another of my little flock, or some of my dear friends, be laid there ere I return? And while I thought on these things, I began almost to envy the traveler who has no friends, no wife, no children; for it tears the very heart out of a man to bid all these good-by, for such a journey as mine.

My work in the Broadway Church and in the Bible College, I left in hands that can be relied on. Brother H. Turner, well known and well beloved, takes my place in the former, while Brethren Graham and Grubbs divide between them my work in the latter.

Leaving home on Monday, at 3 P. M., I reached this city by the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, on Tuesday at about 8 P. M. I am astonished at the amount of business done by the corporation which own this road. From an annual report published in a Pittsburgh paper yesterday, I learn that their business last year amounted to more than thirty-one millions of dollars; and the excellence of their management is seen in the fact that during the year 1878, though their business was largely increased, their actual expenses were materially diminished.

The scenery along the road from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia is very striking, especially that in Allegheny mountains. The Horse-shoe Bend where the road, in descending the eastern slope of the mountains, almost doubles on its own track, presents a marvel of engineering skill, while the surrounding group of valleys and mountains is grand in the extreme. But the grandest, and by far the most expansive scenery, is just below the junction of the Juniata River with the Susquehanna. The broad expanse of the latter river, double the width of the Ohio at Cincinnatti, is just before you, and only a few feet below the railroad track; beyond this, in front, is a far-reaching valley, with lofty knobs to the right and a long mountain ridge to the left, while still further to the left you see the gap between the ends of two lofty ridges where the river seems to have cleft its way, and through this gap, as far as the eye can reach, you behold mountain after mountain, till the horizon is terminated by the dim blue tip of the loftiest ridge of the entire range. I have seen nothing equal to it, except some of the views along New River, on the Chesapeake & Ohio road.

On our arrival in Philadelphia, we met with a cordial expression of the brotherly love indicated by the city's name. Brother S. W. Van Culin, an elder and a pillar in the church, met us at the depot, and recognizing me by my picture in the Living Pulpit, took possession of us and guided us to his house, where we are now enjoying a most hospitable entertainment. * * * *

We sail to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock, on the steamer Pennsylvania, of the American line. Our route, so far as we can forecast it, will lead us without much delay through England, France and Italy by rail, and thence to Alexandria by water. We propose to give one week to Egypt, and go thence by water to Joppa. With Jerusalem as headquarters, we will see all of Palestine; thence we go to Damascus, Baalbec and the cities of Phœnicia, terminating that part of our tour at Beirout, whence we sail on the homeward voyage. My companions are my cousin, Frank Thompson, a young farmer from near Lexington, and Brother W. B. Taylor, of Elizabethtown, Kentucky, a former student of the Bible College, of Bethany College and of Virginia University.

It occurs to me to close this first letter with the remark that in the apostolic times I find my standard of a Christian, and that in being the correspondent, while abroad, of the Apostolic Times, the Standard and the Christian, I am exactly suited.

My next letter, providence permitting, will be mailed at Queenstown, Ireland.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. In order to promote Bible Truth, all questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Compare and explain Ex. 21: 10, 11, and John 1: 18. H. H. R.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE REEDY.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8: 33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

Will you, or some one else please give an explanation of Rev. 2: 17? It reads thus: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches: To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it."

MARY ZIGLER.

Please explain 1 Tim. 5: 8, which reads as follows: "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." E. S.

Please explain through the BRETHREN AT WORK the meaning of 1 Cor. 15: 29. It reads as follows: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?"

What are we to understand by the term, "Why are they then baptized for the dead?" J. E.

I desire an explanation on 1 Tim. 5: 24: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after."

S. A. WHITELY.

Please give your views through the BRETHREN AT WORK, of Matt. 5: 25, which reads as follows: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison."

Also 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10: "Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work."

J. B. ELLER.

Will some one please explain Heb. 7: 1, 3: "For this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." M. B.

THREE ANSWERS.

Will some one give us an explanation on 1 Cor. 3: 12, 13? 1. Who is the builder? 2. What the material? 3. How shall a man's work be tried by fire? 4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved yet so as by fire?" B. B. WHITMER.

I WILL give three of the most common views on these queries.

1. The builder, or builders, are believed to be the preachers, who build up a church by gathering souls unto Christ, like Paul, Apollos, Cephas, Peter, John, &c. They are "laborers together with God," and the converts to Christ are "God's husbandry," and "God's building." Verse 9. 2. The material is the converts, whereof some are spiritual, while others are carnal. 3. That these converts, which are the builder's work, shall be judged in the great judgment day, where the spiritual shall "abide," but those who walked not after the spirit, but after the flesh, "shall be burned." 4. That, though the carnal converts shall not stand the judgment, yet the preacher shall be saved.

REMARKS.—This view seems to have obstacles insurmountable. 1. It proves (?) the doctrine of annihilation. For inasmuch as the carnal converts are equivalent to "wood, hay, and stubble," they, in judgment, "shall be burned." 2. It would show that all those who preach Christ and gather souls unto him, though they be carnal, yet the preacher "himself shall be saved," which is inconsistent. 3. The apostle's declaration, that "he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire," is utterly inapplicable according to this view.

2. It is believed, 1. That the builder, or builders, is every individual who receives (by faith) Christ as the foundation of their salvation—preacher as well as lay member. 2. That the deeds and actions of each individual are his or her material with which they build upon Christ, as their salvation. 3. That the "fire," spoken of, is a figure of the "fiery trials," tribulations, persecutions, &c., by which those deeds and actions, as well as faith, patience, prayer, hope, &c., shall be tried. 4. That those who hold out faithful, through all the crucibles that they have to pass, will thereby have the "wood, hay, and stubble" burned out of their building—their faith, hope, love, prayer, &c.—and so "shall be saved; yet so as by fire." Briefly, it is believed that all who do build on Christ as their salvation, bring, nevertheless, "wood, hay, and stubble" in with the "gold, silver, and precious stones;" and that these—carnalities—must be burned or purged out like as the dross is purged from gold."

REMARKS.—This view seems more consistent, however, there is one point in it dark and irreconcilable. The apostle speaks of some whose work that they build upon Christ, will "abide," and they "shall receive a reward;" and of others whose work shall not abide, but "shall be burned," and by this burning "suffer loss" but they themselves be "saved; yet so as by fire." But according to this view, there are none whose work will "abide," and they receive a reward, for it places them all under the class which Paul says "shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire."

3. It is believed, 1. That the builders are the believers in Christ. 2. That the material is that which believers receive and practice. 3. That every one "must appear before the judgment seat of Christ;" and that there every "man's work" that he has built upon Christ for his salvation, "shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is." That the day that shall declare, or make manifest the works of every man and woman, is the day of judgment. That the "fire" that shall reveal the secrets of the hearts of the children of men, is the holiness of the Lord, which shall try every man's deeds and actions, as well as souls and spirits; and that nothing can stand before him, that is unholy and impure.

4. If a man's work be burned, how shall he be saved, yet so as by fire? It is believed that "with men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible." Matt. 19: 26. That those whose works were wrought in God, to his glory and honor, will receive "a reward;" but those whose works were not all prompted by pure motives and holy desires, their works will be consumed by the holiness of the Lord, for "God is a consuming fire," and so forfeit their rewards, "suffer loss," but they being in, or on Christ the foundation, their souls shall be saved from the lake of fire, the second death. That they whose "works abide" shall be saved and rewarded "by grace," but they whose "works shall be burned" shall be saved "by fire."

REMARKS.—This view is here stated simply because many believe so; but who sees not that it is closely allied to the Romish purgatory, and completely conflicts with his predilected views of other parts of Scripture, and so shrinks with horror back from it as he would from a viper?

Having thus given the above, three views of this subject, if the querist and reader can be reconciled to none of them, then it would probably be the best to consider this subject as one of "beloved Brother Paul's" deep things which are "hard to be understood," 2 Pet. 3: 15, 16, leaving it to him to explain when we come over there, and meditate upon things which are more easily understood. Suffice it to know that nothing will "abide" that is not sanctified by the all-sufficient atonement made on Calvary. "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

MEANING OF TWO WORDS.

What is the meaning of the last two words of 1 Cor. 16: 22? "Anathema Maran atha," and what language is it? W. H. MILLER.

THIS query remains, awaiting an answer. I have before me, Vol. 2, of the "Cottage Bible and Family Expositor," by Rev. Wm. Patton, D. D. He gives the following exposition of the passage:

"When the Jews lost the power of life and death, they used, nevertheless, to pronounce an Anathema on persons, who, according to the Mosaic law, should have been executed, and such a person became an Anathema, (Hebrew, Cherem), or accursed. . . . . Now, to express their faith that God would, one way or another, . . . interpose, to add that efficacy to his own sentence which they could not give it, it is very probable they might use the words Maran atha; that is, in Syric, the Lord cometh, or he will surely and quickly come to put this sentence in execution.

"In beautiful allusion to this, when the apostle was speaking of a secret alienation from Christ, maintained under the forms of Christianity, (which might perhaps be the case among many of the Corinthians), as this was not a crime capable of being convicted and censured in the Christian church, he reminds them that the Lord Jesus Christ will come himself and punish it.—Bishop Patrick in Doddridge. This is the passage supposed to be referred to in the preceding verse, as written with his own hand."

THE FOUR BIRTHS.

Please explain John 1: 13: "Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." What births are here referred to, natural or spiritual?

J. Y. SNAVELY.

WE understand the first birth to mean this: For instance, a man joins a church just because his parents belong to that church, not considering whether the Bible is on his side or not, but "must follow my parents," hence is born into the church, of blood and not of God.

The birth of the will of the flesh is similar. The man looks, not to God's Word for knowledge, but seeks a church to suit his fancy, to suit his style; one in which he can do just about as he chooses, and still retain his popularity. Such are born of the will of the flesh, and not of God.

"Nor of the will of man." To be born of the will of man, is to join some church to please some one else. "I know not what the Bible says, but to please and satisfy him (some friend) I will join the church." Therefore, that man is not born of God, but of the will of man.

"But of God." The man who seeks in earnest for salvation, searches the Scriptures, prays to God for wisdom, &c., for his own good, and not for somebody else—such a man is born of God, and a glorious birth it is. What a blessing to be called a child of God!

S. BRUMBAUGH.

HOW MANY THRONES?

1. How many thrones are referred to in Rev. 22: 1? 2. What constituted the baptism of "our fathers" referred to in 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2? 3. How often were they baptized unto Moses?

THOMAS BLACK, JR.

I ANSWER, two, though in that relationship yet in the far future. At the present time, God, the Father, has a throne in the heavenly city above. Jesus, in his triumph over sin and the devil, obtained the honor of being seated with the Father on his throne, Rev. 3: 21, and when Christ makes his second advent into this world, he will then occupy his own throne for one thousand years. When the new heaven and the new earth shall be created the throne of God and of the Lamb shall exist in the relationship precisely as mentioned in the passage above, under which the river of life is said to take its rise, and will continue, or remain to be so until the great consummation of all things, when God shall be all in all. 1 Cor. 15: 28.

DAVID KIMMEL.

JUDAS.

Some one will please compare and explain Acts 1: 18, and Matt. 27: 5.

JUDAS, when he saw that he was condemned by betraying the innocent blood, threw down the thirty pieces of silver (amounting to about $15.) into the temple, departed, and went out and hanged himself. Acts 1: 18, adds that he fell headlong and burst asunder. History seems to establish the fact, that after he left the temple, he crossed the dark valley of Hinnom, on the south steep hillside, south of the valley, hung himself, and by a breaking of the rope or branch, fell headlong and burst asunder. The steep hill-precipice, south of Hinnom valley, may well be the scene of this two-fold death. NOAH H. SHUTT.

MONEY is a bottomless sea, in which honor, conscience and truth may be drowned.

DIFFICULTIES are placed in our way that we may overcome them, and pass through conflicts to victories, and through victories to triumphs.

IF ever a good Christian fellowship can be brought about, it must be made the prime object of every one to acknowledge faults that are apparent.

LIBERTY.

This, we are told, is the oldest town in Montgomery county, and has but few, if any, of our Brethren in it. However, we met here very warm friends, and were favored with the use of the United Brethren Church. After having four meetings here, the writer to meet other calls, passed on to Winchester, Preble county, from where we now write. As to the result of the meeting at Liberty, there were nine baptized and others would come soon.

LANDON WEST.

From the Honey Creek Church, Ohio.

Dear Brethren:—

THIS church is situated in the north-western part of Londenville District. Was dedicated last August.

According to arrangements, I brought David Workman, of Ashland, Ohio, to this place, who commenced fireing in the camp with such power that in a few days Satan's ranks were caused to tremble, by thirty-nine denying him as their captain, and enlisting in the army of the Lord, by complying with his requirements, and being baptized. Also one applicant. Nineteen belonged to five different denominations; six to the Baptist church. One was a member of that church for thirty-five years. He is seventy-five years of age. He says for the last twenty years he has been convinced that he has not followed all the commands of the Bible, but he, like many others, thought just so he belonged to the church, that was all that was required; but when he examined his Bible more closely, he said that there was something that he had omitted, and that was feet-washing. He says he stopped too soon; but he is now assured even in his old days that by the help of God he can live nearer his Savior, and feel assured of an eternal life. There were six Methodists and four Albrights, one of which was class leader and Superintendant of their Sunday-school. There were two Winebrenarians, one of which is in his seventieth year. Also one that belonged to the Reformed Church. Ten of the remaining twenty were of the Brethren's children. The remaining ten were of outsiders. There are many, we believe, that are almost persuaded to become Christians. The youngest one that was baptized was in his thirteenth year. And now, young reader, do not put off coming to your Savior until you get old—you may not live to be old, you may put it off until you are lost and that forever.

Brother David has been doing the preaching himself since he came, except one sermon, which brother William Murray preached. Brother Morgan and William Workman could not attend the meeting on account of sickness. Brother Joshua Workman and David Brubaker could not attend all the time on account of having quite a distance to come. The word of the Lord was spoken with such power that sinners were caused to weep over their sinful condition. While fathers and mothers were made to rejoice to see their sons and daughters forsake Satan, and turn in with the offered terms of mercy, husbands were made to see their wives come out on the Lord's side, while wives were made to weep for joy to see their companions forsake the Devil and his pernicious ways, and try to serve the Lord.

Just about twenty years have rolled into eternity since brother David was baptized within a mile of this place. He started to serve his Master when but a youth; and is still trying to serve him by preaching the word of the Lord in its primitive purity, and calling sinners to repentance. What a good work he has been doing for his Master while at this place!

We are surrounded with five different denominations, but, nevertheless, we are in nowise alarmed, for truth will stand when all else pass away.

Our church stands just one mile and a half north of the old Greentown Baptist church, which was organized about forty years; it being the oldest church in the association, formerly called the Greentown Association, but is now called the Mansfield Baptist Association. It has been left without a pastor for the last four years. There are several of their members that have joined our church. Where the members do not work in union the church must fall.

Brother David preached thirty-two discourses, which closed the meeting on the 22nd of February. As we can do nothing of ourselves we give God the praise.

Dear Brethren:—

AS an item of church news, I will say that it is known to some of your readers, that the Walnut Creek congregation, Johnson Co., Mo., has been destitute of a minister ever since the death of elder Joseph Wampler, only as they could get a call from others. The writer has been trying to visit them once a month, but being oft afflicted, could not always attend. So brother J. S. Mohler, of Henry county, Missouri, was solicited to preach for them a few days, and accordingly he came and commenced the work on Saturday evening, the 22nd inst., and continued until the evening of the 25th. I being again in the crucible of affliction, could not attend; so brother Mohler was left to labor alone, but we believe the Lord was with him; for this morning we received the intelligence, that, during his short stay with them, the church was edified, and two precious souls covenanted to walk with Jesus, and live a new life. Both of these were young men in the prime of life. May the blessing of God attend them through life. Others, also, were made to feel the weight and power of sin, and we trust they will soon follow the noble example of the young men. May the favors of heaven attend brother Mohler for his labors of love.

In conclusion, I wish to say there is a good opening here for some ministering brother who may wish to settle in the West. This, I am told, is the first organization of the Brethren in Southern Missouri. They have no local minister, yet they have a good meeting-house, 40x50 (brick), with basement, and about thirty members. Who will come and locate among them and preach for them? They have a good country. The meeting-house stands about five miles north of Knobnoster, through which the Missouri R. R. runs. A. HUTCHISON.

Dear Brethren:—

I OFTEN long for the fellowship and association of the blood-bought children in Christ across the great ocean, and especially those whom we have seen face to face. This brings to memory the great day when all shall meet never to part—a glorious day when we shall have liberty to go into the marriage hall, clothed with the Christian's garment. In Matt. 22: 11-13, we read of a man who had entered the marriage room without the proper garment, but was told to go out. What a fearful warning to all who are trying to get in without doing what Christ says.

Dearly beloved brethren and sisters, watch and pray, that we may become fully clothed with the heavenly garment, having oil in our vessels, waiting for the coming of Jesus our beloved Savior.

I receive the BRETHREN AT WORK regularly. I am encouraged by the news it brings of the increase in the house of God. I am glad that the good work goes on, and that many sinners turn to their loving Savior. I have read brother Miller's book; also brother Bashor's, and am pleased with their defense of the truth. I wish that many in Denmark could know the facts set forth in those works. I have reason to believe that they would be a great means of doing the people good. With the assistance of a good dictionary, I can now read English quite well. With sincere love to you all, I remain your brother in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Tommerby, Denmark, Feb. 3rd, 1879.

From C. Hope.

Dear Brethren:—

I CAME home from Scagen last Friday, accompanied by a young convert who was baptized yesterday. I have had many well-attended meetings in that place, and found many earnest seekers after the truth and good, kind friends. Scagen has been noted as the dark place in Denmark. The people were considered the most degraded of any in this country; but it now promises to be one of the brightest spots in our nation. A sister of the one recently baptized, is near the "one body," and we look for others to follow soon. The young man above mentioned is a good singer, and bids fair to be a useful man in the church.

We had a good congregation yesterday. Our hall was well filled. Shall have three more meetings here, then go elsewhere to labor. Some here in Hjorring are near the kingdom. The same may be said of many other places. I have reason to be much encouraged. The Lord bless you and us in the great work of teaching the way of Christ.

Yours in Christian bonds.

Dear Brethren:—

I HAVE just closed a very interesting meeting near Wolcott, Indiana, of some five days duration. Brother Joseph Amick, from Burnett's Creek, was with me a few days and labored to the general satisfaction of all. Baptized four Campbellites, and two Baptists will be as soon as the brother gets able. He took very sick soon after he and his wife gave their hands to the church; so we thought he had better wait a little; and one young sister that had made no profession, making seven at this meeting. Brother Abraham Miller is the elder. I pity brother M., as he has two much to do. Calls are coming in from every direction. He is a poor man, but quite an able minister. May God bless him in his noble work, and open the hearts of the Brethren to help him bear his burden.

OUR number is still increasing. Brother William Pullen, from Pawnee City, came to us on the 17th ult., bringing the Gospel of peace and glad tidings. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things." Rom. 10: 16.

Three precious souls left the ranks of sin and came out upon the Lord's side. "The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children."

Dear Brethren:—

WE have been having a series of meetings in our neighborhood. Brother Marcus Fowler labored with us, by the means of which three were added to our number. We were all very sorry to have him leave this place; but God grant that we may all meet again. We are all very thankful for the good he has done in this place, and trust that God may repay him. We have fourteen members in this neighborhood; we hold social meetings, in which we all enjoy ourselves very much. May we all walk in the way of the righteous, and by God's help, may we follow in the footsteps of our Master. CAROLINE PEASE.

IF our coming District Meeting relieves me of the Home Mission, I may travel some in the States of Indiana and Illinois this coming Summer and Fall, if spared. I expect, about the end of this month (March), to engage in the service in an unevangelized territory of some forty miles square, lying between the north-eastern and north-western churches of our (North Missouri) District, and labor towards opening a connection of the churches together, from east to west throughout the District.

Dear Brethren:—

WE are most woefully in need of a good blacksmith and a good shoemaker, or rather shoemender, in our valley. Two good mechanics would find good situations here and could soon build up a good trade. None but Brethren need apply.

Our little valley is now pretty well settled up, and still they come. Last Fall Brother Detrick, from Iowa and Brother Wyland, from Missouri, came. Brother Bauman, from Nora Springs, will be among us, and others say they will follow him hither.

Our little church is flourishing. Four were baptized two weeks ago, and four more will be soon, and the prospect is still good for more.

In the valley here we have a good location for a country store, and we need a post-office. So we think a shoemaker, a blacksmith, a merchant and a post-master would greatly facilitate our business interests here, and supply a vacuity which we begin to feel to be pressing. With regard to the spiritual status required, I wish to avail myself of the present opportunity to append a hearty approval of what Brother Brubaker, of Gage county, Nebraska, wrote some time ago. A young brother was here the night the paper came, containing his article. I read it aloud, and then remarked that I had a good mind to sit down and write a great big amen to his article. The young brother says, "What will you do with brethren that are not in order when they come among you?" I replied, we will send them on west. Then said he, "We will get them at Burr Oak." I don't suppose, however, they would be any more welcome there than here. The fact is, we have too many natives of that kind at both places now. Wish I were talented. Have often desired to be heard on non-conformity and other topics, but am so sadly in the rear of "Working Brethren," and "Huntingdon High School Brethren," and "Progressive Brethren," and "Deacon Brethren," "Free Discussion Brethren," etc, that I have to steal a march, and wedge myself in edgeways like I am now doing to be heard at all.

Brother Harshey, of Missouri, sounds a note in this week's Primitive, which has a terrible, and suggestive warning to us all.

When I, for the last time turn my eyes to behold the setting sun, may it not be shining on the dismembered fragments of our glorious fraternity. Forbid it Almighty God!

J. L. Switzer.

March 1st, 1879.

The Whole Gospel Sounded Out.

THE work begun by the Brethren in December is still going on. During a series of meetings which were held at Sugar Tree, three more came forward, confessed and were baptized into Christ. When the meeting closed at Sugar Tree, the Brethren went to Wood Stock, where they had been holding meetings, and on Sunday seven came, confessed and were baptized. On Monday two more confessed and four were baptized.

Through the hearing of the whole Gospel—the pure Gospel—the faith once delivered to the saints, some that were blind have been made to see the truth as it is in Jesus, and some that were lame have been made to walk in the light as He is in the light. Some who have been made to tremble more than once at their own unbelief, nearly bordering on infidelity, when becoming confounded, perplexed and bewildered at hearing only a part of the Gospel with so many different doctrines advocated by hirelings, and at the same time all claiming to be guided by the same one Holy Spirit,—such stand, trembling, doubting no longer, nor asking who is right? and which is the right way? Through the influence of the Brethren's preaching, they have at last come to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and it is hoped, have become strong in the Lord and the power of his might. We can truly exclaim with the psalmist, our heavenly Father hath delivered us in peace from the enemy that was against us, and God has sent forth his mercy and his truth.

We have great reason to believe that more are almost, if not altogether, persuaded to come out on the Lord's side. Up to this date, eighteen have come into the church and one reclaimed. Sarah J. Fruit.

West Lima, Wisconsin, February 14th.

From Peabody, Kansas.

Dear Brethren:—

AMONG the things of the past is a series of meetings, which we held in our congregations: and we truly feel encouraged and strengthened in the hope of our salvation. Brother W. J. H. Bauman, from Floyd county, Iowa, was with us and preached fourteen sermons. Sinners trembled, although only one came out on the Lord's side. It seemed almost impossible for any yet out of the ark of safety to sit under the sound of such preaching and still remain in sin. As the nature of sin and its awful consequence were so clearly demonstrated that none could help but comprehend it, and also the enjoyment and happiness that is in reserve for those who forsake sin and live obedient to all the requirements of heaven, really ought to have been inducement enough to cause every sinner present to come to Christ, forsake sin and secure a home in the Paradise of God. We trust that the fruits of Brother Bauman's labor will be seen long. O, may it be as bread cast upon the waters, that will return not many days hence. We believe we have been much profited by these meetings. May God then grant us all more of his Holy Spirit, that we may be shining lights to the world; and may it not be long till we shall be made to rejoice because of sinners coming to Christ in this community, and learn that the ways of Christ are far superior to the ways of sin; and may the Lord abundantly bless the brethren and sisters throughout the brotherhood.

God, bless Brother Bauman, too,
For his labors here in love;
And may he ever keep in view
His reward is in the heaven above.

He left his home, his family, dear,
To preach the truth to hungry souls;
And all our hearts have been much cheered,
And count it precious as pure gold.

Dear Brother Bauman, labor on:
So yours the crown will be at last.
Truly the time will not be long
When all life's sorrows will be past.

Then we, who've walked in all God's ways,
Will stand acquitted before his throne.
There we shall ever sing his praise,
With joy unspeakable and unknown.

Brethren, pray for this little flock of brethren and sisters. May God's blessings rest upon us all; is the prayer of your Brother in Christ,

H. Shomber.

From Benjamin Sapp.

WE are here not as the lost sheep of Israel, for we have preachers, besides, we have also the word of God, which will lead us to the true Shepherd. But the field is too large for them to do justice, so we thought as the brethren were passing along on the Hanibal & St. Joseph R. R., they might stop at Clarence station, Shelby county, Missouri, sixty-four miles west of Quincy, and preach to us and rest themselves a few days. We will fetch them from the R. R., and take them to it again. We are poor here, so we can't promise any thing much, but we feel it our duty to do something. We think there is a good opening here. If any of the ministering Brethren are passing along and have time to stop, let them write us a few lines about six days before hand, stating where they will start from, and the time they will start; then we will know what time to be at the station. When any writes, address Brother John Prange, Hager's Grove, Shelby county, Missouri, or Benjamin Sapp, Cherry Box, Shelby county, Missouri. If any come in from the North on the Northern Missouri R. R., they will change cars at Kirksville, Missouri, and go east on the Q. M. & P. R. R., and get off at Edna, Knox county, Missouri. Address Brother William J. Conlehuk, or John S. Hays, Hedge City, Knox county, Missouri.

From John Hollinger.

WE arrived at Russel, Kansas, March 7th. West of Kansas City, the train consisted of fourteen coaches; and the conductor said there were five car loads of emigrants left in Kansas City, that could not be taken with our train.

We are well pleased with the country. The weather is nice. The people are plowing, sowing and making garden. Wheat looks well. Children are going barefooted. Masons and carpenters are at work building—quite a contrast with Joliet, Illinois.

From South Bend, Ind.

IN regard to the proposed plan of sending pure Gospel to the great cities of America, as suggested by Brother D. C. Moomaw, you may set me down for one dollar. In addition to this, if God be my helper, I offer as soon as the weather gets pleasant and my health still improves, to preach two weeks, in the city of Chicago, Ill., and bear my own expenses. I do not offer to preach any human Gospel, but to preach the everlasting Gospel, and so tell the message of the Master, as may commend itself to the consciences of all. It is high time that the fearful prejudice of our fraternity, in relation to city preaching be overcome, and we go as our Commissioner has ordered, "Preach the Gospel to every creature." Are the cities of America worse than ancient Corinth which was renowned for her wickedness? or Jerusalem which was so blasphemous? yet God planted his name there; and it was in this city that the apostles were baptized with the Holy Ghost. Then go ye in cities and every-where.

P. R. Wrightsman.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

WHITE.—In the English River congregation, near South English, Iowa, March 6th 1879, Brother Thomas J White, in the 49th year of his age. Funeral by Elder John Thomas from Job 19: 25-27.

Samuel Flory.

BRUMBAUGH.—In Elkhart county, Ind., February 24th, sister Catharine Brumbaugh, aged 71 years, 7 months and 19 days. Funeral services by the Brethren, from 2 Tim. 4: 6-8. J. B. Miller.

JOSHO.—Near Noblesville, Hamilton county, Indiana, February 27th, 1879, Brother John Josho, aged 65 years and 16 days. Funeral services by M. Bremaman and Clapper, from Revelation 14: 13.

M. Bresaman.

MYERLY.—January 23rd 1879, of diphtheria, Winfred, only child of friends John F. and Annie E. Myerly, aged 6 months and 26 days. Emma J. Murray.

SHOWALTER.—In the South Waterloo Church, Black Hawk, Co., Ia., February 22nd, 1879, Brother Levi N. Showalter, aged 41 years, 5 months and 1 day.

The deceased was a single man. He taught twenty-one terms of school. He was a faithful brother; beloved and respected by all who knew him. The funeral services were conducted by the Brethren, in the presence of an unusually large congregation, from 2 Tim. 1: 6-8.

J. A. Murray.

HIMES.—In the Racoon Church, Montgomery county, Ind., February 17th, 1879, Daniel Himes, (Sen.), aged 83 years, 10 months and 23 days.

He was born in 1796, in the State of Maryland. He moved to Botetourt, Virginia. In 1816 he married Mary Wrightsman. In 1825, he moved to Ross county, Ohio. In 1846, he moved to Montgomery county Ind., near Ladoga, where he died at the residence of the writer. He was a member of the Brethren Church about thirty-five years. Daniel Himes, Junior.

Primitive Christian, please copy.

WELCH.—In the Fairview church, Ind., Perlina A., daughter of Brother Thomas C. and sister M. E. Welch, aged 18 years, 2 months and 20 days. Funeral by Brother Isaac Billhimer.

WELCH.—In the same church and family, February 16th, 1879, sister Margaret E., wife of Brother T. C. Welch, aged 37 years, 10 months and 9 days.

Her sufferings were great, but she bore them with Christian fortitude. Funeral occasion improved by Isaac Billhimer, from Heb. 13: 14.

A. G. Semenbaugh.

(Primitive Christian, please copy).

DICK.—In the Manor congregation, Indiana county Pa., Feb. 14th, 1879, sister Margaret Dick, aged 76 years, 11 months and 6 days. Funeral occasion improved from Heb. 13: 14, by the writer.

The subject of this notice was of very quiet disposition. She was beloved by all who knew her. She lived about thirty years in widowhood. She united with the church about ten years ago, and led a consistent Christian life. She suffered much in her last illness, but passed away serenely, leaving evidence of a good hope. Was followed to the grave by a large concourse of people, mourned by many, but not as those without hope.

Joseph Holsopple.

LENTZ.—In the Macoupin Creek Church, Montgomery county, Illinois, February 23rd, sister Elizabeth, wife of Brother Adam Lentz, aged 51 years, 2 months and 21 days. Disease pneumonia.

The subject of this notice was a faithful mother in Israel. She was much beloved by her family and neighbors. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her loss, which is her eternal gain. Two of the children are members of the Brethren Church. May the Lord help those that are yet outside of the fold of Christ to come to him so as to be prepared to meet their departed mother in the climes of celestial glory. Funeral occasion by Daniel Vaniman, from 2 Tim. 1: 6-8, to a large concourse of people. D. B. Stubebaker.

LONGANECKER.—In the George's Creek congregation, Fayette county, Pa., of consumption, sister Mary Annetta Longanecker, consort of Brother Joseph Longanecker, aged 31 years, 5 months and 17 days.

She was a very exemplary mother of fifteen children, fourteen of which survive her, and also thirty-five grandchildren. Being of a quiet and inoffensive turn, her race in the church of her choice was pleasant and agreeable for many years. She was faithful to all her household, and obedient to the teachings of the church. She bore her afflictions without a murmur. She called for the elders, enjoying the anointing in full promise of the Father's will. She died like the still vesper's breeze. A large concourse attended the interment. Funeral discourse by Brethren, from 2 Thess. 1: 11, 12.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money, received by us for sending the Brethren at Work to poor members, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose, will always state distinctly that it is for the Poor Fund. We would feel to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the labors of many poor members may be made a blessing, the paper, and cheered by reading the good news, helping hand, and do good to the poor.

OUTSIDERS' FUND.

There are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefitted by reading the Brethren at Work during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer. Send us the names of such outsiders as you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them in a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as long as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar a year. We hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thus enable us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded to us. When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the Outsiders Fund.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, all donations received and papers sent out.

THE DIVINE AND THE HUMAN POWER IN THE WORK OF SALVATION.

BY R. H. MILLER.

A FAILURE to distinguish properly between the divine and the human power in salvation, often leads to the improper application of terms and indefinite ideas, leaving great truths out of sight and magnifying minor ones beyond what is their real importance. In the Scriptures the divine and the human power are blended together in the work of Providence and redemption for the blessing and salvation of man, yet the work of God and the work of man is always distinct. In all the patriarchs and prophets, we see the work of human agency, but not any plainer than we behold the works of Divinity.

With the apostles the same is true; in them we see the work of human agency for the salvation of man; but above the human, we see the power of God working, all and in all, for in the work of Divinity is the power to save. Paul may plant and Apollos may water, but God gives the increase. A proper distinction between the work of the Creator and the creature, is important in a clear understanding of all the means of salvation. Man may use the means God has given, but the divine power must give the blessing.

This figure will illustrate the idea: Human agency may prepare the ground and plant the corn, but a higher power must make it grow; human power cannot give it life—that must come from God. Man may work in the planting and cultivation of it, but all its growth comes from the life within; so in conversion, man may sow the good seed, the word of God, but God must give the new life which makes it grow. Man may work with all the means of grace to cultivate the new life till it grows on to perfection; but all its growth comes from the life God has given.

A clear understanding requires that we note another thing on this point: Salvation is sometimes ascribed to the works of man; such as, saved by faith, saved by works, saved by prayer, saved by baptism, &c. Again, salvation is ascribed to the works of Divinity; such as, saved by the blood of Christ, saved by grace, saved by the Word, saved by his resurrection, saved by the power of God.

It is necessary here to make a proper distinction in referring salvation to its cause, and to the means by which it is given. When it is said we are saved by faith, by prayer, by baptism, etc., it is referring to them as means; like the axe cuts the tree down, and the saw cuts the log off. They are only means, and the thing done is ascribed to them. But when we say the man cut the tree down, the man sawed the log off, we refer the work done to the power that did it; so, when we say saved by the blood of Christ, by grace, by the Spirit, by the power of God, we refer salvation to the power which gives it, not to the means by which it is given.

Some would set aside all these means to which salvation is ascribed, and have salvation given without them. Others would go too far in making the means of grace equal in importance with the power that gives the means and the salvation, making the axe and the saw equal with the man that made them and cut the tree with them. The power to save is in God and must come from him; as the power to cut the tree is in man and must come from him. How weak and foolish to throw the axe and saw away because they have not power in themselves to cut the tree! Weaker, still, the man who gets aside the means of grace, because they have not power in themselves to save! How much more safe to accept all the divine power, and all the means, and salvation given by them.

There is another thing to be noted here, that is in speaking of the divine and the human work. The term "essential," is often applied to the means and the cause without any distinction, which leads to confusion and misunderstanding. Essential means important in the highest degree, and, when not qualified, should only be applied to the works of the Divinity. The works of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, are only essential to salvation. The works of the creature are not so important, or so great, and should not be called essential in the same sense. All the means of grace have their special design. There is a special design or purpose in faith, so is there a special design in repentance, and baptism, and prayer, and so with every means appointed in the Gospel. And when the term, "essential" is applied to any of these means, it should be limited to their design and object, because they are essential to that object only. To use the term, "essential" in a general sense, and apply it to all the commands of the Gospel, makes them as important as the blood of Christ; and would make every one of them not only a condition of pardon, but the power that merits pardon. Faith does not merit or purchase pardon, repentance does not, neither does baptism—not all the works of the creature can merit or purchase salvation. It is the blood of Christ, the work of Divinity, that merits and gives salvation; and the word "essential" cannot apply to both in the same sense. It applies to the works of the creature in a limited or special sense; as, faith is essential to a change of heart; repentance is essential to a change of life; baptism is essential to a change of state or relation. Every ordinance is essential to the design of it, and in that limited sense, it should be applied to them; while it should only be applied to the works of Divinity in a general or unqualified sense.

There are other terms that we should be careful in using, for the purpose of giving a clear understanding; such as redemption, regeneration, (begotten again, new birth) justification, conversion, pardon, salvation, sanctification, &c. All these things are used to express some relation in the work of redemption; some of them are special and apply to a certain part of it; while others are general, and apply to the various relations in it; as, regeneration and begotten means the beginning of the new life. The sower sowed the good seed, some fell by the wayside; it did not begin to grow. Some fell on stony ground; some among thorns; it began to grow, but perished. Some fell on good ground, it also began to grow. This beginning to grow is regeneration, because generate, means the beginning of a new life; hence, regeneration and begotten have reference to the beginning of the work of redemption, and it is begun by a new life, which God must give; but without the means of the Gospel to cultivate it, thorns, or the world will grow up and choke it till it will perish.

Justification and pardon, and the new birth, have reference to another part of the work, not the beginning of it, but to entering a new relation in the covenant of grace, coming into the fellowship of the saints. Justification and pardon mean acquittal, and freedom from sin. New birth means a change of state or relation. A man living in the world in sin cannot be acquitted from sin while living in rebellion. A change of state comes with acquittal from sin; as, the prisoner is freed from prison, or changes his state when he is justified or pardoned. He comes forth to a new life of freedom; he goes free because the pardon is read, the door of the prison opened to him by the officer of the law; the pardon is given him because the conditions of pardon are in his favor; he accepts and pleads them for his acquittal. The power of the law gives him pardon and freedom. The conditions of the law are the means he uses to obtain them. Then we see that justification or pardon and freedom, or change of state into all the blessings of citizenship; all refer to the same period in his deliverance.

Conversion is a general term, it means a change, and may be applied to any change in the work of salvation; to the beginning, the middle or the end of it. Its first or primary application would be to the beginning of it, or to regeneration, the time when the new life begins, for that is a change from death to life; all subsequent changes are only changes in the life already begun; and conversion should apply to all subsequent changes in a secondary sense. The new life begins in faith that works by love and purifies the heart. The very beginning of new life is the great conversion. The change of heart is conversion; repentance changes the life; that is conversion on the same principle every other change in the Christian life as he goes on to perfection, may be called conversion, but all are applied in a secondary sense, except the first, because that is prior to all others; and the beginning of them.

Salvation, or saved, are general terms, and mean deliverance or freedom from any state of condemnation or death. It may be applied to the beginning of the new life, and it may be applied to the work of faith, or to the work of repentance or baptism, in fact, it is applied to almost every means of grace, but only in a secondary sense; it is applied to all the works of the Divinity in its primary or full sense.

Sanctification is another term of general application; its primary meaning is to set apart to a holy or religious use; in this, is included the preparation for religious or holy purposes. Sanctification is applied to the setting apart, or consecration of the Christian to a holy life. It is also applied to the use of all the means of grace in the Gospel. "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth," showing that it is God who sanctifies his children, and that he does so through the means of the Gospel. Sanctification has reference to the effect of God's word upon the heart. The condition of the heart is the subject of sanctification; and as the means of grace affect the heart; the work of sanctification goes on as the Christian, "grows in grace and in the knowledge of the truth." Justification begins its work in faith that purifies the heart, and dedicates it to a holy work; so repentance sanctifies the life; baptism sanctifies the whole man, or turns him over, soul, body and spirit, in righteous and holy covenant with God, but the work of sanctification is not complete until all the means of grace are applied, and the work of life in Christ is done.

An error in doctrine, or a misunderstanding of these terms often is a cause of the improper use of them; or error in doctrine will select one of these terms and turn it from its Scripture meaning to the support of that error; and this word, sanctification has been used in that way by those who profess to be so holy and pure they cannot sin. These claim the word sanctification teaches that idea, while the Scripture does not even apply that term to any man in that condition, for the holy men of God did not claim to be so perfect, and never applied that term to any one in that sense, save when it is applied to God. Such an error does not only turn that word from its Scriptural use, but turns the people away from the Gospel means of true sanctification, and from the commands in God's Word.

One great reason why those terms are improperly used, is the error in doctrine which makes it necessary. One will settle on the word regeneration, found his doctrine, and build his church on that word—in it is all he holds essential—he wants no more, looks no further, but stops satisfied; while he has only the beginning, the first word, and the first work in repentance. Another will take the term conversion on the same principle, apply it to a change of heart, and stop there to build his doctrine, and his church; he, like the other, thinks nothing more is essential, and he cares but little to know what else is to be found in the Gospel. He feels that he is safe where he is, and he has but little need for any word but conversion to prove that he is safe, and that word need not apply to any thing but a change of heart for him. Another will take the regeneration, the justification, or pardon and new birth, then turn back to build their doctrine on it, holding they have all the essentials in it, and caring but little for any more, because they hold their safety is in this.

But the true and Scriptural meaning of all these terms will destroy all these partial doctrines, and give us the whole truth in a history of the church which once accepted them in all their meaning; beginning with regeneration, so on to justification, or pardon, the new birth, conversion, salvation, sanctification, accepting all the means of divine appointment belonging to each of them, just as the church did eighteen hundred years ago, so it should do now.

SHORT METER.

A SHORT meter tune is good; short meter sermons are better than long meter. Who wants to listen to a long, dry, prosy sermon? Nobody! Who wants to listen to a long, dry, testimony? Nobody! Who is edified by a long, dry, soulless prayer, so cold that it brings on the chills? None. Who likes long, dry, chilly, death-like newspaper articles, so long that few have the time or patience to read them? Perhaps one in every thousand that read the papers. Then, please give us short meter. Your sermons, exhortations, testimony, but especially your articles for the BRETHREN AT WORK, let them be short meter, full of sharp points, written under the direct rays of light from the eternal throne. Pray, give us short meter.

MY HAND IN CHRIST'S.

BY DELLA SHTSMAN.

MY road in Christ's, he leadeth where he lists.
Thro' a flowery dale or 'neath a gloomy sky:
My faith is, he will bring me safely through,
The ills of life till I am called to die.

My hand in Christ's, I care not what may come:
If he is mine I cannot yield to sin:
His everlasting arms are around me here.
Then I can safely trust at last to win.

My hand in Christ's, I care not how death comes:
By pestilence in the day or in the night,
I shall be safe beneath his gentle care,
And dwell with him who's love, and truth, and light.

My hand in Christ's, who bore up Calvary's height,
The Cross, and gave his precious life up there
To save a wretch like me; can I e'er doubt,
Or give myself a victim to despair?

No; I will cling the closer to his Cross,
And with a child's devotion hold him fast;
My hand in his, I'll safely pass along,
Though storms may howl, my home I'll gain at last.

My hand in Christ's, even down to death's cold flood;
He'll bear me safely through the dying strife,
And safe to those who've only gone before
To where I soon shall dwell in higher life.

GREAT AND NOTED EVENTS OF THE SIXTH AND SEVENTH SEALS, AND THE MILLENNIUM.

BY DANIEL SENOUR.

BY request, I will give an outline in condensed form. If I would comment as I should, it would make this article too lengthy. I will refer the reader to the Scripture on the events of those seals. "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood." Rev. 6: 12. Matthew, Mark and Luke speak of the same event in regard to the sun and moon. And many of the prophets also refer to these. History shows that that took place in May 19, 1780. By this we know that the sixth seal opened then.

"And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth." Rev. 6: 13. This occurred Nov. 13, 1833. "And the heaven departed as a scroll." Rev. 6: 14. This has reference to the Savior's coming as a man child to remove the woman." Rev. 12: 5, 6. But before he comes, the devil, beast and false prophets will take away the daily sacrifice, or scatter the holy people. This will stop the worship of God thirty days before the sixth seal closes. Dan. 11: 31: 2: 7, 11. This will be the Roman power, the ten horned beast spoken of in the 7th of Daniel, the fourth kingdom, which will break all others to pieces. Daniel 7: 7, 19. This is the downfall of Babylon. Rev. 18, or the destruction of the whore. Rev. 17: 15, 16, or Protestants who stand in the shoes of the Roman Church, making laws of their own to worship God. The falling away must first come, and is now coming very fast, not of numbers, but of the true faith. There will still a number remain steadfast to the ancient landmarks, but they will be looked upon with scorn and derision by those who have departed from them.

The man of sin is the two horned beast. Rev. 13: 11; Dan. 7: 8, 20. "Little horn." The king of fierce countenance is the same. Dan. 4: 23. The ten horned beast is the Pope of Rome. He will give the little horn, the ten kings to conquer the world. Rev. 17: 13. Dan. 11: 31. The downfall of the literal Babylon was a type of the spiritual. The spiritual will fall at a midnight, like the literal. Then the cry will be made, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." All worship will be stopped for 2,300 days. Dan. 8: 14. The 2,300 days commence thirty days before the sixth seal closes.

Three great events will take place in those thirty days. The first is the taking away of the daily sacrifice as above stated. The second is the Devil being cast down to stand before the woman. Rev. 12: 8, 9, 10. The persecution is the pain the woman will be in: thirteenth verse. The woman, or church, will be in pain ten days. Rev. 2: 10. The third event is the Savior's coming in like manner as he ascended. Acts 1: 11. Not as a king, but as a man-child, to remove the woman, or wise virgins. Rev. 12: 6, 14. The woman will be fed and nourished in the wilderness 1,260 days, or three and a half years. At the time of the Savior's coming to remove the woman, or church, the two witnesses will come, and the woman will fly into the wilderness with two wings of a great eagle. Rev. 12: 14. There mission here lasts 1,260 days, or three and a half years. Rev. 11: 3. These are the two olive trees of Zech. 4: 11 14; Rev. 11: 4. The god of the earth is the man of sin, 2 Thess. 2: 3, or two horned beast. "Behold I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." Malachi 4: 5. The other one is Enoch. Those two have a work to accomplish yet. I will let this suffice on the events of the thirty days under the sixth seal. The fulness of the Gentiles will be just at the close of the sixth seal, and the door of mercy will be closed against them. Then will be fulfilled the saying of the revelator, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still." Rev. 22: 11. Just what they are at the close of the sixth seal, that they will remain.

The door of mercy will be opend to the Jews at the opening of the seventh seal, when one door is closed, the other one will be opened. There are great and noted events to take place in the 1,260 days under the seventh seal. 12. 60 and 30 will make 1,290 days. Dan. 12: 11.

The sounding of the seven angels will take place under the seventh seal spoken of in the 8th, 9th, 10th chapter of Rev. The same is spoken of in Rev. 16, in a more condensed form. Terrible events will take place under the seventh seal in the 1260 days. "And power was given unto him to continue forty and two month." Rev. 13: 5; Daniel 7: 25; 12: 7. The ten horned beast and the two horned, receive their powers to do wonders from the dragon. Rev. 13: 2. They will cause fire to come down from heaven, and cause an image to speak, to deceive the people Rev. 13: 13; 14: 13. Those two wicked ones will not be permitted to do wonders in the thirty days under the sixth seal. The salt, or church must be removed first, then God will permit the Devil to give power to those two wicked ones to do wonders. And that power they will hold 1260 days under the seventh seal.

During the time of this dreadful calamity that will fall upon the inhabitants of the earth, there will be three against three. The Savior and the two witnesses, or Elijah and Enoch will be against the devil and beast and the false prophet. Those two witnesses will have superior powers. Rev. 11: 5, 6. They will gather the Jews from all quarters of the earth in the time that the beast and false prophet have the sway over the earth. They will no doubt issue a proclamation to the nations of the earth to deliver up the Jews; and those that will not do it, will be chastised with plagues sent upon them. Rev. 11: 5, 6. These two prophets, Elijah and Enoch, will possess power to gather the Jews, as Moses and Aaron did from Egypt. The Jews will no doubt accept those two witnesses as their Messiah, whom they have so long been looking for, on account of the power they possess, to do wonders.

After the Jews are all brought into Palestine, the beast will muster an army of two hundred thousand thousand, Rev. 9: 16, or all nations. Zech. 14: 2. This will take place under the sounding of the sixth angel. Rev. 9: 13.

The two witnesses will commence their mission in the thirty days under the sixth seal by protecting the woman in her flight to the wilderness, then to gather the Jews under the seventh seal. Their time to accomplish this is nearly 1,260 days less. Those twenty days will be occupied in the flight of the woman in the wilderness. Rev. 11: 3.

Their 1260 days will end a little before the beast's. The beast will kill them, Rev. 11: 7, and their dead bodies will lie in the street where our Lord was crucified. Those two witnessess, will be great posts to the beast, as Moses and Aaron were to Pharoah in Egypt. The beast will rejoice when he gets power to kill them. When those two witnesses are killed, the beast will fall upon the Jews and take the half of them captive. Zech. 14: 2. After the witnesses lay in the street three and a half days "The spirit of life from God will enter into them, and they will stand upon their feet, and great fear will fall upon them which saw them." Rev. 11: 11. Just then a voice will be heard, "come up hither." Immediately after they are ascended, the Savior will come as Lord of lords, and King of kings. Rev. 19: 16. The first resurrection of saints will take place, and the great battle of Armageddon will be fought. Rev. 16: 16. Ezek. 39; Zech. 14: Rev. 19: 11, to the end of the chapter. There will be blood up to the horses' bridle. Rev. 14: 20. This battle will take place at the close of the sounding of the sixth angel or the sixth vial.

The Savior's coming on the white horse will be at the end of 1,290 days, and armies in heaven will follow him, and blow the trumpets. And the dead saints will be raised, and the living, or woman that fled in the wilderness, will be changed in the twinkling of an eye. 1 Cor. 13: 52.

There will be forty-five days occupied in the first resurrection, and battle of Armageddon, and the binding of Satan to cast him in the bottomless pit. This brings out the 1,335 days or events that will take place in them. Dan. 12: 12.

The next and noted event is the seventh angel sounding. Rev. 10: 7; 16: 17. The world is full of wicked people, besides those that are in the army. The events of the seventh vial will destroy all sinners from the earth. It will finish the work.

The next and noted event will be the resurrection of the whole house of Israel. This resurrection of the Jews will take place at the end of 1,335 days. I refer the reader to the Scriptures on the resurrection of the Jews. Jer. 30: 9; Ezek. 37: 11, 12, 13; Dan. 12: 2, 3.

There will be a great lamentation among the Jews after they are raised from their graves, Zech. 12: 10, to the end of the chapter. They will mourn and lament for the Savior: "they will look upon him whom they pierced." The resurrection of the saints will be at the end of 1,290 days: this is the first resurrection. The Jews will be resurrected at the end of 1,335 days. Those two resurrections will be forty five days apart. Daniel was one of the old Jewish prophets, and he was told to go his way till the end be; for thou shalt rest and stand in thy lot at the end of days, that is, 1,335 days. This proves the time of the Jews' resurrection. Dan. 12: 12, 13.

The next event will be the burying of the dead Israelites. It will take all the people of the land to bury them. The alloted time to bury the dead is seven month. Ezek. 39: 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. At the end of 2,300 days, the land will be cleansed, The Jews will be judged by the law. Rom. 2: 12; Dan. 7: 10.

The resurrection of the Jews, the burying of the dead, the cleansing of the land, and the judgment will occupy 965 days, add 965 to 1,335 will make 2300 days. Then the worship of God will commence again, and David will be king over the house of Israel. Ezek. 37: 24, 25. Then the Jews will build Jerusalem, Jer. 30: 18, and the temple east of Jerusalem, Ezek. 40: to the end of the book. It will take the Jews nearly forty years to build Jerusalem and the temple. The Devil will be cast into the bottomless pit forty years before the 6,000 years close. The marriage of the Lamb will take place in the time that the Jews are building Jerusalem. Rev. 19: 7, 8, 9. This is the evening of the world of which our supper is an emblem. The seventh seal closes when the 6,000 years end. The seventh thousand is the millennium. Christ and the 144,000 and the saints will descend and reign on earth a thousand years. They will be kings and priests over the house of Israel. Luke 22: 28, 29, 30. There will be a covenant made with the house of Israel in the millennium. Jer. 31: 31.

I will show where I get the idea that the Devil is cast into the bottomless pit forty years before the 6,000 years are ended. He will remain in the pit just a thousand years as the Word says. He will be loosed from his prison forty years before the 7,000 years end. God has two objects in view in doing so. The first is, Jerusalem and the temple must be built before the millennium. This gives the Jews time to do it. The second is, to prove the Jews forty years before the seventh thousand ends. The Jews being tempted forty years in the wilderness was a type of the forty years at the end of the millennium. The canon was a type of the heavenly. Satan will deceive a great number in those forty years. Those who will not leave themselves be deceived, will be united with the saints. The Jews were first, so they will come in last.

The saints being kings and priests over the house of Israel in the millennium, will draw into the camp, as the Jews let themselves be deceived. Toward the close of the forty years, Satan will bring the deceived ones together like the sand of the sea, Rev. 20: 8, and encompass the camp of the saints, and fire will fall down to consume them. Then Satan will be cast in the lake where the beast and false prophet are. They had him cast in at the battle of Armageddon a thousand years before. Next comes the resurrection and judgment. Here I will close, the brethren and sisters are posted on that.

FALSE VALUE VS. TRUE VALUE.

BY CYRUS BUCHER.

THE man died. How much is he worth? Has he any debts? How much will his children inherit? This is the way man values. You ask what did he do for the poor, the needy, the oppressed, the sick and imprisoned? Did he do it out of pure motives? Did he do it to benefit his fellow men, and serve God?

Vanderbilt died, leaving a hundred million dollars. How much has he laid up in heaven? General Grant travels the civilized world, honored wherever met, because he was a great General. How many tears did he shed for the poor widows and orphans? The Pharisee stands and prays, thanking God that he is not as other men. The publican says, "Have mercy upon a poor sinner." The great revivalist is heraled forth in our periodicals, as being the means of bringing souls—ten, twenty, a hundred, two hundred—to Christ. Who gets the honor? God. If so, well and good. There is a poor minister struggling along with his family; studying by the midnight light, having a kind word to all he meets, a tear for the oppressed, a widow's mite for the poor and needy; striving in bonds to do all he can for the church. I will not ask who gets, but, who gives the honor? God? God? For the minister cannot be valued by the honor man bestows, but by his self-denials and sacrifices for the Word of God.

"Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere;
Heaven did a recompense as largely send;
He gave to misery all he had—a tear;
He gained from heaven ('twas all he wished), a friend."

Such may be the case. One man may spend thousands for the spreading of undefiled religion, yet he who pays a widow's mite, or even "a tear," may receive the greater honor in the sight of God.

A hard, unkind word, or look may be imprinted on the memory, which years cannot efface. A smile, or a kind word, in like manner, may take root; and while the former may, if developed, do an amount of evil, the latter may be the means of changing governments. Look, read of the mother of Napoleon, then of the mother of Washington.

The children's papers are valued at fifty cents a year. Give it to a child, and let it read it one year, and you cannot get near its true value. One article may be the means of saving that child, which would, in value, alone, according to God's, Word amount to more than the whole world.

A great lawyer and statesman once said, "Whatever you get for an article, that much it is worth." But this is false. A bad book, costing one dollar, may be worth not one cent, while a good book costing the same, may be worth worlds.

"A little word in kindness said,
A motion or a tear,
Has often healed the heart that's sad,
And made a friend sincere."

Let us, therefore, not despise small things, for we know not what a kind word may bring forth. Always, let us look at the motive. Do all to the honor of God. Some things you should never do, because they are sinful. Things that are good in themselves, may not be done out of a pure motive, and if not sinful, no good is derived from it. In other respects you can do a thing and not be benefitted, yet others may be; you yourself may not gain the plaudits of heaven, but others will through you. Jane Taylor's Poem on the Philosopher's Scales, may teach us a lesson on true and false values.

[illegible]
These scales were not made to weigh sugar and tea:
Oh no! for such properties would ruin they,
That qualities, feelings and thoughts they could weigh:
Together with articles small or immense,
From mountains or planets to atoms of sense.

Naught was there so bulky, but there it would lay,
And naught so ethereal, but there it would stay,
And not so reluctant, but in it must go—
All which some examples more clearly show.

"The first thing he weighed, was the head of Voltaire,
Which retained all the wit that had ever been there;
As a weight, he threw in the torn scrap of a leaf
Containing the prayer of the penitent thief;
When the skull rose aloft with so sudden a spell,
That it bounced like a ball on the roof of the cell.

"One time he put in Alexander the Great,
With the garment that Dorcas had made, for a weight,
And, though clad in armor from sandals to crown,
The hero rose up, and the garment went down.

"A long row of alms-houses, amply endowed
By a well-esteemed Pharisee, busy and proud,
Next load one scale, while the other was pressed
By those mites the poor widow dropped into the chest,
Up flew the endowment, not weighing an ounce,
And down, down the farthing worth came with a bounce.

"By further experiments (no matter how),
He found that ten chariots weighed less than a plow,
Though balanced by only a ten-penny nail;
A shield and helmet, a buckler and spear,
Weighed less than a widow's uncrystalized tear.

"A lord and a lady went up at full sail,
When a bee chanced to light on the opposite scale;
Ten doctors, ten lawyers, two courtiers, one earl,
Ten counselors' wings, full of powder and curl,
All heaped in one balance and swinging from thence,
Weighed less than a few grains of candor and sense;
A first water diamond, with brilliants begirt,
Than one good potato washed from the dirt,
Yet not mountains of silver and gold could suffice
One pearl to outweigh—'twas the pearl of great price.

"Last of all, the whole world was bowled in at the grate,
With the soul of a beggar to serve for a weight
When the former sprung up with so strong a rebuff,
That it made a vast rent and escaped at the roof,
When balanced in air, it ascended on high,
And sailed up aloft a balloon in the sky,
While the scale with the soul in't so mightily fell,
That it jerked the philosopher out of his cell."

THE KINGDOM.

BY W. BOROUGH.

[Synopsis of a sermon delivered by Brother Daniel Whitmer, Nov. 10th, 1878, to the Whitmer congregation, South Bend District, Indiana, with a few thoughts of the writer inserted].

"The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field: but while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way." Matt. 24: 25

HAVING your individual attention and fervent prayers, we will consider first, the kingdom; second, the sower; third, the field.

To form, or constitute a kingdom, requires a king, subjects and territory. A king is a monarch—sovereign—a supreme magistrate, whose will is supreme law to his subjects. The subjects are the people who are bound to respect and obey the king's laws. The territory is the country, or space, over which the king's authority extends. The same component parts, governed by like functions, are found in the Kingdom of heaven. The Son of man,—the Redeemer of the world—the Lord Jesus Christ, is the King, Monarch, Sovereign, or Supreme Magistrate, whose will is supreme law to his subjects. The followers of the Lord Jesus Christ are his subjects, who are in duty bound to respect and obey his law. The territory is the whole world—the planet or globe upon which we live. The kingdom of heaven of which we now speak, is the kingdom of Christ on earth, which was set up when Christ's plan of salvation was fulfilled, which shall stand till the end of time, when the earth shall be rolled up as a scroll, when the King shall stand with one foot upon the shore and the other upon the sea, and declare that time shall be no more, when he will take his worthy subjects to the kingdom triumphant above.

2. We will consider the sower of the good seed. From the text we infer that the sower was a good man, a good husbandman, for he sowed good seed. He sowed it upon well prepared ground; he sowed it with anticipation of again reaping good seed of the same variety, just as the good husbandman does at this age. "But while he slept, the enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat." We will here notice that it was a custom to take a sleep, or rest, at noon among the people of that age; so, while the sower was resting, the enemy came and sowed bad seed. This was a bad man, for he sowed bad seed in anticipation of destroying the good man's seed. The seed all sprang forth and grew up together, both good and bad. This being observed by the servants, they desired to root out the bad seed, but not so, said the owner, lest you also root out the good seed; but let them grow together until the harvest when the tares shall be burnt up, and the wheat gathered into my barn.

3. We will consider the field. The field is the world, the territory of the kingdom. This is the field which the Savior referred to when he called the eleven together and told them that all power in heaven and in earth was given unto him. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Here the King promises to be with his subjects in the field, even to the end of the world. Then this injunction rests not upon the eleven alone, but follows all successive generations to the end of time. This, then, includes the generations of to-day, and we find this command resting upon us with just as much force as it did upon the eleven. Then, there is a great work for us to do. We are commanded to work in the Lord's vineyard. There are various kinds of work in this field; the ground must be cleared of timber, stone, and anything else that may obstruct cultivation; the field must be put in order by plowing and harrowing before it is ready to receive the seed. That is, we are to teach the world, in its wild and unbelieving state, all about the character and purpose of the King. If this be done so as to remove all unbelief and doubt, the field will be cleared of all obstructions; the plow of faith will break up the field, and the harrow of repentance prepare it for the good seed. Thus the good seed will be produced from [illegible] the end of [illegible] are the good seed is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil, the harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels." The Son of man shall send forth his angels and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity, and shall cast them in a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth." Here we have the Savior's own language in regard to the final state of the wicked, and who dare deny it? It is not for any man to do, though he have the popularity of a Beecher, only at his own peril.

"Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." What a glorious thought!

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise,
Than when we first began."

May this be the happy lot of us all.

FOR HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

HUSBANDS and wives who wish to live happy and enjoy life would do well to cut out the following and place it where they can read it once a week, or even oftener if necessary:

Be a Christian, and marry a Christian.

Never both get angry at once.

Never taunt with a past mistake.

"I forgot" is never an acceptable excuse.

A good wife is the greatest earthly blessing.

If you must criticise, let it be done lovingly.

They who marry for physical characteristics or external considerations, will fail of happiness.

Never make a remark at the expense of an other.

Never talk at each other, either alone or in company.

Give your warmest sympathies for each other's trials.

If one be angry, let the other part the lips only for a kiss.

Neglect the whole world beside rather than each other.

Never speak loud to each other unless the house is on fire.

Let each strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other.

Always leave home with loving words, for they may be the last.

Marry into different blood temperament from your own.

Never deceive, for the heart once misled can never trust wholly again.

It is the mother who molds the character and fixes the destiny of the child.

Never find fault unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed.

Do not herald the sacrifices you make to each other's tastes, habits, or preferences.

Let all your mutual accommodations be spontaneous, whole-souled, and as free as air.

The very felicity is the mutual cultivation of usefulness.

Consult each other in all that comes within the experience, observation, or sphere of the other.

A hesitating or grum yielding to the wishes of the other always grates upon a loving heart.

Never reflect on a past action which was done with a good motive, and with the best judgment at the time.

He who is ignorant of the way to the sea should take a river as a guide.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12 00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 20 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1 00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - MARCH 27, 1879.

BROTHER Archy Van Dyke, of Pennsylvania, will locate in Nebraska, about nine miles from Beatrice.

TWO persons were baptized one mile northwest of Lanark last week, and another one awaits baptism.

THE address of O. W. Hartness is Walla Walla, Walla Walla county, Oregon. Those wishing to know his address will make note of t his.

BROTHER S. C. Keim informs us that Brother Daniel M. Miller reached Elkdick, Pennsylvania, on the 18th of March, and was to preach for them on Sunday.

THE Pipe Creek Church in Indiana is said to be a large congregation, and composed largely of young members. May they become useful workers in the Master's vineyard.

WE are arranging to enlarge the Children at Work next week. Parties desiring sample copies will please drop us a card. The paper will continue to increase in interest and usefulness.

BROTHER S. Z. Sharp expects to be at his home in Ashland, Ohio, the 26th of March, and remain till April 3rd. He is spending most of his time traveling in the interest of the school.

BROTHER W. J. H. Bauman, writing from Burr Oak, Kansas, under date of March 15th, says: "I expect to start home on 17th inst. My meetings here are interesting. I expect to immerse a number to-morrow."

BROTHER Lewis Kob, of Decatur county, Iowa, lately held a series of meetings in the Prairie Grove Church, Iowa, resulting in six confessing and awaiting baptism, making ten in all for that church since last May.

THE National Temperance Society, 58 Reade Street, New York, is publishing an immense amount of temperance literature in tract and book form. We are in receipt of quite a roll from them, and find much profitable reading matter in the works.

We are sorry that a number of our readers failed to get No. 10. The paper was mailed here promptly and in good order, and we cannot imagine why it should fail to reach the subscribers. We cannot supply any more of this number, as we do not have them.

WE have just received and stored away in our office over twenty-four thousand pounds of excellent paper made to order, and much superior to that which we are now using, hence, after this week, our readers will find the BRETHREN AT WORK printed on a much better quality of paper.

SOMETIME in April there will be commenced, in the Children at Work, a series of Bible lessons, and will continue during the year. These lessons will prove a great help to those engaged in the study of the Scriptures, and will be found especially useful in families, Bible Schools and Sunday-schools.

BROTHER S. Z Sharp writes: "We just closed a series of meetings in the Four Mile Church, Indiana. Two were baptized and many others nearly ready to come. Several promised to come shortly. Labored in the interest of Ashland College also, with good success. We are much indebted to our old Elder D. Brower and Elder Jacob Rife, for their aid in behalf of the College, also to the members who located so liberally to this school."

BROTHER N. C. Workman's address is changed from Scioda, Montgomery county, Iowa, to Norton, Norton county, Kansas. We wish him success in his new field of labor, and may the blessings of the Lord rest on the Maple Grove Colony, in the interest of which Brother Workman is now earnestly laboring.

ELIHU Burritt, widely known as the "learned blacksmith," died March 6th, at his home in New Britain, Connecticut, where he was born in 1810. He was master of twenty-three languages, most of which he learned while working at the anvil. A desire to read the Scriptures in the original led him to make languages his study.

IN a single day, week before last, over three thousand settlers for Kansas passed through Kansas City, showing that there will be an immense emigration to the Western States this Spring. A number of the Brethren are also moving West, thus enlarging our opportunities for usefulness in spreading the truth.

NEW arrangements have been made for running two through daily trains between Milwaukee, and Atchison and Leavenworth. These trains will pass over the Western Union R. R., and there will be no change of cars between Milwaukee and the Missouri River. The arrangement will prove advantageous to travel West from this part of the State especially.

THOSE who donate money to be applied in the preaching the Gospel in the cities of America, may rest assured that every cent of it will be given to the men who do the work. There will be no middle men in this arrangement to get the best half of the money. We believe in applying the money direct to the purpose for which it is intended, and not give half of it to some one for collecting.

THIS week we are compelled to omit the Bible Class department in order to make room for the abundance of correspondence and church news we have on hand. To those who write notes of travel and church news we suggest the propriety of them making their articles as short as possible. We want all the church news we can obtain. If carefully written, much news might be sent in on postal cards.

IT is reported that the Governor of Syria has called a railroad convention at Damascus, of the more prominent men of Syria. The object is to propose the building of a railroad from Damascus to the Hauran, where lays the great wheat region of that country, and also to extend a road west from Damascus to the Mediterranean Sea. This will be a grand move towards making Damascus a great trade centre.

BROTHER Jesse Calvert, writing from Huntington, Indiana, under date of March 13th, says: "We commenced a meeting at the Shock Church, Clear Creek congregation, and closed March 10th. At these meetings forty-seven were received by baptism, and two reclaimed, making in all forty-nine, and still more promised that they would come. I arrived home March 12th, found all tolerably well. I was gone on this trip two months and four days. A few over one hundred were added to the church at the meetings held. Thanks be to the Lord for the success of Zion."

BROTHER P. R. Wrightsman purposes to spend one week preaching in Chicago at his own expense. If he will inform us of the time, one of us will try and meet him there. Now who will volunteer to preach in other cities? There are thousands of places where preaching is needed, and where it will do good. Brethren, who can spend a week or two in towns and cities should do so. If you cannot preach much, send for a bunch of pamphlets or BRETHREN AT WORK and distribute them among the people. Our readers have no idea how much good pamphlets and tracts will accomplish if judiciously distributed.

BROTHER George W. Cripe who has been holding a series of successful meetings in the Ogan's Creek congregation, Wabash county, Indiana, says: "My wife and I left home on the last of February, and came to this congregation and commenced meeting, continued one week; baptized nine precious souls. The brethren and sisters here are workers. We held large revival meetings in this congregation before. Quite a number of young members are here, and all seem to be doing well. Seven of them are teachers. During our meetings this church called two more brethren to the ministry. The lot fell on Brethren Stephen Ulery and Perry Early. May the Lord bless them. John Wright was their only minister, with A. Leedy as their elder.

ON another page will be found a lengthy article on the "Great and Noted Events of the Sixth and Seventh Seals, and the Millennium," by Brother Daniel Senger, of Linn county, Iowa. He wrote the article by request of parties, who, knowing that he had given the subject considerable thought, desired to see his views in print.

AFTER this week the debate will be published in the paper, and not any more on supplements. Brethren from different points have advised us to do so, and thus give no one occasion to find fault. The expenses of printing the supplement are over $700 00 a year. Our income is not sufficient to justify this expense. When the debate is printed in a supplement it reaches our readers not less than two weeks late. This is unavoidable, but by inserting it in the paper, it will reach the readers much sooner.

BIBLE SCHOOLS.

A SCHOOL is a number of persons assembled at one place to be taught. Four things enter into a school. 1. Persons who desire to be taught. 2. A properly qualified teacher. 3. Something to be told or made known. 4. A place of meeting. The thing to be made known in a Bible School, is the revealed Will of God. The persons to be taught are those whose understanding can be addressed. The teachers are those who have been "born of God," are "full of the Holy Ghost," "mighty in the Scriptures" "apt to teach." The place should be determined by circumstances.

Paul was "a teacher of the Gentiles." To do the most good, he called his learners together at one place. At one time he called the elders together, taught them, and then before leaving, knelt down and prayed with them all. Acts 20: 28-38. Jesus went early in the morning "into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down and taught them." John 8: 2. Jesus was the teacher. "All the people" were the scholars. "In the temple," was the place of meeting, and "early in the morning" was the time of assembling. Surely the above ought to be a grand lesson for us!

Paul places teachers third among those set apart in the family of God to help those who need help. These teachers were required to instruct such as needed special instructions. Both men and women were thus engaged in the primitive church. There was great simplicity in their methods of teaching. Order and efficiency were chief points in their work. The intelligent part of man is being dealt with in the act of teaching, hence order, system, clearness and aptness must be observed.

Men and women may be taught at their homes by a minister, but for convenience and holy fellowship the Lord desires them to meet at one place. Being together enables the teacher to do better work, and with greater ease. So it is in the case of teaching children the Will of God. They may be taught at home and should be so far as their parents can teach them; but the reasons that bring parents to the public assembly to be taught, hold just as good in the case of children. Every parent can instruct his children, but then there are others who can instruct his children still better. Every parent can instruct himself to a certain extent, but then there are other persons who can take them still further into the knowledge of God's Will.

"Well," asks a friend, "how about Sunday-schools? Do they accomplish any good?" Proper questions indeed, and without any apologies I shall at once grapple with them. If I properly understand the advocates of the Sunday-school, they aim to teach children and adults the great facts of the Bible and the precious promises of the same. The mind is drawn out, expanded, and cultivated, not with false science and vain philosophy, but with Bible truth. Where this is done, there will be good results; but if opinions and false theories have been set up and maintained, then the life of the pupils will be wrong and the end miserable. That good has been done in the Sunday-school is evident; that evils have grown out of some of them is perhaps equally true. But the same may be said of meetings to worship God. Why, at Corinth when they had come together to observe the ordinances of the house of God, they went to eating and drinking unworthily. What did the apostle do? Did he say, Have no meetings at all? No; but he set about to correct the evil, not by putting away all meetings of the kind, but by attacking and correcting the evils in those meetings. All good things are more or less abused. Even our Savior's works could not escape the attack of Satan's agents.

Some are ready to admit that in too many instances the Sunday-school work has been turned into fun and amusement to the injury of Bible truth and holiness of character. It is a fact that too often they are run in a sort of mechanical way to the hurt of the dear youth. These and kindred evil have caused many well-disposed persons to regard the Sunday-school as entirely detrimental to the young. They have, therefore, turned their strength against the whole work instead of attempting to root out the evils which appear, as Paul did at Corinth. Many meetings for public worship are conducted in a disorderly manner, yet we all have prudence enough not to advocate the putting away of public meetings. Our pens and voices are not raised against public meetings because some evils have crept in, but against the evils alone. Just that wise should we be in regard to meetings for the study of the Bible. If they have been conducted improperly, or if wrong teaching has been set forth, then let us try to remove the wrong and leave the good stand. Not one of us can afford to fight against truth, or the study of the truth.

But there is a proper and successful way of teaching the Bible to those who need to be taught. To get at the matter promptly, I shall call the meeting for Bible study, a Bible School, because it is made up of learners who are seeking information from the Bible. A Bible School does not suggest the teaching of traditions, opinions, creeds. If traditions were to be taught, then it would be proper to call it a Tradition School; if creeds, then a Creed School; if opinions, then an Opinion School. When persons come together to sing, it is called a Singing School. When they come together to study and recite geography, it is called a Geography School. Then, since we come together to study and recite from the Bible, why not call it a Bible School? Surely this is the most appropriate name; and I suggest that all schools, where the pure Word is taught, be called Bible schools. That this name should be adopted as expressive of the kind of work we do, will appear more clearly as we proceed with our investigations.

I observe that by forming the pupils into classes, and assigning teachers to them, all being in the same room, much confusion is created during recitation. This has ever been an objectionable feature to many brethren and sisters, advocates as well as opposers of Sunday-schools. In other schools, no such course would be attempted, for the simple reason that no efficient work could be done. If, then, we are so quick to exercise good judgment in training our children for the duties of this life, ought we not to be equally wise concerning the training of the mind for the world to come? Certainly we ought. Not one of us would attempt to teach reading in the midst of so much confusion. The man who would attempt to teach mathematics by having a half dozen persons talking at the same time, would be put down as not just the man for that kind of work. The family where parents and children all talk at the same time, is not getting along very well. Thus you see in other things we adopt the best methods in order to get the best results. Why have we been so slow in seeking the best methods of teaching the Bible? Yes, why? O may we be more active in our Master's vineyard, and not so much concerned for our own vineyards!

I invite your attention to the following plan of doing Bible work:

1. Let all who wish to be taught, assemble at one place, at a certain hour of the first day of the week.

2. Those under seven years to occupy the front seats, and to be regarded as the first or primary class.

3. Those from seven to fourteen years to be regarded as the second class, and to occupy seats next to class first.

4. All over fourteen to constitute the third class, and to occupy seats behind class second.

We will now suppose all to be seated in this way, and the time of instructing is at hand, singing and prayer having been attended to as on any other occasion. The teacher of the primary class now proceeds to ask the little boys and girls Bible questions and relate to them Bible incidents in the most efficient manner. He should not occupy over ten minutes. While this exercise is being conducted, all others may be either attentive listeners or engage in the

...ly of their lesson. As soon as class first has ...en publicly heard, the teacher takes his class ...o another part of the room and in the most ...uiet manner hears them repeat the Scriptures ...hich they may have memorized. Whilst this ...s being done, the teacher of class second will ...e conducting his exercises. Here are many ...ys and girls who need instructions in Bible ...acts, and the great events that are recorded in ...hat blessed Book. If the teacher be apt, he ...an conduct the lesson so as to engage not only ...he attention of his class, but that of class third ...lso. He should spend about ten minutes in ...bringing out the points of the lesson, after ...which five minutes may be devoted to asking ...and answering questions. If, however, class ...third does not find it profitable to listen to the ...recitation of class second, its members may en...gage in the study of the lesson. No danger of ...having the lesson too well. When the teacher ...of class second is done, he directs his pupils to ...occupy such seats as may have been previously ...decided upon, or if necessary, remain just where ...they are. I would suggest that a brother or ...sister be placed in each seat with the mem...bers of this class. These brethren and sisters ...are to be known as sub-teachers, and shall hear ...the pupils recite the verses that have been com...mitted to memory. And then, too, they may ...be great helps in maintaining order. Now let ...us turn to class third while class second is re...citing verses.

The teacher of class third should be very familiar with the lesson. If he would be successful he will adopt the subject plan. This is to assign a subject a week in advance. The first great subject is the Bible. Indeed the arrangement of the Bible, its history, &c., can not be well taught short of several lessons. Then proceed with such subjects as Faith, Repentance, Baptism, Holiness, Happiness, Love, &c. Do not be afraid to teach doctrine. Our experience is, the more doctrine, the better the attendance, the better the school. Let the teacher occupy ten or fifteen minutes in giving oral instruction, and then spend about the same time in asking and answering questions. Each pupil should have pencil and paper, and when the teacher is giving instructions, carefully note items for future reference. Be just as precise and careful in this work as you would in arithmetic or any other branch of study.

Should the members of class third memorize Scripture? Yes, every one of them. The more you get fixed in your mind, the better for you. This is the great object of the Bible School. Suppose the subject is Love, would it not be very profitable to memorize all the verses you can, containing the word love? Certainly it would; and if the teacher is apt he will hear you recite them in such a way as to do you good and all who hear you. Commencing with those on the first seat, each will in turn rise and repeat a verse, so that all may hear.

I shall now briefly state some of the advantages of this method. 1. It is simply three short sermons in one hour, so arranged as to reach all who attend. 2. There will be less noise; hence more can be taught, and taught better; and more can hear, and hear better. This alone should commend it. 3. Where there is a lack of teachers for ten or fifteen classes, enough efficient ones can be had by this plan, and if necessary one person can conduct the whole school, providing the sub-teachers do their duty in hearing the verses of classes one and two. 4. There will be greater unity in things taught. 5. None will remain from school through fear of being asked to teach. 6. All the teachers should be members of the church, and by this method these can always be had. The importance of only believers in Christ being teachers, is perhaps not as fully regarded as should be.

These suggestions are submitted to the prayerful consideration of the beloved ones of God. I should be pleased to have them tried. If they are found to be impracticable, they should not be received, for no method should be adopted that will cripple and mutilate the truth. I do not wish to be understood as maintaining that this method is the most nearly perfect, but I do believe it to be far superior to our present method. Close observation and much study have brought me to these conclusions, and I give them for your benefit. Let us labor to do good work. Let us teach the children in such a way as will make them better and wiser. Do not go about the work to make a display or to heap unto yourself position and power, but because you want to do good, because you have a message from God to deliver. More concerning Bible Schools will be given in the Children at Work. May divine wisdom illuminate our understanding, and help us to do the will of the Lord in an acceptable manner. M. M. E.

SOME STRANGE PEOPLE.

WE presume the Lord made the Gospel plan of salvation just as good and as perfect as he knew how, and even went so far as to give his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life. He took the pains of having this perfect law of liberty carefully written and handed down to rising generations, yet the world, and much of the church are not satisfied. They would like to see a few things changed for their own special benefit. The road is too narrow and difficult, and then it is not popular enough. They cannot enjoy themselves as they would like. They expect to live here but a short time, and want to enjoy themselves while here.

They look on heaven as about the next best place after this world. They know they must die, and as they do not want to enter the other place—though if they had their own way about it they would much rather live on in this world—they conclude to make some kind of a preparation for heaven. They do not like to alter the Bible; to live outside of a church they think is not safe, hence they look around, not to find what the Bible teaches, but to find a church that suits their idea of religion. One man belongs to the Free Masons; he does not want to give them up, hence he must have a church that will allow him to retain his membership in that secret order. Another has been used to attending theatres and places of amusement generally; he selects a church to suit his wants. A woman has been bred in fashionable society—she still loves fine dressing and so must have a church to suit her mind. In this way the work goes on, and each one selects a church to suit his or her peculiar taste.

Of course, people did not have that privilege in the apostolic age, for there was but one church then, and every body had to join that or none. But people are trying to improve (?) religion now; they want everything to their notion, and more than likely if they ever reach heaven, they will not be satisfied with the place. Things will not be arranged as they would like. They have got so used to having things to their notion while here that they may find it difficult to submit to the rulings of another.

Then there is such a thing as striving to enter in and not being able. The Savior says: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are: Then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." Luke 13: 24–28. J. H. M.

AN EVIL, AND HOW TO AVOID IT.

ALL concede that turning around to see who is coming, and how he looks is a bad habit. It annoys the speaker very much by causing him to lose confidence in himself, his subject and his audience. We are, therefore, certain this practice is a harmful one and should be stopped. "But," asks my friend, "how can it be done?"

Nothing attracts the mind so much as curiosity; so, when any one comes into church, all are excited to know who, or, possibly, what it is.

A Presbyterian minister, in an eastern city, was reading his text one morning when some one entered the church. All turned around to see who, or what, it was, that was coming. He stopped reading, waited until all gave attention and then said, "I wish you would give heed only to what I read; if anything but a human being comes in I will tell you."

Such a rebuke as this is sufficient to effect a reformation among the more serious and pious people; but the most scathing sarcasm will not overcome the whole of any audience. Hence, we consider this method a partial, if not an entire failure; for the very persons who most need to be reformed are the least likely to be improved.

There is another way by which this can be permanently secured with all, and no one have the unpleasant task of rebuking, and no one the embarrassment of being rebuked.

A person, who discharges his duty by reproving his audience for indulging in this evil, offends those who most need his instruction, and thereby loses the influence which he might otherwise have retained, and still fails in effecting the desired reformation.

If we can secure the same, or a higher standard of order without resorting to an offensive measure, it is always better to do so. If we can avoid giving an opportunity to do wrong, it is evidently better to do so, than to give the opportunity and then censure and reprove for using it.

"Well, how is this to be done? How can you avoid giving opportunities? Would you have the sermon so interesting that all would be so absorbed in it that they would not see, hear, feel or think of any thing else?" No; all cannot make their discourses so interesting as to do that—if they could, that would be the way; but it is impossible with so many that it is really of no practical value.

Our remedy is a simple one, as you will see. Let the preacher's stand be between the doors of entrance, then the audience will sit facing the door, and when any one enters all can see him without turning. Thus the whole trouble can be avoided and no one's feelings hurt.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

Much good can be accomplished in most any locality by distributing the Brethren at Work regularly among well-disposed outsiders. They will take great pleasure in reading it, become interested in its contents, and therefore form a strong attachment for the church and its doctrine. Congregations wishing to try this method of spreading the truth among their neighbors should proceed to raise the money, order a number of papers sent to the address of some brother or sister, who is to care for and distribute them at the close of services. This method of doing missionary work will be found especially serviceable in localities where new congregations are building up.

MOOMAW'S PROPOSITION,

HAVING for its object the preaching of the Gospel by the Brethren in the different cities of the United States. Those wishing to contribute to this fund will send in their names on a card, or otherwise, but do not send the money till further notice is given. When $200. is promised then two men should be selected and put to work. These men to be selected by the vote of the donors. They should be men sound in the faith, and able to teach others also—men who are willing to labor with those in the common walks of life. Search the Scriptures carefully and see to what extent the Apostles labored in cities.

Correspondence.

These things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.—St. John.

From S. C. Bashor.

Dear Brethren:—

WHEN I last wrote to you, our meetings were still in progress in Republic county, Kansas. We continued the meeting over Sunday, the 26th of January, without any immediate additions, but think our labor will result in some good. On Tuesday, the 28th, we left Republic county, for Jewell county, conveyed by our brother-in-law within three miles of Elder Switzers, to which place we made our way on foot. Found Elder S. at home, just returned from the field of battle, reports good news; the enemy giving ground; some five added to our number, through the instrumentality of Brother Bauman. At night we preached in the school-house close by. Next day were conveyed to Burr Oak in Elder Ives' district. Met at night in Burr Oak school-house. Preached to a seemingly interested congregation. Made acquaintance with a number of members next day. Was met at this place by Brother J. M Bailey and friend James Little, very glad to see them. Brother J. M. B. is a minister, but sorry to say that he has preached but little for a considerable time. Hope he will never give way to such would-be discouragements, but stand up and go forward in his high and honored calling. Here, at Burr Oak, we left Brother Fadely, and I was conveyed to the home of Brother Bailey, where I remained until Sunday morning, February 2nd. Visited some Brethren and enjoyed the kind hospitality of Brother B. and family, then leaving this place in company with Brother and Sister Bailey, we arrived, late in the evening, at Brother Deeters on Limestone. Brother Deeter is the only working minister in this congregation, and as we formed his acquaintance at Burr Oak, and were requested by him to come to his place and assist in a protracted effort to the upbuilding of the cause, we did so, and met with Brother Fadely again. We staid here until Wednesday, and then left as the weather seemed to us unfavorable for meeting and we were very anxious to return to loved ones left in Republic county, leaving Brother Fadely to continue the meeting, in company with Brother A. W. Austin, (deacon) we were soon at the home of Brother Deitrich, where we found quite a number of members attending church council. Staid over night with Elder Switzer, next morning I boarded Brother Switzer's wagon and soon we were on our way to White Rock City. Spent a short time looking at Mill Property, then onward to Scandia and soon we were comfortably seated in our brother-in-law's house. Found that our little boy had been in poor health, but was better. Next morning Elder Switzer, bidding us all farewell, returned home. We staid here until Monday the 10th of February, when, in company with brother and sister, we soon arrived at the depot, where we bid them farewell, probably for the last time, and soon we were on our way to Missouri.

What we saw of Kansas we can recommend as a good country; we found the people kind and sociable, we felt ourselves at home wherever we stopped; we return our thanks to brethren and friends for their kindness; it would have been a great pleasure to me to have remained longer in Kansas. Will say to those brethren and friends that desired me to settle down in Kansas, that I think I would better let well enough alone. I am bound for Colorado, if the Lord will. We are now making preparations to start the 24th, hope no one is disappointed.

Notes of Travel.

WE left home November the 30th, and being pressed with calls, have continued our absence with simply an occasional rest at home, save during our meeting at home, which commenced on the eve of January the 1st. We labored, assisted by our home ministry, until the eve of the 9th, when we were relieved by Brother Calvert, who continued with us until the 21st. The attendance and interest were superior to any previous meeting held with us. We felt that the church was much revived.

The eve of February the 6th came the time appointed for us to visit the dear brethren and sisters of Covington, Ohio. The congregations there were very large, and there seemed to be a marked and eager attention given to the word preached. Their large house, at times, became filled before the hour of service; and there was soon a prayerful, growing interest manifested. Among those baptized was the wife of Brother Cassel, upon whose premises the Annual Meeting was held in 1876. Many brethren and sisters will remember of sharing her kindness; and will rejoice to learn that she is now with the saints.

On the eve of the 14th we took their leave with Brother David Wine, to visit a point of some interest, between Newton and Troy; returned again on Sabbath evening the 16th, took our final leave the 17th. The Spirit of the Lord seemed to be striving with many persons, young and old, in attendance at the meeting, so that many regretted to see the meeting close. It seems exceedingly unfortunate to close a meeting with such flattering prospects. We fondly trust, however, that the church there, by its united and powerful efforts, will, in due time, gather those wrestling souls into the fold.

My wife having spent many lonely hours in our absence, we made arrangements for her to meet us; she arrived on the 11th inst.; we thus formed a pleasant acquaintance with many of the dear members of the Covington and Newton branches; also a number of the ministering brethren from the adjoining congregations, who visited the meeting; hope the Lord will so favor us and them that we may be permitted to renew our acquaintance, if not in this life, we may on the other happy shore.

The church there seems to be exerting a large and healthy influence, being under the care of watchful shepherds. We spent one night with Brother Henry Mohler, where we found his aged father, Elder Rudy Mohler, much afflicted; weak in body, but, happy to say, strong in spirit. The example of these faithful veterans of the cross is very encouraging to us who are young in the service. We felt sorry to find Brother Dr. Shellabarger yet in so much affliction, but happy to find him bearing his affliction with so much Christian patience.

We felt some embarrassed, at times, during the meeting, at the absence of some of the home ministers; we feel that the interest of a meeting, ought to be such as to demand as much as possible, the presence of officials, the laity and their children. At the date of this, we are with the Brethren near Bryon, Ohio. Interest encouraging. I. J. ROSENBERGER.

February 21, 1879.

From North Manchester, Indiana.

Dear Brethren:—

I AM again before your many readers, who likely remember the cry that went out from here through the BRETHREN AT WORK the 7th of last November, claiming souls were starving for manna from on high. Happy to say, relief has come. Yes, the call has been heeded by brethren from the North. J. H. Miller and Wysong, from Millford, Indiana, accompanied by Brother F. P. Lehr and wife, from Michigan. Met with the members of North Manchester District on Friday, February 21st, held evening meeting at the house of Brother Abraham and Sister H. Miller, for the benefit of our dear old father, Henry Butterbaugh, who is deprived of meeting us at the sanctuary; reason, decline of life. He is eighty-six years old, and is, as may be supposed, quite feeble.

Saturday, 22nd, met at 10 A. M, at the meeting-house, as was previously appointed. There the brethren met many who eagerly waited to meet friendly faces and hear them talk of heaven and its enjoyments, which they did with power, as the Lord gave them utterance. After singing and prayer, Brother Miller, for a foundation to build upon, selected Psalm 61: 2, "From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed; lead me to the rock that is higher than I." After giving a full definition of the word "cry," he called our attention to Christ, the sure foundation, the eternal rock, and all who build upon that rock, will be led in safety, and will stand the test at the final day, &c. Brother Wysong selected and sung hymn number 786, suited to the occasion; prayer, then adjourned for evening.

Met again at 7 P. M. Good attention by all present. Preaching by Wysong. Text, 1 Cor. 14: 8, "For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?" The brother in question having a severe cold, yet handled the subject nobly, leaving many (as we think) lasting impressions. Followed by Brother J. H. Miller, who, in conclusion, called our every attention to the necessity of being prepared to flee the wrath to come, or enemy, at the sound of the trumpet, and come inside of the walls of the great city, the house of the Lord, &c.

Sunday the 23rd, 10 A. M. Beautiful to behold! to see so many meet at the house where prayer is wont to be made. Brother F. P. Lehr led in the exercises by singing a German hymn, then the old veteran showed his zeal for the glory of Zion by calling our attention to hymn number 221, putting much emphasis on the fourth and fifth verses. Subject, 1 Cor. 1: 21, 22, 23. House filled with attentive listeners, eager to hear the truth, and nothing but the truth, at it flowed from the lips of our brother with convincing power. Testimony by Brother Wysong. Closed by singing hymn 793, then dismissed for evening.

Met again at 7 P. M., and for what? To worship God, we trust. Yes, the very countenance of this people assembled here to-night, goes to show they came for this noble purpose. Our attention was called (by request) to hymn 339, "With tearful eyes I look around," &c. Oh! behold the sweet voice, "Come to me." Also hymn 67 was sung, then to prayer. Brother Wysong took the stand. Text, Isaiah 35: 3, to close of chapter, telling us of the beauty of traveling on the highway, the way of holiness, &c., and Brother Miller, in conclusion, said he felt loath to leave us, and why? Let me answer, we believe he saw a beautiful and telling countenance on every Christian man and woman, also on our neighbors and children, all desiring spiritual food, as it flowed with great power from the lips of the man of God. Much more might be said, but let this suffice. Only this, we feel much strengthened and built up in the inner man. May the good Lord bless our young brethren and their labor, who engaged so earnestly in the cause of the Master during the short stay with us.

Believing the ground is well broken up, and in good order for cultivation, who comes next? Closed by singing hymn 783. As yet, no converts. Now we leave the work in the hands of God. Paul may plant, Apollos water, but God must give the increase. May the Lord direct us all in the good old Gospel path, is my prayer. D. S. T. BUTTERBAUGH.

P. S. At this juncture, Brother F. P. Lehr arises, and invites young and old to meet tomorrow evening, February 24th at the usual hour, for worship. Text, John 14:6, "No man cometh to the Father, but by me." Pressing on the minds of the young that Jesus Christ was once a child like unto us, more than he was divine, not polluted by the use of cigars and tobacco. Also of the necessity of us meeting together and making a common stock of our knowledge, &c. Our little folks, with sparkling eyes, schooled themselves into perfect silence, eager to hear what grandpa had to say. Closed for evening. Preaching to-morrow evening, February 25th. Very disagreeable, rain and snow, but few out. The old soldier at the stand, saying the ground was well plowed, and once he could not plow any more, he would hoe, then pull weeds, and finally carry water. Let us all take courage by this, and renew our zeal in the cause of our Master. So close the labors of our brethren at this time. May the Lord bless them and us, is my prayer. D. S. T. B.

A Visit to Cherokee County, Iowa; A Sudden Death.

I LEFT my home on the 21st of February, for Aurelia, Cherokee county, Iowa, one hundred and sixty-five miles west of Waterloo, situated on the Iowa division of the I. C. R. R. Here is a small church of twenty members. Met with them the 21st at the Early school-house. The next meeting was at the Leonard school-house, where we continued for one week with good interest. We had our home at Brother Keelin Leonard's. On the evening of the 25th, James Brannon, who lived about eight miles from the place of meeting, and had come to attend the meeting, and on the evening, as stated above, he went with us to meeting, as before, and came home, and came into the house apparently as well as usual, but, inside of five minutes, was dead. He died without a groan or a struggle. The physician said death was caused by the stoppage of the action of the heart. He was born in Sligo, Ireland; and had lived in the Catholic faith the greater part of his life, but he became dissatisfied and united with the River Brethren, and died in that faith. Little did we think when we met him that we would be called on to preach his funeral before we left, but such was the case. The congregation was not very large. Such is life! We think that this very sudden death should serve as a warning to us all. Let each one of us ask him self the question, had it been me, could I say like Paul, "I am ready to be offered." Life is uncertain, but death is certain.

On the first of March we met with the Brethren and sisters in council, preparatory to the District Council. We were made to rejoice to see that there was nothing but love and peace among the members. The church appears to be in good working order, with Brother John Early in the ministry, and Brethren Keelin and Elias Leonard in the deacons' office. Brother Early has no help except the deacons. The labor is very heavy on him. There are many calls that cannot be attended, and more [illegible] very much needed here. Now, brethren that intend going West, call at Aurelia [illegible] at the country. We think that any one intends to farm for a living will find as [illegible] land here as any where, and we think that [illegible] is a very healthy country, as it is rolling enough to drain well, and not so much as to cause it to wash. The facilities for schools are good. The houses are well built. Aurelia is merely located with one railroad. Here we met and formed the acquaintance of Brother Ezra Sliter, of Lee ark, Illinois, who had been in the country west of Cherokee. He said that the country is very good where he had been. Land can be bought very reasonable in either of these counties. The brethren requested me to say to our ministering brethren who travel West, to stop off at Aurelia and look at the country and preach for them.

We closed our meetings on the evening of the fourth of March, having had thirteen in all, and preached one funeral, and on the evening of the fifth took the train for home. Found all well. Thanks to the brethren and sisters and friends for their kindness while we were with them. May the Lord bless us all, is the prayer of your unworthy servant.

The Time to Evangelize in Cities.

BEING deeply impressed with the importance of the Moomaw Proposition, I am prompted to take up my pen and break a long silence of this method of communication.

My recent engagements in the home mission of our District, completely confirms my former humble opinion of the importance of city evangelism. About one-half of the work which I have been directed to, proved to be arranged for, in churches, procured in town. And from the apparent adaptation of a peculiar looking, peculiar plain and common place talking preacher, with those strange features in the services, &c., to the minds of the sober thinking of all orders and ranks of auditors, even in the proud cities in our land, we arrive at a decided conclusion that the proper time for our city evangelism has not only come, but that the proper time has been let but too heedlessly pass by, ever since the church in America has had evangelists, and cities in "all the world" to evangelize. (Leaving it to the judgment of the editors whether to insert), I will here relate, for example, the instance of evangelizing in the town of Clifton Hill, Missouri, where never before, a brother had, perhaps, been seen, or even heard of, except by the person who sent us the call. Here the most fashionable church in town had been procured, sexton at post, and all in style. The attendance immense. (said to be from twelve miles around). To this vast audience, and in the most simple, plain and common style of speech possibly at command, we tried to relate the old, old story of the cross, and then on and on to the conditions of its avail to all, until arriving at the proper point, where all (if possible) of the peculiarities of the primitive, apostolic church and Gospel order were reached, and vehemently contended for: the subjects embracing the moral and ceremonial laws, and the ordinances of the church.

Now the results in so proud a place were many warm expressions of approval; to wit: "Never, since my childhood, did I hear it in that simplicity." "It can't be money you preach for, you seem to have nothing at stake but your conscience and your life." At this expression I remembered what the brethren said at the District meeting: "Men," said they, "who will hazard their lives for the cause." A lady, of whom it could little be expected from her gay appearance, said: "Don't they remind one of the old apostles?" as if from reading the Scriptures, she had imagined the order of the primitive Christians. At baptizing in the suburbs, a large portion of the vast concourse, knelt at the waterside during the prayer, regardless of their broadcloth, silk and satin. Here also one said, "That's now according to my notion of the commission."

Brethren and sisters, do not withhold your cheerful donations from so good a cause, supposing the cause to be premature, or that the pride and vanity of cities have advanced beyond the reach of the simplicity of the church and her doctrines. For we find the power to be with God and his Word, while the service of his cause for the execution of his power to save, is vested in his obedient children in the world. And lest we forfeit our heirship, let us, oh let us see that we combine our united services in the promulgation of our Father's method of doing wonders in the earth. NOW is the time to evangelize.

I thought it expedient to give those who have not yet witnessed these effects of evangelism, an idea of what is experienced by those who have

...ches to put their shoulders to the ... great work, perhaps the greatest ...ntity ever offered by the church to no ... good. C. C. Root.

Dear Brethren:—

FEEL like penning a few thoughts for your ... this Sabbath day, as I was deprived ... meeting on account of the in... ...y of the weather, and the meeting be... ...ght miles off I was made to say; God ... preachers. Many had to leave their ... this morning to fill their appointments, ... doubt, some of them met with small ...regations. This makes us sympathize ... the ministers who are placed upon the ... of Zion to preach the everlasting Gospel. ...ught we might do much good to them, in ...ng engaged in prayer in behalf of them, ... we might be with them in Spirit, that we ...ht say with Paul, "We give thanks to God ...ys for you all, making mention of you in ... prayers." In this way we might help them ...preach. When we take notice sometimes, ...w careless and unconcerned some lay mem... ...are in tending meetings and helping their ... ministers along, we must almost conclude ... the love and the sympathy that they ...uld have does not manifest itself as it should. ...Works without faith is dead," says James. I ... merely hinting at some things which I ...ught perhaps might not be amiss; and if I ...uld be the means of doing a little good by ...y of admonition, I will freely do it. A great ...y things are done sometimes among our ...mbers that are done thoughtlessly, especi... ...ly among our young members. The follow... ...g is one of the things I wish to mention: A ...ort time ago there was a meeting appointed ... our school-house, on a certain evening, for a ...eacher that did not belong to our church. ...We had the pleasure of attending said meet...g, entering the house we found it well filled ...with listening hearers, and among some of the ...earers were some of our young members ...hat were engaged in talking and laughing ...while preaching was going on. I felt grieved ...to see this; but, no doubt, these young members ...were off of their guard, and were not thinking ...what they were doing. Such conduct is wrong. ...We do not like for non-professors to annoy our ...eetings, and when our young members go to ...ther meetings, they should behave just as ...they do in their own. God sees our actions, ...no matter where we are. We should be very ...careful how we let our light shine, showing to ...those with whom we associate, that we have ...been converted to Christ, and are to live like ...Christians should. I don't think that there ...are any professors of religion watched closer ...than our members are, and why is it? Because ...we profess to be a peculiar people, a separate ...people from the world and try to be lead and ...governed by the Bible. It should be our de...sire to do good where we go to hear preaching. ...Let preach who will. We can always learn ...something good by it. No man that preaches ...from the Scriptures but what will tell us some...thing good if we want to be honest about it. ...I submit these few thoughts for our young ...members especially, who may chance to read it. ...May God's choicest blessing rest upon all ...His chosen people every-where.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have a very large field here for mission...ary work. There are many hungry ...uls to be fed with the bread of life; and how ...an they be fed without some one to distribute? ...We need preaching. How can we hear with...out preachers? Rom. 10: 14. We had three ...or four discourses last Fall by Elder David ...Brower, as he passed through this part of the ...country, which I think left quite a good im...pression. We have only five or six members ...in the bounds of a hundred or hundred and ...fifty miles square. These are father Bashor ...and wife, Brother Craddock and David Kiester ...and wife, who expect to take their departure in ...a few days for Willamette Valley, where they ...expect to make their permanent home. We ...hope to hear or see, some of our Breth...ren emigrating to this valley, and settling ...around us soon, especially ministerial help, to ...aid and push the good work along in the way ...of moralizing and converting the people of this ...country to Christianity. This country, espec...ially this valley, is an excellent place for poor ...people to get a start. The soil is very pro...ductive; wheat, oats and barley, vegtables, and almost all kinds of fruit and berries, other than the tropical fruits do well. We have never had any thing like a total failure in grain crops, and only partially in the fruit crops. Chances for poor people to get homes in this country are very good. Many get land by making one small payment and getting from one to five years to make the final payment.

There are very good chances for renters in this valley. This is also a very good place for people that have to labor for a living. Persons, thinking of emigrating to this valley, would do well to get here the beginning of harvest, which is commonly about the first of harvest. There is always a great demand for labor during harvest and threshing season, which commonly lasts till about the middle of October. A man, two horses and wagon commonly gets $2.50 to $3.00 per day; men $1.50 to $2.00 per day; women get, as cooks, from $1.00 to $2.00 per day through harvest.

Brief Notes.

BY JOHN ZUCK.

NUMBER I.

IT is my desire upon the present occasion to present to you a few brief notes of the labors of our esteemed Brother, M. M. Eshelman, editor of the Children at Work, who treated us with a "feast of fat things" during the first week of March. First, I will say in behalf of the Clarence Brethren, Cedar county, Iowa, that Brother Eshelman has our sincere thanks for the effective service rendered during his short stay with us.

He arrived at Clarence the last day of February, and in the evening of the first of March, met at our school-house for worship, where he delivered his first sermon among us, to a very respectable, quiet and attentive congregation. Subject, The Bible, or God's word. The following points we gleaned from the discourse, which, in our judgment, were quite instructive:

I. The Old Testament Scriptures were presented as being susceptible of the following divisions:—

1. Historical part.
2. Prophetical part.
3. Poetical, or song part.
4. Law part.

II. The New Testament was divided for the purpose of helping all to study it to advantage, as follows:—

1. Facts—statements, or things done.
2. Commands—things to be done.
3. Promises—things to be hoped for.

Very practical hints were given upon the above points, which were well received by the people. But our dear brother will please excuse brief allusions, as our object in giving points as set forth above is to edify and assist others of our dear brethren who still think they can learn how to present truth to their audiences in a manner that will have a tendency to instruct and write impressions upon their hearts.

March 2. We again met at 10 A. M. for services, when Eph. 6: 10 was read, and the subject of the Christian soldier was deduced therefrom. Some general remarks on soldiery were presented, and special attention called to the following:

I. The Christian's Captian.

II. The Christian's armour,—breastplate, helmet, shield, sword, shod; and with their uses as applied to the warfare against the "wiles of the Devil,"—glorious Christian graces provided for the Christian's triumph.

III. The Enlistment—getting into service, putting on the armour,—faith, repentance and baptism. Faith changes our heart; repentance changes our action; and baptism changes our relationship.

1. The applicant desires a knowledge of the work.
2. Must make application.
3. Must be examined or inspected—visited—taught, questioned like Philip asked the eunuch.
4. The applicant must be willing to accept the terms of duty.
5. Passed in—takes the solemn pledge to continue faithful until death.

IV. Drill duty.

1. In God's word—the sincere milk of the word.
2. Prayer — the Christian's communion with the Captian.
3. The ordinances—which give life and power of the church.
4. Singing—cheers the drooping, weary heart.
5. Our enemy, Satan—who is presented in all the forms of sin.

Now, dear Brethren, the prophet tells us a great deal about this Leader and Commander of the people—Israel, and the Lord who is the Captain of our salvation, has made no provisions for retreat; but the watch word is onward! ONWARD! ye soldiers of the cross. Pull down the strongholds of Satan, secure and protect the fugitives who are trying to escape from the enemy's ranks, "pluck them as brands from the burning" ere they perish in the flames. Let every orderly, every watchman on the walls of Zion fall into rank and file, put on the Christian's uniform, that they may be readily identified and not killed for the enemy. O may the missionary work of the church be so arranged that concentration of effort may be readily effected. There seems to be so much drill, so much parade, so much planning, and so little storming the enemy's work. May God bless the work of the Christian soldier. Maranen.

Killed by a Cow.

QUITE a melancholy affair occured near Falls City, Nebraska, on Sunday, February 23rd, by which Mrs. Rhoda Ann Heikes, lost her life. The circumstances, in short, are about as follows; and from it a lesson may be learned, never to let a dog accompany any one when going among cows that have young calves:—This unfortunate woman went to a neighbor's house on the day above named to make a call. Finding the neighbors absent, except the children, she spent some time with them. During this time she accompanied the neighbor's children to the barn to see the calves. She was, also, followed by her little dog. While at the barn, the cows came up, and seeing the dog, attacked him. The dog ran to the woman to escape the fury of the cows. The latter thereupon attacked the woman, threw her to the ground and vented their mad fury on her person. She received injuries from which she died on the following Saturday. She remained speechless and unconscious from the time she received her injuries until death.

Deceased was the wife of Frederick Heikes. Her age was 49 years, 4 months and 12 days. Funeral services on Sunday, March 2, from 1 Cor. 15: 26, to a numerous concourse of friends and neighbors. Jonathan Lichty.

From Kosciusko Co., Ind.

ON the 28th of February, my youngest brother in the flesh, a minister, with Brother Joseph Amick, both from White county, this State, came into our congregation, and remained with us one week, and labored faithfully in the cause of Christ. There was great interest manifested among the Brethren and people in general. The immediate result was, four precious souls baptized and one reclaimed, which made great rejoicing among the children of God, and, we believe, with the angels in heaven. Many more are counting the cost, and we hope and pray that they will come before long, and know the reality of the religion of Jesus Christ. Yes, my dear friends, don't put it off too long, for the door will be closed ere long, and if you have not made your peace with God, you will stand without and knock, and you can't enter. Come while it is called to-day. Yes come to Christ, is the heart-felt wish and prayer of your unworthy servant,

David Brechtelheimer.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL give you a sketch of a happy meeting which we had on Bunker Hill, in the Reformed Church, seven miles north-east of Bryan. We had good order and attention paid to the word. Meeting commenced February 22nd, and closed March 3rd. Four came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Many more are counting the cost; hope they will learn right from wrong.

The meeting was conducted by Brother I. J. Rosenberger. Some of our brethren here were present in time of the meeting. Good feeling prevailed around in the neighborhood. May the Lord bless him and his labors wherever he goes. Israel Kinsel.

From Huntington, Ind.

BROTHER Jesse Calvert came to us February 22nd, and commenced a series of meetings. He told the story of the cross with power. Saints rejoiced and sinners trembled. On the second day of March twelve made the good confession, and in two days after, sixteen more, and two days after that, nine more precious souls, we hope, rose to walk in newness of life; and to-day five more, and two reclaimed, making in all forty-four. Others were deeply impressed, and made to feel a sense of their duty. The most of these were Brethren's children; some from the Winbrenarians, one from the Catholics, one from the Lutherans, and one from Newlights. Our District numbered seventy before the meeting, and now one hundred and ten. May the Father that rules the universe, give us grace to feed the lambs, and may we pray that they may be kept from the hour of temptation. The meeting lasted fourteen days; and was a season of refreshing which will be long remembered.

From Elk Lick, Pa.

ON Saturday the 1st, two more were added to our number by baptism. The ice was about eight inches thick on the river, which is unusual for this time of year. About one hundred spectators were present. The reason was, the applicants were citizens of Salisbury, and the number was swelled from the village by the curious. We have our church located in the village, and have regular preaching, prayer meetings and Sunday-school. Many are awakening to the doctrine as preached and practiced by the Brethren. I would earnestly advise the Brethren, wherever it is at all possible, to build their churches in towns and villages, as the greatest number can be collected, therefore the greatest power for good.

Two of our members asked for certificates of membership. They remove to near Hagerstown, Maryland. May God's blessing go with them. S. C. Keim.

From F. P. Lœhr.

THIS evening Brother George W. Cripe commences a series of meetings in the Ogan's Creek church, near this place. I shall be with him till the middle of next week, then visit the adjoining church near Dodgertown. My address will be for some weeks, North Manchester, care of A. Leedy. I desire to be at their Sunday-school and Missionary Convention. I cannot yet see that it is a work of the Devil, as some seem to look at it. I have been in the mission field for a number of years, and have not yet got rich nor proud by receiving salary; nor uplifted by teaching little children in Sunday-school and talking to young men and young women, that they might become Christians, though they have often shown to me their love and respect. If we old men had been kept from bad society when children, we could have sooner got rid of bad habits.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR series of meetings began at Primrose meeting-house on the 25th of February, and continued until March 3rd. Brethren David Rittenhouse and Jacob Shanour, our home ministers, labored earnestly for the salvation of souls. We had two additions and good interest. We hope the seed sown may bring forth fruit some thirty some sixty and some a hundredfold in due time. May the Lord bless them and crown their efforts, is our prayer. Dr. Wolff.

Building a Meeting House.

THE Brethren of Beaver Dam congregation, Kosciusko county, Indiana, contemplate building a meeting-house this coming season. We would like to have the best and most convenient style of seats for Communion meetings, some to change into tables. Let me hear from the Brethren. David Brechtelheimer.

From Phebe A. Frantz.

BROTHER John Fitzgerald, of Dark county, Ohio, and Brother Oliver Yount, of Tippecanoe, Ohio, came to us on the 22nd of February, and commenced a series of meetings, which lasted until the 8th of March. They preached twenty-two sermons in all, five in the Donald's Creek Church and seventeen in our church, in New Carlisle. The ministers are two zealous soldiers of the cross, holding forth the word with power and encouraging the church to press onward, warning sinners to flee the wrath to come. Four precious souls came out on the Lord's side, and were buried in the rolling stream, and arose to walk in newness of life. Many more good impressions were made. Some said they would come soon. Hope those good resolutions will be carried out. Those of us who are in the church of Christ should be more zealously engaged for those who are left behind that, they, too, may feel the load of sin and come to Jesus. Members should not be cold and indifferent during these meetings, but should be lively workers in the cause. Oh! that all our beloved fraternity could realize the bliss enjoyed by those who live not for themselves only, but for him who lived and died for a rebellious race, and left a pattern to be imitated by all that are born anew by a spiritual birth. Yes, if it were only possible that all such could see and understand that all they have and are is the Lord's, whether they be intellectual or temporal gifts; and that all the members of that mystical body—the church of Jesus Christ—are in duty bound to serve each other even as the members of our natural body serve each other. My dear young associates, I entreat of you to come to Jesus, heed the many good counsels given by our beloved brethren while with us. The wise man, Solomon, said, "Remember thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Would it not, then, be wisdom in us all to prepare for heaven? For the things of this world are transitory, and will all pass away; and even while here the Christian's enjoyment is far beyond that of the sinner.

New Carlisle, Ohio.

Wisconsin Mission Field.

MUCH has been said on the subject of missionary work, but a little less saying and a great deal more doing, would result in much more good. Talking about missionary work, and plans as to getting the money necessary to defray the expenses, does put me very much in mind praying for the poor and not giving them the necessaries of life. If Paul's plan is adopted we will have plenty of missionary money and to spare, as the Lord has prospered us all very well. There is one more feature in the missionary movement, that could be greatly improved. Do not wait till you are sent by the missionary committee for fear you will have to pay your own expenses, and then feel bad because you are not sent. If you think you have a calling in that direction, go and try your talent with the full assurance that if the church don't pay your expenses the Lord will. Not every preacher is calculated for a missionary. A man may be a very good local preacher, and capable of doing much good at home, but as a missionary, be a failure. Two preachers should go. Both preachers should be of a talkative nature, friendly to all men, mighty in the Scriptures, always ready to meet the adverse power with humble boldness. In preaching, one should be a powerful expounder, the other a good exhorter; the expounder to speak first, and the exhorter to follow. Often a sermon is spoiled when the preacher thinks he has a prophecy, when he has but an exhortation.

Missionary life is very hard, especially in the Winter season. Men of a strong constitution and a ready mind should go. The constitution to meet the changes of beds and different temperature of sleeping rooms, and a ready mind to meet a false teacher. Any brother who has an experimental knowledge of missionary labor would rather give a few dollars towards it, and stay with his family, than to go himself, even if his expenses are paid.

Brother D. M. Miller, in company with a deacon, left his home on the 24th of December, 1878, for the Wisconsin Mission Field. Went on the cars as far as Mineral Point; left Mineral Point on the 25th, for a seventy miles' sled ride, with mercury two degrees below zero, and cold increasing. Arrived at Brother Abraham Studebaker's six miles north of Muscoda, late in the evening. Left Brother Studebaker's on the morning of the 26th, (mercury sixteen degrees below zero), for pleasant Ridge, some twenty-seven miles farther north. Arrived at Brother Stout's late in the afternoon. Brother Miller preached his first sermon that evening at Brother Stout's, to a small audience. Sugar Tree, four miles farther north, was the place intended for Brother Miller to preach, but the house was occupied by what was called a "Ministerial Association," which was to last but a few days; but when Brother Miller would take no interest in the Association, they prolonged it nearly all week, apparently to keep Brother Miller out of the house, consequently there was some time lost. But the Methodists opened their house to Brother Miller, near Brother Stout's, where he had several meetings, and preached the Gospel in its primitive purity, to a large and attentive audience; so much so that many declared that they never heard the Gospel preached so effectively. Even some of the members of the M. E. Church said it seemed to them that they had never heard preaching before. From there he went to Rock Bridge, some twelve miles east, where there are a few members, scattered and a church partly organized. Had meeting in private houses for a few evenings, and on Friday at two o'clock P. M., preached a funeral sermon at Woodstock, in the Disciple meeting-house. The people of Woodstock invited Brother Miller to preach there that evening, and offered their house to him as long as he wanted it. He preached there that evening and the next day, (Saturday), at eleven o'clock, to a large and attentive audience, and made some good impressions—so much so that they requested him to continue, but as his appointment for that evening was at Sugar Tree, he could not. Some followed him to Sugar Tree. He had quite a number of meetings at Sugar Tree, awakened quite an interest; a few were buried with Christ in baptism, and more were induced to search the Scriptures. It now came to the point that it was necessary for Brother Miller to continue his labors at Woodstock and at Sugar Tree, and the time being here that duty called him home.

After arranging matters at home, Brother Miller again left home on the 15th of January, 1879, for Wisconsin; and made Woodstock and Sugar Tree the base of his labors. He found the people at both places very intelligent, kind-hearted, well-behaved and truth-seeking.

After laboring one week at Woodstock and one week at Sugar Tree, Brother Miller found that the company of a deacon was not sufficient, that something more was needed, so he called Brother Martin Meyers to his assistance. As soon as Brother Meyers came, the deacon went home. The Brethren with their combined efforts, and the help of the Lord, have done much good; in fact the work is just begun, not only at Woodstock and Sugar Tree, but at different places where they have preached while in Wisconsin.

The Brethren arrived home on the first day of March, with the expectation of going back to Wisconsin, if no opposition; for the way they left things a continued ministerial labor is needed; and those that began the work are best adapted to carry it out. When they left Wisconsin, they had quite a number of applicants, and many searching the Scriptures.

The Tract Association should be made more effective. We found a great demand for tracts in Wisconsin. Many more should be sold than what are, as many are willing and able to pay for them. Every missionary should take as many tracts with him as he conveniently can, make it known that such as are able and willing, would be expected to pay for them, and the money appropriated in publishing tracts and sent to the poor.

Many of the Brethren have no idea what an amount of good can be done by distributing tracts. Even the BRETHREN AT WORK is doing a great deal of good. We had about a dozen copies of them with us, and distributed them one evening after meeting. In a few evenings after, we were asked for more papers, and were sorry to say that we had no more, but those distributed went from hand to hand, and were a great help to the missionary work, because they and the preacher agreed, and the two agreed with the Gospel. So much for papers that are free of contention. A Gospel paper and a Gospel preacher always do good and true work. D. F. ENY.

IT may be interesting to the many readers of the BRETHREN AT WORK to give a short report of the meetings held here by Brother C. Forney. During these meetings, Brother F. preached a series of doctrinal sermons—rather in reply to an attack made by one, J. M. Stephenson, a Soulsleeper—against our faith. It will be remembered, also, that the aforesaid J. M. S., also made a personal attack on Brother Moore, reflecting on his (Moore's) scholarship, which was again reported to Brother Moore, and the latter replied in an editorial, which was read during our meetings. Brother Forney made a gallant defense, and made some powerful criticisms on the grammar adduced by J. M. S., in his analysis of the commission.

The immediate results of Brother Forney's preaching were, four additions by baptism and one reclaimed, besides many convincing impressions were made.

These sermons necessitated Stephenson to preach another series of sermons, or rather a series of abusives on the faith of the Brethren. That his arguments were very convincing, your readers are invited to consider the folllowing: He said he came along where the "Duokards" were baptizing, and it reminded him of a lot of ducks dipping for worms. His sermons on the supper were equally ridiculous, and upon the whole, his attacks and the reply of Brother Forney, only served to strengthen our cause. These latter sermons of Stephenson we did not deem necessary to reply to, as they were self-convicting. JONATHAN LICHTY.

Programme.

THE following propositions are to be considered by the Sunday-school Convention, to be held April 21st, at the Spring Creek Church, Kosciusko Co., Indiana, commencing at 2 o'clock P. M.:

Prop. 1st.—The influence of Sunday-schools in general, to be introduced by Joseph Amick and Solomon Ankerman.

Prop. 2nd.—The propriety of Brethren holding Sunday-schools, by John Wright and Joseph Leedy.

Prop. 3rd.—The manner of conducting Sunday-schools, by J. C. Murray and W. S. Toney.

Prop. 4th.—The best means to secure the attendance of parents and children, by Dorsey Hodgden and J. S. Snowberger.

Prop. 5th.—How can opposition to Sunday-schools among the Brethren be best overcome? by J. R. Crumrine and J. S. Snell.

Prop. 6th.—Singing, by Benjamin Neff and William Summer.

The above named brethren, with two exceptions, have accepted the duties assigned them, and will be expected to be present, and give the cause their support. All others have the privilege of taking part.

Those coming by railroad either to Collamer or Pierceton, to attend the Sunday-school or Missionary Convention, will be met with conveyances on Monday, April 21st, by giving due notice. A. W. BOWMAN, Cor. Sec.

North Manchester, Ind., March 13th.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—Brethren (or Tunker) Churches possess the Bible Characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN, Affirms.

D. B. RAY, Denies.

ELDER D. B. RAY'S ELEVENTH REPLY.

MR Stein still holds that an unpardoned child of the devil can put on Christ in baptism! For the Scriptures for pardon before putting on Christ in baptism read Luke 7: 50; John 3: 15, 16; Acts 10: 43, and Gal. 3: 26, 27. One wilfully and persistently refusing baptism, or any other command, shows that he is unpardoned—condemned—not for want of baptism, but "because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." John 3: 18. The man that can, with the facts of history before him, say that the ancient Novatians and Waldenses were Tunkers, is to be pitied. He is possessed with the spirit of error. We find no real ancient Novatian or Waldensian document which contains "trine immersion," feet-washing, or kissing, as a church ordinance. These ancient witnesses held only two sacraments—church ordinances—"baptism and the Lord's supper," or communion. They had no "full meal" Lord's supper. See Jones' Ch. Hist. p. 249.

But the Tunkers have as many saving church ordinances as Rome's "seven sacraments."

2. The ancient Novatians and Waldenses baptized those that professed to be true believers and "real saints." See in Jones' Ch. Hist. pp. 249, 251. Also Perrin chap. 12. Also D'Anvers on Bap. p. 223. These ancient witnesses regarded the "confounding the work of the Holy Spirit in regeneration with the external rite of baptism" as a mark of antichrist. But the Tunkers make "baptism and regeneration two names for one act." Neal's Works p. 248. These ancient Waldenses would have regarded the Tunkers as belonging to the army of antichrist, yet Mr. Stein says that they were Tunkers!

Of course, he may find, amongst all the streams of slander poured out upon these ancient witnesses, where they have been charged with nearly every heresy in doctrine. But where in their own documents is the proof that the ancient Novatians and Waldenses held the Tunker faith and practice? Those Baptists who "have practiced feet-washing, laying on of hands, and the salutation with a kiss," did not make saving church ordinances of these customs. Why cannot our friend see the difference between a social greeting, or act of religious hospitality, and a saving church ordinance?

Mr. S. thinks that it is lawful, but "not expedient" to extend the saving church ordinance of the "holy kiss" to the "sisters"! If the kiss is altogether holy, and essential to salvation, as the Tunkers hold, why not the pastor administer it, like baptism, to all equally, without respect to sex, race or color? We still think that a kiss that must be forced by church law is only formality or hypocrisy.

We did not charge our friend with either of these; for those that receive the colored members with the voluntary loving kiss are not liable to the charge of "hypocrisy" in this particular.

He hints that we are guilty of thesin of the Pharisees who charged Christ with casting out devils through Beelzebub. We have not charged the Tunkers with casting out devils at all.

It cannot be shown that it was "already" in the heart of Judas to betray Jesus till after the feet-washing supper. We have established, with absolute certainty, that the feet-washing occurred at the Bethany supper. Our positions remain unmoved.

He claims that he "did not aim to misrepresent" us when he charged us with holding (which we do not) that "the disciples ought not" to wash feet; but in the same sentence he makes another equally false charge, that we do "not do it"—wash feet, and assigns us to "outer darkness" where is "weeping and gnashing of teeth." Matt. 25: 30. Even if he has no regard for truth, he ought to fear that lake. Rev. 21: 8. We have on different occasions "washed the saints' feet" according to the example of Jesus; and we are still ready and willing to do so again. But it is not our custom to boast, like the Tunkers, of our works. However, we do not enter into rebellion against Christ by making feet-washing a church ordinance, to save the soul. Must we make a saving church ordinance of training children, because we are required to "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord"? Where is the proof that "feet-washing was put into the apostolic church by Christ? What apostolic church practiced it?

Mr. Stein charges that we claim "only two christian ordinances"! We said: "two church ordinances." Why does he continue to falsely state our positions while they are in print before his eyes? Is that the Spirit of Christ?

Mr Stein states another reason why the Tunker churches are churches of Christ, as follows:

"My second reason why the Brethren possess this 5th characteristic, is that not only 'love,' but 'peace,' 'long-suffering,' 'gentleness,' 'goodness,' 'faith,' 'meekness,' etc., important fruits of the Spirit, are manifest in them. They are gentle toward all men, envy no one, resent not indignities, conquer by returning good for evil, and hold war to be incompatible with christianity."

This sounds like the prayer which says: "God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." Luke 18: 11, 12. We do not believe that the Tunkers are as holy and sinless as they boast themselves. We agree

1. That wars in general are unspeakable calamities.

2. That no christian has the right to propagate or defend his religious principles with carnal weapons.

3. That no church of Christ has the right to propagate or defend her principles with the carnal sword.

4. But in the present age of the world political governments have the same right to use carnal weapons in self defense as they have to exist. This is taught in Rom. 13: 1–7. The political "powers that be are ordained of God;" the political ruler "is the minister of God," "a revenger to execute wrath upon him that does evil." As the political power is ordained of God to punish evil-doers, if those evil-doers should come as a band of robbers—an army—to slaughter and plunder the citizens, it is the duty of the government to punish with carnal weapons such a company of evil-doers. Must our government sit down and allow men, woman and children to be slaughtered and our cities and towns given to the torch of the incendiary foe, without an effort to punish the evil-doers?

5. As it is the duty of political governments, under some circumstances, to bear the sword against their enemies, it is not unlawful for Christian citizens, who enjoy the protection of those governments, to "be subject unto the higher powers," and to aid in rescuing the land from the army of robbers.

Mr. Stein asks: "How can warriors be Christians?" Abraham was the father of the faithful, and yet he with his soldier servants fought, overthrew and slaughtered the four kings that had captured Lot and his family; and Melchisedec blessed him as he was "returning from the slaughter of the kings." See Gen. 14: 13–24; Heb. 7: 1. Are the present Tunkers better than Abraham? Moses, who talked face to face with God, and brought down the tables of the law from the flaming summit of Mt. Sinai, led the armies of Israel in battle against the idolatrous Amalekites. Are the Tunkers better than Moses? Cornelius, the centurion,—soldier captain—a devout man of prayer and alms, was the first gentile convert. While John the Baptist, the harbinger, was preaching and baptizing, "The soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, and what shall we do? And he said unto them, do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages." (Luke 3: 14). If it had been contrary to Christianity for one to serve as a soldier, John would not have endorsed their continuance in the army with the reception of "wages" as soldiers. Neither Christ nor the apostles made any law against disciples bearing arms as citizens of civil governments. Therefore, the Tunkers in making laws on the subject have violated the word of God.

Mr. Stein claims that the Tunker's garments are not "soiled with the blood" of war. Let us see. "During the late war the annual council" of the Tunkers "offered" "the government its hearty sympathy in its efforts to put down the rebellion." Also Mr. Stein quotes Origen, with approbation, where he claims that Christians fight for the king by praying for the success of his arms. If the Tunkers were in hearty sympathy with the government in the war "to put down the rebellion," their garments were soiled with blood as really as though they had been in the army. The Jews, in the Savior's time, were guilty of the blood of Abel. (Matt. 23: 35)

We state our Tenth Negative: The Tunker Churches are not churches of Christ, because of their unscriptural church government. It is a centralized hierarchy. In his reasons "Why I left the Baptist Church," p. 3, Mr. Stein says: "Have they a republican form of church government? So have we, only that with us, for the sake of more thorough discipline, every part is subject to the whole." This contains the seeds of popery. The Tunker committee in arranging for the Newtonia discussion affirmed that, "In matters of government and discipline, each local organization, or part of the church of Christ, is subject to the whole body"! Mr. J. H. Moore, in BRETHREN AT WORK for Jan. 1st, 1877, says: "The special object of this National Conference is to decide matters for which no 'Thus saith the Lord can be found.'" The so-called Tunker Churches, ruled over by a National Council, even in matters not contained in the word of God, are not churches of Christ, because they have rejected the Bible as the only rule of faith and practice.

The river burst its last dam, and the waters rushed in with great force, destroying the town and rendering 80,000 people homeless. The suffering is terrible. A hundred square miles in the neighborhood of the town are flooded, and the crops in the district are destroyed. It is not known how many lives have been lost, but several thousand persons have been drowned. The towns of Csongrad and Szentes, one of 16,000 and the other of 26,000 inhabitants, are also fighting the flood.

LOOK TO JESUS.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

LOOK to Jesus, He's the Savior,
Look to Him in earnest prayer;
Look to Him in faith, not doubting,
Thus you can His blessing share.

Look to Him when round the table
Look to Him by giving thanks;
Look to Him—implore His blessings,—
Lift your souls to higher ranks.

Look to Him when day is dawning,
Look to Him before you sleep;
Ask Him to protect you and guard you,
And your life in safety keep.

Look to Him in every ordinance,
And His precepts all obey;
Look to Him when you're in darkness,
Look when in the light of day.

Look to Jesus, look to Jesus,
Then that way, you sure will go;
For, as men look, so do they walk,
While traveling here below.

Look to Jesus, look to Jesus,
Look to Him in every thing;
Look to Him the only Savior,
And yourself an offering bring.

Look to Jesus, then you shall live,
Look to Him and be ye saved;
Look and try to gain salvation,
Ere you are to sin enslaved.

Brother, look, oh look to Jesus!
Look to Him in all you do;
Look to Him while life is passing
Look to Him, the Friend that's true.

LAW.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

"For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Romans 8: 2.

HERE are three laws alluded to by the apostle in the above passage, the law of the Spirit of life, the law of sin, and the law of death. The law of death was that law that was promulgated from Sinai. The apostle in the preceeding chapter, after extolling the law of Moses, labors to show his brethren, that though the law was holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good, yet it was not sufficient for their needs. It could not deliver them from the law of sin; yet it had its office to perform in the great redemptive plan. That office was to reveal or make manifest sin, "For by the law is the knowledge of sin." Again, the apostle says, "I had not known sin but by the law, for I had not known lust except the law had said, thou shalt not covet."

But how, it may be asked, is sin revealed, or made manifest by the law?

1. By exposing or bringing its criminality to light. Paul says, "I had not known lust except the law had said, thou shalt not covet," i. e., I had not known that those eager, longing desires after wealth, fame, power, etc., were sinful, had not the law taught me this, I never could have learned the lesson of submission from the book of nature.

2. The law gives the knowledge of sin by contrast. We there behold, as in a mirror, the purity and holiness of God, and his just demands upon us. The sinner thus arraigned before this bar of purity, sees himself in all his loathesomeness, hence says the apostle, "I was alive without the law once; but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died; and the commandment, which was ordained unto life, I found to be unto death." What, the law which God had ordained to life, be unto death! Why this strange subversion of God's purposes? What caused their effects to be so opposite to his designs? "Sin," the apostle answers: "For sin taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me." Hence the apostle, in the language of our text, calls this law, the law of death. This was not the original design of it. It was not ordained or established for that purpose. It was ordained as the instrument of life, but sin had made it the instrument or means through which it wrought death.

Again the apostle asks, "Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin," that its hideousness and blackness might be revealed, "working death in me by that which is good." The agent must indeed be bad that can use a good instrument to perform a wicked purpose. Continues the apostle, "That sin by the commandment might be exceeding sinful," i. e., that sin by means of the commandment might be shown to be exceeding sinful.

But what is meant by the law of death spoken of in our text? Law, is sometimes spoken of in the Scriptures as that which hath the force of governing and controlling our actions. All those who are in a state of nature, or unregenerated are under the dominion of sin.

What a terrible picture is drawn by Holy Writ of man's rapid declension under the sway of sin. We read early in the history of the race, these terrible lines: "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." Further on, we have a terrible picture drawn by Judah's prophet of the sad condition of that chosen people after they had fallen under the dominion of sin. Hear Isaiah: "Ah, sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil doers, children that are corrupted! they have forsaken the Lord, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they have gone away backward. Why should ye be stricken any more? Ye will revolt more and more. The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head, there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores; they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment." The following is David's description of man under the power of sin: "They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." To this terrible picture, the apostle adds the following: "Their throat is an open sepulchre: with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips; whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: their feet are swift to shed blood; destruction and misery are in their ways; and the way of peace have they not known." From this terrible thralldom, man could not extricate himself, hence the apostle in giving his own experience says, "For the good that I would, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do." As man could not break his own fetters, and as the law given by Moses could not deliver him, something more powerful than the law, or man's own skill must come to his relief, or he must remain a captive. The apostle, when he realized his wretched condition, and then was made to feel his own impotency, and the impotency of the law, cried out in agony, "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Who shall deliver me from this awful burden, the stench of which is constantly in my nostrils? But Paul at last found the Deliverer; not, however, in the school of science, not at the feet of Gamaliel, but he found him in the once despised Nazarene; then he breaks forth in the cheerful strains contained in our text: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God, sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh."

We will next try to consider the law of the Spirit of life. Life, oh what meaning in that word! We, who were dead in trespasses and sins, hath he quickened. And not only have we been quickened, made alive, aroused from our lethargy, but we have been made alive in Christ Jesus. We have not only been made to hate sin, but we have been brought into fellowship with God through the Spirit. Blessed truth, this law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus breaks the fetters of sin, and releaves us, not only from its power, but also from the love of sin, the contamination of sin, and from the guilt of sin. It is a complete and perfect deliverance. No wonder the apostle says, "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." What a debt of gratitude do we owe to our great Deliverer! "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh." The law was rendered insufficient, having to act through the agency of the flesh. The flesh instead of seconding the operations of the law opposed them; for Paul tells us, "I know that in me, (that is, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thing." The law thus weakened and trammeled, was not sufficiently strong to grapple the giant sin. But oh, what is the next wonderful announcement! God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh. One at last is found, able to grapple with this terrible monster. Christ came in the very stronghold of sin, namely in the flesh; and having come he laid hold of the strong man, bound him, and then spoiled his house—robbed him of his conquests, took from him his dominion, and overthrew his authority.

But why was this stupendous work wrought? The apostle tells us in the fourth verse, "That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

The above quotation does not very well agree with the "faith alone" doctrine taught at the present time. Paul tells us that Christ conquered sin, why? that we should be released from all obligations? No; but that we might be rendered capable of fulfilling, or accomplishing the righteousness of the law. Nothing could be more erroneous than the opinion that Christ has done all for us, and therefore we have nothing to do. The fact is, Christ has only removed our disability, and consequently made our responsibilities many fold more. Our heavenly Father does not require impossibilities of us, but he does require that we do what we can.

As the righteousness of the law could not be fulfilled, or accomplished by those who lived under the law, because of their disability, it would be reasonable to suppose that if God removes this disability, he would then require that we obey his holy precepts: and such we are taught in his Word is the case.

THE POOR.

BY CHARLOTTE T. BOND.

IN reading the Scriptures, we find much said in regard to the duty of Christians towards the poor. "The poor ye have always with you," showing plainly the church will never be without its poor. Next, what is our duty towards the poor? We must not say, "go, be ye clothed and fed," but must look after their comfort. Some require them to make their wants known. Must we wait for that? Some of them, and the best poor members we have, would live on bread and water before they would apply to the church, or their brethren for assistance.

It is the duty of those that God has blessed with abundance, to seek out the needy and privately bestow their alms. "Let not the left hand know what the right hand doeth." If we are applied to for alms, and give them, it seems a matter of necessity; but if we seek out the object of charity, it then has the face of a free gift, and "God loves a cheerful giver."

The eyes of the Lord are ever watching over his poor, and he has placed here purposely that the rich should have the blessed privilege of relieving their wants, and woe unto those who fail to do their duty in relieving the distressed. God could easily feed and clothe them himself; but he has arranged it that those whom he has blessed with plenty can have the pleasure of conferring favors on those who are not so well supplied. Nor is our duty done when we supply the wants of the body: they have spiritual needs too, and while we are contributing to bodily necessities, let us do it kindly, tenderly, let them feel that it is done from Christian and brotherly love. Not give it to them as if we would say, "be grateful for that or you will get no more;" but go to them with loving tenderness, showing that you feel for them both temporally and spiritually.

Our Savior said, "by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another." If this love is not felt and exhibited towards our poor, our gifts will amount to nothing. The apostle says, "though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." This text proves that giving is not all, but there must be with it a feeling for their interests. A loving interest for their welfare, is as much required as to supply their wants, and such feelings will be more highly appreciated by them.

This thing of a committee being sent to investigate, if they are in need of anything, and then delivering a report to the church and a general consultation over it, is both uncalled for and unscriptural. Some suppose that they do not properly employ their time, or they would not become a burden to the church, and many other such things concerning their needy condition. Do we ever read of such a church rule in the Scriptures? Do we ever read of the churches of ancient days sending brethren to see if this or that family were in need? If there is such Scripture, I would like to see it. There is one afflicted brother, C. H. Balsbaugh, who has several times made his wants known through the columns of our periodicals—a brother that is wearing his feeble life away in the work of the church. The last we heard of his wants, he had a number of letters to mail, and was waiting for a raven to bring him a beakfull of stamps that he might send them. If there are no ravens in the Brotherhood to attend to him, it is bad for the rest of the poor. One would suppose an afflicted brother, and one capable of doing so much good in the church would not only be supplied with stamps to convey his excellent writings to their destination, but that he would have every necessary comfort bestowed on him. Every one has a work to do, and the different circumstances we are placed in, does not make our duty any the less. Our dear afflicted brother, though he has but little of this world's goods, is rich in spiritual gifts, and it is the duty of those upon whom God has bestowed abundantly of the bodily comforts of this life, to aid him in exercising the gifts bestowed on him. Every one is to be judged according to his works; and where much is given, much will be required. Let us all, therefore endeavor to be faithful stewards, and improve the talents given us.

FLOWERS THAT NEVER WITHER.

THERE are flowers that never wither,
There are skies that never fade,
There are trees that cast forever
Cooling bowers of leafy shade.
There are silver wavelets flowing,
With a lulling sound of rest,
Where the west wind, softly blowing,
From the far lands of the blest.

Thitherward our steps are tending,
Oft through dim oppressive fears.
More of grief than pleasure blending
In the darkening woof of years.
Often would our footsteps weary
Sink upon the winding way
But that when all looks most dreary
O'er us beams a cheering ray.

Thus the Father who hath made us
Tenants of this world of care,
Knoweth how to kindly aid us
With the burden we must bear;
Knoweth how to cause the spirit
Hopefully to raise its eyes
Toward the home it doth inherit,
Far beyond the azure skies.

There is a voice that whispers lowly
Down within this heart of mine,
Where emotions the most holy
Ever make their sacred shrine.
And it tells a thrilling story
Of the great Redeemer's love,
And the all-bewildering glory
Of the better land above.

Oh, this life, with all its sorrows,
Hasteth onward to a close!
In a few more brief to-morrows
Will have ended all our woes.
Then o'er death the part immortal,
Shall sublimely rise and soar,
O'er the star-resplendent portal
There to dwell forever more.

AN EXHORTATION TO YOUNG MEMBERS, OR MY FIRST EXPERIENCE IN THE CHURCH.

BY G. W. KEIM.

Dear Brethren:—

WILL you permit me to speak to the young brethren and sisters through the BRETHREN AT WORK? I wish to speak more particularly to those who have lately come to the church. Let us consider well what we have undertaken; let us go with full determinations and prayerful hearts; let us be faithful in all things. We must pray always.

About five years ago I began to think I had better spend the remainder of my days serving the Lord. Since that time I have had to fight hard. I thought when I came to the church, or give up my former habits, that I would have no work to do, but oh, how sadly mistaken I was! Shortly after I made the good confession I thought I would establish regular family prayer; this was kept up quite faithfully a little time, but along came the wicked one and said to me, I need not pray so much, and my will was agreeable with it. The next appointed time for my family prayer, something was in the way, so I thought, well I will let it slip for this time, which was an easy matter. Time passed off, though not pleasantly, till the next appointed hour had come I felt less inclined than before. Everything was wrong, and nothing right. The day passed without prayer. So on until prayer was entirely abandoned. What then? I went on in this way, perhaps a year, and it was one of the most disagreeable periods in all my life. I was so far gone that sometimes I was heard to denounce religion in every form. I would argue that if I was an honest man and moral I would pass. My brother, living near me, would often say to me, "you don't pray enough." "Well," I would say, "how can I pray when I don't believe in prayer?" and would turn him off in this way. We had no preaching by the Brethren, though plenty of preaching that would allow one to do as he pleased. This kind I did not like, and during this time I had become very much troubled. Nothing went right, being troubled almost beyond endurance, a thought struck me that I should kneel down and pray, being the first time for some length of time, and let me tell you, my dear brethren, I feel that my prayer was heard, for since that I have enjoyed a glorious season, doubts removed, and faith stronger and brighter. I feel to bless my dear Savior, and now when the tempter says, don't pray, it is not necessary to be so earnest about this thing, I will say. I will pray, let come what will; and, thank God, I have come out more than conqueror. Let us not think that we can go on and have no work to do; for when we think so, along will come the tempter and lead us on the other road.

I now believe that if we come to God and earnestly pray, we can overcome all temptations.

My dear young brethren and sisters, let us not permit the wicked one to overcome us in any shape, but let us each one search the Holy Scriptures, and find what is that good and perfect will of God, and let us practice just what we preach, and let those who are without see that we are Christians; and let us not be afraid to speak boldly for Jesus, and be obedient in every thing; and when we have done all in our power, let us then consider ourselves unprofitable servants. We must overcome our carnal nature in all things which are contrary to our Master's will. It is not our nature to begin to serve him, not our nature to pray; and it is our nature to return evil for evil, and the one who smites us on one cheek, our will is, to give one in return, but we are told to turn the other also. This at one time looked impossible and hard to do, and, perhaps is, until we get just right. If a man will follow the one who gave us the example, he will never be overcome by such a circumstance. I think if we are Christ-like, we will have no need of any thing of this kind. If we will examine the Scriptures, we will find that we must put down our nature. If our coat is taken, we must not forbid our cloak being taken also. I know of some professed Christians, who, when they are offended, will draw their coat, ready for a fight, and read a lesson in God's Word twice a day, but some how or other this they cannot find; I do not wonder at them, for I heard their pastor tell them that to become a Christian did not need a denial in this matter, that he thought it would not deprive any one of this world's pleasure. According to his logic his members can go to shows, gambling shops, horse-racing, and everywhere pleasure could be found. If I mistake not, we are to shun the very appearance of evil and mind not worldly things, love not the world nor the things that are in the world. Let us press onward and upward and at last be eternally saved. May God bless us all, is my prayer.

THREE GREAT FAMILY EVENTS.

First, When a Child is Born.

BY T. K. PLANK.

THE birth of a child is a great event, whether the parents be rich or poor, high or low; whether the little helpless stranger is born to wear a crown, or to beg in the streets, and die in a poor house—it is the same great event in all cases, and under all circumstances—it is a new creature. God then breathes into the infant form an intelligent and immortal spirit, which knows no decay, and will still be young when the material heavens shall have waxed old as doth a garment, and vanished away like smoke. Every birth is adding one more to the innumerable throng which will arise from glory to glory, or sink in the blackness of darkness forever. Nor is the momentousness of the event in the least diminished by the fact that there are many thousands of such creatures every day.

Little as the birth of a child is noticed, out of the family, who can tell but it may be a more important event in its eternal issues and relations than the creation of a star that sooner or later may be extinguished forever? Extremely improbable as such a supposition is, who can tell but that the material heavens will somewhere, in the progress of eternal ages, be annihilated, and others, unspeakably more glorious, be created to shine in their room?

But what God has plainly revealed, we are certain of, and he has told us that the human soul is immortal. We read in his Word, that he "will render to them by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life," that at the resurrection this mortal must put on immortality; that the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ, and that the wicked as well as the righteous are heirs of immortality. This pledge of its immortality imparts an amazing interest to the birth of a child in any family, of whatever condition, it has an immortal soul. We do not say that God could not annihilate it if he pleased, it is enough to know that he will not; he made it to live forever, and it must, it will. The child, as it grows up, may wish he never had been born, and that he could blot out his existence; but he can no more cease to be, than he could come into being by his own act. Willing or unwilling, every rational soul must live forever. Nor is it merely its immortality which stamps such an amazing importance upon the birth of an infant. It is not the main thing. If it were a mere animal existence only capable of eating, drinking, sleeping, and waking, without an intelligent mind, without a conscience, without memory, without the power of reflecting upon the past, or anticipating the future it would matter but little whether such a mere sentient being were to be annihilated in a few years, or to exist forever. There would be no accumulation of knowledge: no account to render, no soul to be saved or lost. But the precious babe that now sleeps so sweetly on its mother's bosom is endowed by its Creator with intellectual and moral faculties, which will be developed and ripen into angelic fruition or endless woe. This helpless infant may yet be a Newton or a Milton, who can tell? It will soon become a thinking and responsible being; and will live, not in the present only, but in the past and the future. Beyond the grave it will remember its joys and its sorrows here, and will be forever looking forward to increased happiness or greater misery. What, then, in comparison with the birth of a child, are any of those events in family history which are commonly looked upon as great? What to a poor man, the sudden bestowment of an independent fortune, or being invested with the highest honors of the State? O happy mother! dost thou know what a treasure God has given thee? Hast thou begun to conceive what a priceless jewel he has put into thine hands to be polished, and what amazing responsibilities are wrapped up in the precious gift? Oh thou delighted father! dost thou know that an immortal spirit is committed to thy training, and that its eternal destiny may be decided by what thou doest or by what thou neglectest to do? Regard it as thou mayest, the birth of the child is the first of the three greatest events that can take place in a family.

The second is when that child is born again. This indeed may never happen in your family. Alas, how many large families there are in which there is no reason to think that any of the children are born again. But we have every evidence that the birth does take place in some—in many. The necessity of such a great moral change is explicitly declared by our Savior in his conversation with Nicodemus: "Verily, verily I say unto you, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." It is a universal proposition, the word "man" here is to be understood in its general sense, as comprehending the whole race.

BROTHER LŒHR TO THE POINT.

OCCASIONALLY old Brother F. P. Lœhr hits the nail square on the head: Here is one instance clipped from the Primitive Christian:

And you, my brethren, that fear a split in the Church, rest easy, it cannot be done, though every limb of the body may be amputated or lopped off. So long as the hand remains on the body, the pulsation of the heart will not cease, nor the vibration of the nerves stop for a moment. Prophecies of the rupture of the church have been repeated again and again to my recollection, since Brother Henry Kurtz darkened the horizon of our good and cautious brethren, with that abominable (?) sheet the Gospel Visitor. Even my little self remonstrated with all my little might, for nearly two years, as my remonstrances in the first two volumes abundantly show. Yet with all our forebodings and fears, no split in the body took place. From time to time some wandering star appeared in the constellation of the church, but did not affect its growth; they were but shooting stars that left no trace.

There are many alarm guns being fired just now, but so long as they spill no blood, but only cause flesh wounds, they are doing good service, for there is still too big a growth of flesh, and a large portion of it could be dispensed with, and the body might gain spiritual capacity. When I look on the bright side of the future, I see that ugly Gospel Visitor shining and illuminating many benighted hearts. It has multiplied itself into many branches, each bearing at least a little fruit, if even part of it tastes somewhat bitter. Without bitter we might perhaps not appreciate that which is sweet.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, } EDITORS AND
M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name over and above the nine names the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending drafts, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under $1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - APRIL 3, 1879.

ONE was baptized in the Cherry Grove Church the first of last week.

J. L. FRANTZ's address is changed from Degraff, Ohio to Bellefontaine, Ohio.

DR P. FAHRNEY's address is changed from 690 Indiana Street, to 431 Oakley Avenue, Chicago.

BROTHER J. W. STEIN's address is now changed from Newtonia, Missouri, to Mt. Morris, Ogle county, Illinois.

BROTHER J. W. STEIN, with his family, is expected to move to Mt. Morris, Illinois, in about two weeks.

ANY one having "History of the Modes of Baptism," by James Crystal, and desires to dispose of it, will please notify us by postal card.

BROTHER Daniel Miller has been preaching at Meyersdale and Salisbury, Pennsylvania. He is also expected to preach at Berlin and other points before his return.

BROTHER Paul Wetzel, formerly of Iowa, Illinois, but now of Grundy Center, Iowa, gave us a call last week. He was here on business, hence could not remain long enough to preach for us.

BROTHER J. P. Hetrick still remains in charge of the Philadelphia Church. His resignation was not accepted. Of late he has been holding some very successful meetings.

RELIGIOUS matters do not seem very quiet along the Baptist line, for one of our exchanges says the correspondents of the Baptist Banner are vigorously discussing the subject of feet-washing.

AT a meeting, held by Brother Silas Hoover, at Indian Creek, Pennsylvania, sixteen were added to the church by baptism. Four of them were prominent members of the Lutheran Church, and one a Baptist.

THIS week we have received notice of four persons who have been convinced of the correctness of the Brethren's doctrine by the reading of our pamphlets and the BRETHREN AT WORK. This shows whether pamphlets and papers do any good.

THE Inter Ocean says: "There is quite an emigration of Mennonites into Elkhart county, Indiana, they having purchased a large tract of land in that county. The Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot speaks of twenty-five families as en route to Elkhart."

THE Primitive Christian says: "The Brethren of Altoona, Pennsylvania, think of organizing and there is some prospects of our esteemed Elder James A. Sell locating in their midst. Such an event would be fortunate for the Altoona Brethren."

ARE there any members living in St. Louis, Missouri? If there are, we would like to have their names, number and street. Some of our ministers frequently stop in the city, and if members are living there, arrangements can be made to give them meetings.

BROTHER Quinter, who has been preaching in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, says that more plainly dressed people are to be found in that county than in most places. In addition to a large number of Brethren, there are a good many Mennonites, Amish, and River Brethren. In this respect that part of Pennsylvania is very favorably circumstanced.

THE Inter Ocean reports that there were shocks of earthquake in Northern Persia during the 22nd and 23rd of March. Mianeh was much damaged and the adjacent villages of Tark and Miaman totally destroyed. Out of 1,100 inhabitants only a few escaped death.

WE have on hand more correspondence and church news than we can possibly find room for in this issue. We will try and find place for it all next week. This abundance of news shows the great interest taken in our paper. Give us all the news you can, but condense it as much as possible.

THOSE who send us poetry for publication should not feel disappointed if their compositions do not appear as soon as they would like. We get enough poetry for about five papers, and of course some of it must be rejected. If some one would start a poetic journal we could supply them with enough copy for a few issues.

UNDER date of March 19th, Brother John Metzger says: "The Lord willing, I expect to start for Bond county, Illinois, Friday morning, to assist the Brethren in their quarterly church meeting. Expect to return home next week. Please correct a mistake in No. 10 about the election held in Indiana for three speakers. It reads Samuel Saylor, it should read Sanford Saylor."

MEN who are lying around loose, waiting for something to turn up for them to do, are not made of the stuff that reforms the world. Such creatures may dream of eminence or happiness, but are too lazy to ever reach them. Such persons should read the following lines, and then go to work:

"It is neither birth nor wealth nor state,
But the git up and git that makes men great."

SPEAKING of the good that tracts may do, Brother Thomas C. Wood, of Campbell county, Virginia, says: "You have added stars to your crown, for it is through you, brethren, that good has been done among us. Your paper and tracts have done the work; but, brethren, there yet is room. If we had you here to stand before this people, and let them see you face to face, the result would be far better."

BROTHER Levi Shadler, of Scioto, Montgomery county, Iowa, has been appointed Corresponding Secretary of the Maple Grove Colony for the State of Iowa, and Brother N. C. Workman for Norton, Norton county, Kansas. All letters of inquiry addressed to either party will be cheerfully answered. Persons writing should enclose stamp for reply. Members can be received into the colony at either point.

DEPRAVED nature easily understands how it was necessary for God to do something to save man, but not how it is necessary for man to accept God's terms of salvation. God never made an unconditional promise to any people of which we have any record. Therefore, to expect unconditional salvation is to manifest a spirit of ignorance, imbecility, infidelity, or fiendishness.

AN impostor preacher has been troubling the Brethren in Wood county, Virginia. He gives his name as Wm. H. H. Green, and is about twenty five years old, five feet and eight inches high, weighs about one hundred and sixty pounds; has black hair, black eyebrows, gray eyes, a very small sandy mustache, and a small scar above the left eyebrow running horrizontally across the forehead. Keep a look out for him.

ELLA Farman, the editor of the Wide Awake, has an interesting history. In early life she and a lady friend undertook to run a farm, and actually succeeded. Ella wrote for the papers and made the money to pay for the farm, while the lady friend did other work. On this farm she was found by a leading publisher, who took her to his large publishing house, gave her a neat little corner in the great building, and ever since she has been the editor of the little Wide Awake. Jewels are found on farms as well as other places.

SOME years ago, Brother Robert Edgecomb informed us that there was living in New Orleans a wealthy woman, who was very anxious to have the Brethren come into that city and preach, and even proposed to board one a whole year if he would come and labor with them. Now, if Brother Edgecomb can give us any farther information about this woman—who she is, and where she may be found—we will make an effort to have her request complied with; at least, if we cannot supply the call with a preacher, we may likely do something with paper.

THE Supreme Court of Indiana, having decided that a subscription made on Sunday is not binding in law, may compel the fashionable churches to either pay for their houses before they are dedicated, or else dedicate them on some other day, for if they take subscriptions on that day they are not binding. Likely it may do away with this money business on Sunday.

IT is predicted that the financial difficulties and general depression of business in England and Russia will cause a large increase of emigration to this country the ensuing year. Should the emigrants stop in cities it will only augment our difficulties. If possible they should be persuaded to help fill up the unsettled portions of the West, and thus obtain for themselves comfortable homes.

ARCHBISHOP Purcell, of Cincinnati, has failed financially, and is found to be in debt about six million dollars. To relieve him the Roman Catholic priests proposed to get up a grand lottery scheme, but the laws of the State of Ohio forbid lotteries, hence these cunning priests are laboring to have the laws changed so that they can go on with their lottery. This is another piece of Catholic corruption.

MINISTERS should be careful and not tell stories when preaching. We sometimes hear a minister say, "I will now bring my remarks to a close," and then he preaches about a half hour longer, occasionally telling the congregation that he will soon be through, but much to their mortification, nearly wears the congregation out before he stops. Such actions injure the cause, and causes many honest people to lose confidence of the benefits of religion.

THERE is not enough of distinction between the church and the world; there is not enough of difference, not that the world is too good, but the church is not good enough; the church has not reached that point which duty demands she should attain to. The church ought to be as separate and as distinct from the world as the Jews are from other people. Members ought to patronize each other in every just way, and thus form a stronger bond of union.

SINCE other religious bodies call themselves by the same name that the Brethren have adopted, Brother P. R. Wrightsman has written and had published in the Primitive Christian an article suggesting that we call ourselves Trine Baptists. This might do well enough if trine immersion were the only peculiar feature about our faith and practice. Why not adopt some Bible name? It is best to call Bible things by Bible names. The Apostolic Church had Bible names.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK is widely read in Lanark, and occasionally it makes a sensation. But here is a letter showing what the paper is doing in a mild way:

"Messrs Moore & Eshelman:—I have been reading the BRETHREN AT WORK, and like it very much. Although I am not a member of your church, I have been watching it closely, and I do believe you are serving God in the way that he commands. I have been attending your Sunday-school in this place for the last few months, and it has been the means of leading me to search the Scriptures more than I ever have before. I wish you well in your good work." SABBATH SCHOOL SCHOLAR.

EVER learn to respect the aged and infirm. To do otherwise, shows bad breeding. The best civilized nations show great respect to those who are old and feeble. It is said that the French will pay more regard to an aged woman than a pretty young one. They think young people can help themselves, but when it comes to old people they need help. Even the Chinese and Japanese are polite and genteel toward the aged persons among them. If you would be refined and polite, learn to respect those who are older. A little trouble on your part will only add to your culture.

THE great demand now is for preachers who can fill the house with people. They are not caring whether their hearts are filled with anything good or not, just so the congregations keep large. They want a fine preacher, the best of music, and all things done up in the latest style. Verily, religion is getting low when it resorts to such things, and values a large congregation as of more importance than a heart filled with the Holy Ghost. What we want is preachers who will fearlessly preach the word, and fill the hearts of the people with the words of the Lord. We want men who are not afraid to stand up for the right.

THE great trouble with some would be reformers is they have never been reformed themselves. They pretend to be leaders while in fact they need some one to lead them. Reformers should be model men—men of good character and intelligence. There are too many broken down aspirants shouting reform, who might do well if they would spend more time cleansing their own houses. Reform, like good manners, should commence at home.

IT is a grand thing to save one sinner, but it is a grander thing to go to the beginning of life, stand by the roadside, and turn back the millions of little feet that are enticed onward to ruin. It takes years to train a generation, and lead the people from the error of their way. We need a host of teachers who will stoop to the training of the youth, and prepare the coming generation for active and vigorous work in the Master's vineyard. Gather the children around you and tell them Bible incidents, and thus store their minds with useful information.

IN writing articles for the paper, you can save us much trouble if you will write them just as they should appear in the paper. If you write an article on a subject (1) place the subject at the beginning of the article, on the first line of the paper; (2) Place your name on the second line; (3) Begin the article on the fourth line. If you send us a letter of correspondence, see that you have it just as we print such matter. By looking carefully through the paper you can find an example to be followed, as to what you should write, and how you should write it.

THE following is the exact copy of a letter dated February 28, 1879:

"Dear Editors:—

It is by the love of God that I can write to you. I have had no paper since the 23rd of January. I would like to know whether you send it, or whether it is mislaid in the mail. Please send me one 'Why I Left the Baptist Church,' and one 'Origin of Single Immersion.'"

The tone of this letter is Christian, but we cannot attend to the business it refers to for the simple reason the writer failed to give either his name or post-office address, and we take this method of trying to find out who he is.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER.

Much good can be accomplished in most any locality by distributing the BRETHREN AT WORK regularly among well-disposed outsiders. They will take great pleasure in reading it, become interested in its contents, and therefore form a strong attachment for the church and its doctrine. Congregations wishing to try this method of spreading the truth among their neighbors should proceed to raise the money, order a number of papers sent to the address of some brother or sister, who is to care for and distribute them at the close of services. This method of doing missionary work will be found especially serviceable in localities where new congregations are building up.

THE REFORM.

THE temperance advocates are circulating a paper, petitioning the Legislative body of this State, to provide that the question of licensing the sale of any or all intoxicating drinks shall be submitted to, and determined by, ballot, in which women of lawful age shall have the privilege of taking part the same as men. If the women are left to settle this question, the liquor traffic will be banished, and well it should be.

To make the reform a still greater success, two other steps should be taken. 1. Put a stop to smoking and chewing tobacco. 2. Prevail on the women to stop their foolish and extravagant style of dressing. Intoxicating drinks are doing an immense amount of damage, not more so, however, than the unhealthy and extravagant custom of dressing that women have fallen into. Hundreds of men are led to drinking because of this extravagance. If men would quit drinking intoxicating liquors, quit chewing and smoking tobacco, and the women would abandon their foolish fashions, and dress in modest apparel, what a happy country we would have, and how much better it would be for the present as well as the rising generation.

J. H. M.

LAST Friday evening Elder M. S Newcomer, assistant editor of the Church Advocate, published at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, preached in Lanark an able discourse on feet-washing. The arguments were good and well arranged.

PRINCIPLE: NOT POLICY.

THE motives of men always have been questioned, and we presume they will continue so until the bottomless pit is opened to receive its victims. The world has plenty of suspicious—persons who will think evil, or suspect that something is not just right.

Even our motives for conducting our paper in the way we do has been called into question by some who think we are occupying a kind of middle ground for policy's sake—just to keep on the good side of the church and our readers, and thereby offend none. These persons, perhaps, have never stopped to consider the matter in its true light, they have never looked at it from a tenable stand-point. They have their own ideas how a paper ought to be run, and not because we do not fall into their channel we must be set down as "policy men"—men who will not sound the alarm when they see the danger coming. Of course, we have explained our position over and over, yet they cannot see but that we are still policy men and are laboring for selfish interest.

To all such we beg leave to say that the course taken by the BRETHREN AT WORK was well matured long before the paper was started; we conceived the idea of publishing a paper that would stand up for the gospel faith and practice of our people, a paper that would be free of controversy and contention between brethren, a paper adapted not only to the wants of the church, but, also, to work on mission fields. We were then, and are yet, of the impression that controversies among brethren are calculated to sow contention and discord in the church and thereby make trouble. Principle, and not policy has prompted us to take this course, and we intend pursuing it as long as it may fall to our lot to edit the paper. Of course, we have no control over other papers, and do not presume to dictate for them, but we do purpose to do all in our power to keep peace and harmony in the church, and labor for the union and good will of God's people. This is a part of our mission, and God help us to perform it aright.

As evidence that our cause is a good one it is only necessary to refer to the past. There was a time when controversy was carried to its highest pitch in the Brethren's papers. Free speech was the go and they had it. Hundreds of members became disgusted, and, as a consequence, stopped their papers. Others burned them as soon as they were read, fearing they would fall into their neighbors' hands. The Brotherhood was full of discord and contention. The Annual Meeting was any thing but pleasant, and was always looked forward to with dread, and every body felt glad when it was over. Very little missionary work was done, though it was much talked and written about.

But in course of time matters changed; controversies between members were excluded from the Brethren's papers, and the efforts of our people were turned more to the spreading of the gospel, the establishing of missions, building up churches, and laboring for the general peace and harmony of the church. What have been the results of this change? Since that change has taken place our people have done more missionary work than ever before. More people have been converted than in any previous period of the church's history. And the last Annual Meeting is said to have been the best meeting of the kind ever held among our people. We attribute this largely to the peace and harmony that pervaded the Brethren's papers, for just as soon as controversies ceased in our papers that soon did a change commence in the work of the church. Brethren instead of biting and devouring each other, turned their attention to missionary work—to the spreading of the gospel and the general good of the church.

These are some of the reasons why our paper stands out for peace principles—we are satisfied that it is better for the church, and the history of the past proves it. We believe that if controversies between members could have been kept out of the Brethren's papers three years longer, that our people would, by that time, be more solidly united than ever before. Among our people are three elements — the slow, the fast, and conservative. The conservative constitute the great body or strength of the church. The other two elements are just the opposite of each other, and it keeps them about busy opposing one another, while it takes much of the conservative element's time to maintain peace. Were it not for this, more missionary work could be done. One party does not seem disposed to do anything in spreading the gospel, while the other wants to run things at lightning speed, but the conservative element labors to get the whole church to move together. This has been accomplished in Illinois as well as other places where good field work is being done, not by controversy, not by exposing or saying hard things about each other, but by adopting peaceable measures. This is the course the BRETHREN AT WORK has taken from the beginning, and it has been the means of accomplishing good thereby, and we purpose to stick to the same old platform. Did all our papers strictly adhere to this position there would be no difficulty about bringing the other two elements in line with the conservative. But as it now is we cannot help but entertain some doubts.

We further add that the church is regarded as a family. Eph. 3: 15. It is controlled and governed by the Law of heaven. Its members are bound by the great Bond of Peace. If one member suffers all the others suffer with it; if one rejoices all the others have joy also. 1 Cor. 12: 26. They must have the same love, the same care for each other. Phil. 2: 2. They are required to be of one mind, the same judgment. 1 Cor. 1: 10. Knowing these things, is it prudent to publish to the world such differences as have arisen amongst us? Would we consider it wise if a member of a family should go out amongst his neighbors and tell all the little differences which may have arisen in that family? Would the telling of it make any one more holy, a better neighbor? Suppose John's method of building fence did not exactly suit James, would it be wisdom for James to go and tell his neighbors and make John's method look as ugly as he can, even to go so far as to misrepresent it? No indeed; such a James could not be regarded as a blessing to either the family or neighborhood. So in the church of God: we all agree to what is written in the one great Book of God, but we differ some in the method of doing certain things. We do not differ where God has given the manner of doing, but where he has left it to the judgment of the church. Now is it wise or even manly to publish those differences to the world? Has any man a right to maintain and advocate his opinions as superior to those laid down by the church? And is it brotherly to call each other "policy men," "milk-and-water men," just because we may differ about things that are not written in the gospel? If I do not agree with the plans and opinions of my brother, am I justified in publishing his opinions to make them look ridiculous? The brightest gold may be made obnoxious to man by associating it with filth, nevertheless the gold would still be gold. Does not Paul clearly show what we should do in unrevealed matters? "But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ." Rom. 14: 10. If my brother has his method of doing good, why should I judge him? or try to set him at nought? So long as he violates no gospel principle, am I not bound by the law of God to let him alone?

If I advocate free press, free speech, freedom in Christ, why should I manifest so much meanness when my brother is doing precisely what I advocate? Some men get so free that you cannot tell where they are going. When I hear a man talk of bondage in America, I wonder whether he is not free to walk over Niagara Falls? Certainly he is; for just that far is freedom extended in this country. Why, a man is free to go out of the one body if he will. He is not forced to stay in and do as he pleases. If people have no respect for themselves they ought to have at least a little respect for the church. I see no use in the whole church being turned upside down just to suit the opinion of one or two men.

Then, our paper has a large circulation on the mission field, larger, we presume, than any paper ever published among the Brethren; in fact, it is a regular missionary paper, and is doing missionary work. It is going to hundreds of outsiders. Members send us money, and have us send the papers to their friends and neighbors, saying that it is the very paper to do good because it is free of controversy between members. Would it be right for us to admit miscellaneous controversies under these circumstances? Certainly it would not: we would do more harm than good.

If other papers want to publish all the little difficulties and troubles they can hear of in the church, to the world; if they want to allow their contributors to abuse the old brethren, say hard things about them and make fun of them, and thereby bring disgrace and stigma on the church, we cannot help it; but we do not think they ought to call us "policy men" or "milk-and-water men," because we do not do it. That is not the right way of conducting a paper: we do not think it is calculated to increase the peace and hrrmony of the church; we do not think the reading of such things is calculated to convert people and bring them into the church. We are opposed to it from principle and not from policy, and as such our position ought to be respected. J. H. M.

TOBACCO AND THE ANNUAL MEETING.

SOME of our readers think we write and publish too many articles against the use of tobacco. They say the old Brethren used it; they did not condemn its use like we do, and, therefore, we should just let it alone and say nothing about it. In order to see how our old Brethren stood on the tobacco question, we concluded to look it up, and we must confess that we were agreeably surprised. Our old Brethren were sound on that question, and we would that others were equally sound. We shall take the liberty of copying all the Annual Meeting has said on the subject, leaving our readers to judge whether we, in our articles, have been too severe in denouncing the use of the weed. The following decision was passed at the A. M. in 1817. We quote from the Minutes, page 52.

"Concerning the use of tobacco, it was in union considered, that if a member should be contaminated with it, such should be admonished to quit it; and if it would not be told, such a member could not be elected to any office in the church."

By this it will be seen that the Brethren advised that if a brother would not quit the use of tobacco he could not be elected to any office in the church. That is a good deal plainer than we talk. We next turn to page 60 and we have the following, passed in 1829:

"Concerning the abuse of tobacco. This has been before the meeting already before this, and was always considered a shamefully bad habit (German, Untugend)—and every thing bad, says the apostle, is sin, and sin defileth the body; and another apostle says that your bodies, together with soul and spirit, shall be holy."

In 1827 a question in regard to raising tobacco was before the Meeting, and was disposed of as follows:

"Concerning members who engage in the raising of tobacco? Considered, that members should have nothing to do with such things, by which so much mischief is done, and so many men (and women too) are led captive, as is the case with tobacco."—Page 66.

The following was before the A. M. in 1839:

"Whether a brother may be intemperate with strong drink or tobacco? No."—Page 85.

The decision of 1864 looks a little weak. The query and answer read as follows:

"Inasmuch as all that our Annual Meeting has hitherto done to suppress the excessive or intemperate use of tobacco, in smoking and chewing, has virtually proved a failure, could not this meeting adopt some method by which the excessive use of this growing evil could be suppressed in our brotherhood? Answer: As the use of tobacco is offensive to some brethren and sisters, and the excessive use of it an evil, we advise and counsel brethren not to use it in time of worship, so as to be either filthy or offensive to others, and we think our ministering brethren should admonish their members not to indulge in the excessive use of it in any way, because it is wrong to do so."

But at the A. M. in 1870 the advice was to the point, and comes out in a clear distinct ring:

"Since the Annual Meeting has, at different times, decided against the excessive use of tobacco (See Minutes of 1864, Art. 19), but the object desired has not yet been realized, we therefore ask this District Meeting to suppress its use altogether, except for medical or mechanical purposes, and to deal with such as use it according to Matt. 18, as we consider it proper to deal with members for wearing fashionable garments. Minutes of 1863, Art. 3, and Minutes of 1866, Art. 27. The District Meeting favored the request, and sent it to the Annual Meeting. Answer: This Annual Meeting renews its disapprobation of the use of tobacco, and especially at the time and in the place of divine worship, and believes it should be classed with other vain and useless things."—Page 356.

The last decision was in 1872, where tobacco is again "classed with other vain and useless things:"

"A request to reconsider Art. 20, of Annual Meeting of 1870. There was a reconsideration of the article referred to, and the answer of 1870 was renewed, and ordered to be put on the present Minutes. It is as follows: 'This Annual Meeting renews its disapprobation of the use of tobacco, and especially at the time, and in the place, of divine worship, and believes it should be classed with other vain and useless things.'"—Page 372.

By this it will be seen that the Annual Meeting is about as much opposed to the use of tobacco as either the gospel or the BRETHREN AT WORK. J. H. M.

PROFESSOR KNAPP'S TERRIBLE PREDICTION.

ASTRONOMERS are looking forward to the coming year with considerable perplexity, believing that the year 1880 will bring with it the most wide-spread and dreadful calamities that have been known for over two thousand years.

To explain:—The sun is the center of our solar system: around the sun revolve a number of planets, and among them is the earth. There are certain periods when these planets approach nearest the sun. These periods are noted for general calamities, for the peculiar relation the planets sustain to each other produces serious disturbances in the atmosphere, thus causing terrible rains, or prolonged drouths, famines, diseases and pestilences generally.

Soon after 1880, four of the larger planets will be at their nearest approach to the sun, something that has not happened for two thousand years. We are rapidly approaching that period, and already the distant rumblings would seem to indicate that the storm is approaching. One of our exchanges says: "The fact that so many fish are dying off the coast of Florida calls to mind the awful prediction of Professor Knapp. From the juxtaposition of certain planets to our earth, he predicts that one half of the population of the world, including man and animals, and even vegetable life, will perish before 1880. In a lecture delivered several years ago he said that this desolation would commence by the fish of the sea dying, and pestilence and famine occurring in more southern latitude."

The famines in China and Brazil, the scourge in South America, the black and fatal plague that is almost depopulating certain parts of Asia, as well as the pestilence among the fish in the Southern waters look like so many steps in the fulfillment of the dreadful prophecy. It looks much like the fulfilling of the prophecy uttered by the Savior, and recorded in Luke 21: 25, 26: "And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken."

The prophecies are fast fulfilling: the "times of the Gentiles" is about fulfilled, men's hearts are failing them, the gospel has been made known in nearly every part of the earth, and already the civilized world is looking with mingled feelings of awe and anxiety to the great future. We are living in a fearful age. May God help us to confide in him. J. H. M.

HOW I CATCH FISH.

THE following, sent us by a brother, may be a little amusing, and to some appear somewhat ridiculous, but there is a good deal of truth in it. It is the language of an old experienced fisherman to a minister:

"The reason so few sinners are converted is because of the manner in which you angle for them. When I go fishing," remarked the old fisherman, "I use a very delicate pole, an almost invisible line, a hook of the most artistic workmanship, and at the end of all, a very tempting bait, which I softly and carefully drop into the stream. But when you ministers start out, you take for a pole a weaver's beam, to which you fasten a cart rope with a pot hook attached, and a snapping turtle for a bait. This you throw into the water with a splash and exclaim, 'bite or be damned.'"

There is too much of this kind of work going on. Snapping turtles may be good enough in their place, but they are not the kind of things with which to catch fish. Every Bible reader is aware that the Savior in selecting his twelve apostles, made choice of a number of fisherman — men skilled in the art of fishing. He wanted them to become fishers of men, and to devote their time and energies to converting and getting people into the church. This required as much skill and patience as fishing.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. In order to promote Bible Truth, all questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible. Articles for this department must be short and to the point.

Compare and explain Ex. 21: 10, 11, and John 1: 18. H. H. R.

Will some one please explain whether feet-washing took place under the old or new dispensations?

Is the Cherubim, or Flaming Sword still between man and the tree of life? C. L. CROTTY.

Please explain 1 Tim. 5:8, which reads as follows: "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." E. S.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8: 33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." DENCY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

Will you, or some one else please give an explanation of Rev. 2: 17? It reads thus: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it."

MARY ZIGLER.

Please explain through the BRETHREN AT WORK the meaning of 1 Cor. 15: 29. It reads as follows: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?"

What are we to understand by the term, "Why are they then baptized for the dead?" J. E.

I desire an explanation on 1 Tim. 5: 24: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after."

S. A. WHITELY.

Please give your views through the BRETHREN AT WORK, of Matt. 5: 25, which reads as follows, "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison."

Also 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10: "Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work."

J. B. ELLER.

Will some one please explain Heb. 7: 1, 3: "For this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." M. B.

Will some one please explain Jer. 12: 5? It reads as follows: "If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?"

C. E. M.

I would like to have some one explain, through your paper, Heb. 8: 8-10. It reads as follows: "For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt: because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people."

ON THE HOUSE-TOP.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please give an explanation on Matt. 24: 17, which reads as follows: "Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house."

Also verse 40, which reads as follows: "Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left." JANE REEDY.

IN the first part of this chapter, Christ was foretelling of the captivity of Jerusalem, and the destruction of the temple, which was also spoken of by the prophet Daniel, as history tells us, more than five hundred years ago. Dan. 9: 27, and 12: 11. In the sixteenth verse, he warns "them that are in Judea to flee to the mountains," lest they might be destroyed, or taken into captivity by the Romans.

Now "let him which is on the house-top not come down to take anything out of his house." History tells us the house-tops then were made flat, and people often sat, walked, prayed, took their meals, and spent their nights thereon. The way I understand it, is that they should not be concerned about their household goods, but flee in the shortest and quickest way for their own safety. Great was the tribulation, as was foretold in the twenty-first verse. It is stated that one million one hundred thousand were slain. In the vicinity two hundred and fifty thousand more. Ninety-seven thousand were sold into perpetual bondage, and multitudes perished by famine and cruel treatment.

THE SERMON.

It should be warm—a living altar coal,
To melt the icy heart, and charm the soul;
A lifeless, dull harangue, however read,
Will never rouse the soul, or raise the dead.

It should be simple, practical, and clear;
No fine-spun theory to please the ear!
No curious lay, to tickle lettered pride,
And leave the poor and plain unedified.

It should be tender and affectionate,
As his warm theme who wept lost Salem's fate,
The fiery law, with words of love allayed,
Will sweetly warn, and awfully persuade.

FLOWERS.

BY ISABELLA F. KELSO.

FLORA is the goddess of flowers. A goddess is a feigned god, or a dissembling goddess. In Spring time, when the buds expand and the leaves are green, the wonderful metamorphoses which they undergo from seed to plant and flower, and from flower to seed again, showing the manifestations of the great Creator, when the May flowers are waving their lofty heads in the sunshine, or swayed to and fro by the gentle evening breeze. The variety, fragrance, elegance, the finest adaptation and singularity of structure have long been themes for the poet, naturalist, and the deep thinking men of science.

What a desolate place earth would be without flowers! fit emblems of the conqueror's triumphs, or ornaments of the frigid corpse in the coffin; accepted at the hall of festivity with admiration, or, decorating the isolated grave. When the midsummer sun sends his scorching rays on the earth, how beautiful the sight of the cool vine-clad arbor, the window's recess, trellised porch, balcony, facade, or tiny front plot embellished with floweretts.

How silently flowers bloom! yet what an object for contemplation to the refined and reflective mind! "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." With all of the glory which Solomon possessed, he was very imperfect when compared with the lily, the simple flower of God's creation—is considered to be arrayed with more glory than all the perishable display of man. Vain, proud humanity can be taught an important lesson of humility by the simplicity of the lily; the innocent flowers show the perfection of a Creator's hand, and the imperfections of human.

When Autumn approaches, the flowers begin to fade, and decay is written upon every page of nature's scroll, and all who heed can see the end of all things earthly. And as the quiet angel of death approaches human, we fade and decay to be removed to the sacred necropolis.

Something remarkable about flowers is their rotation of bloom, each in its own order; this systematic arrangement alone, exhibits the wonderful power of the supreme Being, as much as the rotation of Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. Repeatedly the words of art have tried to imitate that of nature. Perfection of imitation is beyond the skill of imperfect humanity especially in brilliancy and accurate delicacy. One cannot examine closely the structure of an immaculate flower without thinking if the little messenger were well observed and our lifetime were as innocent as its, we would spend very pleasant lives. Exquisite flowers incite to purity of life and character. To what an eminent degree purity is seen in the life of the Savior! What examples of purity of mind, chasteness of speech, and amiable character are set for our imitation! These precepts gracefully adorn youth; are an ornament in old age, and the soul which it embellishes is beautified and elevated. Then as we behold the natural flower, we think that such never fading flowers faith, hope, goodness, purity, and radiancy dwell only with God, and the mind soars upward as if on the zephyr of reverie, moved by angels' wings, our aspirations still mounting higher and higher, into the infinite chamber of the immensity of God.

In yon cline of joys supernal,
Where eternal Summer glows,
We may meet in that great temple
That no broken altar knows;
Where the music and the banquett
And the day shall never close,
In yon clime of joys supernal
Where eternal Summer glows.

HOW TO ADJUST DIFFICULTIES.

BY E. KYLE.

"Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother."—Matt. 18: 15.

THE above is the language of Jesus Christ the great head of the church, and was given by him as a rule, or a law, by which Christians can adjust all differences, trespasses, or offenses, that may arise between them and their brethren. If they are guilty of the same offense that they charge their brother with, and bring a charge against him, they certainly are as unreasonable as the unforgiving servant; and God, the righteous judge, will deal with him accordingly in the great day of reckoning. "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass," that is, sin or offend thee, go and tell him of his fault, not go and tell it to some one else, or to the church: for in doing so, you trespass upon your baptismal promise, that if you saw anything wrong in your brother or sister, you would privately go and talk to him; and, in the spirit of love, admonish him and show him his fault, and try to gain thy brother thyself before you would tell it to the church.

Many a poor soul that once bid fair (in this sinful world) for the higher regions of glory, has been crushed down by some brother departing from the above rule and going and telling the offense to others or to the church before going to see the one that offended or trespassed. This discourages the brother and he thinks it is no use for him to try when his brethren do not think enough of him to come to him and tell him of his fault, but tells it to the church where he must answer to it, no matter how much shame and mortification it brings upon him and his companion or relatives in the flesh. So he will quit the church. Such has been the case of more than one weak brother or sister, who is of a very sensitive nature: all caused by some brother or sister not going according to gospel in their treatment of their weaker brother, who perhaps needed and would gladly received all admonition given to him, in a loving, kind and Christian spirit. May God, the Father, help us to see our own faults and measure ourselves by the gospel rule before we see our brother's or measure him, is my prayer.

THE TRINITY OF THE GODHEAD.

BY DANIEL LONGANECKER.

THE Son is not the Father, for the Son is begotten; but the Father from all eternity is unbegotten. If the Son, born of the virgin Mary, be God, then Mary, a creature, is the mother of God, the Creator—a mystery which man or angels cannot solve. Mary is, therefore, the mother, only, of the person of the Son begotten, not the mother of his Deity. In Deity the Father and the Son are one; in humanity the Father is greater than the Son. There are three that bear record in heaven,—three in office, not three in person, but one in Deity. Three in office, the Father draws the sinner; therefore 1st, "baptizing them in the name of the Father." 2nd, The office of the Son pardons; therefore, "baptizing them," not in the Father's name, but "in the name of the Son," done to honor the Son of the Father. 3rd, The office of the Spirit is to guide in all truth; therefore baptizing them "in the name of the Spirit." By immersion in each name we confess the trinity by trine immersion. If we say, I baptize thee in the name of the Father and don't do it, and of the Son and don't do it, and of the Holy Ghost and then baptize, are we not denying the Father and the Son in baptism?

By trine immersion we are sure to have baptism enough; by single immersion we are not sure. We pray you make your calling and election sure. Let flesh and blood say what they will, we are persuaded that if it was as convenient and as pleasant as sprinkling, all men would understand and prefer it, and if trine immersion was as easy and quickly done as single, men would understand and obey it. Observation has convinced us that nothing is harder for man to learn than that which he opposes; but how easy to learn what we love and wish to know.

THE hardest thing to hold in the world is an unruly tongue.

These things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.—1 John 1: 4.

Items in Brief.

SATURDAY night, March 1st, by urgent request, gave the Temperance Association of Iowa Centre, an address on temperance, in the M. E. Church. Every available space in the building filled with eager listeners. At the solicitation of the Association, consented to address them again in the near future. On Sunday, 2nd, was conveyed by a kind brother to our regular appointment in Polk county. Large attendance and much interest. Text, Isaiah 55: 10, 11. In the afternoon was conveyed by brethren to the Green Valley school-house, Jasper county, where we had previously announced we would conduct a series of meetings; had a full house. Text, 1 John 4: 20. Quite an interest. Following evening met a large audience again. Subject, John 15: 24. Theme, "The work's of Jesus." An unusual warm feeling at this meeting. Tuesday, 4th, met at 10 o'clock; small attendance. Text, Eph. 2: 17. At lamplighting met a crowded house again. Text, Num. 10: 29. Quite good impressions apparently at this meeting. Wednesday evening, large attendance. Text, John 4: 35, 36. Interest increasing. Thursday evening, full house. Text, John 14: 23. Friday at 10 o'clock, preached a funeral discourse, four miles west of our meeting place, for a dear little boy of friend John Kinney. He died very suddenly with croup; was playing and doing little household duties only a few hours before his death. Text, Rev. 7: 9. O how hard to give them up! Friday evening, full house again. Text, 2 Cor. 6: 1, 2, 3. Saturday evening, large attendance. Text, Acts 4: 11, 12. Sunday at 11 o'clock, house crowded. Text, Acts 20: 32. Best interest of any of the previous meetings, except one. When we sung a hymn and gave an invitation, one young man arose. Sunday evening, house packed full. Text, Rev. 22: 17. Interest still increasing. When an invitation was given, five more precious souls arose as an evidence that they were ready to follow the Savior. This meeting ended the series, as seeding time had come; but it was with a sad heart that we closed the meetings, as I am assured many more were "almost persuaded" and are very "near the kingdom." Had no occasion during the meetings to reprove any one for improper conduct, although the house was so much crowded at times.

Prospects for accessions in this vicinity were never better. On the 15th inst. we expect some, perhaps all that have made application, to be baptized. At the meetings we had expected foreign help, but was disappointed; so we took courage and in the Lord's strength we did what little we could, and all praise be unto the Lord for the refreshing shower of grace we enjoyed while "sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Dear brethren let us live "near the cross." Let us never give the world cause to say, "You have served your God for naught." D. E. BRUBAKER.

NUMBER XIII.

A Pleasant Entertainment;—Lord's Day;—Pleasant Hours at Pleasant Ridge;—Sinners Coming Home;—By the Waterside;—The Farewell.

THIS evening we had the pleasure of entertaining two of the Lord's veterans of the cross, Brethren P. J. Brown and William Keifer, of Congress, Ohio, who are en route for Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, to commence a series of meetings at that place. It is a pleasure to meet with the people of God. The evening was spent agreeably, and I trust, profitably to all.

Brother Brown is a man of great experience in the Christian religion; and, as an expounder and defender of Christian truth, has but few, if any, equals. God bless them in their labors, and I hope, ere long, to send a favorable report from that part of the mission field.

To-day we met in the Old Church for worship. Notwithstanding the prevailing snow storm, a goodly number convened to commune with God once more in the courts of their God. The service was opened by singing the 98th hymn.

"Jesus, thou dear redeeming Lord,
Thy blessing we implore;" etc.

After prayer, the speaker selected as a motto for his discourse a part of 1 Kings 20: 40. Theme—Opportunities for doing good.

1. Man possesses abilities to do good.

2. The salvation of sinners should be his special object.

Man cannot live to himself, alone, but is a social being. It was the design of his Creator that he should minister to the wants of his fellow-men, and that he is responsible for that which God has committed to his trust. He cannot, therefore, renounce his responsibility and live independent of his fellows, but is equally interested in the welfare of humanity, hence is responsible. Man has abilities for doing good by his intellectual attainments, by his wealth and by his influence. He who possesses those abilities and does not impart to others, his life is a failure, and has not met the design of his Creator. While we may deem it a pleasure to visit the sons of poverty, ameliorate distress, visit the house of the afflicted, etc., to labor for the salvation of sinners outvies them all, and this should be the special object of our zeal. This every true disciple of Jesus will do, and not allow his mind to become so fully absorbed by the cares of life, by trade or domestic affairs, that he cannot look after the wants of the sinner. Opportunities for doing good, once gone by cannot be recalled, and the responsibility rests upon us. We may look upon those living in sin and expect at some time to try to persuade them to enter the ark of safety. But we move too slow, are too "busy here and there," they move away from us, or, perhaps, die and the opportunity is lost, and the salvation of the soul not secured.

To-day I joined the Brethren in their labors at Pleasant Ridge, in the north-eastern part of Eagle Creek congregation, Hancock county, Ohio. Three applicants for baptism, next day one more, which four were baptized according to the command of the Master. Meetings of growing interest. Our worthy evangelists are entertaining the people in the light of the gospel and holding forth the truth in great power.

To-day four more willing souls came out and accepted the easy terms of the gospel and were baptized beneath the liquid wave, and arose to walk in newness of life. Friday evening, another full house, and several more applicants; baptism announced for Saturday morning, 10: 30, at which time the sword of the spirit was so powerfully and skillfully handled that the number confessing Christ was swelled to twelve, who were conveyed to the waterside and were baptized according to the command of our divine Master. Oh joy inexpressible! How the dear converts wept for joy and glorified God for this freedom from the thralldom of sin and Satan. God bless the earnest workers in the field. The Esthers were out looking after their kindred, fathers and mothers wept and prayed for their children, and the cause moved along, and God was glorified. Oh! what power there is in unity of action and unity of sentiment. Sin cannot withstand a solid column of Christian workers; it must yield; bless the Lord of glory. Oh for more of this love and unity of action throughout the brotherhood; many more souls might be saved.

Meetings continued day and night, and sinners were converted. On Sunday, four were added by baptism, and glorified God for his redeeming grace and power. Oh! the holy and joyous scenes at the waterside. How willingly they yielded to the baptismal wave! How joyously they exclaimed, "Glory to God," "Now we will serve God," etc. Never did I see such earnest solicitations from the converts to their neighbors and comrades to join with them in this holy work.

On Monday, the writer was called home to preach the funeral of Mr. C. Wilch, which took place in the U. B. Church. A large audience of sympathizing friends. Oh! what sorrow in the heart of the dear widow and the little children. The dear little boy wept as if his heart would break, that his papa was gone never more to return. Oh! may God bless the fatherless children every-where, for their lot is a sad one in this cold and uncharitable world.

On Tuesday, we closed our series of meetings at Pleasant Ridge, and had another enjoyable season together, laboring for the salvation of sinners. Eleven more confessed Christ, and were initiated into the church by the holy ordinance of Christian baptism. One dear brother was restored, making in all thirty-six accessions to the church during this ten days' special effort. Our dear brethren delivered their farewell discourse ere we repaired to the waterside; and never was I so impressed with the solemn duties obligatory upon the minister. Brother Brown made us feel of a truth, that to sow the seed was one thing, and to cultivate the tender plant quite another. Oh, may God give us much patience, love, and wisdom, that his flock may be reared up and be strong in the Lord. To the dear converts, may you ever live close at the foot of the cross, and be prayerful, and show to all that you have been with Jesus and will live for him alone. Never had I seen such impressive scenes, all labored hard for the salvation of souls, and many rejoiced and glorified God for his saving grace. Fathers and mothers, neighbors and children, wept and prayed for the conversion of each other. Shouts of "glory be to God," rent the air as the dear souls came from the watery grave, and sinners were made to tremble. I believe many more are near the kingdom, and I pray God they will come soon. The little colony of six members in that part of our district, is swelled to the number of forty-seven since last Fall, which places the number of the Eagle Creek congregation at 218 members.

In conclusion, would say to my fellow-members of this district, let us give God all the glory for his goodness, mercy, and success in the glorious cause. Let us all deny ourselves of every thing that is unholy, and live humbly and faithfully to our trust a few more days, and then we can go from labor to reward.

Dunkirk, Ohio, March 13th, 1879.

From Walla Walla, Washington Ty.

Dear Brethren:—

I THINK this a good country, and reasonably healthy. The Winter, so far, has been more severe than I expected it to be, yet it has been nothing to compare with Illinois. The snow has been nearly a foot deep in the valley, while on the mountains it has been from one to ten feet deep, most of the time.

If there were a church here, I think I could locate and be satisfied, but there is no church and only a few Brethren, and they are scattered throughout the country. Brother David Brower held four meetings in this vicinity while on his return from the upper country.

People here are very friendly and hospitable to strangers, much more so than in the States. We will probably locate somewhere near Brother Browers, if the country suits, if not, we calculate settling somewhere in Western Oregon. This is a rich, fertile country, producing nearly all kinds of grain and vegetables in great quantities and of excellent quality. Wheat and barley are the staples. Potatoes and garden products grow abundantly on nearly all soil. Fruit trees do not thrive well in all localities, but bear well where they grow. The greatest drawback here is the scarcity of water during the dry season. Many fine tracts of land of rich soil are much depreciated in value from the fact that water cannot be found upon them. These lands are often farmed, but are very expensive, as water has to be hauled from the nearest spring or stream. In course of time when the country becomes better settled, more extensive efforts will be made to procure water in greater abundance.

Taking the age and geographical position of this country into consideration, we think it compares favorably in progress, religion and morals with any new country in the great West. What is needed here is not so much more and better machinery, and better methods of executing a larger amount of labor in less time, or more capital, or enterprising men, in farming and manufacturing—but live, zealous laborers in the moral vineyard: for truly the harvest is great and the laborers are few. We concur in the statements made by Brother Brower, that the work is too great for the men employed, and while you have six or seven ministering brethren at one meeting, we do not have one minister, where there should be six or twelve meetings, verily the harvest is ripe. Oh, who will come and help us to gather the golden sheaves home? Many religious sects are laboring to build up their respective churches, and some have large congregations for a new country. There is a splendid opening here. All that is needed is an earnest, energetic minister to open up large and fertile fields, which could in a short time, be made to yield abundantly, fruits ample recompense for earnest labor. But, morally speaking, the timber is firm and unyielding, strong and deeply rooted in the forbidden soil of skepticism, and stoutly resists all intrusions of the pruning-knife, unless wielded by a firm and experienced hand. The country has, from the first, been filled with ignorant dolts, under the guise of ministers of the Gospel, who have stolen the livery of heaven, in which to serve the Devil. Their faithlessness and inconsistencies only pampered infidelity. We want workmen worthy of the name of the great Master for whom they labor—men who are worthy examples of sincerity, piety and humility, armed with the equipage of God, valiant soldiers of the cross, bolting for a heavenly inheritance, pointing out the straight and narrow way to perishing souls.

Brief Notes.

BY JOHN ZUCK.

NUMBER II.

WE last left you with thoughts upon the "Christian soldier," and now we wish to say to the readers of the BRETHREN AT WORK, that the Brethren of Cedar Co., Iowa, in these days of religious discussions, have had a discussion, too. Our little band of Christian soldiers were enjoying the camp of Brother B. F. Miller, when an Adventist suddenly made his advent in our camp. He, Jesse Dorcas, a very talkative friend, who seems to be candid in his convictions, opened his Sabbath battery at once. Few were the preliminaries. Subject, Sabbath. Disputants, M. M. Eshelman and Jesse Dorcas. Moderator, B. F. Miller. Time, five minutes each. Although this discussion lasted all afternoon, we all enjoyed it very much; and we feel that the truth was well sustained by Brother Eshelman.

Brother Eshelman met with us again in the evening, when the subject of "Prayer" was presented and treated upon. Points brought to our notice were,

I. Asking—God says ask.

II. Does God answer prayer?—This was beautifully shown in the affirmative, by calling attention to Bible circumstances, such as,

1. Moses praying for Israel.
2. Elijah's prayer.
3. Hez.—15 years granted unto him.
4. Paul on the sea—prayed.
5. Peter in prison—the brethren prayed.

With these, and many illusions to our own experience, our hearts were greatly refreshed, to look up to the Lord who does answer prayer—when asked in faith believing.

III. How does God answer prayer?

1. In his own way—miraculously.
2. Inconsistencies.—Here were noticed the asking amiss process, which the Scriptures treat upon.

IV. Object in prayer, with a hearty appeal to; as,

1. The saint to pray without ceasing.
2. The sinner to call on the Lord while he is near.

In concluding this short essay, or skeleton sermon, which is very greatly abridged, I cannot refrain from presenting still a few lines of thought. Brethren and sisters, prayer does not mean a mere form of words repeated, as prayers as lip service, but prayer that the Lord delights to hear, is of a broken heart and of a contrite spirit,—a sensitive heart-felt and soul-penetrating prayer. But, I fear that it is a lamentable fact, that there are hundreds and thousands of professing Christians in the world who are not seen or heard recognizing the Lord in prayer. O may the Sun of righteousness shine so sweetly into our hearts that it may be one of the most pleasant and delightful services of our lives to tender thanks and praise to the Lord in prayer.

From the California Church.

Dear Brethren:—

ELDER George Wolfe and I just returned from Calaveras county, where we held a few meetings. Five dear ones (among them four Campbellites) came out on the Lord's side, agreeing to take the New Testament—nothing more, nothing less—as their rule of faith and practice. Their baptism was witnessed by a large concourse of people, who had never seen baptism administered as instituted by the Lord Jesus. The attention was good, both at baptism and at the Love-feast which we held in the evening. Before we left, a church was organized. The church was named the "Chaparral Church of the Brethren," consisting of ten members. There is a good prospect of building up a large church there.

Yours in love,

Dear Brethren:—

ENCLOSED with these lines, you will find a letter written by a relative of mine, at my request, stating nothing but facts of this western part of Oregon, Willamette Valley. You have some knowledge, already, of our country, for the Brethren have not forgotten to mention the advantages that Oregon possesses over all other States. While we ask for emigrants to come and try this coast, we also implore the Brethren to be active in heeding the urgent requests that have fallen upon our ears in regard to our situation in the far West. The territory that our elder travels over, to fill the calls in the ministry, is more than he can do justice to, by too much resting on him. He must have help if he can ever prosper. Ministering brethren who are contemplating to move, by all means should come here and be in a mild climate, as well as work for the upbuilding of our Redeemer's kingdom on earth, and especially in this Western State. Elder Brower's letter ought to be sufficient to bring help to us. Those Brethren who are so eager for the salvation of souls, ought to heed the call. Many good results will be accomplished if we only have those to speak who are able to defend the truth. Here are but a few scattered members, only babes in Christ, and only can hear a gospel sermon once in two months. Think of it. We are anxious to hear and learn, but how can we when we have no teacher?

JENNIE A. STEPHENS.

From Mrs. Elizabeth Magraw.

I HAVE never been so hungry for spiritual food as I now am. I have only seen one brother and one sister in three years. My door is open to any of the Brethren, and any time they will have meeting, we can have it either in my house or in a church not more than a mile distant.

I was sorry Brother Hillery passed so close by us and did not call; but he did not know how or where to find us, and so could do no better than pass on.

Any one going to Salem, Kansas, by making inquiry, can find us. We live five miles from there. Also ten miles from Red Cloud, Nebraska, a railroad town.

SINCE Brethren Daniel Miller and Martin Meyers left us, we have the following sad news (deaths) to report:—

Brother Bazel Higginbottom has passed away. Aged 62 years and 4 months. Also, grandson of Sister Lovina Mulendore. Aged 10 days. Also, Brother Vanocker. Aged 87 years. Also, wife of Brother George Turner. Aged 37 years, 1 month and 19 days. Also, Charles Bowman. Aged 1 year and 1 month.

Funeral services were conducted by Brother Caleb Fogle, from Rev. 13: 14 and Luke 15: 16.

Dear Brethren:—

THERE are no Brethren here of which we know, and we have been here for about two years. We have not seen a brother since we have been here, except two from Indiana. Brother John Snowberger preached at my house over one year ago. Brethren, could not some of you come and preach for us? The pure word of God has not been declared in this part of Ill. It is desired to have the Brethren preach here. Brethren, we pray God to send some one to us.

Contemplated Oregon Colony—By-Laws Continued.

CHAPTER II.

SECTION 1. Any person or persons belonging to this Colony, shall not go to law with another under any consideration, but all difficulties shall be settled by the Advisory Council and Colony. Be it further remembered that six per cent. interest be paid on all money paid to the Treasurer, except that which is necessary to take the Colony through to the place of destination; and all money loaned out of the treasury shall draw six per cent. interest.

Sec. 2. Any person or persons keeping in his possession any intoxicating liquors and using them himself, or in any way disposing of them to any, as a beverage, shall be dealt with according to Sec. 3. Chap. 2 of the by-laws of said Colony.

Sec. 3. Any person or persons of the Cornell Joint Stock Colony, violating any and all of the by-laws or constitution of said Colony, such a person or persons shall be admonished by the Advisory Council to do so no more, and if they hear them, then that will suffice, but if they refuse to hear them, then they shall tell it to the Colony, and if they hear the Colony, then they are foreign, but if they do not hear the Colony, then they lose all their interests financially, and are unto the colony as strangers.

Sec. 4. Each and every officer of said Colony shall within five days after his resignation or removal or the expiration of his term of office, deliver up to his successor all the papers, books, and documents, or other property belonging to the Colony, and pertaining to his office; and any officer refusing to deliver up the same after a legal demand is made by the person entitled to the custody thereof.

Sec. 5. Each and every person is requested to pay fifty cents for each and every member of his family of the age of eight years and over, to become a member of said Colony.

Sec. 5 Every member is required to pay seventy-five dollars to take them through to the place of destination and to board them one year, and to pay committee expenses, and to make the necessary preparations, but should that amount prove too small or too large after a close investigation, then it will be made lower.

Sec. 7. Be it further resolved that stock of this Colony shall be divided into shares, each share to be one hundred dollars, so that a man can buy as many shares as he likes.

Sec. 8. The Colony shall stand for five years after they get to their place of destination, at which time there will be a general settlement of the treasury and other matters pertaining to the Colony, and all moneys belonging to individuals be paid back to the amount that honestly belongs to them.

Sec. 9. And be it remembered that all the property of all persons of said Colony, both real and personal, is held as security for all contracts made by the Colony.

Sec. 10. Resolved that one half of the money due from each member be paid into the treasury by the time the committee starts to locate the Colony and the balance to be paid within one month of the time of the starting Colony.

11. Whosoever shall, within said colony, be guilty of violating the Sabbath day unnecessarily, shall be dealt with according to Chap. 2, Sec. 3.

Sec. 12. Whosoever shall, within said Colony, assault or strike another or shall be guilty calculating to provoke a breach of the peace, shall be dealt with according to Chap. 2, Sec. 3.

Sec. 13. Whosoever shall, in said Colony, be guilty of overloading or overdoing or cruelly treating any dumb brute, shall be dealt with according to Chap. 2, Sec. 3.

Sec. 14. Whosoever shall be guilty of any immoral conduct, crime or dishonest deed not mentioned in any of the constitution or by-laws of said Colony, shall be dealt with according to Chap. 2, Sec. 3.

Sec. 15. Be it resolved that this Colony will not start to its destination without the number of fifty families belonging to it; and all moneys to be refunded in case of a failure, except expenses.

From Loraine, Adams Co., Ill.

BROTHER John Metzger came to our place Friday evening, February 21st, commenced a series of meetings in Washington schoolhouse, near Loraine, and preached the cross of Jesus in his usual feeling way. Interest grew intensely warm, many tears were shed when the old story of Jesus was portrayed. He remained with us about fourteen days, during which time he preached every night, and Sundays at 11 A. M. Through the day time he visited many warm friends. On Friday, the 28th, Elder David Wolf and a number of others joined us in our work; among whom was Brother John Wolf and wife. They remained over Sunday, when all started for home, except Brother D. Wolf and D. F. Britt, who remained with us until our meetings closed. We then went to Liberty, Adams county, and held a council meeting March 8th. Brother Metzger preached three sermons, and seemed to exhibit all the power and zeal of his younger days. We were requested to take Brother Metzger to the house of an old sister who is now in her ninety-third year, and has been a member of the Brethren's Church for seventy-six years. She has been sick, but is now able to sit on the side of her bed and eat her meals. She was engaged in the same when we went in. After she was done we had the pleasure to sit and hear her and Brother Metzger tell the good story of Jesus' love, and call back many of the gone-by days of yore. The time drawing near in which we must again part, the old sister requested him to kneel once more in prayer again, as she could not expect to go to hear him preach again; there being ten or eleven members and five or six friends present, we were all gathered in the room, and at the old sister's request, the sixth chapter of Ephesians was read, and the good old hymn "Am I a soldier of the cross?" was sung; after which Brother Metzger delivered, perhaps, one of the ablest and most effectual prayers of his life. A few moments more and we had taken the parting hand probably for the last time in this life, and were on our way for Camp Point, being led by Sister Barbara Allen and friend David, her husband, with whom we stayed till morning, when the old veteran of the cross started for home. Hope he has reached in safety, and enjoying its rich hospitalities.

H. W. Strickler.

To My Dear Friend Tillie Cessford.

Clarence, Iowa.

PEACE be unto you and grace from God the Father and Jesus Christ, through whom we have access to a throne of grace, and for which we are very thankful to the Lord. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." For this those of us who have become willing to give our hearts to Jesus, can rejoice. He is our strength and shield in the day of trouble. But when we must bear the cross, or temptations come, we so often become discouraged. But when we think what the Savior has done for us, what he bore in the garden, and suffered on the cross, we can sink in his arms and say "my God, thy will be done." We know he doeth all things well.

Dear Tillie, the evening you gave Brother Eshelman good-bye after he had labored with us and taught us the ways of the Lord, and your tender, loving heart was sad, thinking that perhaps that would be the last farewell that he could ever give you in this world—it made me think of that glorious time, when Jesus shall call us home. Oh if we are only ready then to meet our Father in his kingdom! But if we are not prepared for that time, what a separation there will be! The night you gave Brother Eshelman good-bye, I wept for you. The Bible teaches us to "weep with those who weep."

I thought I would write to you, as we are good friends, and ask your opinion about our faith and doctrine. Remember we try to obey all the commandments of God. You know we are commanded to baptize, to wash one another's feet, to perpetuate the Lord's Supper, etc. These we do as the Bible teaches we should. Jesus said if you know these sayings of mine and do them not, ye are none of mine. Believe, repent and be baptized for the remission of your sins.

Now, I hope, dear Tillie, this may be acceptable. We all love you dearly, and we should like to see you come to Jesus and devote the prime of your life to his cause. May God speed you in hope of eternal rest, is the prayer of your unworthy friend, Minnie E. Miller.

From Samuel Leckron.

Dear Brethren:—

OFTEN has my soul rejoiced to hear rich admonitions of our Brethren who are standing on the walls of Zion, declaring the simple trumpet of the gospel to a ruined world.

We think it would be better if we had more preaching here in this, an old neighborhood. We have many young people here who are not coming to Christ. We think it is for want of more preaching, or parents talking to their children at home. These little, tender branches of ours, we have entirely under our own control, and they are easy to teach while young.

We stand in need of some able brother to help us in the ministry. The church district here is large and the ministry is weak; two of us are young in the work, and our elder is quite old.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

BINKER. In the Astoria Church, near Table Grove, Fulton Co., Ill., Feb. 24th, of typhoid pneumonia, Brother Joseph Binker, aged 52 years, 8 months and 23 days.

Deceased was a minister in the church for nearly twenty years, and leaves a wife and three sons to mourn their loss. Funeral services conducted by the writer, from Gen. 3, 19, in connection with John 11: 25, 26.

BINKER.—In the same church, March 6th, of pneumonia, Brother Andrew Binker, the only surviving brother of Joseph Binker, aged 49 years, 1 month and 9 days.

He leaves but a lonely wife to mourn her loss having raised no children. Funeral services by the writer, from 2 Cor. 5: 1-4. The above brothers were sons of Joseph and Elizabeth Binker. Were born in Hampshire Co., Va., and at the age of 7 and 10 respectively, the brothers with their parents moved to Belmont Co., Ohio, and in the year 1850 removed to Fulton Co., Ill., where they and their parents now quietly sleep together. Joseph was married to Sarah J. Smith and Andrew was married to Mary C. Yeast. The bereaved sisters were both quite fortunate in receiving a visit from their yet-surviving mothers in the West a short time before their afflictions, who were with them through their troubles, and will remain with them yet for a season. A. G. Black.

BRANNON.—In Cherokee county, Iowa February 25th, James Brannon, aged about 80 years. Funeral services by the writer, from South waterloo, Iowa, assisted by Brother John Early, from Isaiah 40: 7, 8.

Wm. Ikenberry.

HOFFMAN.—In the Back Run Church, Millersburg, Ind., March 2nd, 1879, Brother Abraham Hoffman, aged 48 years, 6 months and 22 days. Funeral services by David Hostetler, I. L. Berkey and Levi Weaver, from Rev. 14: 13.

Brother Hoffman leaves a wife and two children to mourn their loss, but we trust this loss is his great gain, as he was a faithful brother in the church.

S. Buskett.

ZEIGLER.—In Swan Creek Church, Fulton Co., Ohio, Jan. 9th, 1879, Brother Silas Zeigler, aged 49 years, 7 months and 2 days.

The subject of the above notice was a worthy deacon in the church, ever willing to perform his duty. He was taken quite suddenly. He left home in the morning to haul a load of brick for our contemplated church. He succeeded in getting the brick as far as the writer's house, and was taken sick with heart disease about ten o'clock, and died the same evening. He leaves a wife, a sister, and a large family of children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by R. H. Berkebile and others, to a large concourse of people. Aaron Berkebile.

STAHL.—Near Carey, Wyandot county, Ohio, February 7th, 1879, Brother Jackson Stahl, aged 18 years, 9 months and 17 days.

He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn their loss. Funeral preached by Brother J. P. Ebersole, from John 11 25. Disease consumption. Brother Stahl lived without making any Christian profession till four weeks before he died he saw the one thing needful was neglected. The ice was cut, and he was baptized, and when he came out he felt better. S. W. Lisnowle.

MYRES.—In the Dallas Center Church, Dallas county, Iowa, Feb. 22nd, 1879, Sister Lizzie A. Myres, wife of Wm. H. Myres aged 27 years and 26 days.

Funeral services by Elder M. Sissler. Subject Matt. 21 11. Hymns 702, 611 618. The deceased was a daughter of old Brother Henry Flory. She joined the church April 21st, 1878. Her disease was consumption. Although weakly and distressed at times with a severe cough, we did not think the end so nigh; but on the morning of the day of her death, she took suddenly quite ill, and at once realized her condition. She conversed freely with her husband on the subject of death and of their earthly parting. When the day began to draw to a close, she found she was going home, she exclaimed, "Oh Lord, receive my poor soul! O yes, I am going home! I feel the chill coming over me. Oh Lord, come quickly and wait me on—I am going to see my father who has gone before. Oh, now, I am passing through the chilly waters and, oh, I see that heavenly light. Oh Lord, receive me home." She, like her aged father, was highly esteemed by all who knew her, as the large concourse of people on the funeral occasion fully demonstrated.

A. C. Bahnaker.

PRICE. In the Coventry Church, Pennsylvania, March 21st, 1879, our esteemed Brother, Elder John R. Price, aged 68 years, 10 months and 25 days.

Brother John died very suddenly of hemorrhage. He was very sick during the Winter, but had recovered so as to attend to his duties in the church, also his secular duties. Brother Price had promised to officiate at the funeral of an aged sister on the day of his death, but death claimed him as his, and was taken from labor to reward. His funeral was attended by many sorrowing friends who will deeply feel his loss. He leaves a wife and five surviving children, two sons and three daughters. May the bereaved sister be consoled in the prospects of a happy reunion after a few more days of toil. And the dear children, may they ever remember that they have a father in glory, and by the grace of God, prepare to meet him. Funeral services by Brother J. P. Hetric, from Job 17: 16, "I would not live always," assisted by the brethren. John Y Eisenberg.

SNYDER.—In the Upper Deer Creek Church, Cass county, Ind., March 9th, 1879, Franklin L. Snyder, son of Brother William and sister Catharine Snyder, aged 26 years, 2 months and 10 days.

He was respected by all those that knew him, and his unexpected death has cast a gloom over those that associated with him. He, like many others, put off that one thing most needful. He was the third one of the family that has changed time for eternity. Eleven children are yet living; only two have united with the church. May this solemn occasion be a timely warning to those that have not as yet thought upon their ways and turned their feet unto the testimony of the Lord. Funeral improved by Joel Brower and the writer, from Matt. 24: 44. Daniel Leckron.

TEEPLES.—In Turkey Creek District, Kosciusko Co., Ind., March 13th, Sister Peggy M. Teeples, aged 73 years, 1 months and 8 days. Funeral services by the writer, from Rev. 14: 12: 13.

J. H. Miller.

BOCK.—In the Dry Creek church, Linn county, Iowa, March 16th, 1879, of scarlet fever, Martha Rebecca, youngest daughter of Brother Samuel and Sister Catharine Bock, aged 3 years, 9 months and 2 days. Funeral services by the brethren, from Matt. 18: 3. Jacob Bock.

SUNNYFRANK.—In the Grundy Church, Grundy county, Iowa, March 15th, 1879, Brother John Sunnyfrank, aged 71 years and 13 days.

Brother Sunnyfrank has long lived in the service of his Master, and before his departure he called for the elders, and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. He leaves six children, two of which are members of the church. Funeral services by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 13, 14. H. P. Strickler.

NEHER.—Sister Mary Anna Neher, wife of Brother J. P. Neher, March 3rd, 1879, aged 71 years and 6 months. She was born in Shenandoah Co., Virginia, October 3rd, 1879. Her maiden name was Sager.

J. P. Sturn

Primitive Christian, please copy.

BEELER.—In North Manchester congregation, Wabash county, Indiana, December 29th, 1878, Sister Sarah Beeler, wife of Brother Arthur Beeler and daughter of Brother Solomon Henricks, aged 31 years, 2 months and 26 days. Funeral services by Brother David Neff and Jacob Metzger, to a large and attentive congregation. Samuel Leckron.

Primitive Christian, please copy.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—Brethren (or Tunker) Churches possess the Bible Characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN, Affirms.
D. B. RAY, Denies.

J. W. STEIN'S 12th AFFIRMATIVE.

I ASK my friend if a trembling penitent is properly a "child of the devil" before he is pardoned? Will he answer? His scripture references say nothing about pardon before baptism.

I hope he will furnish us the historical evidence that the ancient Novatians, Waldenses, etc., were not trine immersionists, had no "love-feasts," feet-washing, &c.

The Brethren aim to baptize none but "true believers," and hold that the church of Christ should be composed of none but "real saints," as well as the Waldenses. What has that to do with baptism for the remission of sins? That we confound the work of the Holy Spirit with the external rite of baptism, or make any christian ordinance or duty meritorious, is untrue.

He insinuates that my historical proofs of the peculiar doctrines and practices of the Novatians, Waldenses, etc., are "streams of slander." If so, his own denominational historians must be a very bad set of men, for I have mainly relied upon them and their authorities, for my testimony.

I am sorry my friend becomes so much excited, and so disregards our rules of debate, as to impugn my motives and accuse me of falsehood because I asked him about "christian ordinances," and why he did not wash the saint's feet. It is my privilege to ask questions, and if I am uninformed or mistaken I am willing to be corrected. I did not think he washed his brethren's feet, because I know the people generally, with whom he holds fellowship, do not do so, unless they changed very materially from what they were when I knew them.

The Brethren get their practice of washing one another's feet, as a lesson of humility, from the New Testament—from Christ. John 13. He gets his from the old Bible, from ancient custom. That's the difference. I ask him to give us his scripture for only two "church ordinances"?

He still seems concerned about the brethren and sisters not exchanging the kiss. He will find our authority for not doing so, in the same scripture that confines him, in "feet-washing," to his own sex.

Because with us the parts of the body or church are subject to the whole, my friend calls it an "unscriptural church government." We call for the scripture. The members of Christ's body, like those of the human body, are mutually dependent and "every one members one of another." Rom. 12: 5. "There is one body." Eph. 4: 4. Its members should be "perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." 1 Cor. 1: 10. They are "all" to "be subject one to another." 1 Pet. 5: 5.

That our church government is a "centralized hierarchy," we emphatically deny. Our church business is transacted by the voice of the membership, and our general councils are delegated and made up by the members (the people) simply as advisory and co-operative. When our general council was asked the question, "Does Annual Council make laws, or give advice only, in cases where it has no direct gospel on the subject?" it answered, "It gives advice only." Minutes of Annual Council for 1865, Art. 34.

Second reason under 5th characteristic continued. My friend thinks this is like the prayer of the Pharisee. We do not claim that our brethren are naturally better than other men. We "have no confidence in the flesh," but we maintain that they accept and exercise by the help of the Lord the graces and virtues alluded to. True, we often fall short of duty, but not because we do not desire and labor to perform it. And yet, after we have done what is commanded us we are "unprofitable servants."

So far, my friend has utterly refused to respond to the various arguments I have drawn from the christian scriptures to show that christians may not fight with carnal weapons. I am sorry I have no respondent. He thinks christians may fight and kill each other as citizens of civil governments. When Christ forbids violence and retaliation, he makes no more exception, or reservation in favor of political quarrels and wars than when he forbids robbery, theft, and adultery. His laws are absolute, and he will judge the disobedient. Christians are "subject to" civil government, but are not "subjects of" its authority, but of a higher government, which elevates their lives above the censures and punishment of civil justice. Instead of being subjects of the governments of the nations, they are but sojourners in them, and will be their judges at the close of this dispensation, in the resurrection. See 1 Cor. 6: 1–3; Psa 49: 4; Dan. 7: 22; Matt. 19: 28; Luke 22: 29, 30; Rev. 2: 26; 3: 21; 20: 4.

"Evil doers" do not suffer as christians. After Paul states our duty to civil authorities (Rom. 13: 1–8), he rehearses a portion of the decalogue in which "Thou shalt not kill" (v. 9) is prominent. Peter also states our duty to civil functionaries. 1 Pet. 11: 13–17. The "powers" referred to are not military, but civil authorities, as "kings," "governors," &c., and the "sword" spoken of is the sword of civil justice, in the hands, not of those who are "not of this world" but of the subjects of the governments, intended for the "punishment of evil doers and the praise of them that do well."

War, instead of inflicting the penalties of civil justice, usually usurps and subverts justice and subserves the purposes of human wrath, ambition, cruelty, and revenge, often resulting in the praise of them that do evil and the suffering of them who do well. Often the monster in vice and crime is extolled to the heavens, his palace adorned with the stolen spoils of patient labor, and his coffers filled with plundered treasures, while the inoffensive son of honest toil is shot down like a beast, his property stolen, his family abused, and his little orphans exposed to the merciless pinchings of unjust poverty.

That the powers referred to as ordained of God, are limited to all of a certain class of authorities only, appears in that a looser interpretation would invalidate its own testimony by proving too much, because Satan himself is "the prince of the power of the air," "the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience," and such an inference would not only forbid us to resist the devil, which we are commanded to do, Jas. 4: 7, but on the assumption that all the demoniacal powers, as well as the wicked powers of this world, are among "the powers that be" and "ordained of God," (for God permits them) would bring us under obligations to patronize and sustain all, and since "every ordinance of man" with the same loose method of interpretation would include every human religious invention, tending to subvert the ordinances of Christ, therefore, instead of contending "earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" and of "keeping the ordinances as they were delivered," we would be under obligations to "teach for doctrines the commandments of men" and to "render the commandments of God of none effect" by human "traditions."

The dues to be rendered are not war and violence, but "tribute" "custom," "fear," and "honor;" immediately after which we are admonished on the duty of love and reminded of the law which says, "Thou shalt not kill." All this would constitute a strange medley indeed if we were commanded to obey orders to commit murder and do violence. Even civil functionaries may exercise authority not conferred nor approved by God, when instead of exacting "good order, tribute, custom, fear, honor," &c., when due, they overleap the bounds of right and justice, and, contrary to heaven's authority, command the servants of God to violate divine commands.

Christ warned his disciples of having to appear before such authorities, and charged them to speak only what the Holy Spirit should teach, Luke 12: 11. When Peter and John were imprisoned and brought before the council and commanded by the rulers not to speak at all in the name of Jesus, Acts 4: 18, did they abandon their work as they would have been compelled to do according to my friend's interpretation of our duties to civil authority? Their firm reply was, "whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." Acts 4: 19. On another occasion, when the apostles were beaten by the civil authorities and commanded to speak no more in the name of Jesus, they only rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer for his sake; and daily in the temple and every house, ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ. Acts 5: 40–42. The Christian must obey civil authorities unless they command him to disobey Christ, thus proving that they are usurping and abusing power never conferred upon them by God, and then if permitted to suffer at their hands, like his Master, when delivered by Pilate even to be crucified, he should bear it patiently, be "subject to" them still, and "commit himself unto him who judgeth righteously."

Origen did not say that the Christians prayed for the success of the kings' wars. We "pray for kings and rulers and all that are in authority," not for them to wage war, but that we may "lead quiet and peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty."

ON THE WAY TO PALESTINE.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement.]

[Mr. McGarvey's second letter did not reach us in time for insertion this week. The following properly precedes it.]

A FIRE DRILL AT SEA.

I CANNOT resist the temptation to give to the readers of the Standard a description of a peculiar kind of dress parade which I witnessed to day, March 14, on the steamer Pennsylvania.

Let me remark, by way of introduction, that our ship has ten life-boats—five on each side of the deck. They are each about eighteen feet long, five feet wide and three feet deep. Each is kept constantly supplied with a keg of fresh water, lashed in its place securely; with a water-tight compartment always full of fresh sea-crackers; and with a full supply of oars ready for use. They each rest on an iron frame-work above the balustrade at the edge of the deck, and can be readily thrown outward and downward until they hang just outside the balustrade and even with its top rail, ready for passengers and crew to step into them and be lowered in an instant into the water. Underneath each of these boats lies a separate apparatus called the life-raft. It consists of two large logs, if you name them by their appearance, about twelve feet long and two feet in diameter, lying four feet apart, with an open frame-work of plank, filling the space between and holding them together. The logs are not wood, but solid masses of cork. In the midst of the connecting frame-work are two water-tight compartments, one filled with bread, and the other with drinking-water. Capt. Harris had some of them opened for us, and gave us some of the bread to try, which we found good and sound. On these rafts, when in use, the passenger is expected to sit or lie as best he can, and it seems quite certain that as long as he does either he cannot sink in any storm. They are lashed to the deck, to be cut loose when the ship is about to sink, or to be thrown overboard if desirable.

Now for the fire-drill. At half past four this afternoon the bells rang out a fearful fire alarm. The passengers were in the secret, and on deck to witness the scene. The instant the bell sounded there began to pour forth from the officers' and seaman's gang-ways four streams of men, running with all their might. As they rushed forth each man took his station, which he knew from previous drills and personal instruction. Within less than a minute, ninety men, four times as many as we had seen before, were on deck, and distributed, a group at each boat, a group at each of the fire-hoses, a group with axes on their shoulders ready to cut anything at word of command, the Captain on his bridge amid ships, and an officer with a speaking trumpet at each end of the ship, facing him. Before we had time to comprehend all these movements—sooner than a common steam fire-engine could get out of its engine house—four large streams of water were playing, each from a hose long enough to reach any part of the ship. In another moment or two the boats began to drop to the gunwale, and we were almost tempted to complete the performance by jumping into them. In the meantime the stewardess was at her post at the head of the saloon, ready to stop and calm any frightened ladies, while the stewards and cabin-boys were at the foot of the gangways to prevent any passengers from passing out until the word should be given.

THE HEAVENLY RAILROAD SONG.

THE road to heaven by Christ was made,
With gospel truth the rails were laid,
From earth to heaven the road extends,
Through life eternal, there it ends.

God's love's the fire, the truth, the steam,
That drives the engine and the beam;
All you that would to glory ride,
Must come to Christ, in him confide.

Repentance is the station then,
Where passengers are taken in;
No fare then is for them to pay,
For Christ himself, he is the way.

Come, then, poor sinner, now's your time,
On any station on the line,
If you repent and turn from sin,
The car will stop and take you in.

The car is ready, soon will go,
Will you go to heaven, or no?
You will draw your wages by the way,
And to the end the best of pay.

We have on board a holy band,
They're all bound for Canaan's land,
For Canaan's land appears in view,
Where all the saints go dressed anew.

The car runs both night and day,
Nor will it tire by the way,
Until it lands in heaven above,
Where all the saints shall meet in love.

VOICES OF NATURE.

BY P. A. ROSS.

THE subject upon which we desire to make a few comments, is one of incomprehensible profundity. It is one that presents itself to us every day. That theme is the "Voices of Nature." How solemn, and yet how grand, are those voices! When we hear them, we are brought to the remembrance of our great Creator, the Founder of heaven and earth; and are struck with awe, and delight, at the beauty and grandeur with which we are surrounded. The most sublime "Voices of Nature" are the muttering and terrific peals of thunder, which cause the whole earth to vibrate. When we hear and see them, it seems as if God is speaking to us, through those powerful mediums, called the "Voices of Nature." And how forcibly does it remind us of his power and authority over all things, and with what reverence should we submit to his government. Nor is this all; there are thousands of ways in which we are shown his all wise power. The beautiful bodies of water which deck the footstool of our Creator and with which we are surrounded, all pertain to make up the grand pictures, as well as the realities of Nature. The mighty cataract washing down a lofty precipice, dashing itself into glorious rivulets upon its pebly bed beneath, all harmonize in the composition of the "Voices of Nature." And even the rustling of the wind as it rushes forth and rocks the forests with its mighty power, is grand, although we cannot see it, yet we immediately recognize it as an assistant in making up the unutterable grandeur of the "Voices of Nature."

Man, that creature who was made in the image of his Creator, and in subordination to the angels of heaven, is the possessor of a voice which is equally as beautiful as any "Voice of Nature," which was given to him by his Maker, and though he can govern and regulate it, yet he cannot change it to any other than that which Nature has bestowed upon him. The happy songster of the beautiful forests, which are the emblems of innocence and purity, are given to us for our pleasure, and are endowed with a beautiful voice which they readily use in giving praise to him who is their Creator as well as ours. Surely they teach us a lesson, for if they in their ignorance praise him, how much more are we, who have the glorious privilege of being recognized as his children, obligated to give thanks unto him for every blessing that we enjoy.

God grant that we may learn a lesson from the "Voices of Nature," and continually give praise unto him whom the heaven of heavens cannot contain.

"The valleys and the mountains,
The woodland and the plain,
The rivers and the fountains;
The sunshine and the rain,
The stars that shine above me,
The flowers that deck the sod,
Proclaim aloud the glory of my God.

And shall the "Voice of Nature,"
Thus glorify its King;
And man, the noble creature,
No grateful tribute bring?
Shall mercy strew his pathway,
And all his senses please,
And man withhold the Sacrifice of praise?

Praises holy adoration,
Praises to the God above,
Passes through the wide creation,
Sound aloud his greatness and his love.

FEET-WASHING.

BY S. S. HAMMER.

A CORRESPONDENT in the Evangelical Messenger, under date of October 3rd, 1878, published at Cleveland, Ohio, intimates that feet-washing, as a religious rite, is very unpopular with the young ministers of that denomination. Well, all I have to say about that point of the subject, is this: If the author had said that feet-washing was unpopular with Christ and the apostles, and the true followers of the meek and lowly One, who brought from heaven the example himself, and obeyed it and taught it, then I would have said that the author of the above assertion was sadly mistaken; but he does not say that he says the young ministers, that's something else. He further says, that through them it will gradually pass into neglect. I believe this, not only feet-washing will pass into neglect, but the whole will and testament of Jesus.

There are those who take a more hopeful view of the matter, and claim that feet-washing is the literal washing of the saint's feet, and that it is a positive ordinance of perpetual standing in the testament, the same as baptism and the Lord's Supper, prayer, communion, non-resistance, non-conformity to the world, and other duties. In support of the above, I would go to the Scriptures, and not to the views of man. It seems so strange to me, as I am not a Christian myself, but just as good as some who profess to be, and omit part of the will and testament. Such are guilty of the whole, then they just stand where I do. But what I was going to say all the law requires of us in the matter, is nothing to be compared with what Christ had to undergo for us, namely, the painful death on the cross.

Washing feet was one of the most humble services which one could render; hence the Savior gave the example, "as I have washed your feet, ye ought also wash one another's feet." Christ washed his disciples' feet. Do not attempt to say he did not. The symbolical design of the act was explained to the apostles, and explained by Christ. Now what need man do more than obey the point of doctrine given, explained and performed by Christ himself.

I believe that the disciples in that night understood the precept in a literal sense. Get rid of the gospel, take away feet-washing, then some other point; for I contend if any man have a right to take away one point, he has a right to take two, then a few more, then all, which is not much when all put together as a whole, then it will make no difference whether heli be preached hot or cold.

GOD'S WAY NOT OUR WAY.

BY REBECCA SNAVELY.

WE know from observation as well as reading in the Scriptures, many things of the goodness of God—his kindness and mercy shown toward us. Truly we have often to wonder how he can be so patient and forbearing with us, since we are so forgetful and negligent of our duty toward him. We sometimes even feel to murmur, if not audibly, in secret at him, who, of a truth, is our best friend, just because his way is not our way, and he does not always deal with us as we would like to be dealt with. We are often afflicted in various ways, and then we say, (if not aloud to ourselves), that God suffers it to be so, while we would rather not have it so, but would have our own way. Often when we are cast on a bed of painful suffering, we wonder why it is permitted to be so, and sometimes our near and dear friends are called away from us by the irresistible hand of death,—this is extremely hard for us, and we again wonder why we are thus permitted to be so terribly and deeply afflicted.

While we thus murmur in passing through these fiery trials, will we not raise our eyes beyond all terror and view God as he is? If we are sick, he gives us much comfort, as well as patience to endure it. If death visit us, he so kindly gives us strength and helps us to bear it, if we will only consent to lean on his strong arm of love and mercy. How condescending God is to be so patient and kind with us, when we are so frail, so prone to murmur and so undeserving of such love. If we are in trouble, or cast down in any way, he will bear us up as he has promised; he will meet us in the closet at all times, and there answer prayer as well as hold sweet communion with us, which is rich manna to the soul, as well as a true solace to the body.

We have sometimes, in former life, murmured that our prayers were not answered; but now we look back and view things quite different from what we then did. God sometimes answers prayer so entirely different from what we expect, that we are ready to accuse him of not answering at all, and thus accuse him of falsehood, because he has promised to give us the needed things we ask for; but, on conditions, we must have faith and ask aright.

I distinctly recall to mind of some years ago, asking faithfully and repeatedly of God to grant me a needed favor, but finally I ceased to ask its grant, but wondered why such a favor could be withheld. Now I see plainly that it was graciously bestowed upon me, but in a different manner from what I expected, that I entirely failed to realize it until years afterward. Truly, if we view God as he is, we have to exclaim, he is all love, mercy, and longsuffering to us who are often through weakness ready to murmur, simply because God's way is not our way.

Whatever affliction befall us, let us be willing to say with one of old, that it was good that I was afflicted, for then I thought upon the Lord; and whatever may be our station in life, why not be content and thankful that it is as well with us as what it is?

May God give us strength that we may grow in his love, and give us wisdom not to murmur at him and his way, for he is all love, all good, and all powerful.

WHAT IS A SOLDIER?

BY W. H. MILLER.

WHAT is a soldier? A soldier is one that is drafted, or volunteers, in defense of his country, using the carnal weapon to shed his fellow-men's blood. We should all be soldiers in the great battle against sin and Satan; but not use carnal weapons: our great Commander don't want us to be warriors, going forth to the battle of carnality, slaying with the sword and other deadly weapons, for Christ says, "all that take the sword, shall perish with the sword." Matt. 27: 52. Hence it follows that we as brethren who have professed the name of Jesus and are trying to walk in his footsteps, should, therefore regard the using of deadly weapons as direct rebellion against our great Redeemer; but there are weapons that we may use, and by using them we run in the straight and narrow way that leadeth unto God. These weapons are such as will put the enemy to flight at any time, if properly used. Instead of the carnal sword, we have "the sword of the spirit, which is sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of joint and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart, the helmet of salvation, the breastplate of righteousness." These are some of the weapons we should use. Let us, as professors of Jesus Christ, go forth and fight for him who died for us, and help in thinning the ranks of the enemy, tearing down the strong holds of Satan, and thus help to fill up the kingdom of God.

If we are brave soldiers, we will not fear the wicked nor their fiery darts; neither will we shrink from the commandments of our Captain. Let us use the word of God to defend ourselves. Ye sinners, don't rebel against God and Christ any longer, but come and enlist under the King of kings, and Lord of lords, and help us roll on the glorious work. There is no pay in rebelling against God, your reward will be damnation with the miserable inmates of hell. "Well but," says one, "if you are so opposed to war, why did God in olden times command and even assist in wars?" We will see about this matter. Under the old Mosaic dispensation when the people were so war-like, God revealed himself unto the prophets by words proceeding from his own mouth, or through his holy angels, directing his people which way to pursue to conquer the enemy, but the old dispensation not being perfect, allowing wars,—that is carnal wars between God's people and the enemy, and the coming of the Son of God, and the laying down of a perfect law, prohibiting war with one another, proves that the law of Christ, forbiding war, is perfect and cannot be made better, for that which is perfect is as good as it can be made. It was right to war one with another at the time of Joshua and the other prophets because it was commanded by God; but on account of the imperfectness of the law, the people became so wicked in trespasses and sins, that God sent his Son into this world to die for us, and establish a law that was perfect, and in this perfect law we find war forbidden; hence it is wrong to engage in it at all.

The Father knew that the law could made perfect, and the only way it could be done was by the sacrifice of his dear Son. Now, the only true soldier, the soldier of God, fighting the good fight of faith. Sinner, I invite you not to spend your time in killing your fellow-men, for the Lord will come and his reward will be with him, and he will give every man according as his work shall be. What do you think your reward shall be if you continue to rebel against God? The ways of the Devil are hard, he will have you to follow him in all his pernicious ways and at the end he will torment you in the lake of fire amid the fiendish howls of the tormented ones, gnashing of teeth and wailing of the wicked. While on the other hand, if you will cease your wicked, pernicious course you will be landed on the evergreen shore amid the shouts of the redeemed of God. Come, now, and be a true soldier of God. It is much easier, and, at the end, you will receive great gain.

In order to become a soldier in the army of the Lord, you must go to that perfect law, read the directions laid down, obey them, stand by them, live faithful to the end, and meet us in glory.

Oh, I would to God that every one could feel as the poet, and be assured of the fact that the following lines express:

"But now I am a soldier,
My Captain's gone before,
He's given me my orders,
And tells me not to fear."

Glorious thought, when we can be assured that we are soldiers in the army of the Lord. His commandments are easy, all are plain and tangible, any one who can read the Bible can understand them.

Let us all then be up and doing, for the time may not be long. "Behold the night cometh wherein no man can work." Let us work, then, while it is called to-day, for we have no promise of to-morrow. Let us all be soldiers in the ranks of Jesus Christ. The grace of God be with you all.

PALESTINE.

THE London Globe gives a summary of statistics, which show how extraordinary has been the change in the aspect both of Jerusalem and the country generally, in regard to the Jewish inhabitants during the last few years. At the beginning of the present century the porte allowed no more than 300 of the hated people to live within the city. Forty years later that restriction was removed, but another still remained, by virtue of which they were permitted only to reside in a particular quarter of the town, which was much too small for them. It is about ten years since this last regulation was abolished, and since then the progress made by the Jew in peopling their ancient capital has been extraordinary. Almost every one of the old houses as it fell vacant was bought up by them, while they have built a prodigious number of new ones in all parts of the town. Schools, hospitals, and religious associations have been started on a grand scale; and the population, which eighty years ago was, as we have said, barely 300, amounted in 1875 to no less than 13,000 in Jerusalem alone. Nor have the immigrants neglected to provide for the material improvement of the country. Besides numerous other examples which might be quoted, a "school agriculture" has been founded and endowed by a rich Jew of Venice with several thousand pounds. There is thus every chance for the country of regaining some, at least, of its old fertility.

A HOME IN HEAVEN.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

A HOME in heaven for all the blest,
Who love the Savior's promised rest,
And live in peace below;
That home is where the saints shall dwell,
And Christ who doth our sorrows quell.—
That home is free from woe.

Come brethren, sisters, friends, and all,
Let us not think the work to small
But try to gain that home;
Then when this earthly house shall fail,
And 'neath the hand of death grows pale,
We'll pass to that blest home.

There we may dwell in love and peace.
Where joy and rest do never cease,
But last forevermore;
Then we'll rejoice that we did turn,
And all of Satan's evils spurn,
To gain this heaveuly shore.

Now as this life is all the time.
We have to turn from sin and crime,
Let us improve it well;
Obey the Lord in word and deed,
For he's a friend in time of need,
He'll rescue us from hell.

Then let us cast on him our care,
Then we'll be safe from every snare,
In time, and when it's past;
He'll guide us safely to the end,
And be to us a constant friend,
And give us rest at last.

A home in heaven, oh, will it be,
My lot in that blest land to see
My Savior's glorious face?
And live with him in heaven above,
Where all is peace, and joy, and love,
Reflecting heavenly grace?

FAITH.

BY H. C. EARLY.

AS faith comprises a fundamental element in the Christian religion, it is needful that it occasionally undergo a quiet and serene discussion.

Faith, as admitted and taught, is belief, or the agreement of the understanding to the truth of any proposition. To illustrate: We may believe that all the stars are arranged into groups or systems, governed by one great, grand, inflexible law. This is scientific faith, or faith in science. Again, we may believe that Christopher Columbus was the first of the orientals to bow and kiss American soil. This is historical faith, or faith in history. Again, we may believe the Bible is a revelation from God, through Christ his Son, as the only means "whereby men must be saved," and, that an earnest pursuance of, and a full compliance with it, will ultimately save. This is Bible faith, or faith in the Bible.

We perceive that there are different faiths as there are different things, but have not as yet shown that there are different faiths about one and the same thing. To illustrate: One believes that the stars are arranged into groups or systems, governed by a harmonious law; and another believes that they are not. Here are two faiths about one and the same thing, and they both cannot be true. Again, one believes that Christopher Columbus was the first of the orientals to bow and kiss American soil, and another believes that he was not. Here are two faiths about one and the same thing, and they both cannot be true. Again, one believes that the Bible is a revelation from God, through Christ his Son, as the only means "whereby men must be saved, and, that an earnest pursuance of, and a full compliance with it, insures salvation. Another believes that it is from God, and that a limited pursuance of, and a partial compliance with it, insures salvation. Another believes that it is from God, and concludes that that belief insures salvation. Another believes that it is not a work of God at all, that it is a fiction and folly.

Here are several faiths about one and the same thing, and they cannot all be true. Some wonder why men hold so many different faiths respecting one simple volume. I would add that it is, primarily, because of prejudice, and, secondarily, because of ignorance. Nothing gets its dues when judged either from a standpoint of prejudice or ignorance.

As our salvation greatly depends on the Bible correspondence of our faith, it is a matter of much importance, for by faith are we saved. It is quite evident, that, if a man's faith is not right whether he practices it or not, it will not avail; although he may be extremely sincere and zealous. Acts 26: 9. If a man has the right faith (Bible faith) and does not practice it, it will still not avail. James 2: 17. There is such a thing as a man not practicing his faith. I take the position that, in most cases, if a man believes the Bible he will accept, and, if he accepts, he will practice it, and if he practices it, it will ultimately save.

Faith is truly a wonderful thing; it is the true foundation of the church; it is the theme upon which the world is hinged; it is the great and grand lever of the Christian. We should see if our faith is the full faith of the Bible, for upon that depends a great deal. Many persons will be saved because of their Bible faith, while many, yea, very many will be lost because of their not having Bible faith. Faith, as I repeat, is truly a wonderful thing. A general lack or weakness of Bible faith was the trouble when Christ was here; it is the trouble now and shall ever be. Weakness of faith is characteristic of the human race. This is the curse of the world and even of the church.

Those who witnessed the miraculous display of divine power would not believe. They often asked him (Christ) very impertinent questions, because of their doubt and unbelief. They knew the prophecies respecting a Deliverer, and could not fail to know that he was the fulfillment of them, yet they would not believe. They confessed that "he spake as never man spake," yet they would not believe him to be the Son of God. Only once and awhile one would be caused to exclaim with outbursts of inward conviction and emotion: "Truly this is the Son of God." Another would say: "Truly this is a righteous man." These, however, were not the common expressions of that day. Christ's ordinary phrase to those with whom he was most intimately associated, was, "O ye of little faith." How shocking it is to think that such language should be used to those intimate associates of his, not to say it was really necessary by way of reproach, and how much it exposes the indifference of human belief. Christ revealed things unto his disciples that no one could have revealed save the Son, yet they would not confidently believe. It was then, and it is now, extremely sinful to doubt and not believe.

Faith is the great lever power of the church. The stronger the lever the greater the power. Our power to accomplish, in a Christian point of view, is chiefly regulated by the degree of faith which we possess. The Bible teaches that if a man have faith as a grain of mustard seed, he can remove trees and mountains. This is both astonishing and encouraging. Astonishing to see the power of faith, and encouraging to know how little faith is required to do marvelous work; but how sadly does it expose the weakness of our faith, when we compare our power to accomplish with these facts. And even more, it is said that nothing shall be impossible, if we have faith as stated. Grand fact! Of such gigantic truth the mind is not able to partake abundantly.

The idea of a man stepping into the arena of life with the armor of faith, even as much as a grain of mustard, declaring with heavenly emotion, that, to him nothing is impossible, is a grand thought and of divine authority. The fact of one single man with faith as a grain of mustard, battling against the powerful influence of the Devil, the united forces of hell-born sin and the depravity of human nature, and always conquering, is grander than sublimity.

MUSINGS.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

WE were thinking that when we are in comfortable circumstance we are so prone not to appreciate fully many privileges and enjoyments as we should. When we are blessed with comfortable homes and surrounded with everything necessary to make this life enjoyable, we are apt to forget that time and circumstances may easily rob us of all. Sometimes we may grow cold or lukewarm with regard to the interests and welfare of the church; sometimes, when Sunday morning comes, we try to make excuses to stay at home. Perhaps we have been laboring hard all week for the things that "perisheth and that satisfieth not." Perhaps we reason thus: "O well, my horses are tired, and I am tired, too, and may be the preacher will not be there—guess I'll stay at home and rest, for it is full five miles to place of meeting."

But turn a leaf and take a look at the other side—place yourself for awhile in the attitude of those brethren and sisters who have no earthly home, who must move about from place to place, and are as the "wayfaring man," with nowhere to lay his head. Sometimes they have landlords that are clever and obliging. Again, others that neither "feareth God nor regardeth man. Behold those brethren and sisters! they must travel all day through cold or heat to reach a place where they can mingle with those of a like precious faith While looking at this side of the leaf, just think of the watching unto prayer that is necessary to keep them from despair; think how patiently they wait for the arrival of the BRETHREN AT WORK or P. C. How eagerly they peruse their contents to see, if possible, some dear and well-known name, to read of the many glorious meetings where saints and angels are made to rejoice while sinners weep. Think, when Sunday morning arrives, how willingly they would go five, or even ten miles, to meet with those they love. And, when you meet at the house of God to worship, remember them in your prayers to God; ask him to be with them in the sixth trouble, and in the seventh not to forsake them, and in every temptation also to make a way for their escape.

He who can only be serious, and he who can only be merry, is but half a man. Both halves must be developed to form a real specimen.

Whatever is done by those around you, be yourself fully determined to walk in the way approved by truth and virtue.

Experience is the pocket compass few think of consulting till they have lost their way.

The Brethren at Work.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or Drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - APRIL 10, 1879.

For the want of room a number of obituaries and correspondence are crowded out this week.

From the Gospel Preacher we learn that Brother S. H. Bashor and wife have been quite sick.

Brother Daniel M Miller, who is now in Pennsylvania, expects to return home the last of this month.

The address of Daniel Miller has been changed from Upton, Pennsylvania, to Mercersburg, same State.

Brother Samuel Murray writes that he is holding meeting in Putnam county, Indiana, with good interest.

Brother H. C. Fadely writes that Brother J. J. Lichty has been holding a series of meetings at Burr Oak, Kansas.

In last report of "Mooreow Proposition," Mary C. Miller, McDonald's, Virginia, should have been Mary A. Moorow, Bonsacks, Virginia.

Brother Lemuel Hillery, when last heard from, was at Peabody, Kansas, on his way to Carthage, Missouri, where he thinks some of locating.

Brother D. E. Brubaker, of Iowa Center, Iowa, says: "The Lord bless you. I am glad to hear that the Brethren have purchased the Mt. Morris Seminary."

J. F. Brown, agent of the Illinois Christian Association and anti secret society lecturer, gave us a call last week. Mr. Brown intends to spend some time in this county warning the people against secretism.

Brother F. P. Lehr expects to travel among and preach for the Brethren in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in the East. We suggest that the members appoint children's meetings and have the old brother preach several sermons for the little folks.

We learn that Brother John Y. Sunvely, of Hudson, Illinois, is making preparation to move to Missouri, and will likely settle about six miles south of Carthage. That is a beautiful country, and Carthage is the nicest looking town we saw in Missouri.

Brother Samuel Ulery, of Pyrmont, Indiana, writes that he has been sick ever since last November, and is not yet able to be up much. He hopes soon to recover and be able to take his place among the workmen in the Master's vineyard.

J. R. Stutzman, of Little Travers, Michigan, says: "We number about sixteen members. We come together every two or four weeks to try to encourage one another in that most holy faith. We have no speaker, but hope some one will soon come to our relief."

We have just finished another large lot of Manuscript Tabs, containing over one hundred sheets of paper, put up in a neat tab form, with directions, how to write for the press printed on the back. Every person who writes for the press should have one of these tabs. Price 20 cents.

In Brother Senger's article published in No. 13 we read in third paragraph from top, in third column, "Those two witnesses will be great posts to the beast." It should be, "pests to the beast. "In fourth column we read, "burying the dead Israelites." It should be, "burying the dead Gentiles."

Just as soon as your District Meetings are over we want some one to inform us what has been done in regard to missionary work, and such other important business as may be of interest to us. Of the missionary work we are particularly anxious to know, for we would like to see every district take hold of it.

Sister A. M. T. Miller, of Marshall Co., Iowa, writes: "I am glad to see you come out as you have on the Bible School subject. Let every one interested in Sunday-schools read Brother Eshelman's article headed, "Bible Schools." When Brother Eshelman says all teachers should be members of the church he has spoken an inspired truth."

Certainly every parent wishes to know the best methods of getting the Word, the "good seed" into the hearts of their children. Then if you desire to learn something concerning methods of teaching Bible truths, subscribe for the Children at Work. Only one cent per copy, or fifty cents a year. Do like many others, send for sample copy.

We are in receipt of a long letter from Brother J. J. Kindig, of Woodford county, Illinois, giving an account of his late visit to Virginia. He and his companion left their home the 3rd of December last, and returned the 7th of March. From the way Brother Kindig writes we would suppose that he had an enjoyable visit among the churches in Virginia. He spent considerable time preaching for the Brethren at different points, and speaks well of the several congregations he visited.

Some people ask, "Will the heathen be saved if we do not send ministers to preach to them?" It would be far wiser to ask this question: "Will we be saved if we do not do our part helping to 'preach the gospel to every creature?'" There is something for us to do in this great work. The gospel must be preached among all nations, and if the church will not do the work the Lord must get some body else to do it. It must be done. Brother and sister, are you doing your part?

Owing to the great number of letters and cards which we write, it is impossible for us to remember what we write; and when persons write to us, referring to what we had written to them we often know nothing about it: hence we find it necessary to keep a copy of all our letters and cards. But in order to find the copy of any letter, or card, we must know the date of said letter or card. Those who write to us and refer to any letter or card received from us will, therefore, be careful to give the exact date of the letter or card to which they refer.

For years it has been the custom of our publishers to keep District Meeting and Love-feast announcements standing in the paper from week to week. The plan may be a good one and possesses many advantages, but to publishers it is very inconvenient, and expensive. Standing notices require an extra amount of type and a great deal of care, and then it crowds other matter out of the paper, causing frequent delays in the appearing of other articles. We have therefore concluded to insert announcements but once, believing this will be sufficient for all practical purposes.

Brother Landon West, writing from Dayton, Ohio, under date of March 28th, says: "Brother Ridenour and ourself came here on yesterday. His aim was to go home last night and I today; but by 5 P. M. Brother D. D. Wine, in company with Harold A. Percival, the well-known ex-priest of Montreal, Canada, who, being dissatisfied with his sprinkling, and single immersion heretofore, came now to demand apostolic baptism by trine immersion. He was baptized in the Miami, near Dayton, to-day, just before noon. He is now happy. We go home on Monday. Will write again."

A school-teacher relates the following incident as observed from her window: "Two colored men were engaged in loading cotton bales. One of the men shirked. Although he went through all the motions he did not help much in the work, while the other used all his strength. Finally, he turned to his fellow-laborer, and surveying him from head to foot, said, "Sumbo, are you a Christian?" "Yes." "Then take hold and help." How aptly this question will apply to thousands who profess to be Christians, yet are doing comparatively nothing to help the cause along. They go through all the motions, but do not lift a pound. If any missionary work is to be done they can look on, and apparently sanction it. We often feel like asking them, Do you want these sinners saved? If you do, then take hold and help.

Those who wish to post themselves against secret societies should send for sample copies of the Christian Cynosure. It is devoted to the exposition of Masonry, and all grades of secret orders. Address, Ezra A. Cook & Co., Publishers Christian Cynosure, No. 13, Wabash Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

Brethren, do not forget the Danish Mission at your District Meetings. The mission has proven a success, but still needs the support of the general Brotherhood. From what we can learn, the mission is on a better footing than ever before, and bids fair to increase in interest and importance. All donations should be addressed to C. P. Rowland, Lanark, Illinois.

Brother Jesse Calvert, who is spending most of his time traveling and preaching, has ordered a large lot of pamphlets sent him. He keeps them for sale, and also takes names for the Brethren at Work. He has been quite successful in his meetings during the Winter, and hopes to continue in the good work. When last heard from he was holding meeting near Pettit, Indiana. Three had united with the church. In a former letter received too late for last issue, he says: "I am in Pleasant View Church, trying to hold meeting. Elder George W. Cripe presides; nothing of importance has transpired. The members are well, with the exception of Sister Shively, wife of Elder John Shively; she is about eighty years old, and has had several strokes of palsy and very poorly, indeed, cannot last long. Also Brother Samuel Ulery is sick with lung fever, but is now better."

The exodus of the colored people from the South to Kansas and Nebraska has begun in real earnest. Hundreds have gone, and thousands will likely follow. They are attempting to obtain homes in the West where they can live in peace and have their rights duly respected. The undertaking will be attended with many dangers and hard-ships, but it is hoped that the colored race will be able to overcome them, yet we cannot help but conclude that it is the wrong move. The South is the place for the colored people: the climate and soil are well adapted to their wants, and will afford them better facilities for making a living than the West. Improper treatment in the South, and the flattering inducements held out by land agents of the West have induced them to make this move. Among these colored people would be an excellent place to do missionary work if a man can be found who would undertake it.

THE BIBLE RING.

On another page will be found an article headed "District Meetings," by Enoch Eby, containing the following paragraphs which should be well studied by every member in the church:

That all matter, designed for Annual Conference, be accompanied with a Scriptural answer.

That every answer, whether of a local or general character, be accompanied with reference to two or more suitable passages of Scriptures as a basis for said decision.

That is Bible, and has the old gospel ring about it. I long to see the season come when brethren will go to the Annual Meeting with the Bible under one arm and the Concordance under the other. We want to settle every thing by the Bible. That is the way our ancient Brethren did. In every thing they appealed to the Word and used that as their only standard of truth, their only divinely authorized bond of union. This was also the practice of the primitive churches, and should be the practice of all churches at the present time.

Where the Bible speaks we want to act with promptness, and see that God's law is carried out to the letter. Where the Bible does not tell how a thing is to be done, but leaves the manner of doing it to the church we should learn to be subject one to another, and work together in peace and harmony, but where the Bible is as silent as the grave let us learn to be silent too. J. H. M.

TO DISTRICT MEETINGS.

As the time is here, when District Meetings will be held in various parts of the Brotherhood we take the liberty of offering a few suggestions in regard to missionary work. As a general thing all other business is attended to first and missionary work delayed till about the last thing in the afternoon, and of course hurried through and but little done. This is not the right way of treating so important a question. It should come up in the early part of the meeting and receive the due attention of all who take part in the transaction of business. It is the most important work in which a district can engage, and therefore should not be passed over lightly. Let every district make a move in the right direction, and, if possible, put one or two men in the field, and see that they are properly provided for in carrying on their work.

We think each district should form her own plan, and adopt her own method of spreading the truth. Her plan may not be just the best, but it will be found far better than none, and can be improved as the churches become more accustomed to missionary work. We think it useless to waste time attempting to draft a plan adapted to the wants of the whole Brotherhood, and thus endeavoring to secure co-operation of all the churches in the work. We have not yet reached that point, nor are we likely to short of a few years' work in the mission field. Before we can expect a general co-operation of all the churches in the spreading of the gospel we must first develop a stronger missionary spirit among our people. The only successful way of doing this is to work through the District Meetings, not by forming a separate missionary body, but by getting the District Meeting to take hold of it and urge all the churches to do likewise. Let each district form her own plans, appoint her own ministers, raise her own money and apply it as in her judgment may seem best. Some districts are doing this, and are meeting with excellent success. They do not waste time wrangling over plans for other districts, but adopt one suited to their surroundings and go to work. This is just what we want to see every district in the Brotherhood do. We want to see them go to work and do all in their power toward spreading the gospel, and building up churches. More real work and less general planning is what is needed.

Nor do we think it prudent to urge the matter on the Annual Meeting too strongly. Our people are not yet prepared to adopt a general plan, nor do the Scriptures require it. The apostolic churches did not have to call on an Annual Meeting for a plan to enable them to carry on missionary work. The Lord told them to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; this they did, and that too without wasting time on plans. Every district, and every church is divinely authorized to preach the gospel wherever it is needed, and requires no further or additional authority from any existing body. J. H. M.

THE HARSHEY MOVEMENT.

It does seem to us that some of the Brethren are becoming unnecessarily excited over what is known as the "Harshey Movement," fearing that it will cause a split in the church. Now we are satisfied that nothing serious will result from it. It will not make even a ripple in the entire State of Illinois. Nor will it materially affect either Missouri or Iowa. West of that no danger need be apprehended. How it may be east of Illinois we are not definitely informed in every particular, but are confident that the movement will not take with the generality of members. There is nothing in the movement to cause it to take, and even if it is accepted in a few localities it will not be permanent. We hope Brother Harshey will withdraw his motion and harmoniously work for the union and peace of the church. Our people are too solidly united on all the vital points of Christianity to be divided by a few side issues.

As regards the other move, in the East, we are also confident that it will not do as much damage as was at first anticipated. Its delay has weakened it, and in some respects tended to paralyze it. Had the movement been sprung when it was first inaugurated two years ago it would have done serious damages, but at present we have no great fears. There may be a little sliding off, but the main body of the church stands as solid as a rock. There is no body of people in the world more firmly united than the Brethren, and it will take something more than the whims of a few men to separate them.

At different times there have been a few shooting stars among our people. They caused a little sensation for the time, but soon vanished. Just so it may be in the future. The main body stands firm, and like a well drilled army, will move on to victory. J. H. M.

THE TRUE RING.

ABOUT one year ago the city of Mt Carroll, this county, voted in favor of license, and elected George H. Moore, mayor. Recently the mayor delivered his valedictory, parts of which I herewith submit for the consideration of Christian professors. It has the true ring, and all lovers of good order and temperance will rejoice at the correct conclusions of Mr. Moore. He says:

"During the last six months I have examined every argument of policy, expediency, or right, insisted upon by the advocates of license, and am convinced, that, like the mirage, they either fade or fly, as you approach them. * * * * * *

To sell liquors as a beverage is either right or wrong. If right, a license is an outrage upon both vendor and consumer, and a system of legal blackmail unworthy the dignity of a civilized community. If wrong, no legal authority can make it right. To make a man pay for doing right is the exercise of tyranny; to give him a license to do wrong is a fiendish crime.—On this part of the question there is no middle ground. People may shout fanaticism, cry one idea, but the truth is, the top rail of this fence is so sharp no man can sit on it, and you must jump. This question of right or wrong every man must decide for himself, and I have decided for myself."

That is the point. It is either right or wrong to sell drinks as a beverage. If right, who has authority to prohibit? If wrong, who can make it right? It is a question of right or wrong, not a question of policy, or of expediency. Looking at the matter from the standpoint of right or wrong, a true answer may be obtained. If it be wrong for a man to get drunk, all the laws in the world, all the opinions, all the thoughts of men cannot make it right. On the other hand, if it be right to become a drunkard, all the powers of men cannot make it wrong. If it be wrong to become a drunkard, no enactments of legislature can make it right. It is wrong to become a drunkard. 1 Cor. 6: 10. A drunkard cannot inherit the kingdom of God, and if he cannot inherit the kingdom of God it is wrong to get drunk, for whatever keeps a man out of the kingdom is wrong.

Again; if it be right for a man to become a drunkard, then it is right to help make men drunk. If it be right to help make a man drunk, then the more of such mockery, the better. On the other hand if it be wrong to become a drunkard, then it is wrong to help make him drunk, and every man who sells intoxicating drinks helps to make drunkards. And more; those who help make the selling of it respectable by giving it the sanction of law, are helping to make drunkards. Make the business as odious and unlawful as murdering and thieving, and the poor children and starving wives of drunkards will also taste some of the comforts of home. If I by my words and actions make it honorable and respectable to sell intoxicating drinks as a beverage, I am doing just that much towards making the drunkard's family miserable. And misery does not end here. Generations to come must suffer the evil effects of the drunken father, whom I helped to make miserable. God grant that we may be better and wiser than all that! It is wrong to do wrong, and perfectly right to do right. Give me right, even if my taxes are slightly increased. I can suffer the taxation much better than the poor drunkard can suffer the torments of the damned, and the family the pains of hunger and cold. Give me right, though I should have to beg or die.

But what shall be the remedy? Mr. Moore suggests the following:

"The State Board of Health provides for medical practitioners; a prescription from one of these would be protective. If for domestic practice, an affidavit before the city clerk might be made protective. For sacramental purposes let the certificate of the pastor be had, and without these or similar protecting ægis let every sale be by ordinance, outlawed.—Give me such legislation as this and a council to back me and I would throttle the demon and choke it out of Mount Carroll."

This suggestion, while it may not seem the best, is perhaps the most available at this time. All admit that it is wrong to help make men drunk, and right to help keep them sober. Nor is it right to set up a bar over which to deal out pop, beer, or cider under the plea that there is no harm in it. Do you see those boys walk into the drink dealer's establishment and take their cider and pop? Do you see them there during the evening, drinking and smoking? Yes, they are there, taking their first lessons in tippling, and if you will watch them a few years you will see them as men-tipplers, and, finally, drunkards. They took their first lessons in pop and cider, and the man who helped them along just to make a few dollars, did his share in making them drunkards. These drunkards in time have children, and then the great misery and degradation begin. Liquor dealer, look at the horrible picture, and ask yourself whether you are willing to meet God under such circumstances. The Lord help you to do that which will be a blessing to your fellow-man, instead of a blight and a curse.

Now, Christian professor, what have you today? Where are you? For money, oaths, rags, squalor, want, wretchedness? If it be wrong to help make men drunk, will you give your voice in favor of making tippling and drinking respectable, or will you arrange yourself on the side of good order, right, peace and prosperity? I know that some men will reason that by making the liquor traffic honorable, the tax payers will save some money; but this argument is like every other argument in favor of covetousness, and money saving that hurts the poor and causes misery. It is not a question of money, but of principle. The question is not, "Will we save a little taxation, though we indirectly help men to drink?" but, "Will we do all we can to prevent men getting strong drink?" We do all we can to keep thieves out of our treasure-places, whether it costs money or not, and we should be equally concerned to keep men from being drunkards. Look at the life of Jesus, look at the lives of the apostles, and then say, if you can, that any of them ever aided in any manner, the interests of the rum-seller. No, they never did any such thing. We have no desire to occupy any ground different from Jesus Christ and the apostles. They were opposed to drunkenness, so are we. The Bible is against it, so are we. God helping us, we shall stand by the right. God will not condemn any man for doing right, and it is right to prevent men from making other men drunkards. Let him who is for the right, for the Lord, for holy principles, stand firm. God will not forsake the nation which is sober, just and right.

THE DANISH PAPER.

SO the Brethren in Denmark have a paper. Brother Hope has started a small monthly, the first number of which is now before us. It is little, but "large oaks from small acorns sometimes grow." The paper will have to be kept up a few years by donations, but in course of time he thinks it will be sufficiently remunerative to nearly if not quite support him. At present he is using part of the tract fund, and in that way thinks he can do more good than with tracts. He is still preaching with energy, and zeal, and says prospects are better than ever before.

Now, how many of our readers want to help Brother Hope get his little paper on a good footing? How many are willing to help him? You all know that papers do good, and are capable of accomplishing vastly more, according to the amount of means employed, than preaching. You can send papers where you may not be able to send preachers. Quite a number have said they wanted to help that project along, and now they have a chance. Send your donations to this office and we will forward them to Brother Hope.

"A REMARKABLE ARGUMENT."

THE Herald of Truth, published at Elkhart, Indiana, in the March number contains a critique, under the above head, on an article entitled "Sprinkling and Pouring put to the Test," published in number five of the present volume of the BRETHREN AT WORK.

We give the entire article (in parts) with our remarks upon the same.

(1) "It is truly surprising to see into what extremes men will run, to defend and maintain pet theories and doctrines. (2) We think the most ridiculous thing of this kind that ever came under our observation, is an article on immersion from the pen of S. J. Harrison, and published in a recent number of the 'Brethren at Work.' (3) It truly pained us to read it—(4) it is shameful, if not sacrilegious, so to corrupt the teachings of the word of God. If men have a doctrine and wish to defend it, let them do it by sound argument, by scriptural evidences, not by such a collection of nonsense as we find in this article. If this doctrine of immersion is such a well established doctrine and so plainly taught in the Bible, why not bring Bible proof? Why not defend by scriptural arguments, and let it stand upon its own merits? Why must such a well established doctrine be constantly defended by such unreasonable arguments?"

(1) Does our critic think he is regarded as infallible, that he offers his bare word against what was written? (2) We wonder what "think" has to do with the question. Must what our critic thinks decide it? He don't know that it is the "most ridiculous thing," he only thinks so. (3) We expected what we wrote would "pain" those who live in rebellion to God, somewhat like the words which Peter spoke "pricked in the hearts" of several thousand on the day of Pentecost. This confession (that his heart is pained) of our critic, certainly makes his case apostolically hopeful. (4) Does our critic expect because he assumes we "corrupt the teachings of the word of God," that we do not defend our doctrine by "sound argument," but by a "collection of nonsense," that we did "not bring Bible proof," that we did not defend by "scriptural evidences," that we have defended by "unreasonable arguments,"—does he expect what he has merely assumed, will be accepted by everybody else as inevitable conclusions, established by valid arguments? The naked assertions of our critic, only show the absence of any evidence against us; for if there was evidence against us, is there any doubt as violent an opposer, as our critic is, would withhold it? It is very easy to say things are so, or are not so, but to prove they are, or are not, is quite a different thing. The faculty of saying things are so, or are not so, seems very largely developed in our critic. We commend 1 Thess. 5: 21 to him.

(5) "The writer claims that to sprinkle a man we would first be compelled to put him in a dry house until all the moisture were dried out of him, and nothing but dry flesh and bones remained. Then he could be grated fine like we grate nutmegs, and after being grated, then he could be sprinkled or scattered in small particles.' We shudder at the thought of following his remarks any further, and connecting the sacred names of the Eternal Trinity with such lightminded, trifling remarks as these. May God forgive such folly."

(5) Yes; we claim all of that. Will our critic please prove that we are mistaken? We don't want him simply to say we are, for we have serious doubts of his infallibility. What if it does make our critic "shudder,"—if it even caused him to shake to pieces, what has that to do with the question? What argument is there in his shuddering? But we are not at all surprised that he should "shudder." "Devils also believe and tremble." James 2: 19. How does it happen that "such lightminded, trifling remarks" have had such an awful influence upon our critic? Is it because things of the same kind gravitate together—have an attraction for each other? By the way, this explains to whom that little prayer, "May God forgive such folly," should be applied.

(6) "The above is given as the writer's idea of baptism by sprinkling or pouring, but he seems to forget that the sacred record says that they were baptized with water, with the Holy Ghost and with fire."

(6) We did not "forget that the sacred record says that they were baptized with water, with the Holy Ghost, and with fire; but we fear our critic has forgotten that it was "they" who were baptized, not the water, Holy Ghost, and fire. Does our critic not know that the word with is translated from the same word from which in is translated? The Greek term from which both are translated is en.

(7) "We never, in the Scriptures, have the idea presented to us that the subject in baptizing is put to or into the element, but the element is always applied to the subject."

(7) Is our critic actually so ignorant of what is contained in the Bible as to honestly believe he has told the truth? Do we not read of Philip and the eunuch that they went down both INTO the water? We presume our critic supposed they did not both go down into the water, but that Philip left the eunuch stand on the bank while he (Philip) went down to the water and got a cupfull and returned and applied it to the eunuch!

(8) "And when we sprinkle an object, we pour or sprinkle the water on the object, as when it rains we say 'it sprinkles,' i. e., the rain falls in drops on the earth. When we water our plants we sprinkle them, and when we sprinkle clothes we scatter water on them. The earth is not scattered into the rain, neither the plant or clothes into the water, but the water sprinkled on the object, so the prophet says (Ezek. 36: 25), 'Then will I sprinkle clean water on you and ye shall be clean from all your filthiness, and from all your idols will I cleanse you.'" * * *

(8) "When we sprinkle an object, we pour or sprinkle the water." See the contradiction in the language! When we sprinkle an object, we pour or sprinkle what? the object? No, no, the object, but the water. So when our critic sprinkles an object, he don't sprinkle it after all! When he sprinkles an object he sprinkles something else! When he sprinkles an object he don't sprinkle it, but sprinkles the water? Strange kind of sprinkling, indeed! Sprinkling an object by not sprinkling it! Doing a thing by not doing it! He says "when it rains we say 'it sprinkles' i. e., the rain falls in drops on the earth." Yes, sir, exactly: we say just what is done, then, too. Rain is water, and it is water that is sprinkled, not the earth on which the sprinkled water falls. We leave the question with those who "water plants" and "sprinkle clothes, to decide whether they sprinkle water, or the clothes or plants. The prophet Ezekiel is careful to say "I sprinkle clean water," he don't say I sprinkle you.

It has often filled our souls with dread to read and hear of the ignorance, prejudice, and superstition which existed in years gone by; but was the human mind darker then than now? Was it so dark that it believed a thing was so if it knew it wasn't so? If not, it was not as dark as it now is; for there are hundreds, just like our critic, who would sprinkle a man by not sprinkling him at all, but by sprinkling something else, and these persons cannot see but what the man was sprinkled although they know he was not.

We further suggest that the next time our critic writes an article that he give his name. We also like to know to whom we are responding.

Critiques from other sources will receive attention in due time. S. J. HARRISON.

ON THE ROAD TO PALESTINE.

When the imaginary fire was extinguished, at the word of command all things were promptly restored to position again, and the little army of men and officers disappeared from the deck, except those on watch, almost as suddenly as they appeared. I concluded that this ship, which I already regarded as almost proof against water, was certainly proof against fire. I was not surprised to learn that the owners of it take out no fire-insurance policy.

A drill such as I have described occurs on every trip, so as to keep the men in perfect training; and an officer passes through the ship every half hour, both day and night, to see whether all is well.

It is gratifying to my pride of country, to find such perfection of mechanism, and discipline, and safety, in ships which are built and owned in our own country, and which sail under the American flag. I am humiliated, however, to know, that of the twenty or more lines of weekly steamships now plying between our Atlantic ports and the ports of Europe, only the ships of the American Steamship Company of Philadelphia were built in American waters and sail under the American flag. And I am annoyed by the information that the chief cause of this banishment of our flag from the steam marine of the world, is unfavorable legislation on the subject by our own Congress. When will public men abandon the study of party politics, and begin the study of the country's true honor and glory? J. W. McGARVEY.

Correspondence.

These things write we unto you, that your joy may be full.—John.

From M. T. Baer.

MAPLETON, BOURBON CO., KANSAS.

To the Beloved Brethren and Sisters of the Almena Church, Michigan:—

DEARLY beloved in the Lord: I embrace this opportunity, and blessed privilege of writing you a few lines, in the fond hope of stirring up your pure minds by way of remembrance.

First, I thank my God for the encouraging news sent me by our beloved Brother Frank Allen, that you all manifest a strong faith, and a fervency of spirit with a determination to press onward and upward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Now may the abundant grace of God and the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit be yours to enjoy, and to help you to bear the cross, and equip you all for the holy fight against sin in all its malignant forms. I am aware that the adversary has whispered abroad that when your minister, Elder M. T. Baer, would leave, that the little band of worshippers of the Almena Church would come to nought. But thanks be to the Lord that I hear better things of you, for I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth. 3 John 1: 3. And as such I regard you chiefly.

I often think of the time when I first went to Almena to preach the pure gospel of Christ, and hold forth its unadulterated doctrine and principles among a strange people and against great odds, having all the learned clergy (according to the wisdom of this world) to oppose, without scarcely a brother or sister in Christ, or scarcely a true friend, to my certain knowledge, to uphold my hands, and myself unskilled in the word and doctrine, being in my first experience in the ministry. But my trust was that the Lord would be strong in the weak, and in the mouth of sucklings would have perfect praise, and thus I was not disappointed, although I entered that M. E. Church with much fear and trembling, and my preaching and my speech were not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power. 1 Cor. 2: 4.

Thus my mind runs back over the past with some fond recollections of the past history of the Almena Church, among the pleasant recollections of the past, allow me to mention some. How my heart rejoiced when it was my pleasure, as the first visible fruits of my labor at Almena, to lead into the clear waters of Scott's Lake, Brother J. J. Solomon and wife, Frank Allen and wife, Sister Elizabeth Cronly, and Nancy Bowman, to hear them renounce sin and covenant with God through Christ Jesus to live faithful until death, and then and there seal their covenant in baptism. And thus we follow up all our meetings and baptismal scenes, and our visits with pleasure; although we do not forget our troubles and trials of faith, mingled with sorrow. It causes me much regret to recollect the names of those, who, as foolish virgins, have turned back, as the dog to his vomit or the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire; however, we pray that the Lord, by his overruling providence, may yet bring them back to his fold, for he has promised in his word that he will be with all them who have been legally baptized in all good faith until death. I believe that the Lord will, at times, trouble their consciences until they either will return with true repentance or until they will count the blood of Christ as an unholy thing. Heb. 10: 29.

Now, dear brethren and sisters, although we are far apart in person, I would have you know that I am present with you in spirit, and that I remember you at the throne of grace, making mention of you in my prayers. Sometimes, when I think of your warm friendship, your manifest tokens of fraternal love, your untiring zeal, and your self-denying efforts to make me comfortable and happy while we sojourned together, knowing as you did, my great conflicts, and severe oppositions and trials of faith, and knowing your fears and anxieties and prayers in my behalf, I almost feel to regret our separation; but so it is now. How very true that absence makes the heart grow fonder! Oh! let us labor, pray, and lawfully strive for a holier, happier, and more blessed reunion in heaven, where nothing will ever mar our perfect rest and peace. Now, when you come together and the spirit of our Lord is with you, and this epistle is being read among you, I want to talk personally with some of you.

Is Brother F. P. Lehr with you? My dear old brother, mercy, grace and peace be with you and yours. Pardon me for not writing personally, for I could not get ready to write you at Lanark, Illinois, before I feared you would be gone again. Hope you have enjoyed yourself well in the service of the Lord whilst on your late visit amongst the churches. Take the oversight of the little flock at Almena, and do thy diligence to help them on their way Zionward, and may a full portion of the spirit of the Lord be yours for the labor.

Brother John Shank, knowest thou that the Lord has called thee to a great and noble work? Equip thyself for the warfare, let not your trumpet give an uncertain sound, measure not thyself by thyself, when thou considerest thy weakness, fall on the strong arm of the Lord; forget those things that are behind, and reach forward for those things that are before. Phil. 3: 13. May God help you and your wife to discharge your whole duty in the ministry. Brother Frank Allen and M. J. Burns and your companions, and where is Pliny Irwin? is he among you; or is he gone astray? remember, you are called as servants of the church, as helps, therefore Satan will aim his fiery darts at you, as well as me, as the targets for his emmissaries to shoot at; but let us count it all joy that we are found worthy for Christ's sake, to suffer persecutions; though your faith will be put to the test, you will always find a safe retreat in the secret closet; the grace of God will be sufficient for you.

And now Sister Jane Brown and your daughters, with all the rest of the household of faith, I cannot in this short letter call you all by name: believe me, I have you all fresh in my memory. On your conduct depends very much the success of the Master's holy cause. When I remember your zeal in coming out to worship God in the holy sanctuary, through storms, dark nights, &c., I feel encouraged; and as long as you will continue in the same steadfastness of faith, the Lord will abundantly bless you, both in this world and that which is to come. Therefore neglect not the assembling of yourselves together, and so much more as you see the day of the Lord approaching.

I am glad that Brother Walter Clark is paying special attention to your spiritual wants, hope the Lord will abundantly bless him and make him instrumental in accomplishing much good among you. Hope that others of the beloved brethren, like Brother Bowers, will call and lend a helping hand to forward the ark of the Lord.

Brother Zerby and Sister Blakely, be not discouraged, though you, as well as Sister McMullen, are living isolated somewhat from the rest. Cast your care on Jesus, and don't forget to pray. Although the wolves are prowling around, the chief Shepherd is near and smiles with approving countenance to see your strong faith mixed with prayers and love for the true faith.

Now, I am not tired of talking to you, but getting tired of writing, and my space is full. I want you all to write to me, and don't wait for me first to write to you; for my opportunities are not very good, as I have to work all day; and evenings, my little children require all my attention until bedtime; and Sundays I ought to be otherwise engaged. I cannot here tell you anything about church matters in Kansas for want of space.

Finally, farewell. Live in peace, and the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

March 1, 1879.

Wayside Notes.

Meetings at Winchester; At Sharpsburg; Trotwood, Montgomery county, Ohio.

WHEN we last wrote you, we were in the church near Winchester, Preble county, Ohio. This body of the Brethren is under the care of Brother Abraham Yonnce, and has, on former occasions, been visited by Brethren George Studebaker and Wm. Deeter, of Indiana.

The writer began preaching in Winchester on Saturday night, February 22nd, with good attendance and good feeling. Brother Ridenour came at night on the 23rd, and spoke to a crowded house, but was called back to Brother Holler's Church on the 24th to preach the funeral of Brother James Raynor, who, though so weak as to be unable to walk for some months past, was baptized in January by being carried into the water; had died on the 23rd at the age of twenty-nine years.

We met Brother James at Farmersville on Tuesday, 25th, expecting to go on with meeting at this place for some days, but as other meetings interfered, we went to other places. In this way we went from place to place, having one or two meetings at a place, but no more than two in succession at any one house, until two weeks had passed, eight different places had been visited, and we were well nigh worn out, but no additions at any point. We do not think this the best way to do good by preaching in this or any other place, and regret very much that it was so here, for we regard this part to be most favorable to the cause we love. But while we regret this, we lay it to the fault of no one, or to any; for circumstances were such as to prevent a protracted effort at any one place. Whilst in this part we, together or separate, visited eight places besides the funeral and one other meeting at Brother Holler's, and preached thirty-eight sermons in two weeks.

The names of Brethren A. Younce, F. Cotterman, with those of Brubakers, Frees, Stover, Christman aged eighty-four, Wamplers, Dr. Henkle, and their families, with those of others will be remembered with pleasure. We also had the pleasure to lodge a day and night with Brother and Sister Young. This sister, whose maiden name was Amanda Billman, was at one time (1863) our school-mate at the Brethren's school in New Virginia, Ohio.

In leaving this part of the Brotherhood we stopped and took dinner with old Brother and Sister Stoner (Solomon) on the 7th of March. They told us of some of their sorrow and of their labor even yet to old age, but they did not then know it all, for in less than a week (March 13th) their large barn, with six head of horses, twenty head of sheep, with other stock, a large quantity of grain, wagons, &c., were all destroyed by fire. The loss is supposed to be near $3,000, or even more, and, we are told, is partly insured. The enemy who did it, is not yet known.

We came to

SHARPSBURG, OR NEW LEBANON,

on the night of the 7th, and spoke in a union house, by invitation of Brethren and strangers, and to large assemblies. Brother James joined us on the 10th and within a few minutes more we were waited on by three elder brethren and told that we were not in order; that protracted meetings were not the order here, and the decree of the elder residing here was that our meeting should stop. They admitted that we preached the gospel, but asserted that it was preached enough here without our assistance. We invited these brethren to come to our meeting that evening and that then they could "judge righteous judgment," but they excused themselves, and left us. The house was literally packed by Brethren, strangers and friends; and when at the close, it was left to the audience to say whether the meeting should stop or not, almost the entire assembly arose to their feet as an expression that the meeting should go on. It did go on, and for three days longer, and the interest and crowd grew so much that many came to the house and could not enter it for the pressure, and so had to go home without an entrance. On every evening the services began from a quarter to half an hour before the hour announced because the crowd was in place and waiting for the hour. The meeting closed at this place on Friday the 14th, with the baptism of four persons, and three others who asked that their reception be at present deferred. Many others said they were willing to do all that the gospel required them to do, but here the Brethren ask more than this of all who do come. On Wednesday, March 12th, we had no meeting at Sharpsburg, but went to the Brethren's meeting-house in Brother Sammy Garber's district, where the funeral and burial of Brother Frederic Priser, aged eighty-one years, were attended by many friends. Here we were invited to improve the occasion, and Brother James spoke from Rev. 14: 13.

From Sharpsburg, we came on the 14th (Friday P. M.) to a station on the Dayton & Richmond R. R., where we continued three days. The invitation to us to visit this place was made by strangers, and the house of the Christians (Newlights) was opened freely, and, although the building is large, and the weather at times quite unfavorable, yet all available space was filled and scores had to stand. The interest was most encouraging and we regret very much that our stay at this place was so short. One, a young man, made application, and others said that the Brethren's Church was their choice, but seem flattered with the hope of a more convenient season. Amongst the many warm friends and Brethren met at this place we name with pleasure Dr. Harper and lady, whose house is a home, friends Tobias, Worley, and others, with brethren and sisters in the homes of Brethren Lesher, Clegget, Sammy Pfoutz, Lewis Pfoutz Esq., Wesley Hyer and mother, John Calvin Bright, and many others. The Pfoutz brothers are brothers of our old Sister Hannah Knauff, now deceased.

It is allowed by all that we preach the gospel, and it alone, and we rejoice that our preaching is so regarded by all who hear us, but we do regret very much that we, when thus proclaiming the word of our Master, should suffer persecution for it. And we regret it most because this feeling is shown most by those who claim to preach the same word and in the same right way, viz.: just as it reads. Those who claim to be like Christ, should remember that Jesus "reviled not again;" that Christians can receive persecution, but they cannot and do not give it; that to be Chirst's, we must have the spirit of Christ, which brings love, joy, peace, meekness, temperance, faith, and against such there is no law.

Covington, Miami county, Ohio, March 19th. We reached here last night; all well. Brother Joseph Kisser, elder in the Upper Stillwater Church, died on Thursday, 13th inst., at the age of sixty-nine years and some months. His burial was on Sunday 16th, and it is thought was attended by near fifteen hundred persons. Brother Wm. Cassel spoke in the audience room; and as the basement room was also filled, there was speaking in it also. Brother Kisser's life will be remembered wherever known.

LANDON WEST.

From C. J. Todd.

Dear Friends:—

IN a late issue of the BRETHREN AT WORK, we observed that an effort is being inaugurated to send missionaries to the Pacific coast, in connection with an extended trip in various other sections of the country. In this we descry the dawning of the day-star of an era long and hopefully wished for. That an effectual opening in this modern Sodom, for the testimony of Jesus would be made, we have long and hopefully anticipated, and now, as if in answer to our earnest prayers, the benign radiance of a bright and effulgent moon, in the no distant future, seems already to cast its cheering halo in advance. Even as Jesus crossed the Gennesaret in a raging tempest to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation to the Gadarenes, so have we prayed that some tempest driven barque might cast anchor upon this Occidental shore, bearing ministers to proclaim free savation in the old apostolic way, to this dying people, with whom skepticism and infidelity run riot. There are many here who claim to be ambassadors of God, expounding icks and isms suited to the passions and follies of their people; but, with few exceptions, they are mere puppets, steeped in fashion's vilest sin, treading the gospel mart for the sake of filthy lucre; extolling the name of Jesus for personal aggrandizement, and owning undeniable allegiance to mystic ties, striving to fill popular pulpits, and soothing the carnal mind with philosophical (?) elucidations, strictly avoiding all infringements upon loose morals. Instead of dropping the golden text in their midst, pointed with gospel truth as sharp as a two-edged sword, they gloss the true teachings of Christ with plausible (?) philosophical lore, and air their profundity on popular science much to the delight of their fashion soiled congregation.

Holy men, free from secret alliances, untrammeled by fashion's trails, clad in the complete armor of God, and with the peace of the gospel shod, whose souls are fired with the inspiration of the cross, and who would gladly push the gospel conquest into the territory of Apollyon, have here a fertile field of boundless extent, in which to plant the true vine.

From the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains, embracing a fertile territory from five to seven hundred miles in length, occupying an area of from 250 to 400,000 square miles, in which good homes in the more remote sections can be had, at reasonable prices, while in the older settled localities, farms at reasonable prices may be purchased, or rented on easy terms. In all this scope of country but few Brethren are known to live, yet there are many warm friends to the faith, who with open purse, are ready and willing to assist the missionary cause. Men of God, thoroughly furnished to all good work, preaching Christ and him crucified, would certainly bear ministry unto much good, a power unto God, and lead to the salvation of countless souls. Should your ministering brethren visit this coast, we beg to be heard in our appeal for their presence in our midst. There are many who sit in the dark shadow of death, who go not into the chancelled sanctuary of the aristocratic worshipers, but must be reached through a more humble medium. Plain Bible teaching, as in the apostolic days, would call many wayward ones from their downward career, and establish their feet upon the solid rock of eternal salvation.

Elder David Brower preached for us a few times, and his labors met with considerable interest, but duty forbade his stay. We want a permanent resident, to constantly exert an influence in the good and holy cause of religion and morality.

The Church In California.

[From the Primitive Christian.]

I WOULD here say that there are two organized churches in California, the one termed the California Church, and the other Stanislaus Church. The former was organized over twenty years ago, and the latter four years ago, by Brethren H. D. Davy and B. F. Moomaw, committee sent by Annual Meeting to settle certain difficulties then existing in the church. At the time the Stanislaus Church was organized, each division had about sixty members. The California Church is scattered over a large scope of country, over some eight or ten counties, and members live far apart. There are seven ministers belonging to this arm of the church, three of them being ordained elders. These elders live more than one hundred miles apart. Elder George Wolfe is seventy years of age, but still travels some, and preaches a good deal. Around him, in San Joaquin county, there are thirty-five or forty members. This church is increasing in members. I have visited many of the members in this church and all its ministers. They appear to be very zealously engaged in the Master's cause. The members of the Stanislaus Church do not live so far apart. They live within easy reach of each other, all but a few. I believe I have seen and visited them all but two or three. The most of them I have visited frequently.

I am sorry to say, that for some cause or other, this church has not been prospering so very much since its organization. It had about the same number of members, (50) as the other church, and five ministers, and some thirty or thirty-five members. This is a lamentable fact. Yet I must say that the members of this church are very orderly, fine members. I love them, and have the greatest respect for them. Let me say right here, that all the members in the State of California treated me with brotherly kindness and Christian courtesy, without any exception. I was among these kind brethren and sisters over three months, visiting and trying to get up kind feelings among them. In this I have succeeded above my expectations. I must say to the brethren and sisters in the Atlantic States, that the members in California, are worthy of respect and honor. They are warm-hearted Christians. Do not think that there is a wide difference between the two organizations. The difference is so small and trifling that it should never cause a separation. God forbid that such should ever be the case. I am confident, that if proper care is taken, and a little more Christian forbearance exercised, that all will come right in the end. To you, dear brethren and sisters, among whom I have been visiting in California, rest assured, that your unworthy brother and servant had many a sleepless night in prayer and fasting, while he was with you, praying that you might become more fully reconciled with each other. If you treat each other as you have treated me when I was with you, there will soon be peace and harmony among you. Apply that golden rule, "Do to others as you wish they should do to you."

Dear brethren and sisters, I labored amongst you for peace, I now earnestly entreat you in the name of Jesus Christ, "Be ye reconciled." Do not each of you seek your own, but let each of you seek his brother's good, and in the end you will come off more than conquerors, and each receive a crown of eternal life.

ELIAS K. BEECHLEY.

Remember the Dead.

THERE have been a great many deaths in our neighborhood the past Winter. Many of our friends have been taken from us. Sorrow for the dead is the only sorrow from which we refuse to be divorced. An old uncle of mine by the name of Nathaniel Drake has been taken from us and numbered with the same. He was a minister of the Brethren Church, and a friend of many. Friends and relatives, we never again shall behold him coming forward with that smile and out-stretched to greet us. He is now where smiles are brighter and friendship more lasting, though his earthly existence and fond words, we cherish and brood over with solitude. Another friend, Grandmother Brumbaugh, the grandmother of our neighborhood, has been taken from us, not long since. Where is the child that would willingly forget the most tender grandparent, or root out such a sorrow from the heart though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gayety? As I sit by my window, never again shall I behold her treading her little path coming to and fro and entering her cottage door. The door is shut; there is a silence within and all is gloom. We hope she is now treading a brighter path. From the grave of the righteous, spring none but fond and tender recollections.

These are my first words for the paper. I will be thirteen years old the 19th of April. Please criticise and publish.

MATTIE HUSSICKER.

Gravelton, Ind., March 21.

This young friend is wiser than some older people. She thinks those who follow a business are more likely to understand it than those who do not. So she says at the close of her article, "Please criticise and publish." She would rather the editors alone would see her errors than the thousands of readers who get the paper. She knows the editors want every article as good as it can be made, and she has no objections to having hers improved, if the editors have the time and disposition to do it. So she says "criticise" it. H.

From Nevada, Vernon Co., Mo.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have preaching every Sunday, but to-day it is sleeting and our appointment is ten miles away; so I did not go. The Winter has been above the average for cold; not much snow. The ground has been in condition for plowing for some time. Oats most all sowed.

Spiritually, we are progressing slowly; but, we trust, surely. There have been six additions by baptism since the first of September. Foreign ministers seldom stop and help us. We solicit ministering brethren, and others, too, to stop off and labor with us. We live only two miles from Nevada, the county-seat of Vernon county. It is on the great South-western route from Chicago to Texas, the M. K. & T. R. R.

We think those seeking cheap homes could do no better than to stop and see our beautiful, undulating prairies, and rich bottom lands, skirting the various streams that traverse our country. Much of this bottom land is covered with a heavy growth of timber, which can be bought for from eight to fifteen dollars per acre. Prairie from five to ten dollars. There is plenty of room for a colony of one thousand families to settle and all be within one to five miles from timber. Stone coal in abundance, at from five to eight cents at the banks, ready dug. Building stone, along the streams, of the finest quality. We have a great variety of water and soil, from the poorest freestone to the richest limestone. Water is sulphur, calibeate, freestone and limestone.

I would advise those seeking a home in the south-west to give us a call and see for themselves, especially to ministers, traveling through, we would say, stop and preach for us. Any one wishing further information will please direct us a card or letter.

Dear editors,—we bid you a kind farewell, wishing you God speed in your noble work.

District Meetings.

SEEING quite a number of notices in your paper, of District Meetings, it called my attention to a few very important thoughts, or points connected with those meetings, to which our dear brethren throughout the Brotherhood will do well to take heed, viz.:

1. That all matters of a local character be disposed of, if possible; if that cannot be done to general satisfaction, let it be deferred another year, and not sent to Annual Conference.

2. That all matter, designed for Annual Conference, be accompanied with a Scriptural answer.

3. That every answer, whether of a local or general character, be accompanied with reference to two or more suitable passages of Scripture as a basis for said decision.

4. That when brethren are selected by the church and sent out to preach where the pure doctrine, as taught by the Brethren, has never yet been heard, that they be admonished not to be over anxious for number, so as to evade the teaching of the peculiarities of our Beloved Brotherhood, and the general order of the church which are in so exact harmony with the general teachings and spirit of the gospel, and by which we are more particularly known as a distinct and separate people from the world.

Experience has taught us that it is a great advantage to brethren, when called upon to organize a church, if all have been properly taught and are willing to comply with the general order of the church; but a great disadvantage when they have only been taught the letter and not the spirit of the gospel; but rather that all that we have not the plain written word for, is the work of men and not of God. My beloved brethren, these things ought not so to be. ENOCH ENY.

Safe at Home.

TO-DAY, March 21st, after an absence from a dear family of three months and ten days, I arrived safe at home. The past three months were spent visiting and preaching among dear brethren, sisters and friends in Jewell, Republic, Osborn, Smith, Marion and other counties in Kansas. During this time we were much refreshed in meeting with many old friends, also in forming the acquaintance of many new ones whom we shall never forget. During our interconrse with our beloved brethren and sisters with whom we associated during our visit, we often experienced the foretaste of what it must be to be there even "over there."

The Brethren in Kansas seem to be alive, and though many are living in dug-outs and sod-houses, are, nevertheless, hospitable, and are willing to give such as they have, and that is good enough for anybody. We were glad to see so much sociability among them. It is more healthy, both physically and spiritually, than to feast upon rich viands and tread soft carpeted floors, or rest upon spring sofas and bedsteads, or to feast the natural vision upon gilded walls and pictures. Love has the same attractiveness in a western dug-out as any where else. The ornament of a meek and gentle spirit is the thing that brings real enjoyment any where. Where such a spirit has the sway, the place becomes home-like. Such a spirit reigns in heaven, which often makes us think of the home "over there," also of the friends "over there"; and we feel to close in the poet's prayer:

"O Lord amidst gladness or wo,
For heaven our spirits prepare;
And shortly we also shall know,
And feel what it is to be there."

Dear Brethren:—

I AM not a member of your church though I beleive it to be as true if not the truest church that I have ever found. I would like to write a few words if I thought there would be room in your columns for them. I do not take the BRETHREN AT WORK though I receive copies of it from time to time, sent to me by a friend. I read them very earnestly and I am very thankful for them. I think it is a good paper. When I receive them I commence on the first page and read column after column until I have read them through, and then I read them over and over again, and then I lay them away for the future.

I attended your church at Cherry Grove, Ill., some six or seven years, and found it to be a good, honest church; and though I was but a youth. I find there were many impressions made on my heart that I have never forgotten. I havn't heard but one sermon preached by the Brethren for over six years, and that one I heard one year ago last Fall in a school-house near Hudson, Iowa. It was preached by Brother Bashor, from John 1: 17. It was a powerful sermon, and I think it did much good. I have often thought I would join your church, and probably will if I ever live near the church again.

I was glad to hear that you had started out in such a good work, and I would say to all the Brethren, push your way onward, that you may at last die in the harness.

To Whom this may Concern:—

I LEFT Lanark, Illinois, on the fourth of March; landed in Brown county, Kansas, on the seventh. Met my family there. Found a beautiful country and a good climate. Land rates from four to twenty dollars per acre. A good country for those seeking homes. Well watered and plenty of timber along the streams. Fruit of most all kinds can be raised here. School-houses are plenty in the country, and meeting-houses in most every town or city. There is quite a number of brethren in this country. I have attended two meetings, and was surprised to meet so many dear brethren and sisters. It seemed like home. Brethren Jacob Haune and Warner preached for us. The ministering force is not very strong here. I would like to see some more ministers come West and help our dear brethren to spread the good news of salvation. Quite a number inquiring after the truth. May all who are in nature's darkness, come to the light and accept salvation, and follow Christ. "Not all that say Lord, Lord, shall inherit eternal life, but they that do the will of my Father which is in heaven. May the Lord bless the brethren and sisters of the Milledgeville Church. Remember me in your prayers.

JNO. E. SPRINGER.

From Lewisburg, Arkansas.

Dear Brethren:—

I AM away out here in Arkansas. We have no church near here, but we need one very much, for this is a wicked place. The most of the people around here would rather go to a dance than to church. We have been here nearly fifteen months, and, in that time, there have been more than twenty dances within three miles of our home.

I would rather have meeting, singing and prayer than dancing. I have not been at church since last Summer until to-day. We had so much sickness last Summer that I could not go, and this Winter there has been no meeting to attend.

Winter has now ended here. The peach trees are coming out in bloom. Some oats have been sown and some corn planted. I like the country here very well, but not the people. There are seven families of Indians in this neighborhood.

I do wish some of the good Brethren would move in here so that we could have meeting. A church building could be built on our farm.

From Ogan's Creek, Indiana.

ON February 28th, Brethren F. P. Lehr, G W. Cripe and Joseph Leely came to us. On Saturday a choice for help in the ministry was held. Two were called, Stephen Ulery and Perry A. Early.

Brethren Lehr and Cripe continued with us, preaching night and day. On Friday evening, Father Lehr talked to the children. Fifty or sixty bright and cheerful little countenances were present. When we beheld them and heard them singing praises to God, we remembered, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," and took courage.

Our meetings closed on Sunday, with nine accessions by baptism and one applicant. All except one are young in years and members of our Sunday-school. O Brethren, should not this encourage us to put forth stronger efforts as we see our neighbors and their children stepping into the fold? O may we not forget nor despise the command, "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep!" G. LESLIE.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR church meeting passed off quietly and in order, thereby showing that the church is in love and union. The time set for our Love-feast is on the sixth of June.

Brother Smouse closed a series of meetings at the Manor school-house, in this district, on the night of February 26th, with no additions. While the meeting was in progress, the brother preached one discourse on baptism, and I am told by some of the people that were there, that it was one of the most powerful sermons ever delivered in that house. Hope the brother will not forget us, but return to us again. We have church every Sunday at some point in our district, with large congregations and good attendance. JOHN W. FRY.

Notice.

Dear Brethren:—

SHOULD any of you who subscribed to me at D. M. for the report of A. M. of 1878, have failed getting it, please notify me by a card, and I will try and look up the loss. A few have reported minus. C. C. ROOT.

Mirabile, Mo., March 15, 1879.

From J. H. Miller.

BY request, I met the Brethren near St. Joe, Dekalb county, Indiana, for preaching. There found Brother Jacob Snell, from Whitley county, Indiana; had meeting at a school-house, where the Brethren's doctrine has been known only one year. We found almost all classes of people—some Universalists, and a few infidels. The people desired us to preach our faith, as that was new to them. We did so.

On Sunday, Brother Snell preached an able discourse on baptism. The attention was good, and a wandering after our doctrine, some asking us what we thought about baptizing children, etc. One old Methodist brother asked Brother Snell and me to come back and hold a two days meeting in the grove sometime in the Summer, and then hold forth to the people in practice what we preached, that is, hold a communion. (There are no Brethren near by to give us a barn to hold a feast in). I never saw such a desire for the truth as there is there. Methodists, United Brethren and Lutherans have invited us back and said, "Come and bring your preachers and members along, and we will open our houses and make you feel comfortable." What a place this is to do good! Will the Brethren near there go and preach for them? Brother H. Ellison is a speaker in the second degree, and John Stafford in the first degree. Brother Jacob Gump has the oversight. My opinion is, with a little effort, a congregation of members could soon be built up.

Look Out for the Rogue.

ON the 6th of November last, there came into our vicinity a Swede who assumed the name of Nels Erickson, whose real name it appears is Hamland. He at once made application for admission into the church. On the 10th of November he was received by baptism. His general deportment, strict adherence to business, and upright walk for a short season, secured him many warm friends who relied implicity on his veracity. As soon as he had accomplished his design, of obtaining the confidence of the brotherhood and friendly neighbors, he at once set about his infamous schemes of defrauding and deluding. By February 22nd he had succeeded in winning the affections of a worthy young sister, and was married to her on the evening of that date.

Bought a team for which two of the brethren went security. He also involved himself for farm machinery under the pretense that he was going to farm. After this he managed to get into trouble with a sister in regard to rented land and seed wheat.—Pretended to be in deep distress. He then went to the livery stable in Carleton, and procured a team and buggy, under the pretense that he was going to arrange for seed wheat or money to purchase with. Went to Beatrice, and forged a note for $240, on John Holsinger and C. Bradley, of Carleton. This note was left in the hands of two brethren in Beatrice as collateral security. Those two brethren then indorsed for him in bank for $200. He has not been heard from since, neither the team or buggy. He is a man about six feet high; weighs two hundred and ten pounds; walks erect, with head thrown back; has the first finger on right hand cut off through nail, and second one at first joint; is a tailor by trade; speaks Swede, Dane and Norwegian; speaks English very broken. Beware of him, brethren, as he will doubtless attempt to perpetrate the same infamous deception on others. Let all take warning that we do not get over anxious to receive strangers, who have no credentials, into the church, and thus commit the same incorrigible error that we have and bring reproach upon the church and cause of Christ. [This, no doubt, is the person who staid all night with the writer last Summer, and appeared to be very pious and zealous in the Christian religion. He came here from Baldwin, Iowa, and represented himself as having property in Chicago. Shortly afterwards, we were informed that he had married at Baldwin, was admitted into the church there, but before leaving swindled a brother out of money, and conducted himself in a very unbecoming manner. I think the Brethren at Baldwin will recognize the rogue described by Brother Holsinger, as Peter Halburg. He was a tailor by trade. Brethren and others will please keep a careful look out for him. He may turn up at some other place and want to be baptized the third time. We regret that we did not publish him last Summer.—M. M. E.]

From Josephus P. Martin.

Dear Brethren:—

I FEEL that it is good for us to commune with each other through the columns of this good paper. By the assistance of the BRETHREN AT WORK, we are cognizant of what is transpiring to the honor and glory of God in other parts of the world. Good tidings are born to us from our brethren whose lot it is to preach the word of God in foreign lands. If it were not for this, our good paper, many of us would be left in the dark in such matters, but thanks to our brethren who have given us this paper, and glory be to God who induced them to take hold of it.

I will offer a few thoughts in consequence of a series of meetings that were held here lately. Brethren Ridenour and West were with us a short season. They preached the everlasting gospel with such force that four persons were made to feel the weight of their sins and come out on the side of the Lord, the writer being one of the ransomed. We never witnessed such meetings as we had during their stay with us; long before the hour for worship, the house would be crowded to over flowing, so eager were the people to hear. If the brethren could have stayed longer I believe a very great work would have been done. However the brethren have cast bread upon the waters to be gathered not many days hence. If some brother or brethren could come here this Spring some time, I believe they could reap a rich harvest to the honor and glory of God, as the people are pretty thoroughly awakened. This was the first meeting of the kind ever held in this community by the Brethren, and the second of the kind the writer ever attended, he having heard Brother John H. Moore the time he preached on Lamotte Prairie, Illinois. May the grace of God be with us all, is my prayer.

New Lebanon, Montgomery Co., Ohio.

From Virden, Illinois.

ON Saturday, March 22nd, quite a number of brethren and sisters from various churches, met in council with the brethren and sisters in Christian county, Illinois, formerly members of the Sugar Creek Church. Finding them all in love and union with each other, and with all the members of the Sugar Creek Church, it was thought good to organize them into a church, which was accordingly done; after which they held a choice for deacon, the lot falling on Brother Thomas Clower, no doubt a worthy and faithful brother. Brother Benjamin B. Whitmer was also ordained to the full ministry, and now has the oversight of this church, which they named Clear Creek Church. Their membership at present numbers forty-three. Brother Benjamin being their only minister, with two deacons as help. Their prospects are fair for a prosperous future, and as their territory is large and Brother Benjamin their only minister, it is much desired by them that they be remembered by the Brethren, and often visited by other ministers who live in reach of them. Adjoining ministers, please don't forget this.

DANIEL VANIMAN.

From Pike Creek, Ill.

Dear Brethren:—

ON Saturday, March 15th, met Brother Geo. W. Gish at the house of Brother William Lehman, in the Pike Creek Church, where the brethren and sisters met in church council. The church had been visted, and the deacons reported to the meeting that union and friendship existed in the church. The 12th chapter of Romans was read and remarks were made, both in German and English. The church then proceeded to elect a minister from among their number, which resulted in the election of Brother Frederick Shultz, who was duly installed into his office by G. W. Gish, in the English, and repeated in German by Brother D. Mast. This church consists almost entirely of Germans. We may expect them to succeed well, as Germans generally work harmoniously together. We hope and pray the good Lord will bless them, especially Brother Shultz, and the dear sister, who must take the position of watchman upon the walls of Zion. May the Lord baptize them with love for souls, and may Pike Creek become vocalized with the praises of God, under their administration, and finally become a center, around which Christian influences will cluster, until it embraces all the unregenerated within its territory. T. D. LYON.

Winter Baptizing.

A PARAGRAPH in the BRETHREN AT WORK of March 13th gave me some exercise of mind on the above subject. I have administered baptism in water where two feet of ice had to be removed first. I also have officiated when it was so cold that ice would freeze over the water while taking one subject out and bringing another into the water. I have repeatedly officiated in ice water when afflicted with rheumatism. I baptized an old sister over fifty years of age in water with two feet of ice, when she was afflicted with rheumatism. In all of the above, I never knew any evil results, suffering,—or even any inconvenience to follow. My observation has led me to think that generally there are spectators who suffer more with cold than the subjects or administrator. The idea of a woman's hair becoming a solid mass of ice when "all things are done decently and in order" is simply absurd in the extreme. No one need fear any evil results when following the directions of the Master. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." Psalms 23: 4.

Dear Brethren:—

WE have distributed the tracts you sent us, and we think they are doing good with your paper. Both are read with much interest, and this is the result: two have been made willing to come to the church.

Brethren from Bedford county were with us on the 16th of this month, and preached two sermons. They will be with us on the second Sunday in April. At that time we expect to have baptizing, and we hope more of our neighbors will come to the church. We believe a good work has begun in the hearts of this people, and we pray that the Lord may carry it on, that the faith and order of the Brethren may be made known in this neighborhood as well as all over the land. Brethren, the harvest is plenty but the laborers are few. Pray the Lord to send laborers into the harvest. Souls are starving for the bread of life. O, Brethren, come and preach for us. O, Brethren, think how many places in old Virginia that there is no preaching by the Brethren.

Yours in Love,

M. M. Eshelman, Dear Brother:—

I HAVE concluded to commence a small paper, and through it, try to enlighten the people here. Our opposers in baptism have no right to oppose us, and in this way I can defend the Lord's cause. Two thousand copies like the one I sent you will cost about five dollars. No. 2 is also in press. It treats principally on infant baptism. The church here considers it best that I publish a monthly paper, for more good can be done that way than by publishing pamphlets. Should any feel like obtaining subscribers in America, among the Danes and Norwegians, they can do so. In this way some good might be done among the Scandinavians in America. They have been sadly neglected thus far.

Our members all say they rejoice and are happy. I shall soon start out to hold more meetings, and see the members about holding a Love-feast. Our united love to all the dear Brethren.

Dear Brethren:—

PLEASE correct my letter of January. We would have it read. "the first church organized in Labette county, Kansas," not the first in Kansas.

To the Brethren coming to Kansas to get homes, when you get here, look out for the land sharks. You can do much better by seeing the Brethren first. We have a good country here, and a good prospect for building up a church. S. D. REXIKER.

Wanted.

SEEING a notice in the BRETHREN AT WORK that a few copies of the "Quinter and McConnell" debate are for sale, and as we very much need a copy in the "Ashland College" library, will some brother please buy a copy and donate it for said purpose? We also want a copy of "Quinter and Snyder" debate. If any brother has either of said books to spare, we would be pleased to have them donated to "Ashland College." Send to Ashland, Ohio, or to the undersigned.

JACOB MISHLER, Librarian.

WILL say that the church here is in working order. Brethren Elder George Gish and Jacob Kindig were with us on Saturday, March 21, to help labor in a council meeting, and all passed off harmoniously, and the church set apart one brother for the word and one for a deacon. The lot fell on Brother A. Grooms for minister, and on D. Heckman for deacon. K. HECKMAN.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money, received to be used for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to POOR MEMBERS, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the POOR FUND. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

OUTSIDERS' FUND.

THERE are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefited by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer. Send us the names of such outsiders as you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them in a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as fast as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar a year. Hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thus enable us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded us.—When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the OUTSIDERS' FUND.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, all donations received and papers sent out:

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—Brethren (or Tunker) Churches possess the Bible Characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

JOINED THE CHURCH.

BY J. A. MURRAY.

OH, what joyful news! How it thrills the heart! It makes the angels rejoice and saints glorify God. Joined the church! Let us consider the meaning of our heading seriously. Does it simply mean to have our names entered upon the church-book? or to be baptized? go to meeting? to attend to the external ordinances of the church? No; it means all this and much more. It means that you have heard the thunderings from Mount Sinai; "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the law to do them." It means that thou hast heard the voice of God saying, "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light." It means that thou wast brought to a realizing sense of thy condition before God, and having realized that, by continuing in that course, you would be forever undone, and you found it necessary to change your entire course of life, having been dead "in trespasses and in sins," you now desire to cast your lot with the people of God in order, to be made alive to God through Jesus Christ. There you surrender your will entirely to the will of God, and, by an unwavering faith in God, your heart becomes changed from a love of sin to a love of God.

This change of heart implies a change of affection which are now set on things above. You become dead again; not dead in sin, but dead unto sin, that you should not live the rest of your days to the lust of men, but to the will of God. This means that you have repented and turned from sin to serve the living God. Here you made application to the church to be received by baptism, at which time, you solemnly promised before God and witnesses, to renounce Satan with all his sinful and pernicious ways; and to love and serve God to the best of your ability the remainder of your days. Under those solemn obligations you joined the church.

Kind reader, did you ever consider the great responsibility you were brought under when you joined the church, aside from the solemn promises which you made? You assumed a position which involves very important consequences. Every member of society adds either to the advantage or the disadvantage of it. Your influence will be felt either in favor of or against the church. This being true, how very important that we cast our influence in the proper direction. This we can do by being consistent with the order of the church which we have joined.

Do we not sometimes see persons who are members of the church act as though the church had joined them? They want the church to conform to them, instead of them conforming to the church. They seem to forget the meaning of joining the church. There is another class which we sometimes find in the church that feels perfectly satisfied with the church as long as the church lets them do as they please. They are willing to follow the fashions of the world themselves, and to let others do the same, but just as soon as the church calls them to account, then they justify themselves by saying, this is not any worse than what brother or sister A or B does. There is no one finds fault with them, and I am no worse than they are. Are you not indirectly charging the church with partiality? "Oh no," they say, "we do not find fault with the church, we are willing to let it alone if it will only let us alone." When you joined the church, what one did you join? "The church of Christ," of course. Was it the church of Christ before you joined it? "Certainly it was." Did not the church of Christ always require a separation from the world? "Yes, it did." How then can you belong to the church of Christ and follow the vain fashions of the world? By so doing you throw your influence in favor of the world rather than the church. Not only does the church of Christ teach non-conformity to the world, but it teaches conformity to all the commands of the gospel of Christ which every one assumes when he joins the church. The church of Christ is not a body of idle or dead members, but of members who are alive to the cause they have espoused, who will make any necessary sacrifice for the advancement of the cause of Christ; for they know that whatever will be for the interest of the church will be for the individual interest of each member. Hence, every one who joins the church assumes all these responsibilities, according to the wisdom which God has given him.

ANNUAL MEETING.

SOMETIME ago, I noticed an article under this head from the pen of Brother J. H. Moore, suggesting a plan for holding the meeting, which would make it self supporting. This was merely a suggestion in that direction, and I have noticed nothing since towards maturing the plan. I think it is full time to go a step further. I am strongly in favor of changing the arrangement for holding the meeting. Let the standing committee and delegates with their duties, stand as at present. But change the floor where the convention sits—give it such a shape that all can see and hear. Thousands come for that purpose, and why not accommodate them? Not one Annual Meeting has been held in twenty years giving all present an opportunity to hear the proceedings. Well, say some, it is impossible to provide for thousands in that respect, and it would cost too much, if it were possible. No, it is possible; and the cost of it no burden to the district holding it, if the proper plan is taken.

Now I will suggest a plan, and I hope others will help to provide the wanting features. First, let the burden of expense rest on those attending the meeting; which is a mere trifle, if properly divided. Erect a ticket office on the ground. Each buy a ticket for one dollar, as a pass for his presence and comforts during the meeting. Suppose five thousand attend, don't that show whence the funds will come from to carry the meeting through? And for each one attending only a trifle of the burden. The price of the ticket might be increased or diminished, as thought proper. The floor of the audience room should be so arranged as to have the standing committee and delegates on a level (for spectators) the remotest seats being the highest. Where the standing committee and delegates are, fix up a sounding-board, to convey the sound, and thus all will be able to hear with satisfaction. Now I submit these as the main features of my plan, and I submit them to the consideration of the brethren. It is open for suggestion and improvement.

THE GLORY OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

BY JAMES WIRT.

"They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts of the glorious majesty of his kingdom." Psalms 145: 11, 12.

DAVID, the writer of the Psalms, is frequently termed the sweet singer of Israel, and is the author of, or was moved by the Holy Spirit to pen down the words used at the beginning of this article, where he evidently refers to the saints publishing the glad tidings of the gospel of peace; and it may here be stated that the press rightly conducted can be made a mighty power or means for the fulfillment of these prophetic words of David.

The Creator designs eventually that the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth, and that all shall know him from the least to the greatest.

The grace and majesty of Christ's kingdom consists in the superior character of its King. He bears such titles as Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, and the Prince of Peace, and the superior number of its subjects. They are represented by the sands of the seashore, and the stars of the sky, and the illimitable extent of his dominion, and also the perfection of his law, which is of such a nature as to be adapted to the wants of those it is to govern.

In the future dispensations of God's righteous government, the glory of the Redeemer's kingdom will be more fully revealed to the inhabitants of earth, for every eye shall be permitted to behold his power and glory, every knee shall bow in humble obedience to him their rightful Sovereign, and every tongue confess that he is Lord to the honor and glory of God the Father.

All prophecies point to a brighter period in the world's history, and which will be brought about by the peaceable reign of Christ. Wherever the doctrines of the cross bear sway, their effects are plainly to be observed, for they universally purify the morals and enlighten the minds of men, that is where the Christian system is put in practice. "The law of the Lord is perfect converting the soul." That the saints have a social and communicative disposition is plainly inferred by the portion of Scripture under consideration, where it is prophesied that they will speak and talk (and might it not be appropriate to write and print) in order to make known to the sons of men the plan of salvation. God's mighty acts in the establishment of Christ's kingdom or economy of grace are revealed in the last will and testament of his Son Jesus Christ. Here it will be proper to mention his incarnation, miracles, sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, and intercession. The church militant is invested with his regal power and authority and is acting as his representative body on earth, and will do so until the church triumphant is introduced when Christ will take the reign of government in his own person, and the millennium will be ushered into the world with all its attendant glory.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

—THE work of tunnelling the Detroit River for railroad purposes is to be commenced early this month.

—THE ex-Vice-president of the Southern Confederacy is a member of the United States Congress.

—QUEEN Victoria has arrived at Havene, on Lake Maggiore, where she will remain during her stay in Italy.

—A BILL has been introduced into the Illinois Legislature, providing that any person who "treats" another in a liquor saloon shall be fined not less that $5, and not over $15, for every offense.

—It is believed that the newly-invented microphone may be utilized by detecting and announcing the subterranean explosions in volcanic districts which immediately precedes earthquake shocks.

—AN ingenious Meriden mechanic has made a perfect steam-engine, the works of silver and gold, which only weighs fifteen grains, and three drops of water, when heated into steam, will drive it twenty minutes.

—THERE were about 300 Jews in Jerusalem at the beginning of this century; now about 13,000. A rich Jew of Venice has established a school of agriculture.

—FEARFUL tempests are reported from Algeria. During one storm the hailstones killed a woman working in the fields. A flight of pigeons were also killed, and after the tempest a great number of hares and partridges were found dead on the ground.

—IN New Hampshire women are allowed to vote in school matters. Hope Illinois will soon allow them to vote in school matters.

—English troops in South Africa have lately met with quite a reverse. Forty men were killed and a large number missing.

—IT is proposed to organize in the city of New York, at an early date, a society, limited in number to about a dozen energetic workers, lay and clerical, for the diffusion of Jewish knowledge among the Jewish working classes.

—FOSSILIZED remains of what is reported as a gigantic pre-historic man have been found two hundred feet beneath the earth's surface in a cave recently opened in a mine near Eureka, Nev. The lower limbs, head, and neck are said to be clearly defined and natural.

—THE largest Sunday-school in the world is probably at Stockport, Chester county, England. The school-building cost $100,000, and has between 80 and 90 teaching-rooms. Since the institution was opened, 5,085 teachers have been employed and 90,804 scholars registered.

A HYMN.

BY I. MUELLER.

IN the writings of the gospel,
As ordinance you will find,
And in the third of Matthew,
That ordinance is enjoined:
Enjoined, and all believers,
Come witness now the Son,
Who came and was baptized,
By his forerunner John.

Not at the river Jordan,
But in the flowing stream,
John the Baptist was baptizing,
When he baptized the Lamb;
Then Jesus Christ the Savior,
Out of the water came
To show that we must follow,
And thus perform the same.

Those infants brought to Jesus,
Were brought to have them blest;
Then all the infants, babes like these,
Who die shall go to rest;
For there none baptized,
But those who did believe,
And thus the Lord of glory,
Will no one else receive.

You've read the third of Matthew,
Look for another thing,
Which says, none was baptized,
But did repentance bring.
If you believe in Jesus,
Then be immersed like him:
As long as you neglect it,
To you it is sin.

This ordinance of Jesus,
Doth stand so firm and strong,
There's none can overturn it,
Though they've endeavored long,
For Jesus and his kingdom,
Will stand for evermore,
When anti-christian powers,
Will sink to rise no more.

I WANT TO DO RIGHT.

BY C. P. ESHER.

THIS was my motto from my childhood, because in the reading of the Bible I saw whoever did right was approved of God, and enjoyed his favor, and whoever did wrong, met with the the reverse. Now then, if we want to do right, we must always take God at his word, without any if's or and's; as in the instance of Noah building an ark, and Abraham leaving his father's house and his kindred, or offering his son Isaac as a burnt offering. On the other hand, where wrong was done, chastisement followed as a consequence; or in the instance of Rebecca causing her son Jacob to dissemble, the consequence was, she never got to see her son afterward, nor he his mother, besides the dread and fear he suffered to meet his brother. Then again, the wickedness practiced by the sons of Jacob, and the pure and spotless life of their brother Joseph on the other hand, who was exhalted to be a ruler and governor in Egypt for the salvation of many thousand people. Whereas, his brethren, in his presence, reproached themselves bitterly with conscious guilt for hardening their hearts against his lamentations when they sold him to the Ishmaelites. These and thousands of other instances all through that blessed Book, the Bible, fastened upon my mind indelibly, so that when I was grown to manhood, the motto, "I want to do right," caused me to examine the doings of the church in which I was brought up, and lo, the very fundamental principles of Christianity (the peace principle) was not there. I made search for that church which was driven into the wilderness because of her peace principles, by a false and apostate church, which, instead of promulgating peace and good will upon earth, took up the sword to deluge the world in blood under the guise of Christian zeal.

There truly was a people called Waldenses, Bohemian Brethren, and various other names who taught the doctrine of peace, and were, therefore, persecuted: but where are they found? Do we find them in the pilgrim fathers that fled from England to America to be at liberty to worship God without molestation? Alas! the fundamental principles of the gospel—love and good will to men was lacking, for we see them very soon persecute the unassuming, peace-loving Quaker.

Where, then, shall I go to find that people—that church of which it is said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against?" Wherever I go, the gates of hell stand ajar. At the entrance of every church in Christendom, all admit, and not only admit, but teach and practice retaliation brother going to law with brother, one Christian nation going to war with an other. Their Christian preachers serve as chaplains to encourage the soldiers to kill their enemies, and ask God's blessing upon it. Oh shame, where is thy blush?

I turn myself to reading history and everything that might give me a clue to that church that believes and takes God at his word. Thomas Dick tells us of such a people that lived and were hid for 130 years in the Alleghany Mountains; but they were found by the monks and scattered and killed; though their number was 18,000 souls, they did not fight.

Ah me! where shall I go now? I find Buck's Theological Dictionary. I there find among the many named religions, a people organized themselves into a body who teach and practice the pure doctrine of the cross. But fines and imprisonment, and persecution from country to country is what they get at the hands of the Christians who had themselves escaped persecution by the "mother of harlots." They come to America, here Buck loses them at Ephrata, Pa., under the name of Dunkers. So that church is lost again in the wilderness, and for more than a century and a half they were careful not to make their non-resistant, non-swearing, non-conforming principles for which they had suffered so much for 1,260 years by the dragon that even cast a flood after that woman which represents the true church of Christ. But that flood (false doctrine) did not inundate nor swallow her—she stands to-day in all her primitive purity of doctrine and practice under the despicable appellation Dunkards, and is now at this very day attacked by one that lacks but little to fill the bill of a Goliah, he is going to expunge her name from the public records of Christianity; but it is so, let her name be wiped from the face of the earth; her principles stand fast and herself upon the Rock.

One great consolation remains, the days of her exile are ended, she can never be persecuted with fire and sword. All the batteries of hell cannot close that door which the Lord himself has opened, that no man can shut. Rev 3: 8. I call on you this day, fellow-workers, rise up in your manhood, assert your right, as ministers of the gospel who are commanded by the Master, "Go," go out into the lanes and highways and urge them to come in that "my house may be filled." You men of great renown, that stand on the pinacle of Christian society, arise, make for your use, scourges of chords, go to work; cleanse your temples, cast out the merchants with their merchandise your pew auctions, your donation parties, your picnics, your socials, your thousand and one schemes by which you make my house a den of thieves. Throw out your man-made creeds, confessions of faith, disciplines, etc., and stop up the pipes of your organs, call together the poor, the neglected of the land, breathe into them the Spirit of the Lord by preaching to them the pure gospel of Jesus Christ, and they will make better music than all your costly organs and choirs can produce. Tell your rich members to lay aside their costly array and buy modest apparel for the poor, and themselves. Ho! all ye Christian churches cast out with your own hands the gods of silver and gold and pearls and precious stones and costly array that the Lord, when he comes, may know you that you are his.

Would it not be a great pity that you should have spent your thousands in sending the word of the Lord and gospel teachers to all the ends of the earth—yea, of having eaten and drank before the Lord, cast out devils and done many wonderful works, and yet hear the words, "I know you not, depart from me." There is no need of one single soul to be lost. Only take the Lord at his word, do what he says. It is not hard to be a Christian, but it is hard to serve two masters.

BLESS AND CURSE NOT.

BY H. F. BRINKWORTH.

"Bless them which persecute you: bless and curse not." Rom. 12: 14.

PAUL in addressing his brethren in the different churches among whom he labored, well knew what were the obstacles against which we find him so often contending, and the contrary spirit manifested, so often grieved his heart, consequently we find him giving such advice and counsel as the above; and in referring to the Savior's language in the sermon on the Mount, we again hear the language, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you." Matt. 5: 44.

The Savior well knew the heart of man; and how quick nature rises to resent every little injury that may arise; therefore, as the old law, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," thirty-eighth verse, was now no longer in force, it was their duty as brethren to cultivate the Christian graces, and to grow in knowledge and wisdom, becoming more and more imbued with that spirit of love and forgiveness, till when even their enemy, who would try to overthrow and do those things contrary to God's law, must be not only forgiven, but prayed for. Brethren, how many of us are there, who can truly say we have crucified the old man of sin to that extent? Who amongst us if he were smote on the one cheek, will turn the other? Do we not rather retaliate, or try to avenge ourselves?

Christ in all his daily walks among men showed a mild, long-suffering, and charitable spirit, and we never find, even under the severest provocation, any desire manifested to recant. Paul endured hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. Stephen was stoned to death, praying for his murderers; and, lastly, we also find the dear Redeemer, after having suffered all things, bowing meekly and resignedly to the will of his persecutors, even to the death of the cross on Calvary's rugged brow, and there pouring out his soul in prayer to God, for those who so cruelly put him to death. Is not this love for enemies? Are not these patterns for us, as followers of our blessed Master?

Oh, dear brethren, it seems that when we compare our lives to the foregoing, and then think of what we are, we certainly have need to cry out, Oh God! forgive, forgive! The apostle's language seems to fall upon us with a condemning power, for instead of blessing those who persecute us, even in the ways of righteousness, we are found to be among the class who would rather yield to cursing. Often does the tempter say, "have nothing to do with such contemptible and mean persons as those professing Christians are, you can do far better, and live more Christian-like, and still be a follower of Christ—curse them; yea, curse and bless not." But the Word says, "Bless," "Do good to them that hate you." Oh, how can I do this! my heart is bitter against such teaching; I have not the right spirit; the spirit that my dear Lord and Master exhibited, I can not do as I ought to do. Oh, God help me! "Create within me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me.—Psalmist David."

Such are too often the expressions of the heart not thoroughly subdued by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit of God; and the spirit characterized by the professed Christian because the absorbing topic of the unbeliever and the critic; and we hear fightings without and fears within—the cause of Christ suffers—the unity of the spirit is paralyzed, and Satan, the arch enemy of our blood-bought souls, is made to rejoice, and the votaries of sin here below to say, "truly Christianity is a sham, a farce, for the true spirit of Christianity is not found as it once was."

Oh God! our souls go out in prayer and heart-felt desire, that thou wouldst revive the parched feelings for a living Christianity, for a soul-enjoying, a soul reviving feast of searching after, and receiving of the Spirit's divine influence; that men to-day may cast off that prejudice with which Satan has fast bound them; and be unshackled from every detering hindrance, to a free and soul-progressing and God-fearing Christianity, that men may thus be enabled to serve God with a full purpose of heart, and thus glorify God their Father, and honor their dear Redeemer, and be no longer a stumbling-block, but a grand and glorious success through the instrumentality of a free and truly Christian spirit. Surely if ever there was a time when Christians should unite to work against the hosts of sin, it is now! and now more than ever do the different professed ministers of Christ, to-day array themselves against each other. Certainly, brethren, "these things ought not so to be;" and the spirit thus manifested is a growing evil among the churches of christendom. Cannot we exert an influence for good by keeping out this selfishness, and the attendant evils thereof; for if we have the spirit of love which endureth all things, we shall be enabled by God's grace, to encounter and overcome through his Spirit all of the opposing elements, and thus become fashioned more after our blessed Redeemer, who has taught us to "be of the same mind one toward another," and to "endure all things."

Then let us "bear all things," endure all things as soldiers of the cross, and though professed saint, or sinner may aim the arrow of persecution at us, either by open assault, or by private, and underhanded devices, let us not be moved, for we are assured that those are often enemies of the cross who are thus earnestly prosecuting their Master's work; their Master being him whom, of course, they serve most faithfully; let us be wise as serpents," yet "harmless as doves," and possess the true characteristics of a devoted heart to the Master's cause; so that by and by we may receive the welcome plaudit, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my servants; ye have done it unto me"—Christ. "Bless them which persecute you, bless, and curse not."

ECHOES FROM THE SOUTH.

A Pleasant Church Meeting—Devotional Exercises—Coming Joy—The Dark Side—God's Government Repudiated.

ON last Saturday our congregation met pursuant to appointment, at Johnsville and was the result. More than the usual amount of business was presented for our attention. At our last meeting committees were appointed to visit the congregation preparatory to holding a love-feast.

A PLEASANT CHURCH MEETING

The reports developed the rather extraordinary accident of a congregation without a complaint, save one. Our contributions for the love-feast ran up rapidly, and, like Moses did on a certain occasion, we had to tell the brethren we had enough and some over; yet, after all that, they still brought in their gifts. The Lord will bless them when the cheerful givers are called up. We also arranged our matters for the coming District Meeting.

On the Sunday following a large congregation met in the meeting-house for

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES.

Brother B. F. Moomaw preached an impressive discourse from Hebrews 2: 6. Devoted attention was given to the sermon, and we think we will hear from it when the records of the earth are reviewed in the coming day.

There is a time of

approaching for our congregation. The 12th and 13th of April are the days set apart for our love-feast. We have several weeks, dear brethren, wherein to examine ourselves; therefore, do not wait till the eve of the feast to do that important work. Now if you remember that your brother hath aught against you, "go and be reconciled to him, and then come and offer thy gift." If that "aught" which he has against you, however, is the result of the perverseness, or obstinacy, or the improper conduct of your brother or sister, and his or her displeasure was caused by the discharge of your duty to the church, for the preservation of her principles, the obligation to "go and be reconciled" devolves on him or her and not on you.

I will take occasion here to say that we handle the above Scripture in a very one sided way sometimes. I do not remember ever to have heard it quoted on any other occasions than that of communions, when it is just as applicable in a score of other cases. I will mention a few Praying, "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," is a gift for the altar. Preaching the commandments of our Lord is another gift for the altar. Almsgiving is another gift for the altar, etc.

Notwithstanding the brightness of our expectations and the pleasantness of the picture spread out before us, we must not shut our eyes to

THE DARK SIDE.

Satan means to make our pilgrimage as rough and stormy as he possibly can. We must wear the thorn-crown here, and we say to him and all his co workers, press it down as hard as your malignant heart prompts you to, for by the grace of God we mean to stand firm for the cause of truth and righteousness.

This process, through which the Lord is leading us, is his plan of brightening our crown.

St. Paul endured the same fiery trials. Covenant breakers, secret-plotters who shunk behind the grim shadow of darkness to mature their unrighteous schemes, false brethren, who would kiss and curse him with the same lips, defamers backbiters, evil speakers, who would befoul his best works with their misrepresentations; everlastingly dogged him with their Satanic howls. But he laughed them to scorn, and exclaimed that "none of such things moved him."

Neither do we mean to swerve from our convictions of duty and right a hair's breadth. God has given us our commission and when we return it to him at death, we want it to testify to our faithfulness in fulfilling all of its terms and conditions.

GOD'S GOVERNMENT

has been repudiated practically, and men have in their acts as good as said that he does not know how to run a world. Hear how they grumble at the weather. See how they transform and malform their bodies by various and sundry devices. In fact men have manifested this spirit to such an extent in some parts of the world that they will not hold Christian fellowship with persons who will not in some way amend and improve the work of creation.

Well, we are a race of imperfect beings at best, and we should neither laugh nor weep at people's follies, but seek to amend them. Throw the gold-threaded cloak of charity over them. We do not exercise this divine virtue enough. If our Master should deal with us as we deal with one another, I fear very few of us would be saved. Further, if God will accept of our kind offices in the work of damnation there will be very little of that kind of work for him to do. We frequently act as though there was little else for us to do but to consign each other to the gentle embrace of Satan.

We would do well to try to accept the situation, and try to adopt our tastes and wishes to the inevitable. We shall not be here long. A king once seemed to be much disturbed on account of certain difficulties which he supposed to be very grievous. After suffering much on account thereof, a prudent servant asked him if he thought God governed the world wisely before he was born. "Yes," replied the king. Do you not think he will govern it as wisely after you are dead? "Yes," responded the king. Well, would you not do well to suffer him to govern it during the short while you live here?

Let us set ourselves about the more important work of reducing our sinful propensities to submission to all the variations of the golden rule. This life is too short to waste it in fruitless efforts to amend or improve what God has declared to be perfect. When we get "over there" it will add nothing to our joys to remember that if we would have had our will with many of the ransomed, they would not burden the Lord with their presence.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

NUMBER XVI.

MONTHS have elapsed since our last was communicated to these worthy religious columns. Church cares and daily duties have pressed upon us their claims, but we again find time to report. Private correspondents who have written me words of approbation for the "Echoes from the East," and all others, will please excuse their non-appearance for a time, and also pardon my want of proper time to answer their many letters. Time carries us on whether we will or not. Our days are passing by, and our duties and privileges are multiplying. So it is with all of us.

"KNOW THYSELF"

is a proverb which is said to have been written by a Grecian philosopher long, long ago. It is replete with meaning. It may be easy to utter, but to fulfill its momentous injunction is everything of import to each one of us. Could we know ourselves as we might and ought, how very differently we should demean ourselves in all the relations of life! Could we know the value of time, we should make a better use of it. Could we know the brevity of life and the fleetness of our days, we would improve each day with a purpose single to the nobility of life and the glory of God. May Heaven help us so to live that we may apply our hearts to wisdom's ways.

REVIEWING THE PAST.

We have it to say that we have had our regular religious services as usual. Besides these we had a very enjoyable series of meetings scattered to all the appointments in the congregation. The preaching was done by our well-beloved Brother Jacob Holsopple, of Cambria county, Pa., whom we can recommend to all the churches as an able minister of Christ in all the doctrine of our fraternity, and one who practices what he preaches. We rejoice that the church has many such quiet, unostentatious men who stand up for the true old plain order of dress among the brethren. There is all the more need of this to-day, since there is so much semi-infidelity creeping into the brotherhood. We hope the brethren everywhere are faithfully on the Lord's watch-tower, and although their warnings are unheeded by some, and derided by others, yet may the Lord's cause be maintained and watched over with a holy zeal.

We also had calls by Brother C. Imler, of Blair Co., Pa., and Brother J. D. Trostle, of Lingamore, Md., both plain brethren, and preaching the whole doctrine. May the Lord bless them, and accomplish great good by their ministrations in their respective fields of labor for Christ.

After an absence of about seven years our very dear Brother Daniel Holsinger, of Marion, Iowa, returns to pay us a brief visit. Without heralding his coming, he made us the more glad for his sudden coming. He preached for us a number of times with much grace, and acceptance to the church. He feels the care of keeping house in the church—the responsibility, the duty, and the hardships to be encountered. He is an elder of Paul's description, and what is lacking in the gift of delivery in preaching is made up in wisdom and deportment. Do you say it is too much praise, dear reader? Nay, for says a faithful apostle, "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine." But now-a-days we should be careful whom we commend. Some have turned aside from duty, and must not be encouraged. Some are easily elated, and seek the flattery of admirers. "What shall the end of these things be?" Paul says, "I praise you," for your attention to teaching and your obedience; but "I praise you not" for your disobedience and neglect. 1 Cor. 11. When we hear the true and original doctrine of the church defended, and the same exemplified by a quiet, humble, and peaceable life, we joy and rejoice in the hope of Zion.

LORD'S DAY SERVICES.

Our only regular meeting yesterday morning was at the Price's meeting house. A good attendance, the weather being favorable, but roads somewhat bad.

"O Lord to us assembled here, Reveal thy smiling face."

This beautiful hymn introduced the services. After exhortation and prayers, a deacon visitor, by request, read Mark 14. A ministering brother then chose the circumstance of the precious ointment being poured upon the head of Christ by a believing woman.

I. The offering of love.

II. The offering accepted.

III. The offering a lasting memorial.

These seem to be the prominent features of the passage, and are most wholesome food for those who hunger after righteousness. By application the church was admonished to more liberality to the necessities of the church that the cause of Christ be not hindered or in want. The Lord's cause ought to be remembered first, and our spending ought to be according to his will. Wisdom in giving is necessary, and O that we all had wisdom in giving and receiving. Brethren and sisters, let us be liberal for every good work, but see that you be not the means of encouraging what is contrary to Christ and His Holy Church.

The 339th hymn was sung in conclusion.

May peace be with all who love Christ and the Brethren. D. B. MENTZER.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 31st 1879.

THE MOOMAW PROPOSITION.

Dear Brethren:—

I THINK, to select two brethren to preach in cities by a direct vote of the donors is not the best way to do it. A better way would be for the donors to choose the editors of the Primitive Christian or the editors of the BRETHREN AT WORK a board of managers, to select competent brethren as near the cities in which the preaching is to be done as they can be got. Said board of managers to receive the donations and pay the same over to the brethren doing the work and report it through the paper. Donors to decide by a vote addressed to the moderator of next Annual Meeting, sent in care of next Annual Meeting post master; and there decide whether the editors of the Primitive Christian or the editors of the BRETHREN AT WORK shall be the board of managers.

The following are some of the advantages of this plan over that:

1. This board would have much better facilities to select competent brethren for the purpose than the donors, who are scattered over the States.

2. A much larger amount of work could be done with the same expense by selecting brethren as near the place of labor as possible.

3. Being nearer home to the brethren sent, when a good work would be started it would more readily be seen after by suitable brethren.

4. In this way the work could be carried on in more than one city at the same time.

5. Having more than one company of brethren to labor in cities would furnish us a more varied experience and give it a better test.

M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARRISON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name over and above the nine names the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered Letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending a P. O. be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - APRIL 17, 1878.

BROTHER J. W. Stein and family reached Mt Morris last week.

TWO were baptized in the Dutchtown congregation the first part of last week.

BROTHER George Hannwalt's address is changed from McVeytown, Pennsylvania, to Johnstown, Cambria County, same State.

THE men who seek most after praise are generally those who get the least of it. If a man deserves praise he is likely to get it soon enough.

WE call attention to Brother Howard Miller's notice on eighth page. Those wishing to travel considerable will do well to correspond with Brother Miller.

AN exchange shows up the uselessness of fashionable mothers, asking, "Who ever knew a great and good man, or great and good woman, reared under the tuition of a fashionable mother?"

"OUR Sunday School" is the title of another paper started at Ashland, Ohio, and edited by Brother S. Z. Sharp. The paper presents a neat appearance, and is published weekly. It is devoted mainly to Sunday-school work.

UNLESS somebody happens to hit on our plan for holding the Annual Meeting we shall publish ours in a few weeks. Some articles on that subject will appear next week or soon after. Our people are becoming interested, and it is time they were.

THE emigration of the colored people still continues. They are fleeing out of the South as the Israelites fled out of Egypt. Thousands of colored people are leaving their southern homes and seeking resting places in the West. It is thought that the move will greatly injure the South by thus depriving it of this laboring element.

BROTHER C. C. Root says: "I am now in North Mission Field, fifty miles west of Quincy. I commenced work on the 30th of March. Had eight meetings here—four accessions to-day and one more applicant with others nigh the kingdom. From here I go westward. Brethren, remember the mission field in your prayers. April 6th."

WE are in receipt of advance sheets of a map of Western Asia, which promises to be a help to Bible students. This map is largely prepared from original surveys made in Mesopotamia, Assyria, Media, the great desert, Armenia, &c. For further particulars write for circular, addressing Prof. H. S. Osborne, University, Oxford, Ohio.

WE are in receipt of the best map of Palestine we ever saw. It is a bird's eye view of the Holy Land, and cannot help interesting all Bible students. This map should be in every Sunday-school in the land. It is in a good condition to frame and hang on the wall. Sent post paid for $1.00. If five or more are ordered to one address they will be sent for 80 cents each.

WE are in receipt of the Brethren's new Tune and Hymn Book, published by Quinter, Brumbaugh Brothers, Huntingdon, Pennsylvania. We know but little about music and therefore cannot speak of the merits of the Book in that respect but the appearance and arrangements of the work are certainly a credit to the publishers. The printing and binding are well done. The book will doubtless have a wide circulation among our people. For terms, &c., address the publishers at Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

BROTHER Jesse Y. Beckler, of Hickory Grove, preached in Lanark one evening last week. He is preparing to start West, and locate in Cass County, Nebraska. His post-office will be Weeping Water. We are loth to part with the dear brother and his family, but the will of the Lord be done. There is room for hundreds of others to go West and build up churches.

WHO ever heard of a lamp that needed neither filling or trimming? Yet there are some people who act as though the Christian lamp needed no replenishing. Brother and sister, what are you doing to make your light burn brighter? Are you constantly filling your lamp? Do you care for it as you should? You should let your light shine before men that they may see your good works.

ON another page will be found a communication from our beloved Brother Daniel Vanman, relating to choosing the editors of the Primitive Christian or BRETHREN AT WORK as a board to select ministers to preach in cities. No doubt Brother Vanman's intentions were good, but we think work of that kind ought not to be committed to editors. They have too many responsibilities already. If a board is necessary, there are others who can attend to it just as well if not better, than editors. We may say something more about it in the future.

SHOULD any of our brethren desire to locate in eastern Iowa, they would do well to visit Cedar County. It is one of the most beautiful as well as one of the most productive regions in the great Mississippi Valley. Ministers traveling over the Chicago & North Western R. R. should stop off, if possible, at Clarence, where, if notice be given, they will be met by Brethren John Zuck or B. F. Miller. For further information, address either of the above named brethren at Clarence, Cedar County, Iowa. If you wish a reply do not forget to enclose a stamp, for it is no small matter to answer scores of letters. Divide the burden.

A WRITER, in the Lutheran Observer, of Feb. 14, 1877, offers the following argument against feet-washing. He says:

"Only the smaller and more illiterate sects practice feet-washing as a divine ordinance; and that sensitive and cultured Christian women, could not be induced to uncover their feet for a public washing in our day, with the constraints of our accidental customs, were they not under the powerful influence of a misguided conscience."

That is an honest confession, and is about as good an apology as the proud, worldly cultured can offer. These "sensitive and cultured Christian women" are just a little bit too proud to uncover their feet. It was not so with the Primitive Christians; not so with the apostles and those who did the "all things" commanded by the Master. But then feet-washing is not for those who are too proud to do it, it is for the humble followers of Christ, and they who are not humble need not expect to enjoy the happiness resulting from obeying either this or any other command in the Bible.

POOR MINISTERS.

WE are in receipt of a letter from a poor ministering brother, who is having a hard struggle with poverty. He has no home; works hard, has his family to support, and does a great deal of preaching besides. We hear of many such ministers among our people, and it is astonishing how much some of them are expected to do. A rich member is expected to move along in the even tenor of his way, make money, prepare himself a comfortable home, and give something towards defraying the expenses of the church. He is rich, and what he gives is no sacrifice to him — he can afford to do ten times as much if he only would.

Along side of him may live a poor minister, with a large family. This minister is expected to make his own living, support his family, pay his debts, stop work whenever called on and preach funerals, read his Bible and study it well, preach once or twice every Sunday, look after the church, and of course must go to meeting whether any body else goes or not. All this he is expected to do and not murmur. If he complains a little, and seeks a little help, he is supposed to want pay for his preaching, and thus his influence is more or less hurt. Likely his expenses, including the time he loses, the loss of crops by not having time to attend to them, traveling expenses, &c., may amount to over one hundred dollars each year. In short, he is expected to give one hundred more toward the building up of the church than his rich brother who lives near by. The efforts of the poor minister tend to improve the morals of the community, elevate the society and otherwise improve the community. The rich brother gets his to I share of the benefits, yet helps to bear none of the burden.

There are numbers of just such cases in the land. The preachers must bear the cross alone and all the church go free. In all candor we ask, is this the right way of doing? is it according to the gospel for poor men to minister and thus have to do more than those who are rich? "But," says one, "we do not want to spoil our minister by helping him too much. We are afraid if we commence giving to him we will have to keep it up." That is just where the trouble comes in. The rich are never afraid of money spoiling them, no, never, but they will not trust it in the hands of some poor minister and his family. "But," say they, "we will relieve him by holding an election, and setting apart another brother to assist him in the ministry." Well, what does that amount to? It may take this newly elected minister two or three years to learn to preach, and he may be poor too, and thus the case is not mended any.

I suggest a better way. If you have a faithful minister, take care of him. He is your servant, and the church cannot afford to do without him. If he has no home, try and assist in getting him one. If he cannot support his family as they ought to be, assist him. Do not be afraid to give him a load of hay, or corn. Do not be afraid to give his wife and children suits of clothing. And it will not hurt the poor man to wake up some morning and find a few sacks of flour leaning against the door. In short, there are a thousand ways of helping poor ministers along if only willing hands can be found to do it.

These poor ministers do not write about these things in our papers, they have not the heart to do it, they would sooner suffer than to beg. I will write for them, and God help me do it. We have among us many wealthy ministers. Some are at work and others are not, but we have a host of poor ones, not so many in this part of the country, but they are in other localities. Not long since I received a letter from a poor minister's wife. Her husband is an able preacher. She said they needed help, but her husband did not want anything said about it for he did not want to beg. Just a few days ago another poor minister wrote for help. He had no home, and wanted to get one, and did not know what to do if he failed. We would gladly have helped him, but did not have the means to do so.

Now, brethren and sisters, it is not right to let the cause suffer in this way. If your minister is poor and unable to do his part of the work you should confer together and contrive to help him, and by so doing you will be advancing the interest of the cause just that much.

BIBLE SCHOOL WORK.

IN number thirteen of BRETHREN AT WORK, under the caption, Bible Schools, was presented a method of teaching the people the eternal truth as contained in the Oracles of God. It is not the result of hasty and immature thought, but the conclusion of years of careful investigation. I am glad that others are favorably impressed with the method, as it will thus receive a thorough trial.

The Brethren's School in Lanark, on the last Sunday in March, began work according to the plan mentioned, and a sketch of what was taught and the manner, will, perhaps, aid others who are contemplating similar organizations.

1. The primary class was taken in charge by Brother M. V. Sword, who, in a brief and entertaining manner, talked to the little folks on the love of God. He asked them some very familiar questions, and drew from them some grand facts of the Bible. All others in the house were attentive listeners, and they gave evidence that instruction suited to little boys and girls, was not entirely void of food for those who are higher in stature. About ten minutes were thus spent, when the teacher proceeded to hear the verses that had been committed to memory.

2. The writer then took charge of the second grade, and after repeating Matt. 14: 22-36 from memory, called attention to the places mentioned in the lesson, using the Map of the Holy Land. The next step was a series of questions, which, we are pleased to observe, were answered in a commendable manner by the whole class in concert. There were upwards of thirty pupils in this grade. While this class was reciting, those of the third grade also had opportunity to gather the gems from the lesson. Fifteen minutes were thus spent after which the sub-teachers heard the pupils recite the verses which had been memorized.

3. The teacher of the third grade, Brother S. J. Harrison, now proceeded to hear his class recite. The subject was, GOD. 1. The names of God. His names are Jehovah, Jah, I Am, Lord and God, Lord and God of Hosts, and Ishi. Twenty verses in the Bible were presented in support of these names. We refer the reader to some of them. Psalm 85: 18; Psalm 68: 4; Ex. 3: 14 and 6: 2, Jer. 51: 19; Hos. 2: 16. 2. The Representations of God. First: By fire. 2 Sam. 22: 13; Ps. 93: 3; Heb. 12: 29; Rev. 6: 5. Second: By light. 2 Sam. 22: 29; Ps. 104: 2; 1 John 1: 5. Third: By darkness or clouds. Ex. 19: 9; 1 Kings 8: 12. Fourth: By animals. (a) The unicorn. Num. 23: 22. (b) The lion. Job. 10: 16. (c) Birds. Isa. 31: 5. (d) A bear Lam. 3. 10. (e) Moth. Hos. 5: 12. Fifth: By a fir tree. Hos. 14: 8. Sixth: By visible glory. Ex. 16: 10 and 24: 16, 17, 18: Ez. 43: 5 and 44: 4. Seventh: As being local. Ex. 19: 17 and 20: 21; Num. 23: 15; 1 Kings 19: 11. Eighth: As dwelling among men. Ex. 25: 8 and 44: 15; Rev. 21: 3. Ninth: As moving about. Gen. 17: 22; Ex. 19: 20; Num. 12: 5 and 23: 4; Deut. 33: 2; Hab. 3: 3; Micah 1: 3. Tenth: As using vehicles. 2 Sam. 22: 11; Ps. 18: 10; Hab. 3: 8; Zech. 9: 14. Nearly one hundred verses in the Bible refer to God's representation, or in all the lesson recited there is Scriptural testimony amounting to about one hundred and fifteen verses. To know what is in the Bible on this subject, should be the chief aim of all who say they accept the one best Book as their only infallible rule of faith and practice.

The recitation of class third occupied about thirty minutes, after which the school was brought to a close in the usual order, by singing and prayer. The unavoidable noise attending Sunday-school teaching was noticeably absent.

The best work adapted to pupils of the third grade is "The Scriptural Manual." It is a work of 528 pages. The subjects of the Bible are properly classified and alphabetically arranged so as to be easily read and taught. It is without note or comments, a very commendable feature. The work is purely Bible. As a help to ministers and students I know of no better. Price $2.00, and may be had by addressing this office.

4. The lesson for Sunday, April 6th, consisted of the following: First: God appears in human form. Ex. 24: 10, 11; Isa. 6: 1; Rev. 6: 2. Second: He has human features and members. (a) Face. Gen. 32: 30; Ex. 33: 11 and 34: 10; Rev. 20: 11. (b) Eyes. Chr. 16: 9; Prov. 22: 12. (c) Nostrils. 2 Sam. 22: 9, 16; Ps. 18: 15. (d) Organs of speech. Num. 12: 8; Isa. 30: 27. (e) Shoulders. Deut. 33: 12. (f) Hand. Ps. 21: 8 and 74: 11. (g) Fingers. Ps. 8: 3; Luke 11: 20. (h) Back. Ex. 33: 23. (i) Feet. Ps. 18: 9. Third: Uses human voice. Ex. 3: 4 and 19: 19; Deut. 4: 25, 26; Heb. 12: 19, 26. Fourth: God laughs and sleeps. Ps. 2: 4; 59: 8 and 78: 65. Fifth: God a warrior. Ex. 15: 3 and 17: 16; Isa. 66: 16; Zech. 16: 3; Jer. 21: 5. Sixth: God uses weapons. Deut. 32: 23; Isa. 34: 5; Jer. 1: 25; Hab. 3: 9. Seventh: God uncertain of the future. Judges 3: 4; Jer. 36: 3. Eighth: God is grieved. Gen. 6: 6; Judges 10: 16; Ps. 95: 10; Heb. 3: 10. Ninth: God is jealous. Ex. 34: 14; Deut. 4: 24 and 32: 21; Ezek. 38: 19. Tenth: God is angry. Num. 12: 9; Jud. 10: 7; Lam. 2: 3; Hos. 12: 14; Nahum 1: 6.

I have not given all the passages of Scripture on these subjects. There are about one hundred and forty verses in the Bible relating to these ten subjects. O how complete, how full, how inexhaustible is the word of God! The Lord grant us abundant grace to study it and obey it.

TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

WE are very thankful to you for keeping us so well supplied with church news from your respective localities. To all who are interested in the extension of Zion's borders, these letters are interesting; and if there are any who have not yet reported, we kindly invite them to do so. Let us stand together, brethren, and battle for the Lord.

But, on the other hand, we desire our corre-

...ters to be careful not to send us too church ... what is not church news. We have not ... space in the paper to publish all that ought ... be published, much less that which ought ... to be. In order to get all of our letters in ... paper, we are obliged to erase much that ... some of our correspondents write. This we would rather not do if we could avoid it, but in order to publish all we must. We would be pleased to have as many reports sent on postal cards as possible. Try them once, brethren, and we think you will find it to your and our convenience, and the interest of the paper.

OUR MANUSCRIPT.

IT has been our good fortune to receive more "copy" than we could possibly find room for, thus affording a good supply from which to select. This selection may not have always been the best — some good articles may have been passed over, and some not so good, used, still we did as well as we knew how at the time. Of course those who write for the press wish to know what becomes of their articles, and if rejected, why? They are anxious to know the reasons their articles do not appear. As a general thing editors have their hands full, and are sometimes compelled to take short cuts on their work, hence in selecting copy for the paper they are inclined to make choice of that requiring the least work to correct. In this way the best manuscript is used first, and of course the rest accumulates in the drawer, and when one drawer is full another is brought into service.

But now we purpose to empty these drawers —it will be a big job—and let our readers know what is in them, and what becomes of their articles. It may take several weeks to complete the task, but we have resolved to sit here at this desk, day after day, and week after week till the job is completed. We shall try and make the work both interesting and profitable to our readers.

No. 1, is a well written article giving a description of Oregon, and showing up many of its superior advantages. The writer says:

"Its great productiveness, and the great display at the Centennial has given Oregon world-wide renown, and has caused many persons, seeking homes, to inquire about the State."

Oregon is destined to become a leading State, and affords advantages found in few other places. There are a few Brethren in the State, and they are struggling hard to spread the truth, and build up the cause. We hope the time is not far distant when we will have many congregations in Oregon.

No. 2, is a report of a Sabbath-school meeting held in the Duncansville Church, Pennsylvania, Jan. 14th, 1879. Unintentionally this article was placed on the wrong pile of manuscript, hence its delay, and we conclude it now too old to be of special interest. Things of this kind will occasionally occur, and we always feel sorry, fearing that others may think that such articles are withheld on purpose. From the reading of the report we would judge that the meeting was interesting and well attended.

No. 3, is a private letter written to a sister and sent here by the writer for publication in the BRETHREN AT WORK. The letter is well written and contains many good thoughts, but would not likely interest many save the person for whom it was written. Letters of this kind should be sent direct to the party for whom they are intended, for, as a rule, they are not edifying to the generality of readers. Were we to commence admitting letters of this kind the paper would soon be filled with them. The letter is very closely written, so closely that it would be difficult to set it in type without rewriting at least one-half of it. Contributors should not write between the lines. It makes it too difficult for the compositors, and is very hard on their eyes.

No. 4, is a selected article, numerating some of the many instances in which the number seven is used. The first part of the article is dry, and not very profitable, but the closing part is suggestive. It reads as follows:

"Our Savior spoke seven times from the cross on which he hung seven hours, and after his resurrection appeared seven times.

"In the Lord's prayer are seven petitions containing seven times seven words.

"In the Revelations we read of seven churches, seven candlesticks, seven trumpets, seven plagues, seven vials, seven angels, and seven-headed monsters."

No. 5 is a short article on the "Death of Christ. The writer says:

"The high priest of the Jews was commanded by the law to take two goats, and cast lots upon the two, one lot for the Lord, the other for the people. The goat upon which the Lord's lot fell was to be slain for a sin offering; upon the other, the high priest was to lay both his hands and confess upon it all the sins and transgressions of the children of Israel and send it away by the hands of a fit man into the wilderness to bear their sins away."

The article goes on to show how our sins were laid on Christ the Lamb of God, but makes a few mistakes in attempting to account for the cause of the Savior sweating, as it were, great drops of blood, and further adds that if angels had not come and ministered unto him that he would have died in the garden.

No. 6. This article refers to the evils resulting from the improper use of means, showing that money should never be spent unless for something useful. The writer further states that Christians will be held responsible for their investments—the way they allow their money to work. If they invest their money where it will do harm to the cause of Christ they will have to render an account for this wrong use of that which has been entrusted to their care. The general run of the article is good, but it would have to be rewritten, and changed in several respects before it would be suitable to go into type. The article is also without a heading, and refers to Prov. 23: 23, but does not quote the verse. It would be quite a help to compositors (type setters) if writers would carefully observe the following suggestions: On the first line write the heading or name of the article; write it plainly; on the next line write your name. If you use a text, commence writing that on the third line, and do not fail to give reference. Be sure that you have it just as it stands in the Book. On the next line below the text commence your article. Do not make any apologies, for we have to be at the trouble of marking them out. If you want to say anything to the editors write it on a separate slip of paper. At the close of the article write your post-office address. The following may serve as a model for those who are not used to writing for the press:

THE ELECT LADY.

BY J. H. MOORE.

"The elder unto the elect lady and her children, whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known the truth."—2 John 1: 1.

We have no way of knowing who this "elect lady" was; her name is not given. She was evidently a pious woman, and highly esteemed by all who knew her, and so were her children pious and respected. This Scripture shows that we are privileged to call a Christian woman a "lady."

This verse is no proof of the doctrine of eternal election as taught by the Calvinist. We have no idea that she was "elect" in any Calvinistic sense, but rather in the true scriptural sense, that every Christian is "chosen out of the world."

ON THE WAY TO PALESTINE.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement.]

NUMBER II.

"A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep,
Where the sparkling waters rave,
And the winds their revel keep."

EXCUSE me for quoting this old song, for it expresses to perfection our life and home for the last ten days. For four days the waters truly raved around us, and the wind kept high revel. We have seen the ocean in its majesty, and have learned more than ever to adore the majesty of its Maker.

Our good ship, the Pennsylvania, left her dock at Philadelphia at precisely 8 o'clock Thursday morning, the 6th of March, and as she turned her bow down the Delaware River, passengers on the ship waved their handkerchiefs to friends more numerous on the shore, while the ship herself saluted the city with a shot from her brass cannon. Bros. VanCulin and Lobingier had come with us to the vessel, and given us their benediction; so having no other friends in sight to salute, I lifted my handkerchief high, and giving it a wide sweep, I said to Frank, "Here's to Lexington." After standing on deck until the city had faded away in the distance; until sloops and brigs and steam-tugs and shipyards innumerable had been passed, and the eye had grown weary with gazing upon unaccustomed objects, we retired to our rooms to arrange them as our temporary homes. We were fortunate enough, on account of the small number of passengers aboard, to have an entire room apiece. We had thought it preferable to be all in one room, until we saw how small the rooms are, and then we were glad of the separation. We had wisely limited our amount of baggage to a single hand-valise and a heavy shawl for each. Our shawls and light overcoats we have thus far found to be the very thing, especially the shawls.

At Cape Henlopen we saw about a dozen sailing-ships lying at anchor within the breakwater which the U. S. government has erected there for want of a good harbor. They were freighting vessels awaiting orders, and ready to sail wherever trade could be found. The cape is a low ridge of bare sand making out into the mouth of the bay, with a light-house on its point, and some other buildings scattered about. Cape May, the celebrated bathing place, is just twelve and a half miles distant, to the north-east, and the space between constitutes the mouth of the Delaware Bay. Two pilot-boats were riding off the light-house at Cape Henlopen, and into one of these the pilot who had thus far directed our ship's course was transferred by means of a yawl. Here we witnessed for the first time the perilous descent by a ladder let down the side of our ship into the yawl, which tossed and danced on the waves fifteen feet below. The pilot, after descending the ladder, watched his opportunity, and leaped, at the apparent risk of bruises or broken bones, into the yawl, seized its rudder oar, and guided it straight away to the little sailer awaiting him.

Our parting from the pilot was our entrance into the Atlantic Ocean. It occurred at 4 P. M. Before night closed in, the water had become our horizon on every side, the ship seeming to lie in the hollow of a vast basin; the sky, which was bright in the morning, had become overcast with gray clouds; and we retired to our berths not knowing what to expect, but knowing that in this blustering month of March foul weather was more to be looked for than fair.

On Friday morning I arose early, ascended to the deck, found all of our sails set, a high breeze blowing from the north-west, and our bow set to the east. While standing near the aft pilot-house (our ship has two pilot-houses—one forward for fair weather, and one aft for storms) I received my first taste of salt water. The sea was already boiling, and a wave of the larger size breaking flat against the windward side of the vessel, sent a shower of spray across the deck, sprinkling some of it in my face. The ship had begun to roll a little, so that I had to be careful of my steps, but I remained on deck till 8 o'clock, our breakfast hour, feasting my eye and my soul on the new and wonderful scenery. The waves were not rolling, but boiling; and every one, after swelling up to a high point like the peak of an isolated hill, crowned itself with a cap of white foam, and then subsided. I had expected to see some of the "rolling billows" of which I have read so often, but I have seen not one. The waves do not rise in long ridges, and roll along at regular intervals; but they rise and fall as if they were upheaved by a force beneath them, and it is only their general inclination in one direction which seems to the eye as if caused by the wind. They rise, too, in endless variety of size and shape. As you look over them from your high perch on the deck, they appear like a continued succession of hills and knobs and peaks in a range of mountains, without a single ridge of long and smooth outline in view. As I sat and gazed on these waves, I discovered new beauties continually. The sea-water that morning appeared as black as ink; but as each wave swelled up toward a point, and the light passed through it just beneath its white cap, its hue was changed to the most beautiful emerald green. When the sun shone out, these gleams of emerald appeared on the top of every wave just before its subsidence; and along the wake of the vessel, where her propeller had broken the watery hills into little hillocks, there was a long succession of green and black and purple spots, alternating, and deepening in color with the distance. I wondered what there could be in a scene of such beauty, and in the life-like motions of the noble ship, to make anybody sick. I felt as if I never could be sick with such objects in view. But when the gong sounded and I went down to breakfast, I observed that most of the seats at table were vacant. I sat down amid the congratulations of the Captain and a passenger opposite me, on my freedom from sickness thus far, but I had taken only a sip or two of my coffee, when my seat was also made vacant, and I retired with as much dignity as I could to the deck. During the remainder of Friday, and all of Saturday, I was sick, sick, sick. I didn't say "O my!" nor did I hear anybody else say it. This expression seems to have passed out of date since Mark Twain went abroad. Our company said nothing at all. No language was adequate to the occasion. A sudden paleness, a hasty retreat toward the bulwarks, were the only signs of woe by which we could distinguish each other's symptoms. By Sunday morning I was relieved of my sea sickness, but I was completely worn out. The breeze of Friday had steadily increased until it had become a heavy gale. The ship had reeled to and fro like a drunken man, and all the passengers had been tossed about without mercy. I had skinned one of my shins, nearly broke two of my ribs, was tortured with a gum boil, was as limber as a dish-rag, and would have sold myself very cheap. I felt, indeed, that I would not be worth picking up in the street. But I was now able to eat a little breakfast, and from that time my symptoms improved. All day Sunday we were in a storm. The wind blew furiously; rain and hail and snow fell alternately; the tops of high waves broke over the vessel and deluged some part of its deck every few minutes; one of our life-boats, perched four feet above the deck on strong iron supports, had been dashed to pieces by one of them; and I saw another burst in the door and window of the rear pilot house, and flood it with water. As a number of us sat in the companion way gazing with awe upon this terrific scene, I took from the lap of one of the ladies her Episcopal prayer-book, and turning to the 107th Psalm, read aloud to the company the following passage:

"They that go down to the sea in ships,
That do business in great waters,
These see the works of the Lord
And his wonders in the deep.
For he commandeth and raiseth up the stormy wind,
Which lifteth up the waves thereof,
They mount up to the heavens,
They go down again to the depths,
Their soul is melted because of trouble,
They reel to and fro,
And stagger like a drunken man,
And are at their wits' end,
Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble,
And he bringeth them out of their distresses."

It struck us all as an exact description of the scene before our eyes, and it illustrates the wonderful fidelity to nature which is every-where found in the Bible.

I asked the captain the next morning, how high he supposed the highest waves were on Sunday, and was surprised at his statement that they were at least forty feet, and that he had never seen waves roll higher. He had been compelled to turn out of his course a little, and run somewhat before the gale, in order to prevent the waves from dashing too squarely against the side of the vessel; and he remarked that very few ships have strength enough to hold as near to the wind in such a storm as ours did. It was not until I heard these and similar remarks, that I realized how severe the storm had been. I had watched the scene with the deepest interest and even with delight. I had found a strange, wild pleasure, in seeing the waves dash over the vessel and seeing the vessel herself at one moment lift her leeward bulwarks thirty feet above the water, and at another lean over until she dipped them beneath the foaming wave. The only hindrance to my enjoyment was the difficulty of either walking, standing, sitting, or lying down. In my berth, whether day or night, I was rolled about and bumped against the back, and bumped against the front, with arms tired from holding on, and knees sore from bracing them against the side-board rail to keep me from rolling on the floor. Sitting was worse than trying to prop yourself on a one-legged stool. And as for standing, if you wish to realize it on land, try to stand on a see-saw, close to the fence, when two lively boys are riding on the ends. It was not until Tuesday morning, the sixth day out, that I got my sea-legs on, completely rigged. When I went on deck that morning, the breeze was still a stiff one, and the waves pitching high in the air; but the wind was more astern, and the ship was rocking instead of rolling. I found that I could walk like a sailor, so I felt not a little proud of it until I found that all the other passengers could do the same.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell"

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. In order to promote Bible Truth, all questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Compare and explain Ex. 24: 10, 11, and John 1: 18. B. H. R.

Will some one please explain whether feet-washing took place under the old or new dispensations?

Is the Cherubim, or Flaming Sword still between man and the tree of life? C. L. CROTSLEY.

Please explain 1 Tim. 5:8, which reads as follows: "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." E. S.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2:47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8:33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

Will you, or some one else please give an explanation of Rev. 2: 17? It reads thus: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it."

MARY ZIGLER.

I desire an explanation on 1 Tim. 5: 24: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after."

S. A. WHITNEY.

Please give your views through the BRETHREN AT WORK, of Matt. 5: 25, which reads as follows: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison."

Also 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10: "Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work."

J. B. ELLER.

Will some one please explain Heb. 7: 1, 3: "For this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him; without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." M. B.

Will some one please explain Jer. 12: 5? It reads as follows: "If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?"

C. E. M.

I would like to have some one explain, through your paper, Heb. 8: 8, 10. It reads as follows: "For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people."

BAPTIZED FOR THE DEAD.

Please explain through the BRETHREN AT WORK the meaning of 1 Cor. 15: 29. It reads as follows: "Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?"

What are we to understand by the term, "Why are they then baptized for the dead?" J. E.

VARIOUS interpretations have been given to this phrase. Some say it means baptized in the room of the dead just fallen in the cause of Christ, and who are thus supported by a succession of new converts, immediately offering themselves to fill up their places, as ranks of soldiers who advance in the room of their companions who have just been slain in their sight.

Dr Macknight's opinion we rather favor, he supplies the words, the resurrection of, and reads the clause, Who are baptized for the resurrection of the dead; or in consequence of their believing in the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead: on account of which faith, and their profession of it, they are exposed to great sufferings, for which they can have no recompense, if there be no resurrection of the dead, nor any future life. MATTIE A. LEAR.

OUR BETTER HOME.

BY M. CREES.

HOW sweet do these words sound to the weary pilgrim as he travels along this thorny road. A better home beyond, ah! beyond what? beyond the storms of this life and the river of death. How sweet to reflect on that home, when tempted and tried on every hand by the evil one, when sorrows encompass us, when in deep affliction. We can then look by faith to Jesus, who has told us that in his Father's house are many mansions, and that he has gone to prepare one for each and every one that will follow his blessed teachings while here on earth, and he has told us that he will come again and receive us to himself where we will reign with him and sing songs of praises forever.

O blissful moment when aside
These earthly robes we'll cast,
Then wake to know our souls have found
A better home at last.

It will indeed be a blissful moment to all those who have their lamps trimmed and burning, ready to meet the bridegroom, to leave this world for the realms of endless day. We are tossed about in this world, as it were, on the waves of the ocean, but it will all be over soon. A few more trials and tears and we anchor into rest.

Yet a little while we linger, ere we reach our journey's end
Yet a little while to labor, ere the evening's shade descend
Then we lay us down to slumber, and the night will soon be o'er
In the bright, the bright forever, we shall go to sleep no more.

May God bless us and help us so to live that we may be ready when he comes to take us home.

THE YOUTH AND THE CHURCH.

BY SIMON BETRICK.

MANY persons ask with anxiety, How are we to save the youth? For while many young men and women attach themselves to the church and take the places of parents passing away, hundreds are forsaking the ordinances and showing no concern for religion. The coming church must depend on the converted youth. Men from middle age and older are now and then rescued and adapted to Christian work only in exceptional cases. It is the trained and consecrated youth upon whom we depend for success in the future. Much of the youthful irregularity is the result of parental neglect. Fathers and mothers do not live up to their responsibility. Instead of teaching their children by precept and example, the duty and blessing of serving God, they give them over into the hands of others and pay no attention to their instruction. Boys, especially, are permitted to mature unimpressed with the deep necessity of being religious and to regard it as the highest good, beyond which there is nothing demanding their attention. The church, the regular ordinance of grace, and all that pertains to holy worship, fail to impress them because they have not been taught to see them as given of God.

We believe it to be an almost infallible rule that if parents would impress the dying charge of the royal David to his son, "show thyself a man," their words are the law to their offspring, their footsteps are their guides in life. If parents fail in word and deed, in life, the children will go astray. But in order to properly impress the children, parents must be spiritually minded. It is the glow, the fervor of religion that makes it productive of good. Cold legislation is withering, but if with all the rules of the household there goes the warmth of true Christian devotion, the blessed result will follow. "Train up a child in the way," &c. "Seek me early." Prov. 8: 17. Impress upon their young minds to observe the Bible. It is a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by day. Move along the pathway of man, and if he follow that pillar of fire and cloud he will reach the land of promise.

THE GENTLENESS OF GRACE.—The greatest results in the workings of God's providence are brought about in the quietest ways. Truth falls on the ready soil like light on the photographic plate; grace clothes it with beauty and joy, as the breath of Spring renews the landscape; and the result is as when the glory of the harvest follows the Summer's warmth, and crowns the labors of the year.

GOD has no partner in his wisdom, doubt not, therefore, though thou understandest not.

NUMBER XIV.

Pleasant Greetings:—At the Sacred Desk:—Happy Meeting:—The Tolling Bell:—Sunday Service.

COLD and stormy is the weather and the sanctuary privileges will be denied to many this evening. Remained at home with the family and spent the time as best I could preparatory for the service of the Master in the future. Brother E. Bosserman will conduct the services of the evening and we fondly hope the Lord will bless him much in the labors of the hour. Lord's day morning once more upon our view, weather calm and the sun is shedding his rays upon us with all his majestic beauty and strength. Travel is slow on account of the rough roads, we lessened the load and our dear Brother W. C. Teeter and the writer wended our way to Eagle Creek Church for divine services. Found a good congregation of eager listeners, and, among them, a number of our young converts. Had a pleasant greeting and all seemed joyous and hopeful in the cause they recently espoused. Oh what comfort and joy the religion of Jesus can give to the heart of man! It is inexpressible and full of glory. Services were introduced by singing the 142nd hymn,

"Father of mercies, in thy Word,
What endless glory shines," etc.,

then went to prayer. Next a portion of Scripture was read by one of the deacons present. The motto for discourse, "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory," Col. 3: 4, was selected by one of the ministers at the stand and deliberated upon to an interesting and attentive audience. Christ was represented as being our life, and from him we have perpetual growth. As being the everlasting Head, and his church the body. As being the Vine and the members the branches. As appearing to individuals at death and of their necessity of being prepared for that final hour. As appearing at the seat of judgment in the glory of his power, closing with an appeal to the audience to prepare for those attendant solemnities by yielding obedience to all of Christ's commands that we all might share the joys of the eternal world. Brother W. C. Teeter offered in conclusion the 136th hymn,

"Thine earthly Sabbaths, Lord, we love,
But there's a nobler rest above," etc.

Thus ends another sanctuary privilege, and I trust, to the improvement of all. Our enjoyments within these sacred walls will soon be over, a few more meetings and partings and then shall we participate in the joys of the church of the first born above.

To-day we met in the sanctuary and worshipped with our band of new converts at Pleasant Ridge. Had a very pleasant season of prayer and praise with them. All seemed to feel happy in the new life, and if the face is an index to the heart they are determined to labor in the vineyard and make heaven their home. The services were introduced in the usual manner, and the audience was addressed by one of the speakers present. Subject, Man. Jer. 5: 1. The speaker's remarks were based mainly upon the following propositions:

1. The popular idea of man.
2. The divine idea of man.

There are various ways in which we form opinions and decide the characteristics of man. Of some persons we say he is quite a "man" from his display of wealth, the attire of the person or, of his intellectual abilities. And from the influence he exerts in those particulars he is regarded from popular opinion as being "the man." But this is far from the divine idea of man. To become elevated to the divine idea, man must be a seeker and lover of truth, defined as Jesus says "Thy word is truth." This truth man must accept and obey. Must "walk in the truth." Historical, scientific and moral truths are beneficial to humanity, but they have not embodied within themselves that elevating and inspiring nature that will raise us to the standard of the divine idea of man and will not alone be sufficient to bring him to the truth as it is in Jesus. Moral truth consists in integrity and uprightness with all their corresponding virtues. Gospel truth consists in all the commands and duties of the gospel both positive and negative, and he who obeys all the truth as it is in Jesus, is on the elevated plane, that of the divine idea of man. Then by those divine capabilities in man he can impart to others and be a blessing to all by whom he is surrounded, and will have bright stars to wear in his crown of glory in the world to come. Brother W. C. Teeter offered a closing song of praise which was sung in honor to God, then went to prayer and dismissed the congregation. Thus another pleasant season of worship in the sanctuary of the Lord.

Go on, my dear brethren and sisters, a few more meetings here, and then a last farewell until we meet where sabbaths never end. May God enable us all to live faithfully that that happy reunion in heaven may be ours to enjoy in the world of glory.

The funeral bell is tolling, summoning our citizens together to pay the last tributes of respect to one of our fellow townsmen. Services in the U. B. Church, by Mr. D. A. Johnston, to a large and attentive audience. What anguish in the widow's heart! What wondering sorrow in that of the little boy! Ah! it is hard when the stay of the family is removed. May God bless the fatherless children and the widows in their lonely conditions. The charities of the world are cold. Then, oh Christian, may thy heart be open with practical sympathy, towards the needy, in substantial aid.

To-day we met for divine service at the old church, at which time the funeral service of Friend George Hardishell's little child was attended to by the brethren. Subject, Mortality of Man. Isaiah 64: 5, central clause, The speaker applied the text, 1st, To national declension as seen in the waning and weakness of the nations of earth in their power and apparent glory; 2nd, To religious declension as seen in churches and individuals; 3rd, Mainly on the declension of man physically as losing his power, fading away and bidding adieu to all that is earthly; which decline is natural, gradual and not unfrequently hastened on by external circumstances, as it was the case of the subject of our notice to-day. Truly can it be said "budded on earth to bloom in heaven." May God help the sorrowing parents fully to prepare for a happy reunion in the eternal world.

"Thy life I read, my dearest Lord,
With transport all divine," &c.,

was selected by Brother J. Wilmore, who led us in prayer.

Thus another sorrowful scene is over. Whose heart will next be pierced is only known by the great Eternal. May we all be prepared for every dispensation in the providence of God.

From Mercer, West Va.

Dear Brethren:—

I HERE give you a detail of my trip to Fayette county, West Virginia. I left home the 8th of February; preached two discourses in Summers county to attentive congregations. We now have one member there and four applicants for baptism. The prospects are good to establish a church in that place.

I went to Fayette county; preached four discourses. The brethren and sisters and friends here manifest great interest in the Christian religion.

The weather was very cold and snowy, but the people turned out well. I hereby render my thanks to all for the love and affections shown towards me and towards one another. It does me good to visit congregations where there is so much love manifested as I saw in the Fayette congregation. Their speakers are doing their duty. Things are moving on smoothly.

I then started for Raleigh county; preached at Brother Evan's school-house at night, to an attentive little congregation. Next day went to the church in Raleigh; preached five discourses. Things are not doing so well in Raleigh at this time, as they are without a speaker—he was cut off from the church the third day of August last. While I was in Raleigh, I picked up a paper known as the BRETHREN AT WORK, dated September 26th, 1878, No. 39, in which I found a letter from Raleigh, by W. H. Bailey, stating that sickness was taking many of their citizens away—insomuch that the people had become hardened so that few tears are shed when the messenger of death comes, and takes out of the family one of its best members. So it is with the church here, on the third day of August one of our best members went from the fold never to return; and it seemed that joy instead of sorrow was the result with a majority of the members present. So ends his letter. He said one had went away never to return. He was the one that was turned out. He spoke of spiritual sickness among them. He was spiritually sick, and had been for two or three years. The Brethren done all they could to restore him again to health, but all efforts failed, and on the third of August he was cut off from the church. We do sincerely hope and trust he will see his error, and repent and come back. He was an able speaker, and could do much good. May the Lord help him to reform.

From Raleigh I went to Fulton Mountain, where I met with the Brethren, and delivered two discourses. The Brethren were well pleased with my visit, and manifested a Christian spirit.

I landed home on the 4th of March. Found all well except one son who was very sick with liver complaint. In my absence they had the doctor brought. He is now recovering slowly. My wife says no one knows the trouble and uneasiness she had in my absence. She can sympathize with the beloved sisters whose companions go out to preach. May the Lord help us all to bear our troubles.

Yours in love,

R. Harry.

Dear Brethren:—

BY way of church news I am happy in saying that here, in the Indian Creek congregation, the Master's cause is prospering, both by accessions and more practical piety among the members. We have just passed through another special season of divine grace, another rich "gale of mercy," which causes the truly devoted Christian heart to be lifted entirely above the ordinary affairs of human life, and which enables the immortal hungerings of the soul to enjoy a sweet foretaste of that unalloyed bliss "that eye hath not seen nor ear heard." We enjoyed a series of meetings held by our home minister, and with the angels of God we are trying to rejoice over the adoption of some more precious souls into God's family. Seven, during our meetings, have become willing to follow the sympathizing Jesus. Dear young fellow-christians, will we not try now, by divine aid, to excel in our conduct and deportment? Let us watch and guard the avenues to our hearts that we may never again become entangled with the yoke of bondage. Let us refrain from loud laughter and foolish talking, and let us try by a meek and quiet spirit, and cheerful obedience to Christian duties, to show that we have been with Jesus, and learned of him. I know the power of good example and sincere Christian deportment. My memory calls to mind just now, of a dear loving young disciple that was the means through God, by her godly, sympathetic appeals in behalf of religion, of me coming to the Savior; and, although we enjoyed her endearing association for a short time only in the church militant, and a few days ago had to take a sad farewell for this life—yet I know and realize that her influence for good is still going on, and may yet add luster to her unfading crown of glory. Let us remember our influence. Keep the lamp burning.

From Berrien Springs, Michigan.

Dear Brethren:—

I TAKE my pen with very feeble hand, as I lie prone upon my bed, (where I have been lying for three months) to address a few thoughts to, and to make a request of, my brethren and sisters that I have been desirous of doing for some time. My thoughts are these: That Berrien congregation, of which my husband and myself are members, is not in a very prosperous condition. My eleven year's experience, that I have been a member, has taught me to know that the church greatly lacks in her duty of caring for her ministers. But I do not wish to cast any reflection on the church, for I believe the wheel is beginning to turn in the right direction, and I wish to add my atom of strength to help keep it turning. Let the truth prevail.

My husband and I are both in feeble health. He is more patient and resigned than I am. My sorrow seems at times greater than I can bear. Our children are young and they so greatly need our care. My request is this: That my brethren and sisters pray for us. To every one into whose hands this silent appeal may fall, I conjure that you pray as you would have me pray, were I well and you lying on a bed of sickness. I have great faith in the efficacy of the prayers of the people of God. And I understand by the teachings of the Testament that there is a labor for the people of God to perform in order to obtain the things that we desire, and that labor is the united prayers of the church. I ask you, my brethren, that you pray the Lord, in the name of our common Master, that I may be raised up from this bed of affliction and be spared a few years to my children, and I will, with uplifted hands, purpose in my heart, before God, to try, by the help of the little strength he may be pleased to bestow upon me, to faithfully do the work that is for my hands to do. Pray for my husband, for he has a great burden to bear. My brethren, pass this not lightly by, for I am your sister in affliction.

Lilly C. Ingleright.

From Pike Creek Church, Ill.

ON Saturday, the 15th inst., this congregation met for the purpose of electing a minister; Elders Thomas Lyon, from Hudson, and George Gish, of Woodford, presiding. Brother Frederick Shultz was elected to that important office, to divide the ministerial labors with Brother Daniel Mast. The said elders, with Brother Daniel Mast, made some very touching and appropriate remarks, which brought the whole congregation to tears. In the evening we had preaching by the elders. Next morning Brother Gish departed for home, where he had left his daughter suffering with lung fever. Brother Lyon remained with us over Sunday, and preached twice on that day. It was a short but happy time for us to have such noble words of advice from the brethren. The latter are too well known to the brotherhood at large, as to render it necessary for me to allude more particularly to their eminent capacities and prominence as spiritual speakers. It is ever a glorious time to see the brethren in our midst, and the parting hour is dreaded by every one.

A TABLEAU.

A Tunker elder is called upon to perform a duty pertaining to his ministerial office: he leaves at once the sick-bed of his child, his dearest on earth, travels thirty miles to the place of duty, exhorts, advises, preaches, and prays for and with his flock, and returns to the bedside of his darling, happy and contented, in having obeyed the summons of his flock, and labored once more in the field of his heavenly Master.

A Roman Catholic priest is urgently called to the death-bed of a poor woman, a member of his congregation; a distance of but a few miles from his residence; he refuses again and again, on the ground that she had not been liberal enoug in her financial contributions; and only after having been repeatedly called upon, and entreated in the most heart-rendering manner, would he consent to be taken there at all to give the poor departing soul, for——dollars and cents.

A Sad Scene.

JESSE E., son of N. H. Albaugh who lives near Troy, Ohio, and grandson of Samuel Albaugh, (deceased), was accidentally killed March 18, 1879.

At the time of his death he was engaged in hauling fruit trees to Tadmor Station, about three-fourths of a mile from home; and in descending a large hill, a post which was used to prevent the load from slipping forwards, and upon which he had placed his foot to brace himself, was broken, when some of the trees slipped forward upon the horses, frightening them into a run, and causing him to fall forward upon the tongue of the wagon, and the supposition is that his neck was broken by the fall. The frightened team ran a short distance, dragging the body and horribly mutilating it. One of the hips was broken and portions of the hips was broken, and portions of the face were scattered upon the ground. It required four hours for skillful surgeons to make the body at all presentable.

Jesse was ever a model boy of the neighborhood, and, although in his eighteenth year, fondled and kissed his dear, kind mother as a small child. He also lightened the cares of his father, by overseeing all things about the farm himself. Every dumb beast upon the place knew him and seemed to love him; even poor "Gyp," his faithful dog, whined and cried in a human manner, and walked beside the hearse to the grave. He told his aged grandmother but a short time before the accident that he was not afraid to die.

Dear reader, may we so live and obey God's command that we, too, may not be afraid to die.

From Phebe A. Holtz.

Dear Brethren:—

WE are receiving the glad tidings, through our periodicals, from almost every direction, that sinners are fleeing the wrath to come.

My heart rejoiced when I read of the soul-refreshing season of the Ten Mile Church, Washington county, Pa., for it is the place of my spiritual birth. Truly God is good. He is every-where present, and that to bless all who are willing to take up their cross and follow him in all his appointed ways. Now let us be more careful—live closer Jesus every day. Let us teach the young brethren and sisters, by our walk and conversation, humility and nonconformity. Let us stick close to the word of God, which alone is able to save us. Let us be steadfast—strong in "the faith once delivered to the saints." Let us not be carried about with every wind of doctrine, but let us try the spirits whether they are of God.

I like Brother Moomaw's proposition very much. Am glad there is an effort made to preach the gospel to the poor in the cities. Put one dollar on the subscription list for me. May time soon come when the gospel shall have been preached to every creature. May God's blessings rest upon us all, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in Christ.

Tiffin, Ohio, March 21st, 1879.

Preaching in Cities.

MOOMAW'S proposition is certainly a move in the right direction. I have often wondered why the Brethren preach so little in the cities. It is true, I suppose, the faith of the gospel as believed, preached, and practiced by the Brethren is more readily received by country people; but that does not excuse us from preaching in the cities. The "Teach all nations" and the "Preach the Gospel to every creature," include the cities as well as the countries.

I firmly believe that there are some in every city that would gladly accept the faith and practice of the Brethren, if they only had a knowledge of such a church. Not long since, the writer overheard a religious conversation between two old gentlemen in the city of Xenia, Illinois, (a locality where there are no Brethren). I soon learned from the run of their conversation that neither one professed religion. One made the remark that he once thought he would join the Campbellite Church. "But", said he, "how could I observe all the commandments taught in the Bible, for they don't do it."

Just so there may be many in every city in the union that would gladly receive the gospel if it were preached to them in primitive purity. By so doing we could clear our skirts—they could not come up in the day of judgment and accuse us, saying, that we did not invite them, that we did not offer them the free means of grace in its simplicity. Count me good for one dollar.

Dear Brethren:—

I PREACHED here (in Sugar Creek Congregation, Ind.) one week. Baptized eight. Some of the United Brethren thought we were rather fast in our work of receiving members into church fellowship when we baptized them the same day. So we were compelled to look up the matter, and we thought we were safe in consulting the Bible. So we tried to preach a few sermons on faith, repentance and conversion. We brought up the conversions in the Bible, and especially that of the jailor, the three thousand, the eunuch. We had Paul up telling his experience. Some got out of fix. Truly the time has come when men will not endure sound doctrine, but will trust to feelings of the heart, which is desperately wicked and deceitful above all things. When men will turn away from the commands of the Lord, and turn to mourners' benches, truly their own folly is manifested to all. May God hasten the day when men will either entirely deny the reality of the Scriptures or hold them more sacred than now.

This congregation is in good working order. David Kreider is their elder, and Ozias Metz minister in the second degree. The Lord bless them for their labors of love shown to us while with them.

Pettit, Ind., March 27.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR church is in a fair condition. Love and union seem to prevail. The brethren are alive to our Master's cause. Brethren Jesse Studebaker and George Meyers were both with us at the first of March. By their preaching saints were made to rejoice and sinners to tremble. Four were buried with Christ in baptism, to walk in newness of life. One is quite an old man, the other in the bloom of youth. And two who had wandered from the fold were reclaimed.

The church is much built up and encouraged. Brother Morader of the Three Mile Church also preached several sermons for us. We look for a large ingathering of souls soon. The meeting was held in the new meeting-house, three miles south-west of Lawrence, Kansas.

Emigration is brisk in this part of Kansas, and among them are some Brethren. Health is good.

Yours in love,

Dear Brethren:—

WE left Wisconsin February 10th, and arrived here the 21st. When we left Wisconsin it was cold and wintrish, but when we arrived here it seemed like Summer—things were as forward here as they are in Wisconsin in June. The climate, health and soil are good. Land sells at from $20 to $100 per acre. Some have lived too fast and are compelled to sell.

So far as I have ascertained there are no Brethren here. Your paper is a welcome visitor. I give it to my neighbors when we have read it. The people know nothing about our doctrine. They say they have never met any of our members. This is too nice a country for none of our brethren to share. All kind of fruit does well—peach trees are now in bloom.

Brief Notes.

BY JOHN ZOOK.

NUMBER III.

MARCH 3rd. We again met for public worship; and as Brother Eshelman had been requested to preach on the "Female covering, while praying or prophesying," he therefore introduced to his audience 1 Cor. 11: 1 16, upon which he pertinently presented the following points:

I. Unanimity of the audience on the subject.

1. The females all had their heads covered with caps, hats or bonnets,—this was evidence on the part of females, testifying in favor of their part of the subject in time of worship.

2. The male portion had their heads uncovered,—had their hats off—evidence of their acceptance of the apostle's instructions to the church at Corinth.

II. Hebrew customs—covering their heads with veils at time of marriage, —a token of submission to their husbands,—Gen. 24: 65, &c.—submissive covering.

III. Power covering.

1. An artificial covering,—proven not the hair, as referred to by Paul in the 5th and 6th verses in the above named chapter.

2. A head dress to be put on as a special covering in time of prayer or prophecy, and is at the wearer's control.

3. The above facts clearly proven beyond successful contradiction by supplying the word hair for covered in the 5th and 6th verses of said chapter, &c., as it would thus prove absurdities. If covering mean hair in the first thirteen verses of said chapter, then as a matter of course, when the definition hair is used instead of covering it ought to make sense, but it does not,—hence the hair is not meant by the apostle.

IV. The glory covering Nature's teaching a natural covering—a woman's glory, consists in long hair, for her hair is given her for a covering,—i. e., a covering means one covering, a natural covering that both saint and sinner receive in common alike,—a covering taught by nature itself. And so eager are some of our young maidens in this our day for this glory or natural covering that many will buy the longest switch or braid in all the town.

Hair is a part of the head, and to cover the head we must cover the hair also. Reference was also made to other religious societies, who once recognized and wore a neat and humble head dress in time of worship, but now the same societies have exchanged the neat plain cap for hats and ostrich feathers, and perhaps many of them neither pray or prophesy.

A prominent point was also presented to our minds, as bearing upon this subject, by reference to our judicial customs, in having the male portion appear in court, with their heads uncovered—hats off. These are some of the facts in the case that the world in general accept.

In conclusion of the article, I will say that Brother M. M. E. did the subject justice, and left some permanent impressions on the minds of his hearers, as to the utility of a uniform head dress on all God's female children in time of prayer or prophesying.

But I must be brief, or I will betray my heaping.

In Memory of J. R. Wagner.

BY A. P. EIKENBERRY.

BROTHER J. R. Wagner, Clarksville, Iowa, of the Cold Water Church, died March 17th, 1879. He was born in Huntingdon County, Indiana, where his parents, brothers and sisters are now living, in the year 1845, and was at the time of his death, 33 years and sixteen days old.

When a youth he desired a thorough education, and sought to obtain the coveted prize at Hillsdale College, Michigan. When he left said school he only lacked one term of graduation. After leaving college he attended Normal school one term in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

He then came to Nora Springs, where, soon after, he united with the church, in which he held his membership until death.

In October, 1873, he was employed as principal in the Clarksville schools, which position he held until June, 1874, when he removed to Greene, and took charge of the schools of that place. He also became a partner and editor of "The Press," published at Greene. But about two years ago he disposed of his interest in the paper, and gave his whole attention to teaching. In March, 1878, he was again employed as principal of Clarksville school, which position he held at the time of his death.

As a man and a citizen he was far above the average in his daily walk and conversation. He was an exemplary character, worthy the emulation of all our young men. As a Christian he was strong in the faith and doctrine of the Brethren, and worthy of imitation, both by old and young. His great aim seemed to be to do right, and was always ready to receive instructions from others as well as give.

In whatever busines he was engaged, he was the same energetic man, doing with all his might that which he found to do. His disposition was such, that wherever known, he made warm friends, and no man in this community had more than he, and no man could have been taken from our midst whose death was so keenly felt by the entire community, and whose loss is more sincerely mourned and regretted than that of Brother Wagner. The announcement of his death was a shock to all.

The funeral took place at the M. E. Church, in Clarksville, the place of his residence, on Wednesday, the 19th, at 10 o'clock A. M. The writer addressed the large congregation that was in attendance, from 1 Peter 1: 24, 25. The funeral is said to have been the largest ever witnessed in the town—every inch of room in the church was full, and many could not gain entrance. It was the most solemn occasion that I ever witnessed. There was hardly a dry eye in the audience. Many wept like children, while his pupils gave full vent to the great grief of the loss of their teacher. At the request of the deceased, his remains were deposited in the Brethren's cemetry, two miles south of Greene.

Thus has passed away one whose memory will long be remembered; and especially those of his near and dear relatives, father and mother, brothers and sisters, who live in Indiana, and did not have the opportunity to attend his funeral.

But, let me say to his dear bereaved wife and child, parents, brothers and sisters, though it was hard to part with one so useful and intelligent, yet he had to leave this world in the prime of life. Truly we have all great cause to mourn the loss of a dear friend, and we truly sympathize with you in your bereavements; but you need not mourn as those that have no hope, as we believe your great loss is his eternal gain. Then, dear friends, brethren and sisters, let us all cheer up, trust in God and his word, live faithful in our calling, and eventually we will all obtain the crown of everlasting glory.

Brother Wagner's disease was said to be remittent fever, accompanied by great nervous and mental prostration brought on by overwork and anxiety.

Mrs. Wagner will visit her husband's parents for a time.

Primitive Christian, please copy.

A Serious Accident.

AT the Marion County, Illinois poor-house, February 12th, 1879, Tempa Maulton, a blind sister, about sixty-five years of age, met with a serious and fatal accident. By some means her clothing caught fire from a stove, and before any one came to her aid she was so seriously burned that after four days exceesive suffering she died. Though she was blind and her suffering intense, yet she bore it all patiently. She spoke of the great suffering the Savior had to endure. She gave direction how she wished to be dressed, and where buried.

The history of this sister is an eventful one. Her children showed but little respect for her, especially after she lost her sight; and they had possession of her property. Her son, where she had her home, one day took her with the impression on her mind that he was taking her to her brothers; but to her sorrow when she was unloaded, she found herself at the county poor-house, where she became very much dissatisfied, not only about her present state, but also about her future welfare. In the meantime the Brethren preached at the poor-house, when she desired to be received into the church, which was done according to order. The Brethren then (knowing the order of the Brethren to be not to let our members become a county charge) kept her time about for five or six months, when she became dissatisfied and concluded she was burdensome, and desired to be taken to the poor-house; and when she could not be persuaded otherwise, she was taken until the time of her death, when the Brethren took charge of her, and buried her respectfully in Christian order.

Dear Brethren:—

D. C. MOOMAW'S article on Harshey's proposition, P. C. & P., of April 1st, No. 13, page 197, gives rise to the following:

We strongly advocate Brother Moomaw's remarks; and we do feel justified in asking all the churches in our fraternity to meet (prior to our forth coming A. M.) in solemnity, prayer and fasting, that the name of God may be glorified, and that a union of faith and doctrine may prevail; that all may speak the same thing, believe the same thing, and practice the same thing.

Now I submit the above to the editors of the B. AT W. and P. C. & P., hoping they will be interested enough to consider the matter as worthy of our every notice; and if sustained by the brotherhood general, would be a great and shining light to the world.

Missionary Work.

TO the brethren and sisters of the Southern District of Illinois, I would say that I have been holding meetings through the Fall and Winter as time and health would permit; but mostly out in the highways and hedges where the brethren had never preached. And it was easy to see in some places the thorns, the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life had sprung up before the seed was sown. Nevertheless we tried to scatter the good seed among the rocks and thorns, hoping that the good spirit would yet press the seed into good ground, that it might bring fruit unto life eternal. No additions in these places as yet. JAS. H. GISH.

Dear Brethren:—

BROTHER S. Yoder and myself commenced a series of meetings in our neighborhood, known as the Low school-house on the 6th of January, and continued until the 13th. There were the very best order and attention manifested during the meeting. There were four that made application; one again withdrew. May God have mercy on him. On the 19th there were three buried with Christ, to walk in newness of life. May God enable them to hold out faithful and receive a crown of glory in the kingdom of God's dear Son.

To Travellers.

BY special arrangement with the railroad authorities, I am enabled to furnish cheap transportation to travellers. Those who are contemplating removal or business or pleasure trips, will do well to write, asking rates from point to point. I AM now (April 6th) in Appanoose County, Iowa, holding meetings with good interest. Two Baptists and one Methodist have been received. In all five have been baptized and one reclaimed.

Wherever I have been the pamphlets that are in circulation have done good work. "Principle, not Policy," has the true ring. Stick to your position and let extremists howl. They are not the bone and sinew of the church. The Evangelists are with the body of the church, and cannot wait for ploids. WORK is our motto.

From Arkansas.

MY address is changed from Bentonville to McGuire's Store, Washington County, Arkansas. I changed to get closer those of like precious faith. There are just three of us now, but as soon as we can get a preacher to baptize for us there will be three, if not five more of us. My prayer is that they may come and that quickly.

We only know one gospel, but I can count seven different sects in my district, all claiming to be churches of Christ.

They ask me many questions. I give them Brother Nead's book as revised in 1856. They say it and its author ought to be burned up.

Fallen Asleep.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.—Rev. 14: 13.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

EIKENBERRY.—In the Cold Water Congregation, March 25th, 1879, of diphtheria, Alice May, daughter of Bro. J. E. and Sister Martha Jane Eikenberry, aged 3 years, 7 months and 24 days. N. THARP.

SHOWALTER.—In the Buffalo Valley Branch, Union Co., Pa., March 20th, 1879, Brother Cyrus Showalter, aged 70 years and 1 month. J. L. BEAVER.

CHAPMAN.—In Cass county, Indiana, February 21, Martha Ellen Chapman, aged 25 years, 3 months and 26 days. Funeral discourse by Brother Jacob Cripe, from Job 7: 21. Disease gangrene.

The deceased, we are informed, was desirous to become a member of the church of the Brethren; but her health would not admit of baptism. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. She leaves a loving husband and three darling children, and a sad vacancy in home and community. W. S. TONER.

OVERHOLSER.—In the Oakland Church, Dark county, Ohio March 11, Sister Mary, wife of Brother Benjamin Overholser, and daughter of David Krider, who died in Montgomery county, Ohio about the year 1834 or 1835. Her age was 68 years, 4 months and 2 days. Funeral services by the Brethren, from Rev. 14: 13, 14. EMANUEL HOOVER.

BARNES.—Near Blountville, Sullivan Co., Tenn, March 20, 1879, James M. Barnes, aged 50 years. Disease dropsy

It is said he weighed 525 pounds before taken sick. He was sick only five or six days. His coffin measured thirty-three and one-half inches across the breast, twenty-three and one-half inches across the head, eighteen inches across the feet, nine feet around his breast and twenty-four and one-half inches was the depth of the coffin inside of the raise of the lid. At the age of twenty-one years he would not have weighed more than one hundred and sixty pounds; had never ceased growing in flesh. JAMES M. WHITE.

BERKLEY.—In Meyersdale congregation, January 22nd, Brother Ezra S. Berkley, aged 42 years, 6 months and 17 days.

The subject of this notice was elected to the office of deacon about eighteen months ago; gave promise of great usefulness in the church—believing that our loss is his great gain we willingly submit. He leaves a widowed sister and four children, two of a former and two of the present wife. Funeral largely attended, and improved by C. G. LASH.

(G. P., please copy.)

DRAKE.—Near Inwood, Marshall county, Indiana, March 12th, Nathaniel Drake, aged 58 years, 11 months and 25 days.

He was a consistent member for many years and a minister for upwards of twenty-five years, and an elder for nine years. The church feels the loss greatly, which we hope is his great gain. Funeral services by Jacob Shively in German and John Sellers and writer in English, from 1 Cor. 15: 55, to a house full of people. DANIEL WYS ONG.

ARNOLD.—At the residence of her husband, near New Lebanon, Ohio, March 29, Sister Elizabeth Arnold, aged 59 years, 10 months and 8 days. Funeral discourse from John 14: 1, 2, 3, by the Brethren.

The deceased was an exemplary Christian. We feel we have indeed lost a mother in Israel. But our loss is her eternal gain. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the name of the Lord. J. P. MARTIN.

PIPPINGER.—In Preston, Fillmore county, Minnesota, Brother Peter Pippinger, aged 83 years, 10 months, 3 days. Funeral services by Brother William Hips and Joseph Ogg, in the Bristol Church, to a large congregation. He was formerly from the Carroll County Church, Indiana. LIZZIE JOHNSON.

OSWALT.—In the bounds of the Painter Creek Church, Dark county, Ohio, February 19th, 1879, Mary Magdalena Oswalt, aged 81 years, 2 months and 17 days Funeral services by the brethren, from Rev. 7: 13, 14, selected by the friends.

CULP.—February 26, Martha, child of Daniel and Nancy Culp, aged 1 year, 5 months. Services by I. Culpertson and the writer, from Heb. 13: 14.

JOHN METZLER.

DICKY.—In Oakland Church, Darke county, Ohio, March 8, 1879, Sister Fanny Dicky, wife of Brother Lewis Dicky, and daughter of Henry Maurer, aged 21 years, 11 months and 25 days. Funeral services by the brethren, from 2 Cor. 5: 10. EMANUEL HOOVER.

CORDER.—In the Rouge district, Elkhart county, Indiana, January 29, 1879, Brother William Corder, aged 61 years, 3 months and 29 days. Services by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 22. Disease lung fever.

HEIPEL.—February 10, Albert, son of Conrad and Maria Heipel, aged 2 years, and 4 days. Services by Peterson and the writer, from Psalm 16: 6.

POOR FUND.

Below we acknowledge from week to week money received to send for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to poor members, who are not able to pay for the paper. Those sending money for this purpose should always state distinctly that it is for the POOR FUND. We would be pleased to have every reader who feels able, to contribute something to this fund, that the hearts of many poor members may be made glad by receiving the paper, and cheered by reading the good news. Lend a helping hand, and do good to the poor.

E. P. L. Doe	$ 2 00
A Sister	50
Previously reported	85 95
Total to date	$88 45

PAPERS SENT TO THE POOR.—Below we acknowledge from week to week the number of papers sent to poor members (using the initials only) and paid for out of the above fund, charging but one dollar a year for the paper:

C. W. S., Mulle Bend, Mo	$ 1 00
J. P., Clyde, Kan.	1 00
E. B., Hudson, Ill	1 00
Previously reported	85 50
Total to date	$88 50

OUTSIDERS' FUND.

THERE are thousands, not members of the church, who might be greatly benefited by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK during the debate, and in order to reach as many of this class as possible, we conclude to make the following liberal offer. Send us the names of such papers as you think would read and appreciate the paper, and we will carefully enter them in a book, as they come in, and send them the paper as fast as the money can be raised to pay for it, charging but one dollar a year. Hope all our readers will make donations to this fund, and thus enable us to do a good work among those whose names may be forwarded us. When sending money for this purpose, always state distinctly that it is for the OUTSIDERS' FUND.

Below we acknowledge, from week to week, all donations received and papers sent out:

Wm. Mallory	$ 1 00
Previously reported	112 75
Total to date	$113 75

PAPERS SENT TO OUTSIDERS.—The following names have been placed on our list, and paid for out of the above fund:

W. H. Patterson, Bedford Co., Va.	$ 1 00
Previously reported	111 00
Total to date	$112 00

Forward us the names of those only who will appreciate the paper and do not forget to donate something to the fund.

Announcements.

On a rule is to give notices but one insertion. They should be brief, and written on paper separate from all other business.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—Brethren (or Tunker) Churches possess the Bible Characteristics which entitle them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN, Affirms.

D. B. RAY, Denies.

[The BATTLE FLAG refused to publish the closing part of Brother Stein's 12th affirmative in its proper place. They simply cut off part of his article and returned it to him, so Brother Stein sends it to us to be published, and read in connection with his last article. It is hoped the FLAG will not do the like again.—EDS.]

J. W. STEIN'S 12th AFFIRMATIVE CONTINUED.

MR. Ray misquotes the action of our Annual Council. The "sympathy" it expressed was a declaration of non-opposition to the government, when our brethren were fined by the government for their non-resistant principles, and was expressly qualified by the following language, viz: "It shall have our aid in any way which does not conflict with the principles of the gospel of Christ." In the same article they said, "We exhort the Brethren to steadfastness in the faith, and believe that the times in which our lots are cast strongly demand of us a strict adherence to all our principles, and especially to our non-resistant principle, a principle dear to every subject of the Prince of Peace, and a prominent doctrine of our fraternity, and to endure whatever sufferings and to make whatever sacrifice the maintaining of the principle may require and not to encourage in any way the practice of war." Minutes of Annual Meeting for 1864, Art. 35: When the question was asked our Council, "Can a brother be held as a member of the church who will, when put into the army, take up arms and aim to shed the blood of his fellow-men?" The answer was, "He cannot." Minutes of Annual Meeting for 1865, Art. 15. Our brethren cheerfully paid tribute to civil authorities wherever they were during the late civil war, and paid the fines imposed upon them, whether North or South, but did not take part in the quarrel and did not shed human blood. I repeat it; As a church our garments have never been soiled with human blood. There is no evidence that Cornelius continued in his military office after he became a Christian. John the Baptist told the soldiers to "do violence to no man." Does that permit war? Abraham slaughtered kings, and Moses led armies, and practiced polygamy, and many other things which the gospel forbids. The law made nothing perfect, hence it was superseded. Christ said, "It hath been said by them of old time, an eye for an eye" &c., but his new precept with it, contradistinguishing preface, "But I say unto you that ye resist not evil," &c. (Matt. 5: 38, 39,) abrogates the authority of the old and establishes the new. My friend becomes excited over the imagined slaughter of women and children, and thinks the sword is their means of defense. Does this not bespeak more confidence in the sword than in the Omnipotent Savior who put it up? Matt. 26: 52. Mr. Richard truly remarks, "We may defend ourselves; not, indeed, by victory, blood shed and revenge—not by daggers, swords and bayonets, which after all, furnish a most precarious and uncertain means of defense, the use of which, even when successful, only exasperates a thousand fold, against some future occasion, the principles and passions they are meant to curb and cure. Defend ourselves against aggression from others; yes, we may; but how? By enlightening their minds; sanctifying their tempers; by teaching them through our own examples, to overcome evil with good; by deeds of benevolence and mercy, uniting ourselves in bonds of sympathy and gratitude with our fellows; by displaying a spirit of forgiveness and gentleness, and the patient endurance of wrong, cause them to feel how awful is goodness."

ELDER D. B. RAY'S TWELFTH REPLY.

WE do say that the unregenerate, trembling or not, is a child of the devil. "Felix trembled." "Devils believe and tremble." But a real penitent believer is already born of God. 1 John 5: 1. The Tunkers baptize in order to regeneration: rather they make "baptism and regeneration two names for the same act." Nead's Works, p. 248.

Mr. S. makes his charges against us in the form of questions, so that he can creep out. When he asks why we do, or do not, this or that thing, he charges us as really as he possibly can in any other form of words. He wishes us to prove that the Novatians and Waldenses were not trine immersionists! Let him prove that they were Tunkers, if he can. We said that the ancient Waldenses held only two "church ordinances." This shows that they were not Tunkers.

The scriptures referred to do not authorize a general council to give "advice" to govern the churches of Christ. According to the Bible, a local church is the only body authorized to transact church business. The church is to exclude the unworthy. Matt. 18: 15–18; 1 Cor. 5: 4–7. The church must restore. 2 Cor. 2: 6, 7. There is no authority for a general council to dictate to the churches, any more than for the Pope. If the holy kiss was a church ordinance, it should be equally administered to all the members.

Mr. S. says that we think that "christians may fight and kill each other as citizens of civil governments"! We said no such thing. The most that we have said is that it is not unlawful for christian citizens to "aid in rescuing the land from the army of robbers." We do not object to the most that Mr. Stein says of the evils of wars in general. But as neither Christ nor the apostles made laws prohibiting christians from serving as soldiers under civil governments, it is not unlawful for them to aid in the execution of civil law against the evil doers. The commandment, "Thou shalt not kill" was in force during the Mosaic economy, yet God's people were allowed to bear the sword against the enemy. Therefore, to slay the enemy in battle was not a breach of the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill;" because in the army the soldier acted only as the authorized agent of the government. We are not to disobey Christ to obey political powers. Ministers should not leave the ministry of the word for any secular employment.

Tenth negative argument continued: The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they are governed by a "National Conference," whose special object is "to decide matters for which no Thus saith the Lord can be found"? The observance of the decisions of this annual council is made a test of membership. This is absolute spiritual serfdom. This council is composed of the elders, so that the Tunker churches are ruled by the preachers. In 1877 this council decided that "evangelists" "who do not observe the order respecting dress" ought "to be restrained." Also, the question was decided "Whether the standing or rolling collar should be worn." The standing collar was established. It was decided that the sisters should not be allowed to wear "fashionable hats." The Tunkers have decided that the women must wear a cap which they call a "spiritual covering." In a work called One Faith, by M. M. Eshelman, p. 30, this leading Tunker says: "That the long hair of a woman was given for a glory [verse 15], and that this glory covering should be covered with a veil, in order to spiritual strength and power. Instead of the veil the Tunkers require their women to wear a white cap, which they regard as essential to spiritual strength, if not to salvation.

The Tunkers follow the miserable example of the church of Rome in attempting to establish uniformity in dress. We do not apologize for extravagance in dress; but we do say, that any church that dares to add to the requirements of God's word by dictating the color and style of dress, is not a church of Jesus Christ. The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they have rejected the word of God as the only rule of faith and practice.

Our eleventh negative argument against the Tunker church claims, is based upon the fact that the Tunker churches reject the plan of salvation by grace, and make it depend upon works which they do. That they depend upon works —rites and ceremonies—has been amply proved in our negative line.

But the Bible plan of salvation is stated: Rom 4: 2–3.

"For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God. For what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness. Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness. Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works. Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin. Cometh this blessedness then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness. How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, but in uncircumcision. And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised: that he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also: And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised. For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith."

Also Eph. 2: 8–10:

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

Our heirship with Abraham is not of law: "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace, to the end that the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all." Rom. 4: 16. True believers are the spiritual seed of Abraham; for "ye know therefore that they which are of faith the same are the children of Abraham." Gal. 3: 7. This Bible plan of salvation is sure to all the believing seed of Abraham.

But if the Tunker plan of making salvation depends on baptism, feet-washing, kissing and other works of righteousness which they have done, then some true believers will fail of salvation. Surely, the Tunker churches which reject the plan of salvation by grace through faith are not Churches of Christ.

THE DESOLATION OF BABYLON.

IT is usual for travelers to dwell upon the utter desolation of Babylon, and to paint its site as a strip of desert, especially woe-begone and unfertile. But the eloquent gentleman who dwell upon this aspect of the place could not have seen it in the middle of April. The date groves and gardens along the banks of the Euphrates are then things of beauty in their fresh spring verdure, and the plain itself is laid down with crops. Irrigation canals cross it here and there and give trouble to the horseman. No grass grows upon the mounds, and there are patches of the level white with the nitre which is to be found here as in other parts of Mesopotamia; but the surface of the soil is, on the whole, green and pleasant to the eye. The glad waters of the river flow on in the bright morning sunshine, with palm and mulberry hanging over its banks, drinking in sap and life. The great city which counted its population by millions, and filled the world with renown not yet forgotten, has disappeared under the dust of twenty centuries, but nature is as fresh and jocund as when Babylon was still unbuilt. Birds sing overhead in the pleasant spring air; butterflies flutter about in search of flowers; balmy odors regale the sense. It is difficult under the circumstances, to feel as one perhaps ought to feel for the great capital which once cumbered this ground. Nature does not mourn for it, and it is hard to be sad at the bidding of sentiment when the bright spring hides its grave.—Through Asiatic Turkey

We may safely lay it down as a rule of life that things of doubtful expediency are always best avoided. Let not your good be evil spoken of.

If prayer does not cause us to leave off sinning, sinning will soon make us leave off praying.

A FREE SEAT.

HE was old and poor and a stranger
In the great metropolis,
A she bent his footsteps thitherward,
To the stately edifice.
Outside he inquires, "what church is this?"
"Church of Christ," he hears them say:
"Ah! just the place I am looking for,
I trust he is in to-day."

He passed through the spacious columned door,
And up the carpeted aisles,
And as he passed, on many a face,
He saw surprise and smile.
From pew to pew, up one entire side,
And then across the broad front space,
From pew to pew, down the other side,
He walked with the same slow pace.

Not a friendly voice had bid him sit
To listen to gospel truth;
Not a sign of deference had been paid
To the aged one by youth;
No door was opened by generous hand,
The pews were paid for, rented;
And he was a stranger, old and poor,
Not a heart to him relented.

He paused outside a moment to think,
Then again passed into the street,
Up to his shoulder lifted a stone
That lay in the dust at his feet;
And bore it up the broad, grand aisle,
In front of the ranks of pews,
Choosing a place to see and to hear,
He made a seat for his use.

Calmly sitting upon the huge stone,
Folding his hands on his knees,
Slowly reviewing the worshipers,
A great confusion he sees.
Many a cheek is crimson'd with shame,
Some whisper together low,
And wish they had been more courteous
To the strangers old and poor.

As if by magic, some fifty doors
Open instantaneously,
And as many seats and books and hands
Are proffered hastily.
Changing his stone for a cushioned pew,
And wiping a tear away,
He thinks it was a mistake after all,
And that Christ came late that day.

The preacher's discourse was eloquent
The organ in finest tone,
But the most impressive sermon heard
Was preached by an humble stone.
'Twas a lesson of lowliness and worth
That lodged in many a heart,
And the church preserves the sacred stone
That the truth may not depart.

THE CARELESS TONGUE.

BY W. S. NEWCOMER.

"Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and they that love it shall eat the fruit thereof." Prov. 18: 21.

THERE is nothing more common than talking. It is a means used to exchange thought or convey ideas. We have different methods of talking: some use their fingers; others, their tongue. Nothing is more common, and more carelessly used than words. We talk everywhere and are constantly using words without stopping to consider their importance, or effect. Shall we condemn talking, (the use of words,) because it is abused? Verily not. Talking is essentially necessary. "By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. 12: 3. Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and if we love life, we will choose the fruit of it. "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." Mark the language, "at sundry times," not at times when not needed or for mere talk sake, but when he spoke he meant something. "In divers manners"—that is he chose different ways to convey unto the people what he wanted them to know; and the last means he made use of, was his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things. "And there came a voice out of the cloud saying, "this is my beloved Son, hear him." Luke 9: 35.

Life is generally what we make it, and is to be measured, therefore, by our thoughts and actions rather than the length of time consumed. What we say goes very far toward determining the nature of our lives. The tongue properly used becomes a source of enjoyment to ourselves, and all with whom we may meet, except those who oppose Christ. Ill used, it becomes a curse to us, and all that may chance to fall under its influence. Notwithstanding the many sharp rebukes we receive and the warnings in God's Word, yet we will talk and that unadvisedly. The apostle says, "neither foolish talking nor jesting which are not convenient." Eph. 5: 4. Our Master tells us to speak to the one concerned. How much trouble we would avoid if we would always remember this, and go directly to the one concerned. I hope that the brethren retain enough of the love of God, if their brother trespass, to go and tell him his fault between you and him alone, and follow the golden rule, "do unto others as we would have them do unto us." Gossip sometimes ruins characters, and death is the final result. There is a time to keep silence and a time to speak. Eccl. 3: 7. It is not always best to speak too soon. It is the part of wisdom neither to applaud or condemn too soon. We sometimes commit ourselves by speaking too soon, and being in possession of a false pride frequently obliges us to maintain our mistakes, even after our judgment condemns them. When it comes to giving up what we once advocated, although the truth may be staring us in the face, we are so afraid of spoiling somebody (of course we can't be spoiled) and think it best not to acknowledge or submit, as the case may be. Hence, God is not glorified and we lose the fruits of life. "A fool's voice is known by a multitude of words." Eccl. 5: 3.

It is the part of wisdom not to talk too much. If we have nothing to say, better remain silent. "Every prudent man dealeth with knowledge, but a fool layeth open his folly". Prov. 13: 16. For by prudence a man so governs himself and regulates his actions as to avoid impending evils, and to obtain that good which is suitable to his necessities. So it is the effect of folly not to foresee evils to prevent them and to regulate matters so we can obtain that which is good.

Solomon tells us, "He that walketh with wise men, shall be wise, but a companion of fools shall be destroyed." Prov. 13: 20. Solomon would teach us that a man's life is governed very much by the company he keeps, in as much as like begets like. If we are not clothed with wisdom, a man's conversation will be similar to that of his comrades, so if we seek wise counsel, he will speak words of wisdom; but if he idles his time away, listening to foolish talking, can we expect any thing else but that his mouth will be filled with folly? It is not best to counsel with foolish or thoughtless persons. We should not tell thoughtless persons important matters. We frequently get into trouble in this way. Speak, therefore, to the wise about serious matters, but toward the foolish (while you treat all courteously) reserve your confidence. "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good, and an evil man, out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh." Luke 6; 45.

ONE BODY.

BY WM. HOBUCH.

"For as the body is one, and has many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jew or Gentile, whether we be bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one Spirit." 1 Cor. 12: 12, 13.

HERE we have the church referred to as being the body of Christ, composed of members, as our temporal bodies are. These members are separate and distinct, having different names to distinguish them; yet it requires all of them combined to form the body. In the body of Christ, as in the temporal body, there are functions to perform. Some of the functions require the labor of one; some, two or more members; and finally all are brought into requisition. The health of each member depends upon the manner in which it performs its functions. This, then, is a point to which we call your attention; "For if one member suffers, all suffer with it; if one receives honor, all rejoice" with it. If a member of our temporal bodies receives an injury by disobeying the laws of health, how all the members of the body suffer with it, how we nurse and try to restore that member to health again; but if it is so badly lacerated that it cannot be restored, and if left connected with the body would destroy the whole system, what then must be done? Another painful operation takes place—the member is amputated—cut off from the body, then what is the result? The body has lost a member and is crippled, deformed, maimed,—its place is vacant, its loss is remembered with sorrow.

So with the body (the church) of Christ; if any of its members have become afflicted with sin, how, sorely the entire body feels the affliction; with what sympathy should we try to restore that member. But if it is so badly lacerated with sin that it cannot be restored, and, if left with the body (the church), would destroy it, with what regret and pain is the member severed from the body. What a mark of deformity it displays to the eyes of those who suffer such a loss! The body, deformed, is in plain view of the world, the Devil knows it and rejoices. Then, in view of these facts, how careful we should be, for if we bring affliction upon ourselves, we, at the same time, bring affliction upon all the faithful members of the church.

We should avoid all doctrine that is not in harmony with the teachings of the gospel, that there "be no schism in the body," "be not unequally yoked with unbelievers," but, "having your conversation honest among the Gentiles; that, whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may, by your good works which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation, submit yourself to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake." That is, obey the civil laws of the country in which you live, not for the purpose of bestowing honor upon the rulers or yourself, but for the Lord's sake, that no reproach may come upon the body. "Study to show thyself approved unto God," that all the members of the body may rejoice. "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ, as obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts of your ignorance, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, be ye holy, for I am holy."

DEUS-HOMO.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

THE fragment on the "Trinity of the Godhead," in No. 14, I beg leave to supplement. The Divine Father has as real Paternity to the humanity of Jesus, as Mary has maternity. Had it not been for the Divine impregnation, Mary would have had no Son to bear. The relation of Fatherhood is as direct and vital as that of motherhood. The life of God was the quickening principle of the human germ, and the sustaining power of its development both pre-natal and post-natal. God was the Father of Jesus in His dual constitution. Therefore Mary is the mother of Emanuel, and not only of a human Son. "She brought forth a Son, and called His name Jesus," who was "God manifest in the flesh." Her motherhood contributed nothing to His Divinity, but she had it in keeping, the same as if the supernatural had been imparted by a human father. In this sense she was the mother of God. What she bore in the human, and by the human, was as truly God as that which originally made the human. The Uncreated assumed the limitations of the creature. "The Word was made flesh," and this was the offspring of the virgin mother.

The Trinity is more than a distinction of office. It is Tri-personality. Father and Son are personal relations, the basis of separate functions. Not only is the Father greater than His human generation in the Incarnation, but superior to the eternal generation. Inferiority of relation, or official position, does not imply inferiority of nature. The lower in office may be the higher in quality. There was a Trinity prior to the assumption of humanity, and consequently a Son. That Deity is a unit is a fundamental truth. But if the Tri-unity is not a Tri-personality, then Fatherhood and Sonship are fictions, because there would be no opportunity in the Divine constitution for such a relation.

Brother Longanecker is such a magnanimous, noble-hearted christian, that I feel confident he has the perspicacity to perceive the logic of these remarks, and the integrity to appropriate it. Unreserved surrender to the truth clarifies the judment. John 5: 30.

COMFORTING WORDS.

BY JOSEPH J. HOOVER.

To Sister Loretta Gans, of Middlebranch, Stark Co., Ohio:—

YES, Bertha is gone; she sleeps in Jesus. O how sweet! It is the language of the eternal I AM, that "dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return." A mother's love is deep, but you mourn not as those who have no hope. The claim of Jesus to your darling babe is superior to yours. Hearken to the voice from the Excellent Glory, "Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own?" "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." The Babe of Bethlehem and little Bertha are in each other's embrace. It is well with her. "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." A great part of God's kingdom is composed of such literally; and those only who resemble little children shall be received into it. Christ loves little children, because he loves simplicity and innocence; he has sanctified their very age by passing through it himself—the Holy Jesus was once a little child.

You went with your husband down into the liquid stream and was buried with Christ in baptism and rose to walk in newness of life. But before another day had made its appearance God saw fit to call your husband away, and now he has come and taken away your only child. Twice has the two edged sword of the spirit executed its dread commission and pierced "even to the dividing asunder of the joints and the marrow," tearing your piecemeal to the sepulchre. One little soul on whom voluntary sin had never impressed its ghastly stain has been carried by the angels into the crystal-doored, golden floored, diamond-walled, beauty-bathed, song-ravished metropolis of the King of kings. One little sparkling jewel have you furnished for the diadem of Emmanuel. One little head for the coronet of Eternal life. Two little hands to sweep the golden harps of redemptions anthem. Two little feet to tread the saphire pavement of the pavilion of ineffable beauty. Once has heaven been enriched with a pearl out of the ocean depths of your being. Your heart bleeds, your spirit vibrates with anguish, and, like Rachael, you refuse to be comforted. That you have one little star in the firmament of glory should add fresh beams to the pillar of fire that leads you through the wilderness. God has bereft you, and he can all your sorrows heal. Keep yourself on good terms with the Holy Ghost, and he will show you wonders. His office is to comfort with the beauty and love and glory and work of him in whom dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

ANNUAL MEETING PLAN.

A plan by which Annual Meeting could diminish the crowd of those attending it, maintain better order, and defray all of its expenses. ADAM BEELMAN.

THE above items are matters of importance to the welfare and progress of Annual Meetings. I have observed that while the brethren are eating, or attending to business of the meeting, a mixed crowd, not brethren, on the outside, interfere much with the harmony and progress of the meeting. The crowd is made up of wild and roving men from a surrounding circle of perhaps twenty miles. They hear of free boarding and crowd there to get it.

The plan is this: Let Annual Meeting be supplied with five thousand coupon tickets. Let them be headed with the words, Annual Meeting, 1880, let the word meal be inserted underneath ten times, and each term to be easily separated from the ticket, after the usual manner.

Let the one who sells the coupons punch each one, which alone will make them valid. Let each attendant buy a coupon for $1.00, this will entitle the holder to ten meals. Let those who have charge of the tables take up a ticket at each meal, (of course each holder can dispose of his tickets as he pleases). The purchaser can collect at the close of the meeting 10 cents for each ticket which his coupon yet contains.

If I can pay $20 to get to Annual Meeting, I can pay $1.00 for my meals. If our district can raise $40,00 for two delegates, it can raise $2.00 more for their meals.

These tickets should be purchased immediately upon arrival at Annual Meeting. This plan could be varied so as to be adapted to circumstances, and it will always enable Annual Meeting to be self sustaining.

THE CHILDREN.

WHEN the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And the school for the day is dismissed,
And the little ones gather around me,
To bid me good-night and be kissed;
Oh, the little white arms that encircle
My neck in a tender embrace!
Oh, the smiles that are haloes of heaven,
Shedding sunshine of love in my face!

And when they are gone I sit dreaming
Of my childhood too lovely to last;
Of love that my heart will remember,
When it wakes to the pulse of the past,
Ere the world and its wickedness made me
A partner of sorrow and sin:
When the glory of God was about me,
And the glory of gladness within.

Oh! my heart grows weak as a woman's,
And the fountains of feeling will flow,
When I think of the paths steep and stony,
Where the feet of the dear ones must go:
Of the mountains of sin hanging o'er them,
Of the tempest of fate blowing wild!
Oh! there is nothing on earth half so holy
As the innocent heart of a child!

They are idols of hearts and of households;
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses.
His glory still gleams in their eyes;
Oh! those truants from home and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild!
And I know how Jesus could liken,
The kingdom of God to a child

I ask not a life of the dear ones,
All radiant as others have done,
But that life may have just enough shadow
To temper the glare of the sun;
I would pray God to guard them from evil,
But my prayer would bound back to myself;
Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner,
But a sinner must pray for himself.

The twig is so easily bended,
I have banished the rule and the rod;
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge,
They have taught me the goodness of God;
My heart is a dungeon of darkness,
Where I shut them from breaking a rule;
My frown is sufficient correction:
My love is the law of the school.

I shall leave the old house in the Autumn
To traverse its threshold no more:
Ah! how I shall sigh for the dear ones,
That meet me each morn at the door!
I shall miss the "good nights" and the kisses,
And the gush of their innocent glee,
The group on the green, and the flowers
That are brought every morning to me.

I shall miss them at morn and at evening,
Their song in the school and the street:
I shall miss the low hum of their voice,
And the tramp of their delicate feet.
When the lessons and tasks are all ended
And death says, "The school is dismissed!"
May the little ones gather around me,
To bid me good-night and be kissed.

MEDITATIONS UPON SCRIPTURE.

BY JAMES WIRT.

ALL the children of God will acknowledge that it is profitable to meditate upon the truths of Inspiration, that it is eminently useful to be well acquainted with the teachings of the Bible.

The apostle asserted the truthfulness of these propositions when he referred to Timothy's youthful instructions, by saying: "From a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures," thus commending every true disciple that is willing to exemplify the teachings of the gospel in practical life.

A thorough knowledge of the sayings of Christ and the apostles are requisite in order to render a dutiful compliance with the same, and this will enable those thus informed of the spirit and doctrine of the gospel also to speak the things which become sound doctrine, and by frequently meditating upon the written word their profiting may appear.

There is much gained by reading and studying the word of God. The Christian's hope of eternal life is based upon their obedience to the mandates of heaven, and while ignorant of the law of God it is not probable that they will obey its requirements nor will they know that this word testifies so plainly of Christ. The New Testament is the embodiment of Christ's perfect law to man and by dwelling upon the facts therein contained, the nature of its Author is imbibed and piety towards God, and zeal for his cause is manifested. The disciple of Christ will become more Christ-like, and will live more consistent—will shine as lights in the world, constraining others to accept the doctrine and live. A command by one of the apostles dictated by the Holy Spirit given to a preacher of the gospel, was to "shew thyself approved of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." This was given that all might be equipped with the armor of God, and by patient practice become skillful in handling the sword of the spirit, and continually manifest a zeal according to knowledge. It is right to be zealously affected always in a good cause, and a good cause makes a brave heart.

As a stimulus to an attainment of the virtues and perfections of Christian character; it is proper that the friends of Jesus should know what their Lord doeth, and how can this be ascertained in any better way than by meditating upon that word that became flesh and dwelt among men in the person of Christ on earth? And while he was here in the flesh he gave unto man a perfect rule of life. A knowledge of this rule obtained, it is necessary to reduce it to practice, which will insure to the saint a reward in the future state. A belief in the existence of God and that he is a rewarder of all those who diligently seek him, is a fundamental truth, and upon this principle is based all spiritual progress, though the soul properly instructed will not rest satisfied here, but will eagerly strive to advance in the knowledge and practice of divine things; neither will we be satisfied till we awake in the likeness of our blessed Redeemer in his glorified state, who being the brightness of his Father's glory, bears the express image of his person, to enjoy the fulness of divinity.

A LESSON ON PRAYER.

THE DUTY OF PRAYER.

Matt. 26: 41:—Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

Phil. 4: 6:—Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.

Col. 4: 2:—Continue in prayer and watch in the same with thanksgiving.

1 Thess. 5: 17:—Pray without ceasing.

1 Tim. 2: 8:—I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

IN FAITH.

Matt. 21: 22:—And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

John 15: 7:—If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.

Jas. 5: 13:—Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? let him sing psalms.

Jas. 5: 14: Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord.

Jas. 5: 15:—And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.

Jas. 1: 5:—If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not: and it shall be given him.

1 John 5: 14:—And this is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

PRAYER HEARD.

1 Pet. 3: 12:—For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers; but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil.

1 John 3: 22:—And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

WITH CONFESSION.

Mark 11: 25:—And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any; that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses.

Mark 11: 26: But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

AVOID REPETITIONS.

Matt. 6: 7:—But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

LORD'S PRAYER.

Matt. 6: 9:—After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our daily bread

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

THE JORDAN VALLEY.

THE Jordan Valley was one blaze of beautiful flowers, growing in a profusion not often to be found, even in more fertile lands. The ground was literally covered with blossoms; the great red anemone, like a poppy, grew in long tracts on the stony soil; on the soft marls patches of the delicate lavender color were made by the wild stocks; the retem or white broom (the juniper Scripture), was in full blossom, and the rich purple nettles contrasted with fields of the knotty, or yellow St. John's wort. There were also quantities of orange-colored marigolds, and long fields of white and purple clover, tall spires of asphodel, and clubs of snapdragons, purple salvias and white garlic, pink geraniums and cistus, tall, white umbelliferous plants, and large camomile daisies, all set in a border of deep green herbage, which reached the shoulders of the horses.—Tent Work in Palestine,

There is to be a National Convention of colored men in Nashville, Tennessee, Tuesday, May 6th, to consider the present condition of the race in the South, and things pertaining to their welfare and future prosperity as a people.

It is said the death-rate from famine in Cashmere, India, is terrible: at the present rate the province is liable to be depopulated by the end of the present year.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, } EDITORS AND
M. M. ESHELMAN, } PROPRIETORS.

S. J. HARDSON, - - - - - - Clerk.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.60 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.80 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the nine names) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. Money sent by Postal Orders, Registered letters or drafts, properly addressed, will be at our risk. When sending draft, be sure that it is not a check. If it is a check, it costs us 30 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it.

Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., - - - APRIL 24, 1879.

G. W. PHSER'S address is changed from Pierceton, Indiana, to Neodesha, Kansas.

BROTHER J. W. SMOMSE, of Smicksburg, Pennsylvania, changes his address to Pen Run, Indiana County, same State.

BROTHER J. W. STEIN is expected to preach in Lanark on Saturday evening, May 10th, Sunday morning at ten, and also Sunday evening, May 11th.

BROTHER W. H. GARNES, of Fulton County, Illinois, says they have organized a Bible School on the plan proposed by Brother Eshelman a few weeks ago.

IF we do not teach our children, Satan will, and if the teaching is left to him, woe be unto the rising generation. Fathers and mothers, take warning and do your duty.

WM. B. SELL has changed his address from Martinsville, Harrison County, Missouri, to Etieville, Gentry County, same State. Success to Brother Sell in his new field of labor.

IF those desiring Lesson Leaves for the use of Bible Schools will send for sample copies of the Children at Work they will likely find the very thing they want. See notice of the paper on last page of this issue.

BROTHER D. HAYES lately held a public debate in Virginia with Mr. P. S. Rhodes. Subject, Feet-washing. Brother Hays is said to have acquitted himself well, and defended the truth to the credit of the cause.

WE are in receipt of a letter from Hill's Dale, Pennsylvania, containing ten subscriptions to the Mooanaw Proposition, but the writer fails to give his name. We must have the writer's name before accepting the promises made.

A NUMBER of congregations have dispensed with Sunday Schools and in their stead are organizing Bible Schools on the plan proposed in the BRETHREN AT WORK a few weeks ago. The plan once adopted will doubtless give general satisfaction to all Bible students, and while some, for good reasons, may be opposed to Sunday Schools, not one will likely object to Bible Schools, and let the Bible be the Book of the school.

A FEW weeks ago we requested those who subscribe, or send for either of the papers, always to state how long they wanted it. Notwithstanding this notice very few tell us whether they want the paper just to the end of 1879, or for one year from date subscription begins. Now we cannot tell how much to charge for the paper, or how long to send it. The subscription to the end of the year is $1.00.

IN some of our exchanges we read of "dancing Christians." Who ever heard of Christians engaging in a fashionable dance? To talk of "dancing Christians" is about as logical as talking of "Christian sinners." Men and women who attend dances and places of general amusement are not the meek and humble followers of the Master.

MR. JOHN LEMLEY, former editor of the Golden Censer, but now editor of Zion's Watchman, after a three week's trial, has been acquitted. The editors of the Censer published a number of charges against him, but it seems that when put to the test they failed to sustain their charges. Mr. Lemley is a hard working editor, and publishes one of the neatest papers coming to our office.

PROF. MCGARVEY'S next letter, "On the Way to Palestine," was written from Paris on the eve of his departure for Rome. It will appear next week. He will soon reach Jerusalem from which point our readers may look for interesting letters.

BROTHER Howard Miller writes that he is making special arrangements on all the roads leading to the vicinity of the Annual Meeting. As Brother Arnold has a notice on railroad arrangements in this issue we suggest that Brother Miller confer with him that there be no clashing.

BROTHER Wm. B. Sell says: "I have calls for preaching that would keep me in the field all the time, but am too poor; cannot go and let my family starve. I held some meetings in a new place, and baptized two. One of them a leading and influential sister, which has caused wonderful uneasiness among the Campbellites and Baptists."

A MINISTER, who had fallen into the bad habit of grumbling very much about the way his members treated him was thus interrupted:

"Did they ever spit in your face?"

"No; they haven't come to that."

"Did they ever smite you?"

"No."

"Did they ever crown you with thorns?"

This last question was too much for the preacher. He ever after quit his grumbling.

THE Brethren in Southern Indiana are going into missionary work in good earnest. They have appointed two men to take the field, and others to raise the necessary means to defray the expenses of the work. We hope the churches in Indiana will respond liberally towards supporting the mission. The Gospel must be preached, and it is the duty of the church to see that it is done. If each member will do his part, and give as the Lord has prospered him, the burden will be easily borne.

A BOSTON minister says he once preached on "The Recognition of Friends in the Future," and was told after service by a hearer that it would be more to the point to preach about the recognition of friends here, as he had been in the church twenty years and didn't know any of its members. That was certainly a sensible rebuke. A little more recognition here would add greatly to the usefulness of the church, and be instrumental in bringing many into the church who are now driven away by cold formalism.

THE following is thought to be the number of religious denominations amongst English speaking communities throughout the world:

Episcopalians	17,750,000
Methodists of all descriptions	14,000,000
Roman Catholics	13,500,000
Presbyterians of all descriptions	10,000,000
Baptists of all descriptions	8,000,000
Congregationalists	7,000,000
Unitarians	1,000,000
Minor religious sects	1,500,000
Of no religion in particular	7,500,000
English-speaking population	80,150,000

NOT SOMETHING NEW.

IT is the easiest thing in the world to be mistaken, and even some of our readers have formed mistaken ideas about Children's Meetings, and for that reason may be opposed to them.

These meetings are not a "new thing" as some have thought. Those who maintain that meetings, for the special benefit of the youth, is a new thing, are not well posted on the practice of the Primitive Christians, for with them the teaching of the children was a speciality. They remembered the language of the Savior to Peter—"feed my lambs"—and labored to impart Bible instructions to their children, thus bringing them up in the way they should go. This was also a common practice among the Jews in their early history: their children were carefully instructed in the Law and Propbets. Nor is the practice new among the Brethren. We have known of such meetings years ago, and know aged ministers who take great delight in preaching to children. We learned the practice from old brethren, and some of them have been at it for years. These old brethren obtained the idea from the practice of the Primitive Churches in the first centuries. It is therefore venerable with age, and in addition to that it is according to the Bible, and when called on to do so we can prove it.

In several instances, when holding meetings in adjoining congregations, we have had the little boys and girls to occupy front seats. Other ministering brethren have done likewise and a noticeable improvement was quite apparent. The children were attentive: took part in singing, and frequently, with the Bible in hand, would turn to and read the passages as they were named by the preacher. Their zeal for the truth inspired their parents and made them feel good. We have seen parents sit and weep for joy in these little meetings, and at the close would say, "Oh! how much better off we would be if we could have attended such meetings when we were children."

Parents should not be afraid to have their children taught the Bible doctrine while young. Plant the good seed in their tender hearts and let it take deep and lasting root, and then they will know and understand their duty.

We need more preaching adapted to the needs of the young. Much of our preaching is hard to be understood even by the aged and well informed, and therefore is no food to young minds. The food is placed so high that most of the lambs cannot reach it, and in too many instances preaching is of no interest to them. Let preachers learn to preach and talk so that even children can understand them and then older people will be more edified. We want more of this plain preaching that can be easily understood. In this connection a little incident will be impressive: A learned clergyman once wrote an able sermon which he intended to deliver before his congregation the next Sunday. Calling the hired girl into his studio he read it to her, asking her if she could understand it. She replied that she could not. He then rewrote it, endeavoring to make it plainer. The second time he called for his servant girl. After listening to the reading carefully she said, "Mr., please plain a little more." He did so, but felt very much mortified, thinking his sermon would disgust the congregation. The next Sunday, after the sermon was delivered, the hearers pronounced it the most impressive sermon that man ever preached. It was so plain and simple that the people could understand it. That preacher learned a lesson, and some other preachers can learn a lesson if they will quit their declaiming, come down to plain speech and tell things so simple that even children can understand them. Place the food down so low that the lambs can reach it, then those that are larger can get it too. It will not hurt the old sheep to stoop down a little.

Those who have never attended these meetings think it would look strange to see the children occupying front seats, and the parents sitting farther back. It is the most pleasant sight you ever saw. Just imagine seventy-five children occupying front seats and then all the seats on either side and in the rear filled with happy parents. What fathers or mothers would not be happy to see their children eagerly listening to the simple narative of some Bible incident?

God be thanked for it, our Savior used to pay attention to children while here on earth, and it did the little creatures good. Ministers want to pay more attention to children: they need instruction, and they appreciate it. God bless the little folks.

MT. MORRIS SEMINARY.

LIKE most of our readers, we were anxious to know how the brethren were getting along with their school project at Mt. Morris; so, it being only a half day's drive across the county, we drove over to see them.

Between here and Mt. Morris is perhaps some of the finest farming country in the State; it is well improved, and is owned by industrious and thriving people, many of whom are Brethren and River Brethren. The latter have a large settlement about six miles east of Lanark. They are noted for their industry and honesty.

Mt. Morris is visible for miles around, and when the traveler gets within ten miles of the place he plainly sees the Seminary, which stands on a beautiful elevation in the center of the town.

We found Brother Stein and family in one end of the large boarding house, pleasantly and comfortably located, where they now expect to make their home. Their surroundings are pleasant and the situation a desirable one. We are gratified that they are so well pleased with their new home.

The buildings and ground have been purchased and paid for, and are now undergoing some repairs. The object is to make the school a pleasant home for all who may attend it.

The school will open sometime in the Fall, and is to be provided with an excellent corps of teachers. The faculty is being selected with great care, and will consist of none but experienced educators, who are capable of imparting ample instructions in anything from the common school branches to a thorough knowledge of the sciences and classics.

Preparations are being made to accommodate from two hundred to three hundred pupils, one hundred and fifty of whom can be furnished with rooms in the buildings, and the rest will be accommodated with boarding in the town. Prospects for a large patronage are good. It is thought there will be almost enough home patronage to support the institution. Being one of the oldest schools in the State gives it a wide reputation. We suggest that all who think of attending the school write Brother Stein for circular. That will enable him to make preparations to accommodate all who may attend. Parents will find this an excellent place to send their children. The church is large, and under excellent discipline, and therefore young people will be well cared for religiously. It should also be remembered that all who attend this school must dress plainly — fashionable attire and costly array will not be allowed on either teachers or pupils. All the teachers will be required to dress in the order of the church. They willingly consent to this regulation, knowing that it will enable them to maintain better discipline in the school.

About one year ago Brother M. S. Newcomer conceived the idea of purchasing the institution and turning it into a Brethren's school. He received but little encouragement at first, but as time passed the interest increased, so he finally purchased it, paid for it himself, and was liberal hearted enough to turn a half interest of it over to Brother Stein, who is to have charge of the school. These brethren do not themselves solicit donations, yet they are receiving aid far beyond their expectations. Not only members, but many outsiders are donating liberally. They still need some donations to defray the expenses of the improvements they are making; hence all who feel to help the institution along can have a chance of doing so. The enterprise is on an excellent footing, with the best of prospects before it.

The following we clip from the Mt. Morris Democrat:

"The deed conveying the Rock River Seminary grounds to M. S. Newcomer and J. W. Stein, has been drawn up and recorded. Thus after being under the control of the Methodist Church for near forty years, old 'Sandstone' becomes the property of other parties. We have no fault to find with it either, as of late years all Methodist influence has been centered at Evanston, to the neglect of this and other schools. The school has passed into good hands and will prosper as it never has heretofore.

Elder J. W. Stein is at present a resident of Newtonia, Mo. He is an educated gentleman and one of the prominent men of the denomination. His partner in the purchase, Mr. M. S. Newcomer, is a resident of Ogle County, a wealthy man who believes in liberal, solid education. The school will, of course, be conducted in the interests of the German Baptist Church, but there will be room for all, whether in the church or out to acquire a good education within its walls. Under this management the school is bound to flourish."

We publish the above, hoping it will be satisfactory to all who are making inquiries about the institution. Number 18 of the Children at Work will contain a beautiful engraving of the buildings. Those wishing to see the picture, and description of the buildings will send for that number of the Children at Work.

A LARGE COLONY.

THE Chronicle, published at Abilene, Kansas, says: "Probably the largest colony that ever located in our county arrived during the past week. For a long time arrangements were being made for these new comers and their arrival has created considerable stir. They belong to the denomination known as River Brethren. Three or four years ago a few members of this denomination located in our county and so well pleased were they that they have induced this large colony to come to "the land of plenty and cheap farms." During the past year a number of the best farms in the southern part of our county has been purchased for them, many of them in the vicinity of Belle Springs. Those who have been here for a few years have taken rank as our best farmers and no doubt—as predicted by the Chronicle some time ago—their section of the county will be one of the best cultivated and developed in the county. No other large company has brought as much with them. They are worthy men of means who pay cash for what they get and are able to get all they need. They are able to pay down for their farms and make all needed improvements. They are honest, steady, hard-working people, and they cannot fail to coin money in our glorious young State."

The BRETHREN AT WORK circulates well among the River Brethren, and we would like if some brother in Kansas would make a special effort to introduce it among the English reading part of this colony. By proper treatment they may be induced to unite with our people in all the Bible requirements.

OUR MANUSCRIPT

NUMBER II.

NUMBER 1. Headed, A Few Thoughts, and is a request for us to copy from the Primitive Christian the article "Balancing Accounts," by C. B. Balsbaugh. The writer then proceeds to recommend a careful reading of the article. We would like to copy Brother Balsbaugh's article, but as we have all the original copy we can possibly find room for, we must decline for this time.

No. 3 is a letter from Lima, Allen County, Ohio, but the writer fails to give his name, and for that reason the letter cannot be published. Writers should always give their names, that we may know who they are. The letter is designed to expose an impostor, who claims to have been baptized by Moses Miller of Pennsylvania. He professes to be a physician of rare skill, and is traveling over the country swindling the people. Our readers want to keep a sharp look out for impostors and swindlers. It is best to have nothing to do with traveling doctors. As a general thing, if a man is a good physician, he will find all the work he can do at home where he is known, and if he must travel to get practice you may rest assured that he is a quack. If you are sick, and need medical aid, call on some responsible physician that you can rely on. Just as long as people are simple enough to patronize traveling doctors, of whose reputation they know nothing, just that long they may expect to be swindled.

No. 9. The Christmas Tree. Mostly selected from the Review and Herald. It came rather late to be inserted at the proper time, hence rejected. We have considerable selected matter on hand that we cannot find place for.

No. 10 is a letter from Mayview, Jewel County, Kansas, stating that a fire, on the 8th of March, did considerable damage to property belonging to Henry Crouse. His loss is estimated at $750.

No. 11 is church news from Southern Ohio The article was written by a sister who does not give her name, and for that reason cannot be published.

No. 12 was written by a young member living near Cerro Gordo, Illinois. The article contains some good thoughts, and if the writer will practice considerably he may be able to prepare some good articles. This article contains no head. Every article should have an appropriate head, or else the editors must be at the trouble of studying up one. Our young brother, or sister, as the case may be, should not become discouraged just because his first article is rejected. That is something we all have to get used to. Persons who are not accustomed to write for the press will find it to their advantage first to write their articles on a slate, and afterwards copy them onto paper. Take great pains with them, for thousands will read what you have written, and it is well for the good of the cause that you write the exact truth.

No. 13. This is a letter from some plucky boy, who has been defending trine immersion against another boy who believes in sprinkling. The arguments are amusing, but indicate argumentative wit. The boy lives in the mission field in Wisconsin, and from the tone of the letter we would judge that the people are pretty well stirred up about what the Brethren preached while among them. We suggest to this boy, as well as all other boys, the propriety of reading the Bible through, and after that read the New Testament through once each year. Carry a Testament in your pocket, and spend your leisure moments committing chapters to memory. With proper culture this boy may become a good writer.

No. 14 is in reply to a query, asking how long it took Noah to build the ark. The writer of this article thinks Noah went to work immediately after receiving the command, and builded the ark and preached at favorable opportunities. Noah being a preacher of righteousness would indicate that he was a man who obeyed God, hence went to work as soon as he received the command. The article is rather long, and would be difficult to print without rewriting, and condensing. Articles in answer to queries should be short, and to the point. Do not reply to some body's article, but give your views the best you know how, and do not fail to boil them down well.

No. 15 is a selected article of considerable length, entitled "Why I Left the M. E. Church and Joined the Dunkers." This article has been published repeatedly in the Brethren's papers: first, in the Gospel Visitor, and afterwards in the Companion. We would like to give it place were we not so crowded with original matter. However, we will preserve the article, and may find room for it sometime in the future.

No. 16. The writer quotes Matt. 13: 47 and comments on it: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind." We make the following extract from the article:

"A practical fisherman does not withhold his net from the sea, when the probability is, he might gather some worthless ones. If this should influence the fisherman to fold his net, would it not be a dry fishing? And just so it would be with the church if she withhold her ministerial force in the sense of activity and zeal for fishing into the kingdom net men and women, for fear of "gathering of every kind." I have known localities where the ministers were prohibited of holding a series of meetings for the above reason, for fear of "gathering of every kind." Now days a few striplings, David-like, have gone out with sling and stone to slay the goliath of sin, and we hear it whispered, they are gathering into the church "of every kind." This is the prime cause why we do not number millions instead of thousands. I am not in favor of excitement, but, brethren, if you see where you can get some good souls into the church by preaching fire and brimstone don't stand back for fear you may gather into the church "of every kind."

We think the writer applies the import of the parable too loosely. The Savior, when presenting this parable, was not talking of getting people into the church, but was speaking of the consequences as summed up at the end of the world. As the net is handled by fallible men, mistakes will likely occur, and some bad people will get into the church, but these the angels will come and gather out at the end of the world. Ministers should preach the gospel fearlessly; warn sinners to flee the wrath to come, and see that they bring forth fruits meet for repentance. You need not be afraid of getting too many into the church if they are fully converted. Three thousand turned to the Lord on the day of Pentecost and no one thought they were coming to the church too fast. Each minister should do his best to gather none but good fish, for that is the kind the Lord wants, but do not fear to build up a church because there may chance to be one unfaithful member in it. Let us do all we can, and the best we can and the Lord will bless us in the work, but if possible keep the church pure.

No. 17. A printing office is the place where all extremes meet, and we occasionally get hold of some curious things, some of which are real amusing. The following is an extract from an article which came to the office soon after the publishing of Ray's speech about kissing the women. It was written by a Frenchman, and we call it a French cure for the blues:

"The 'kissing ordinance' is now the point of assault. I do not wish to interfere in the least with the sagacious debaters; but it strikes me that Brother Ray lays so much stress on that ordinance simply because it does not enjoin the kissing of 'both sides of the house' by the officiating or presiding elder, or preacher, as the case may be. Ah! Brother Ray, I see what you are driving at;—have that ordinance amended in your sense; join the Dunkers; be elevated to the ministry; then and there to monopolize all the kissing of that 'other side of the house,' eh? Oh, for all that, I doubt not, but you would be perfectly willing to perform such duties of holiness; not forcibly, oh no! but voluntarily! and only as a sign of 'ardent, spiritual love' towards 'that other side of the house,' of course! But then just think of it, Brother Ray, there are so many of us, imbued with that 'ardent spiritual love,' not only for ordinance's sake; and what, I ask you, is to become of us, if you, and but you alone, should secure ALL the kisses of 'that other side of the house'?

I am very anxious to hear further from two as eminent debaters as Brethren Stein and Ray; but be careful, Brother Ray, you may, and I hope you shall, come out of it a Dunker to all intents and purposes; and if you are a married man, your wife, at some day, may become a member of 'that other side of the house,' and then, if the kissing ordinance were amended, in your sense, you might find it convenient, on certain occasions, to look in the opposite direction, and cover your ears with your hands, feeling convinced, to the bottom of your heart, that the kissing of the 'other side of the house' is an abominable nuisance, and the amendment creating it, ought to be repealed at once; or that such amendment should be amended again, providing, that the kissing of the 'other side of the house' by this side of the house, its representatives, or presiding officers, should take place, with a 'backward movement,' so that lips from both sides of the house could never meet at all."

This will suffice for this week, and other articles will be noticed as we come to them.

ON THE WAY TO PALESTINE.

[From the "Christian Standard" by special Arrangement]

NUMBER II.

(Concluded from last week.)

FOR the first time since the rough weather had set in, I walked forward to the forecastle. The water was now a deep indigo blue, with the same intermingling of green and purple which I had seen before. I leaned against the bulwarks, and gazed upon the waves as they parted before the sharp prow of the ship, and as the vessel rose and fell, bringing me now within ten feet of the water, and in another instant lifting me thirty feet above it, I was again reminded of the see-saw; but now I was out on the end of the plank, and I felt like a boy again, saying,

Now we go up, up, up,
Now we go down, down, down.

And when I did go up, if my eye was on the water beneath, I felt as if I were bidding the waves farewell, and were about to mount away to the clouds; or if my eye was on the horizon, it would expand as I arose, bringing wave beyond wave into view, until it would seem as if I were about to see to the ends of the earth.

During all the raging of the storm I had a complete sense of safety, and such was the prevailing feeling among the passengers. Though the vessel rolled and tossed, and mountainous waves were continually breaking against her iron sides, and often flooded her decks, and even dashing their spray high up against her sails, she neither groaned, or sighed,—or quivered. There was none of that creaking and moaning of the ship's timbers, about which the voyagers in wooden vessels have so much to say; there was no disagreeable sound, except when the stern of the vessel would rise high as a passing wave sank low, and the propeller, momentarily left out of the water, would whirl with prodigious velocity, sending a tremor through the ship, and startling us with its fearful rattle. All else was so solid, and all the officers and men were so quiet, orderly and respectful both to us and to one another, that it appeared almost impossible for us to be harmed by wind and water. Commend me forever to Captain Harris and his crew, and the good ship Pennsylvania.

The most surprising thing about the mechanism of these iron steamships is the steadiness with which their vast machinery is kept in position. The boilers of the Pennsylvania are 17 feet long and 12 feet in diameter; and there are three of them. It has two engines — one of them 5 feet in diameter and the other 7½ feet, while each has a piston-stroke of four feet. The propeller shaft, running back from these to the stern of the vessel—about 100 feet—is of solid iron, about 20 inches in diameter. The weight of all this machinery is enormous, and the massive engines stand upright above the water-line; yet amid the rolling and tossing of the vessel in the roughest weather, there is no more disturbance of the position or working of any of the parts than in a common flouring mill on the solid ground.

We were saddened on Monday morning to learn that during the previous night a steerage passenger had jumped overboard and been lost. He was an Irishman, and professed to have been a school-teacher in Pottsville, Pa. He was intoxicated when he came on board, and continued so. He attracted my attention the second day out, by approaching me on the deck and begging me to drink with him. I told him that we had both drunk enough for one day, and that he had better not drink any more, or the Captain would lock him up in a dark place. After he was lost, the ship's doctor told me that he had locked him up twice to keep him from harm. He arose about one o'clock at night, went on deck, and leaped over the windward side of the vessel when she was rolling in a heavy gale. He was seen by the watch, the ship was stopped, and an effort was made to see him; but the sea was too rough to launch a boat in search of him; so we passed on, carrying with us another warning for those who tamper with wine.

Since the storm subsided we have had delightful March weather. The ship's piano, the Captain's flute, and several indifferent voices, have been taxed to entertain us; pleasant conversation usually keeps us at the table till after the waiters have removed the cloth; lively walks on the deck in the cool, bracing air give us exercise; and taking it all in all, we were beginning to feel very much at home when the near approach of land began to excite a new impatience.

On Sunday morning, the 16th, the date of this letter, we came in sight of land about 10 o'clock. The first point in view was a high mountain peak, said to be a naked rock projecting into the sea with deep water to its very base. After this a long ridge of mountain coast gradually came into view, and we found ourselves running parallel to the southern coast of Ireland, but seeing it at a very dim distance.

If any of my friends are willing to do me a favor without expecting a like one in return, let them write me a letter directed to Jerusalem, care of the American Consul. This will be my address till the first of May at least.

MOOMAW'S PROPOSITION,

HAVING for its object the preaching of the Gospel by the Brethren in the different cities of the United States. Those wishing to contribute to this fund will send in their names on a card, or otherwise, but do not send the money till further notice is given. When $300 is promised then two men should be selected and put to work. These men to be selected by the vote of the donors. They should be men sound in the faith, and able to teach others also—men who are willing to labor with those in the common walks of life. Search the Scriptures carefully and see to what extent the Apostles labored in cities.

The following amounts have been subscribed, and other names will be entered as they come in:

D. D. Horner, Jones' Mills, Pa.	$1.00
Tobias Kimmel, Elderton, Pa. (Pd.)	1.21

THE price of the "Scriptural Manual" is $1.75 instead of $2.00 as announced last week.

BROTHER Eshelman left home last Friday noon for Kosciusko County, Indiana, and will likely spend a few weeks in the State.

A NUMBER of obituaries, though already in type, are crowded out this week. We will make an effort to get them all in next week.

THE famine in Upper Egypt causes terrible suffering. In some villages the people, naked like wild beasts, dig for roots. In one town women and children fought over scraps of bread. The inland villages are said to be starving.

FROM the Gospel Preacher we learn that work has again been resumed on the College building at Ashland. Brother Roop has also sold out his interest in that paper. Brother Bashor is at his post again. May he be blessed with good health.

INASMUCH as several critiques have been received at this office on the article written by S. J. Harrison, headed, "Sprinkling and Pouring put to the Test," published in No. 5 of the BRETHREN AT WORK, we now publicly call on all who have a criticism on it to send it to Brother H., at this office, as he purposes answering all the objections which may be made against the proof that immersion is the only mode of baptism that can be performed in obedience to the language of the formula contained in the commission.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. In order to remain Bible Truth, all questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point

Compare and explain Ex. 21: 10, 11, and John 1: 18. H. H. R.

Will some one please explain whether feet-washing took place under the old or new dispensations?

Is the cherubim, or flaming sword still between man and the tree of life? C. L. CROTTY.

Please give an explanation on Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Romans 8: 33: "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?"

Timothy 2: 10: "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake." HENRY SCHRANTZ.

Will you or some of your readers please explain Matt. 19: 11, 12? It reads as follows: "But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it." F. J. FRANTZ.

Will you, or some one else please give an explanation of Rev. 2: 17? It reads thus: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches: To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it."

MARY ZIGLER.

Please give your views through the BRETHREN AT WORK, of Matt. 5: 25, which reads as follows: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison."

Also 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10: "Let not a widow be taken into the number under three score years old, having been the wife of one man, well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work."

J. B. ELLER.

Will some one please explain Heb. 7: 1, 3: "For this Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him: without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually." M. B.

Will some one please explain Jer. 12: 5? It reads as follows: "If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? and if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?"

C. E. M.

Will some one please explain Acts 18: 18, which reads as follows: "And Paul, after this, tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea: for he had a vow." N. S. DALE.

Will you or some of the Brethren explain Matt. 5: 25: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison." Who is the adversay? who the judge? and who the officer? and where the prison?

S. E. BRUBAKER.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK please explain Psalm 55: 12? "For it was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him." Who is referred to? ISRAEL PENROD.

I would like to have some one explain, through your paper, Heb. 8: 8–10. It reads as follows: "For finding fault with them, he saith, Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah: not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers, in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord. For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts: and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." S.

SINS OPEN BEFORE HAND.

I desire an explanation on 1 Tim. 5: 24: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after."

S. A. WHITMER.
